I want to submit to the Senator from Georgia and to the Senate that there is involved in the consideration of the amendment of the Senator from Georgia the question of Government ownership of transportation facilities. I, for one, am looking that question squarely in the face. Private enterprise and private investment have failed to meet the requirements of the transportation interests of this Nation, and I realize that the question is a pressing one; but I do not think it is right or proper that the Congress should attach this amendment to the pending bill and thus commit itself to a quasi policy of Government ownership and operation of transportation facilities. We may have to come to that. We are rapidly approaching it. If private enterprise and private industry do not provide adequate transportation facilities, if they do not at least approximate the requirements of the transportation interests of this country the Government will be compelled to deal with the subject in a comprehensive manner.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. First, Mr. President, I desire to disclaim the slightest approach toward advocacy of Government ownership; but I wanted to ask the Senator this question: Would it not be better to actually give them $100,000,000 with which they could buy or have made 100,000 cars than to have them put a permanently increased burden of between three and four hundred millions annually on the people of this country, which they are proposing to do and are about to do in this rate increase?

Mr. ROBINSON. Why, of course it would be cheaper to give them $100,000,000 for the purchase of cars than it would to fix an annual burden of three or four hundred million dollars upon the people of the country. The Senator from Georgia does not flatter me or pay tribute to my intelligence when he asks me that question.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me further, of course I asked the question simply to emphasize the danger that threatens us of this increase.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand that, and I say to the Senator from Georgia that I sympathize with him in the position he assumes concerning some features of this subject. The railroads have asked an increase of approximately 15 per cent in freight rates at a time when they are receiving greater returns from their investments than at any other period in the history of the country. They are urging that. But, Mr. President, that does not justify the amendment of the Senator from Georgia. He disclaims any advocacy of Government ownership, and yet he says the Government must purchase now, if his amendment is agreed to, $100,000,000 worth of cars for use by the railroads. That is Government ownership. Does he advocate the Government giving these cars to the railroads?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Does the Senator wish me to answer that question?

Mr. ROBINSON. I should be glad to have the Senator answer it.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I do not; but I would vastly prefer to give them the cars than not to have that 15 per cent freight increase suspended.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand that; but the Senator from Georgia, while disclaiming advocacy of Government ownership, does advocate the construction or purchase by the Government of $100,000,000 worth of rolling stock, and he says he prefers to give it to the railroads to having them obtain the increase of 15 per cent on existing freight rates. I submit, in view of the statement the Senator from Georgia has just made, that the question underlying his amendment is broader than apparently his conception of it is; that there is involved here a question of Government ownership.

Mr. President, the practice exists in the Senate of attaching to measures amendments that are not germane to those measures. In another body, at the other end of the Capitol, that can not be done, because the rules of that body prevent it; but in the Senate we can offer any sort of amendment to any measure that is pending, and the objection that it is not germane does not apply. The Senate will be compelled to amend its rules so as to conform them approximately to the rules of the House of Representatives, or we will never be able to obtain legislation in emergency conditions such as are now existing. The question of the Senator from Georgia ought to be debated, and debated at length. I realize that his purpose in offering this amendment is to bring this important question before the country. It is coming before the country and coming before the Congress; but it ought not to be made a part of this bill.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The Senator from Arkansas is on the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate. There is now pending before his committee a bill that I introduced providing that increases of freight rates shall not go into effect until they have been examined by the Interstate Commerce Commission and found to be reasonable and just. It is very important that we should hear from his committee on that subject. If I felt sure that by the reference of this amendment to the Committee on Interstate Commerce it would not be buried along with certain other matters—not intentionally buried; I mean no reflection, but there is so much work upon everybody it is difficult to get action—if I felt sure we would hear from them speedily, I would not seek this opportunity to discuss the subject.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I yield.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I should like to ask the Senator whether he has any assurance that if this hundred million dollars is appropriated by the Government for the purpose of buying freight cars the railroads will not ask an increase of the freight rates? I thoroughly sympathize with the Senator in his statement. I believe the freight rates are high enough now and they ought not to be increased, but has the Senator any assurance that if the provision were made which is contained in his amendment the railroads would not still continue to demand the 15 per cent increase?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. At least we would have cut them off from their great claim, which they are presenting to the public, that they are obliged to have this enormous additional sum from the public to be able to supply the public with cars in which to move commodities.

Mr. ROBINSON and Mr. NORRIS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield, and to whom?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I yield to the Senator who rose first; I think the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] was the first to rise.

Mr. ROBINSON. I merely want to make a brief statement in connection with what has been made by the Senator from Georgia concerning his amendment to buy $100,000,000 worth of freight cars for the use of the railroads in the present emergency.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Very well; I will yield to the Senator from Arkansas first.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator has referred to the fact that I am a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, and that he has a bill pending before that committee providing, in effect, that before a proposed increase in railroad freight rates shall go into effect there must be a hearing, and the increase must be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The increase found to be reasonable and just.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from Georgia knows, or I assume he does, that the proposition is now pending before the committee, and that it is proposed that hearings be had upon the bill. Representatives of the railroads have asked for a hearing. I think the Senator from Georgia knows my personal views regarding the proposition. If he does not, I can very readily state them, if they are of sufficient interest.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I know they would be of interest.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I can not assume to speak in advance for the Interstate Commerce Committee. It would be presumptuous in me to attempt to do so. I am not the chairman of the committee, and I am not even the ranking member, although I have been somewhat active in the deliberations of the committee. I can not say what the action of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate will be on the bill the Senator from Georgia has introduced, but I assume that when the opportunity arises the measure will be considered and that just and proper action will be taken concerning it. I favor the principle of this measure and have no information that the committee occupies an unfriendly attitude regarding it. The committee has not had an opportunity of passing upon the Senator's bill.

The point I make now is that the amendment of the Senator from Georgia ought not to be attached to the pending bill, because it involves considerations of such far-reaching consequence that a committee of the Senate ought to have an opportunity of investigating the general subject matter before committing iself to the legislation and the principle of the legislation involved in his amendment.

It is closely related to the subject of Government ownership of transportation facilities. A committee of Congress is now investigating that subject. Many circumstances drive me to the conclusion that the United States is face to face with the great economic problem: Shall the United States own and operate its railroads? Twenty years ago we derided this question as socialistic. Now every well-informed person regards it as an issue of vital importance.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. ROBINSON. In just a moment. The bill which the Senator from Georgia has referred to was never called to my attention, nor, as far as I know, to the attention of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, until yesterday.

The Senator from Georgia is familiar with the fact that the Senate is working under great pressure. If there was in his statement an implied intimation that there is a disposition on the part of the Interstate Commerce Committee to bury the bill or pigeonhole the bill——

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I did not mean that at all.

Mr ROBINSON. I want to say to him I think that statement is unwarranted by the facts.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I want to assure the Senator that I did not mean that. I said there was such a burden of work on the committee that it was difficult to consider it.

Mr. ROBINSON. That is true. The statement of the Senator has gone into the RECORD. The suggestion was made, and the implication occurred to my mind that the committee is evading the question. For my part, I think the bill the Senator has introduced is a very important one. Whether it is more important than other matters that are claimed to be emergency measures and that are being considered is another question. I am in favor of considering the bill he has introduced and of taking such action on it as the subject justifies. He knows I am in sympathy with the principle asserted in his bill. I yield now to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I want to call the attention of the Senate and the attention of the Senator from Arkansas particularly to the fact that, being on one of the subcommittees that investigated the food-control measure, some of us have devoted quite a long time to it, and we find that one of the principal factors as far as our investigation has gone is the lack of the mobilization of our freight-car service. It is far from certain whether there is not now an adequate supply if it was properly mobilized and handled and distributed.

If the Senator will allow me, I wish to take occasion just here, as the ranking member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, to say that there has been and will be no attempt to stifle any legislation, because before this Congress adjourns I think it will be shown that there is an imperative necessity for Congress to enact some legislation by which the mobilization of our transportation facilities shall be so perfected that freight cars shall not be used for storage houses, shunted on sidetracks, whether it is done with malice aforethought or whether by accident, but that the stuff shall be distributed promptly.

Mr. JAMES. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. JAMES. Has not the House passed a bill—I think called the Esch bill—giving to the Interstate Commerce Commission the right to distribute these cars?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I understand that bill has been considered by a subcommittee of our Interstate Commerce Committee, and I think it has been reported. I will ask the Senator from Arkansas if it has not?

Mr. ROBINSON. The Esch bill was ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, with the Pomerene amendment, in the nature of a substitute, which authorizes the Interstate Commerce Commission to direct the movement, distribution, exchange, interchange, and return of cars with a view to relieving the situation the Senator from South Carolina has referred to.

Mr. President, I am glad the Senator from South Carolina made the statement he has just made. It is undoubtedly true that much of the present difficulty is due to the practice of the railroads concerning car distribution and movements.

Mr. JAMES. Will the Senator allow me right there?

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly.

Mr. JAMES. I should like to have the Senator inform us whether he believes a law can be passed by Congress, such as the amendment reported by his committee, which would meet the requirements without the necessity of appropriating money to the extent of $100,000,000 to buy cars for railroads, at the expense of the public.

Mr. ROBINSON. I was just going to say that it is undoubtedly true, as suggested by the Senator from South Carolina, that much of the difficulty which now exists arises out of the fact that the cars have been improperly distributed and unfairly held by some of the companies. I think the evidence will show that some of the railroad companies have in use 400 per cent more cars than they actually own themselves.

It is also true, Mr. President, that if the measure which has passed the House and which has been reported by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce is passed many of the difficulties arising out of the situation will be relieved. This I say in answer to the question of the Senator from Kentucky.

Personally I express the opinion that there is an inadequacy of cars; that there is a car shortage, and it is due to the fact that the railroads during the last few years have practically ceased, not only construction of railroad lines but have ceased in part to increase their rolling stock as they should have done and as their returns warranted them in doing. I think an investigation of this subject will disclose that during the last year or two the railroads have made very little effort to increase the number of their cars. This statement applies to other facilities. During the last year there were only approximately a thousand miles of railroad built in the United States. Private enterprise not only stopped building railroads but it stopped constructing cars, and the railroads are trying—the statement is comparative—to move the commerce of the country in 1917 with the cars of 1914 and 1915. It can not be done. I believe there is a car shortage. I believe an investigation of the subject will disclose that there is necessity for an increase in the number of cars. There is also a shortage in locomotives. The railroads have so managed their business as to make a showing for an increase in rates.

While the suggestion made by the Senator from South Carolina may in part relieve the situation, the passage of the bill which has been reported by the committee will not work all that ought to be accomplished in this direction. An efficient and fair distribution of cars will relieve the greater part of the existing trouble, but in my judgment there is a necessity for an increase in the number of freight cars available.

But, Mr. President, going back now to the amendment of the Senator from Georgia, if the Government of the United States is to buy such additional cars as the railroads need, if we adopt this amendment, we commit the United States to the policy of furnishing whatever necessary facilities the railroads fail to provide during private ownership. The principle is wrong. If we have to take over the railroads and own them and operate them, and we may have to do it, let us do it with a full knowledge of our acts. We ought not to commit ourselves to the amendment of the Senator from Georgia without understanding the facts. Notwithstanding he disclaims any advocacy of Government ownership there is involved in it the principle that the Government will supply transportation facilities whenever private enterprise fails to do so. I do not make quarrel with that principle, but it is too important and too far-reaching to dispose of in the manner we are now considering it. I think the Senator from Georgia has performed a service to the country in bringing this question before Congress. It ought, however, to be disposed of on its merits in a separate bill, and the Congress ought to understand all that is involved in it before we undertake to act upon it. The amendment of the Senator from Georgia should be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. It ought not to be made a part of this bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I think it is very important for us to understand this question fully. The Senator from Arkansas says he thinks there is a real car shortage. I am not advised as to that and can only arrive at my conclusion by certain comparative statements.

In 1914 and 1915 we made perhaps the largest crops in this country that were ever produced. We handled those crops. There was no complaint at that time of any shortage, comparatively speaking. Since 1916, and in the early part of the year 1917, the congestion had grown acute, complaints arose that there was a tremendous car shortage, and that in face of the cry all over the country that our crops were so short that starvation stared us in the face. It is impossible to reconcile those two conditions. Here is the smallest cotton crop, the smallest wheat crop, the smallest provision crop, and yet there is a congestion of facilities for moving the crops and we must enlarge the rolling stock. The equipment of 1914 and 1915 was adequate for the biggest crop the country ever made up to that time; yet in 1916 and 1917, with notoriously the smallest crop we have made in a number of years in the great export articles which call for long hauls to the terminals, there is the greatest scarcity of cars.

I am persuaded to believe, and I think investigation will show, that certain individuals are using the cars at terminals for storage purposes. The complaint came to the Committee on Interstate Commerce that there were not terminal facilities for storing freight and there was a lack of vessels on which to load it when arriving at the terminals. That being true, in place of increasing the rolling stock at the expense of the public, why do we not insist upon terminal facilities to take care of the freight when it arrives and await such time as ships may be available, thus allowing the box cars to go back and transport for domestic use the needs of the country. So the problem which confronts us to-day is not the problem of increasing the rolling stock but to provide for the proper distribution of freight cars.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. I agree in part with the statement the Senator from South Carolina has made. I do believe, however, and I want the Senator to understand that it is my opinion from such investigation as I have been able to make of the subject, that while the proper distribution and use of existing cars would relieve much of the difficulty, the greater part of the difficulty which now exists is that there is a car shortage due to the fact that the railroads have not kept pace or even tried to keep pace with the increase of the commerce of the country by the construction of cars.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. This observation is germane, that the whole equipment of the railroads is so used now that the complaint is that they can not handle the tonnage of this country, and in the face of that every available foot of carrying capacity is engaged, and the cry is for more. The railroads with the same mileage, with every available foot of space used, ask for 15 per cent increase on freight rates, with the biggest volume of freight in the history of the railroads of this country.

I am going to suggest that the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate and those who will be charged with the proper distribution of foodstuffs during the time of the war shall bend every energy to mobilize every car so that when there is a car destined for a port, when it arrives at that port the carload shall be discharged, and wherever there is a local domestic supply the proper authorities will be advised of it and the rolling stock will be put at the convenience of those who have to sell in order to supply those who desire to buy; and that there shall not be held on sidetracks or at terminals a box car, no matter what railroads owns it, when the country is crying for the transportation of foodstuffs.

Until we have mobilized the facilities we now have and tried them out there can not be any intelligent increase of freight rates or the appropriation of any money to help out that which we do not know now to exist. The thing for us to do is to mobilize to the fullest extent what we have, and then if it should be developed that we have not the transportation facilities and the rolling stock we can take such steps as, in our judgment, may be necessary to meet the situation.

Mr. President, I will take this occasion to say that the so-called corners in our foodstuffs and the so-called exorbitant prices have grown up locally not because of a lack of supply and demand but because of the lack of facilities for supplying the demand. I have some tables that I am going to submit to the Senate when the question of food control comes up to show that in certain parts of the United States given articles are enormously higher at certain points than they are in the great markets or at the common centers of distribution, showing that the local demand has become so acute and the supply of transportation facilities so at fault that locally they can not supply themselves and the price consequently is exorbitantly high. We will go largely to solving the food question in war times if we will mobilize transportation and see that our circulating medium is not congested by panics or otherwise. Those two things I believe will solve the problem largely.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I do not doubt that there would be now and would have been for several months past somewhat of a car shortage under the conditions that exist and have existed since the beginning of the European war. In the busy season of the year there is always, and probably we ought to expect that there always will be, a slight car shortage. If we had cars enough to do the business in the busiest time we should have too many when business was slack. We must get a medium.

I believe the evidence before the various committees discloses that there ought to be more cars; but we have had, I believe, a very exaggerated idea on the question. The shortage has been magnified by the fact that the cars already in existence have not been properly distributed. The evidence discloses, I think, when submitted to a fair examination, that in a great many places during the last year or so cars have been used for storage purposes. That is particularly true on the Atlantic seaboard. Cars have not only been used for storage purposes waiting for ships to unload their cargoes, but after a particular port has been crowded with such loaded cars it has been found that those cars are loaded with export merchandise that must go on a particular ship or vessel. Other vessels have come that would take the same kind of merchandise to the same foreign port, but the cars that are loaded and which otherwise would be available are filled with merchandise to be carried on some other ship which is still on the ocean, and such cars are in the way, blockading the sidetracks to cars that are loaded with merchandise destined to be carried in the ship that is in port. So there has not been the right kind of distribution; and there has been a movement on foot to give somebody authority to provide that the contents of such cars must be loaded onto the first ship that is available, regardless of what the intention may have been when the car was loaded in some place in the interior of the country. This condition has accounted for the shortage of cars in the interior.

There has been another fact that has existed in localities in regard to the shipment of particular kinds of produce—perishable stuff—and that has been because the railroads have been using each other's cars. When this artificial shortage is brought about—or whether it be artificial or not, a shortage existing—a railroad company gets a car, and if it is short of cars it uses that car just as long as it can. So there have been railroads using refrigerator cars for hauling merchandise that could just as well have been hauled in the ordinary box cars, while in the section of the country having produce which should be shipped in refrigerator cars the railroads have been unable to get the refrigerator cars to meet the demand. Although the railroad companies may have owned a sufficient number of refrigerator cars to do the business, the cars were in some other locality engaged in other business.

Mr. President, I now come directly to the amendment of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH]. One of the reasons which the Senator gives for offering his amendment—or, I take it, that is one of the reasons, for he has spoken of that several times—is that there is an application for an increase of freight rates on the part of the railroads. The Senator says it would be cheaper to spend a hundred million dollars in building freight cars and to give them to the railway companies than it would be to permit the increased freight rate to go into effect. As a flat proposition, no man can deny that, because it may be figured out mathematically and shown that it would be cheaper; but what principle is involved? Are we to build the railroad cars simply to prevent an increase of freight rates? If we do that and if we spend a hundred million dollars to build freight cars, turn them over to the railroad companies, and they withdraw their application for increased rates, what assurance have we that they will not next year apply for another increase, and then that we shall be expected to build a lot of station houses for them in order to have them withdraw that application, and that the following year they will apply for another increase, and we shall then build some roadbeds and furnish them some engines to operate on the roadbeds?

It seems to me, Mr. President, that the application for an increase of freight rates ought to stand on its own bottom. It looks to me, too, that if we are going to supply the railroad companies with cars with which to do their business it would be in the nature of a bribe to them to withdraw their application for an increase of rates or to have it decided against them. If their application is good, they, of course, ought to have the increase. We have a commission to pass on that question.

I favor the proposition that has been often advocated by the Senator from Georgia with so much eloquence and force, that no application for increased freight rates ought to be allowed until after a hearing and the Interstate Commerce Commission finds that the increase is just and right and a matter of justice that it ought to be allowed. I can not, however, follow the Senator from Georgia in his reasoning that we ought to build freight cars and turn them over to the railroad companies to prevent an inincrease of freight rates.

Mr. President, what kind of business would we be in if we built these cars and turned them over to the railroad companies? What new difficulties would present themselves that would have to be solved? It would be a difficult matter to know how to divide the cars up among the railroad companies; it would be a difficult matter to know how the Government should be recompensed in the way of rental for these cars; it would be an intricate problem to know who should repair these cars when they needed repairs. It would be a partnership the Government would be going into, which, it seems to me, would be extremely intricate and difficult of solution, without any possibility of the Government getting any remuneration for its expenditure, and, in my judgment, without any sufficient reason having been given why we should go into this partnership.

If we take over the railroads we ought to take them over as an entirety, or at least, such as we take over, we ought to take over as an entirety—rolling stock, roadbeds, and all. While it is claimed on one side that this is a step toward Government ownership of railroads and it is denied on the other, to my mind it has not anything very directly to do with the Government ownership proposition. It is a Government partnership in a transportation question, with the Government furnishing that part of the facilities that are the most liable to deterioration, to injury, and as to which it is the hardest to say what the remuneration and the rental should be, and how it should be divided among the various railroad companies that use the cars.

Who would say when a car was loaded in Georgia with cotton and sent to New York, then loaded with something there and sent to Chicago, and then loaded in Chicago and sent to San Francisco, how much each one of the separate roads should pay to the Government? The cost of bookkeeping and collecting such sums would be more than the accounts would amount to. When a car was idle, who would say whether or not the Government should not be compelled to pay demurrage to the railroad company that permitted a car to stand on its sidetrack? Who would say when a car became slightly damaged on one trip and the damage was increased the next day on some other road, how that should be divided up among the various railroads? It seems to me, Mr. President, that it is entering into a partnership in connection with transportation that we ought to avoid, and that we ought not to take this step.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, referring to the letter that was read into the RECORD a while ago and which is lying on my desk now, I think that letter constitutes a complete answer to the objections raised by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] as to who would handle these cars and how they would be handled. The Northern Pacific Co. has stated who is handling them and just how they can be handled. I quote from the letter read into the RECORD by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES]:

I am directed to advise all shippers that on account of war and other conditions it may be impossible at harvest time to furnish equipment enough to take care of movement of perishable commodities; also, it may be that national committee on transportation at Washington, under whose direction the railways of the country are now operating, may direct the preference movement of commodities needed for food and other purposes, so that apples and other fruits, which may be classed as luxuries, will not move to as great an extent as expected or warranted by the crop conditions, and that, under the circumstances, it would be well if growers and shippers of perishable commodities would provide frost-proof storage in order to take care of their crops this fall.

This is evidently an absolute answer, already prepared by the railroads, to the objections offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. FALL. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. One of the questions I asked—and I should like to have the Senator explain wherein the statement from the letter is any answer to it—was who would pay for the repairs on these cars and who would collect the freight, if any freight was earned?

Mr. FALL. The national committee that has charge of transportation, headed by Mr. Willard.

Mr. NORRIS. Does not the Senator think the national committee would soon be bankrupt?

Mr. FALL. I do not think so. They have all the resources of the railroads of the country at their command.

Mr. NORRIS. They do not collect the freight, do they, on the various railroads? They just command the railroads as to the distribution of the cars and where they shall go. I suppose that is the case from the letter, though I have no personal knowledge of the matter.

Mr. FALL. I call the Senator's attention to the following quotation from the letter:

Under whose direction the railways of the country are now operating.

If they are operating under the direction of this committee, of course the committee must bear in mind necessarily their operating expenses, and I presume, under any rules that they would adopt for the operation of the railroads, they would provide for the expenses. The committee also directs the "preference movement of commodities." They could direct the preference movement of the cars to be purchased under this amendment exactly as they can of the cars which are taken away from the apple growers and the fruit growers and given to the growers of other commodities in some other part of the country.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield further to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. FALL. I yield with pleasure.

Mr. NORRIS. Let us take that case. Suppose they directed the Northern Pacific Railway Co. to carry some apples from the State of Washington to New York City and it happened that they had one of these Government cars, would the Government collect the freight on those apples?

Mr. FALL. Certainly that could be very easily adjusted by any business man. If he is moving one railroad car and one Government car, he can see that the freight would bear the same rate, and the proceeds would constitute a fund collected from the Government cars out of which they could continue to move other cars.

Mr. NORRIS. But the Senator's quotation from the letter only shows that the committee directs the movement of these cars and directs the particular kind of freight that shall receive preference. If the Government owned some of these cars, my question is, How is the Government going to get compensation for the cars, and how would they be divided among the companies?

Mr. FALL. By the collection of freight which will go into the hands of the committee which has charge of this entire transportation proposition.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator knows that that committee has not any authority to collect any freight or to repair a freight car if it should be injured.

Mr. FALL. Oh, yes; they have.

Mr. NORRIS. Not a bit.

Mr. FALL. Certainly. Mr. President, they have all the authority apparently. It is true it is not vested in them by law, and that was the objection which I offered a few days ago. I am frank to say, Mr. President, that I think that the Congress of the United States has the authority—and I believe I said something like this heretofore—to constitute a board to conduct this war. I do not think they are going to do that at all; but the Congress could do that, and vest the board with practically absolute power. The Congress of the United States has had authority, and has exercised it, to constitute an Interstate Commerce Commission, which is supposed to have the delegated authority of the Government over the transportation problem, freight rates, and everything else pertaining to transportation in the United States. But the legislative authority has also created of the Cabinet of the United States a Board of National Defense, and the Cabinet, in turn, has created an advisory board, not responsible to any one except, I presume, to the Cabinet, and the Cabinet is certainly not responsible to this branch of the Government. This advisory board, which has charge of all transportation problems, would take charge of the Government cars that we may purchase.

Mr. President, there is only one further thought in connection with this matter that has occurred to me, and that is that we have provided very liberally for the necessities of other countries during this war. Among others, it has been rumored in the newspapers that the immediate necessities of Russia were for freight cars and for engines, and we are informed by the same authority—that is, the newspapers of the United States—that within the last day or two the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States has turned over to the Russian Government $100,000,000 for those purposes.

Mr. BORAH. Which Government?

Mr. FALL. The so-called Russian conglomeration has at least, I presume, as much existence as this Advisory Council of National Defense of ours. They have as much government, I presume, as we have through the National Council, or their Government, I mean, has as much authority as has our National Council or our Advisory Board.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. FALL. In just a moment.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I merely want to know whether the Senator thinks the Russian Government was formed after the plan of the Advisory Council, or the Advisory Council after the plan of the Russian Government?

Mr. FALL. I think that the action of the Legislature of this Government in appropriating $3,000,000,000 possibly had something to do with the formation of the present Russian Government.

But, Mr. President, the idea that has suggested itself to me was that if we could give for the movement of wheat and other crops to Russia at this time a hundred million dollars, we might give the same relief to the people of the United States. I can not see why there should be an objection offered to the amendment of the Senator. There is no suggestion in any legislation pending or proposed, so far as I understand, that the fruit shippers and the other shippers who are to be discriminated against, and who are now being notified that they are going to be discriminated against, and no suggestion anywhere from the Executive—and that is the only suggestion that would be listened to—that they are to be relieved from taxation, is there? I have not heard of any. The people who have not products that can preserve themselves, as cotton, for instance, or products which the National Advisory Committee will allow to be moved, must see their products rot upon the ground, or they must build frost-proof retainers for them, terminal facilities, according to the suggestion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and then pay a tax exactly as those are taxed who receive $2.16 for wheat or 21 cents for copper.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. FALL. With pleasure.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The terminal facilities to which I referred were the facilities for handling the large export trade, and did not deal so much with the domestic movement; and all perishable stuff, such as the Senator refers to, would be relieved by terminal facilities ample to take care of those things that we are going to export, and release the carrying capacity of the railroads to take care of the perishable stuff that the Senator is talking about.

Mr. FALL. The Senator, of course, is more familiar with the lack of terminal facilities on the part of the railroads than I am. I hope he will give some little thought to the terminal facilities of the Senate in the discussion of matters.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I am afraid that is as sad a problem as the other one.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I desire to state again that in my reference to the Interstate Commerce Committee I did not intend even to intimate that there was the slightest disposition there to bury the measure to which I referred. Indeed, it was introduced less than a week ago—last Monday, I think—and it never reached the committee until its last meeting.

Mr. ROBINSON. That was yesterday.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. That was yesterday, and if my language created the impression that the committee was disposed to bury it, my language was unfortunate, because I did not mean it, and it would have been entirely unjustifiable.

Mr. President, it seems that there are a number of measures before the Interstate Commerce Committee, and perhaps this proposition ought to go there. If I should ask to refer this amendment to the Interstate Commerce Committee, I am afraid the chairman of the Appropriations Committee would feel that we have unduly taken up the time to-day by injecting into the consideration of his bill a subject that ought not to have been there. I do not think so. I believe that the importance of this question is so great that it was entirely excusable to undertake to bring it into this bill, and I have no apology to make for having taken the course I have.

It may be that my intense opposition to the proposed 15 per cent freight increase induced me to feel that this was a proper place to introduce this amendment and to have some discussion even now of the 15 per cent freight increase. At any rate, Mr. President, I can easily see that the Senate is not ready at this time to act favorably upon the amendment, and I move that the amendment be referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee. I request that it be given that direction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia moves that the amendment tendered by him to the pending measure be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I desire to say a word, in view of the discussion that has taken place.

On yesterday, as no doubt has been stated, I was instructed to report favorably an amendment to the Esch bill, and was engaged in the preparation of that report, so I was not on the floor at the time this discussion came up. I hope during the afternoon to be able to present that report, and as soon as the pending bill is out of the way I shall ask for the privilege of presenting that bill to the Senate for its prompt action thereon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the committee to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 7, after line 19, to strike out:

BUREAU OF EFFICIENCY.

For rent of quarters in the District of Columbia, $5,000: Provided, That so much of the general deficiency appropriation act, approved September 8, 1916, which reads as follows: "Until otherwise provided by law the Bureau of Efficiency shall continue to occupy its present quarters in the Winder Building," is repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 2, to strike out:

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

For necessary additional employees, printing, stationery, travel, contingent, and other necessary expenses, $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Treasury Department," on page 8, after line 12, to insert:

For additional employees in the Office of Auditor for the War Department for the fiscal year 1918, at annual rates of compensation as follows: Clerks—10 of class 4, 10 of class 3, 20 of class 2, 50 of class 1, 10 at $1,000 each; 3 assistant messengers, at $720 each; 3 laborers, at $660 each; in all, $136,140.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 9, to strike out:

MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES.

Philadelphia Mint: For wages of workmen and other employees, fiscal year 1917, $10,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, cases and enameling for medals manufactured, expenses of the annual assay commission, wastage in melting and refining and in coining departments, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion and the manufacture of coins, and not exceeding $1,000 in value of specimen coins and ores for the cabinet of the mint, fiscal year 1917, $5,000.

New Orleans (La.) Mint: For wages of workmen and other employees, fiscal year 1917, $1,000.

New York assay office: For wages of workmen and other employees, fiscal year 1917, $5,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, including new machinery and repairs, wastage in the melting and refining department, and loss on sale of sweeps arising from the treatment of bullion, fiscal year 1917, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "War Department," subhead "Contingent expenses," on page 11, line 19, after the words "War Department," to insert "to be executed under the Public Printer," so as to make the clause read:

For printing and binding for the War Department, to be executed under the Public Printer, $630,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Armories and arsenals," at the top of page 12, to insert:

Repairs of arsenals: For repairs and improvement at arsenals, and to meet such unforeseen expenditures as accidents or other contingencies during the year may render necessary, including $160,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for machinery for manufacturing purposes in the arsenals, $400,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Military Establishment," on page 12, after line 7, to insert:

TRANSFER OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Not to exceed 10 per cent of any amount hereinafter specifically appropriated (except for subsistence, pay, and allowances of the Army) for any item for any bureau, corps, office, or under any other heading, in the Military Establishment, may, at the discretion and by the direction of the Secretary of War, and except as otherwise specifically provided herein, be transferred and applied to any other object for which an expenditure is found to be necessary within the same bureau, corps, office, or under the same headings, and the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, upon request of the Secretary of War, to make the transfer of the appropriations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Contingencies of the Army," on page 13, line 1, before the word "other," to strike out "exclusive of all"; and in the same line, after the word "services," to insert "technical, special, or otherwise," so as to make the clause read:

For all contingent expenses of the Army not otherwise provided for and embracing all branches of the military service, including the office of the Chief of Staff; for all emergencies and extraordinary expenses, including the employment of translators and other personal services, technical, special, or otherwise, in the War Department, or any of its subordinate bureaus or offices at Washington, D. C., or in the Army at large, but impossible to be anticipated or classified, to be expended on the approval and authority of the Secretary of War, and for such purposes as he may deem proper, including the payment of a per diem allowance not to exceed $4, in lieu of subsistence, to employees of the War Department traveling on official business outside of the District of Columbia and away from their designated posts, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, after line 11, to insert:

Registration and selection for military service: For all expenses necessary in the registration of persons available for military service and in the selection of certain such persons and their draft into military service, $2,658,413.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Office of the Chief Signal Officer," on page 16, line 13, after the word "apparatus," to strike out "exclusive of exchange service," and insert "including exchange service at mobile army posts," so as to read:

Signal Service of the Army: For expenses of the Signal Service of the Army, as follows: Purchase, equipment, and repair of field electric telegraphs, radio installations, signal equipments and stores, binocular glasses, telescopes, heliostats, and other necessary instruments, including necessary meteorological instruments for use on target ranges; motorcycles and motor-driven vehicles used for technical and official purposes; professional and scientific books of reference, pamphlets, periodicals, newspapers, and maps, for use in the office of the Chief Signal Officer; war balloons and airships and accessories, including their maintenance and repair; telephone apparatus (including exchange service at mobile army posts) and maintenance of the same; electrical installations and maintenance at military posts; fire-control and direction apparatus and material for field artillery; maintenance and repair of military lines and cables, including salaries of civilian employees, supplies, general repairs, reserved supplies, and other expenses connected with the duty of collecting and transmitting information for the Army by telegraph or otherwise, $47,267,766.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Pay of the Army," subhead, "Enlisted men of the line," on page 19, line 8, after the word "recruits," to insert "and pay at $100 per month for enlisted men in training for officers of the Reserve Corps," so as to make the clause read:

For pay of enlisted men of all grades, including recruits and pay at $100 per month for enlisted men in training for officers of the Reserve Corps, $226,882,560.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Clerks and messengers at headquarters of the several territorial departments, territorial districts, tactical divisions and brigades, and service schools," on page 20, after line 15, to insert:

Messengers at temporary headquarters, at $720 each per annum, $72,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, line 18, after the words "in all," to strike out "$1,178,000" and insert "$1,250,000," so as to make the clause read:

In all, $1,250,000: Provided, That no clerk, messenger, or laborer at headquarters of tactical divisions, military departments, brigades, service schools, and office of the Chief of Staff shall be assigned to duty in any bureau in the War Department.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Medical Department," on page 21, line 20, after the word "department," to strike out "$12,000,000" and insert "$15,131,752," so as to make the clause read:

For pay of officers of the Medical Department, $15,131,752.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Miscellaneous," in the item of appropriation for "Subsistence of the Army," on page 26, line 1, after the words "in all," to strike out "$133,000,000" and insert "$183,926,646," so as to read:

For providing prizes to be established by the Secretary of War for enlisted men of the Army who graduate from the Army schools for bakers and cooks, the total amount of such prizes at the various schools not to exceed $900 per annum; for other necessary expenses incident to the purchase, testing, care, preservation, issue, sale, and accounting for subsistence supplies for the Army; in all, $183,926,646.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Miscellaneous," in the item of appropriation for "Incidental Expenses, Quartermaster Corps," on page 30, line 21, after the word "department," to strike out "$8,000,000" and insert "$11,837,583.62," so as to read:

For a donation of $5 to each dishonorably discharged prisoner upon his release from confinement under court-martial sentence involving dishonorable discharge; for the following expenditures required for the several regiments of Cavalry, the batteries of Field Artillery, and such companies of Infantry and Scouts as may be mounted, the authorized number of officers' horses, and for the trains, to wit, purchase of picket ropes, blacksmith's tools and materials, horseshoes and blacksmith's tools for the Cavalry service, and for the shoeing of horses and mules; chests and issue outfits; and such additional expenditures as are necessary and authorized by law in the movements and operations of the Army, and at military posts, and not expressly assigned to any other department, $11,837,583.62.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Miscellaneous," in the item of appropriation for "Transportation of the Army and its supplies," on page 34, line 12, after the word "oceans," to strike out "$160,000,000" and insert "$221,963,745.42," so as to read:

For the purchase and repair of ships, boats, and other vessels required for the transportation of troops and supplies and for official, military, and garrison purposes; for expenses of sailing public transports and other vessels on the various rivers, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, $221,963,745.42.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 11, before the word "barracks," to strike out "of" and insert "for"; in line 16, before the word "grounds," to strike out "of" and insert "for"; and in line 17, before the word "buildings," to strike out "of" and insert "for," so as to read:

Barracks and quarters: For barracks, quarters, stables, storehouses, magazines, administration and office buildings, sheds, shops, and other buildings necessary for the shelter of troops, public animals, and stores, and for administration purposes, except those pertaining to the Coast Artillery; for constructing and repairing public buildings at military posts; for hire of employees, for rental of the authorized allowance of quarters for officers, including members of the Officers' Reserve Corps when ordered to active duty, on duty with the troops at posts and stations where no public quarters are available; for barracks or authorized allowance of quarters for noncommissioned officers and enlisted men on duty where public quarters are not available, including enlisted men of the Regular Army Reserve, retired enlisted men, and members of the Enlisted Reserve Corps when ordered to active duty; for grounds for cantonments, camp sites, and other military purposes, and for buildings or portions of buildings for occupation by troops, for use as stables, storehouses, and offices, and for other military purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Medical Department," on page 39, line 20, after the word "including," to insert "gas masks"; on page 41, line 11, after the word "Department," to insert "for the supply of the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark."; and in line 14, after the word "Department," to strike out "$23,780,000" and insert "$29,780,000," so as to make the clause read:

Medical and Hospital Department: For the purchase of medical and hospital supplies, including gas masks, motor ambulances, and motorcycles for medical service, their maintenance, repair, and operation, and disinfectants, and the purchase and exchange of typewriting machines for military posts, camps, hospitals, hospital ships and transports, and supplies required for mosquito destruction in and about the military posts in the Canal Zone: Provided, That the Secretary of War may in his discretion select types and makes of motor ambulances for the Army and authorize their purchase without regard to the laws prescribing advertisement for proposals for supplies and material for the Army; for the purchase of veterinary supplies and hire of veterinary surgeons; for expenses of medical supply depots; for medical care and treatment not otherwise provided for, including care and subsistence in private hospitals, of officers, enlisted men, and civilian employees of the Army, of applicants for enlistment, and of prisoners of war and other persons in military custody or confinement, when entitled thereto by law, regulation, or contract: Provided, That this shall not apply to officers and enlisted men who are treated in private hospitals or by civilian physicians while on furlough; for the proper care and treatment of epidemic and contagious diseases in the Army or at military posts or stations, including measures to prevent the spread thereof, and the payment of reasonable damages not otherwise provided for, for bedding and clothing injured or destroyed in such prevention; for the pay of male and female nurses, not including the Nurse Corps (female), and of cooks, and other civilians employed for the proper care of sick officers and soldiers, under such regulations fixing their number, qualifications, assignment, pay, and allowances as shall have been or shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War; for the pay of civilian physicians employed to examine physically applicants for enlistment and enlisted men, and to render other professional services from time to time under proper authority; for the pay of other employees of the Medical Department; for the payment of express companies and local transfers employed directly by the Medical Department for the transportation of medical and hospital supplies, including bidders' samples and water for analysis; for supplies for use in teaching the art of cooking to the enlisted force of the Medical Department; for the supply of the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark.; for advertising, printing, binding, laundry, and all other necessary miscellaneous expenses of the Medical Department, $29,780,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Ordnance Department," on page 43, line 5, after the word "supply," to strike out "$130,078,000" and insert "$131,048,000," so as to make the clause read:

Ordnance stores, ammunition: Manufacture and purchase of ammunition for small arms and for hand use for reserve supply $131,048,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 43, line 17, after "$75,000," to strike out "$16,150,000" and insert "$17,500,000," so as to make the clause read:

Small-arms target practice: For manufacture and purchase of ammunition, targets, and other accessories for small-arms, hand, and machine-gun target practice and instructions; marksmen's medals, prize arms, and insigna for all arms of the service; and ammunition, targets, target materials, and other accessories which may be issued for small-arms target practice and instruction at the educational institutions and State soldiers' and sailors' orphans' homes to which issues of small arms are lawfully made, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, provided the total value of the stores so issued to the educational institutions and homes does not exceed $75,000, $17,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 43, line 20, after the word "armories," to strike out "$53,999,000" and insert "$55,349,000," so as to make the clause read:

Manufacture of arms: For manufacturing, repairing, procuring, and issuing arms at the national armories, $55,349,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, line 2, after the word "Artillery," to strike out "$130,550,000" and insert "$106,550,000," so as to make the clause read:

Ordnance stores and supplies: For overhauling, cleaning, repairing, and preserving ordnance and ordnance stores in the hands of troops and at the arsenals, posts, and depots; for purchase and manufacture of ordnance stores to fill requirements of troops; for Infantry, Cavalry, and Artillery equipments, including horse equipments for Cavalry and Artillery, $106,550,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, line 5, after the word "equipments," to strike out "$39,549,700" and insert "$65,900,000," so as to make the clause read:

Automatic machine rifles: For the purchase, manufacture, and test of automatic machine rifles, including their sights and equipments, $65,900,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 44, after line 22, to insert:

CIVILIAN MILITARY TRAINING.

For the expenses of maintaining, upon military reservations or elsewhere, camps for the military instruction and training of such citizens physically capable of bearing arms as may be selected under such terms of enlistment and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, and for furnishing said citizens, at the expense of the United States, uniforms, subsistence, transportation by the most usual and direct route within said limits as to territory as may be prescribed; for such expenditures as may be deemed necessary for water, fuel, light, temporary structures, not including quarters for officers nor barracks for men, screening, and damages resulting from field exercises, and other expenses incidental to maintaining said camps and the theoretical winter instruction in connection therewith, including textbooks and stationery; for furnishing such equipments, tentage, field equipage, and transportation belonging to the United States as may be deemed necessary as authorized by section 54 of the act of Congress approved June 3, 1916, $3,440,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Armament of fortifications," on page 48, line 9, after the word "arsenals," to strike out "$120,000,000" and insert "$155,000,000"; and in line 12 after the word "exceed," to strike out "$25,000,000" and insert "$40,000,000," so as to make the clause read:

For purchase, manufacture, and test of mountain, field, and siege cannon, including their carriages, sights, implements, equipments, and the machinery necessary for their manufacture at the arsenals, $155,000,000: Provided, That the Chief of Ordnance, United States Army, is authorized to enter into contracts, or otherwise incur obligations, for the purposes above mentioned not to exceed $40,000,000 in addition to the appropriations herein and heretofore made.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 19, after the word "thereon," to strike out "$60,000,000: Provided, That the Chief of Ordnance, United States Army, is authorized to enter into contracts or otherwise incur obligations for the purposes above mentioned not to exceed $15,000,000 in addition to the appropriations herein and heretofore made" and insert "$25,000,000," so as to make the clause read:

For alteration and maintenance of the mobile artillery, including the purchase and manufacture of machinery, tools, and material necessary for the work and the expenses of the mechanics engaged thereon, $25,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head "Fortifications in insular possessions," subhead "Panama Canal fortifications," on page 53, line 13, after the word "arsenals," to strike out "$1,775,000" and insert "$3,115,000," so as to make the clause read:

For the purchase, manufacture, and test of seacoast cannon for coast defense, including their carriages, sights, implements, equipments, and the machinery necessary for their manufacture at the arsenals, $3,115,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 5, to insert:

For extraordinary expenses heretofore and hereafter incurred by the Panama Canal in protecting the canal and canal structures, $428,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, line 10, after the words "Panama Canal," to strike out "$4,320,974" and insert "$6,089,874," so as to make the clause read:

In all, specifically for fortifications and armament thereof for the Panama Canal, $6,089,874.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 54, after line 10, to insert:

EMERGENCY FUND.

So much of the total amount herein appropriated as may not be found necessary to be expended for the purposes herein authorized, not exceeding $10,000,000, may be expended prior to December 31, 1917, in the discretion and at the direction of the Secretary of War, for such military purposes as he may deem proper, this amount to be accounted for under the title of "Emergency fund (military)" and to be transferred from such appropriation or appropriations under the head of "Military Establishment" as the Secretary of War may direct, and the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, upon request of the Secretary of War, to make the transfer of appropriations: Provided, That an itemized statement of the expenditures made hereunder shall be made to Congress not later than February 1, 1918.

Section 7 of the general deficiency appropriation act approved August 26, 1912, as amended by section 4 of the act making appropriations for legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government, approved March 4, 1913, restricting changes in salaries of certain employees paid from lump-sum appropriations, is further amended to provide that it shall not apply to clerks, draftsmen, technical, and other employees whose services are necessary in carrying on the various manufacturing or construction operations of the Government.

During the fiscal year 1918 all civilian employees in the Military Establishment, including on the lump-sum rolls only those persons who are carried thereon at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and whose compensation has not been adjusted to correspond to the prevailing wages of the vicinity of their employment, shall receive increased compensation at the rate of 10 per cent per annum to such employees who receive salaries or wages in such establishment at a rate per annum of less than $1,200, and increased compensation at a rate of 5 per cent per annum to such employees who receive salaries or wages in such establishment at a rate of not more than $1,800 per annum and not less than $1,200 per annum: Provided, That so much as may be necessary for this purpose is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Navy Department" on page 57, line 7, after the word "Operations," to strike out "$27,000" and insert "$100,000," so as to make the clause read:

Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 57, after line 16, to insert:

Marine Corps headquarters, $11,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 57, line 18, after the words "In all," to strike out "$414,538" and insert "$449,038," so as to make the clause read:

In all, $449,038: Provided, That the Secretary of the Navy shall submit to Congress on the first day of its next regular session a statement showing, by bureaus or offices, the number and designation of the persons employed hereunder and the annual rate of compensation paid to each.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, there is a small matter to be corrected on page 57. I send the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 57, line 18, after the words "In all," it is proposed to amend the total so as to read "$499,038."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, there is a verbal change on page 58, line 13. I send it to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 58, line 13, after the word "Office," it is proposed to insert "to be executed under the Public Printer."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was, on page 59, after line 9, to insert:

NAVAL OBSERVATORY.

Contingent and miscellaneous expenses, Naval Observatory: For typewriters, filing cases, stationery, and the purchase of a motor-propelled delivery wagon, $1,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Naval Establishment," subhead "Bureau of Navigation," on page 62, line 4, after the word "thereof," to insert "transportation and shipping of civilian officers and crews of naval auxiliaries," and in line 9, after the word "transportation," to strike out "$1,644,324" and insert "$1,659,324," so as to make the clause read:

Transportation: For travel allowance of enlisted men discharged on account of expiration of enlistment; transportation of enlisted men and apprentice seamen and applicants for enlistment at home and abroad, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof; transportation to their homes, in residents of the United States, of enlisted men and apprentice seamen discharged on medical survey, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof; transportation of sick or insane enlisted men and apprentice seamen to hospitals, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof; transportation and shipping of civilian officers and crews of naval auxiliaries; transportation of enrolled men of the Naval Reserve Force to and from duty, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof; apprehension and delivery of deserters and stragglers, and for railway guides and other expenses incident to transportation, $1,659,324.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 63, line 16, after the word "officers," to strike out "and men" and insert "men and women," and, in line 18, after the word "men," to insert "and women," so as to make the clause read:

Outfits on first enlistment: Outfits for all enlisted men and apprentice seamen of the Navy on first enlistment, at not to exceed $60 each; for the clothing gratuity of officers, men and women of the Naval Reserve Force, $150 each for officers and $60 each for men and women; in all, $7,778,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 63, after line 19, to strike out:

Maintenance of naval auxiliaries: Transportation and shipping of civilian officers and crews of naval auxiliaries, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 63, after line 22, to insert:

Maintenance of naval auxiliaries: The sum appropriated for "Maintenance of naval auxiliaries" in the naval act approved March 4, 1917, shall be transferred to other appropriations as follows: "Transportation, Bureau of Navigation," $11,500; "Pay of the Navy," $846,890; and "Provisions, Navy," $286,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 65, after line 3, to insert:

Ship for Illinois Naval Militia: The limit of cost of $125,000 on the purchase, repair, and alteration of a ship for the Naval Militia of Illinois as fixed in the naval appropriation act approved August 29, 1916, is increased by $50,000, which sum is hereby appropriated, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, after line 5, to strike out:

Schools or camps of instruction, Naval Reserve Force: For equipment and maintenance of schools and camps established for the purpose of instructing members of and applicants for membership in the Naval Reserve Force, $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 68, after line 10, to insert:

Schools or camps of instruction for recruits and naval reserve forces: For rental of necessary land and for providing quarters and the maintenance and equipment thereof, for assembling, training, and instructing recruits and reserves of all classes, including the crews of section patrols, harbor patrols, submarines and submarine chasers, and beach patrols, and for all purposes connected therewith, $2,655,360.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Ordnance," on page 69, line 11, after the words "in all," to strike out "$14,905,366" and insert "$16,905,366," so as to make the clause read:

Ordnance and ordnance stores: For procuring, producing, preserving, and handling ordnance material; for the armament of ships; for fuel, material, and labor to be used in the general work of the Ordnance Department; for necessary improvements at the naval proving ground, naval torpedo stations, naval gun factory, and naval ammunition depots, and for pay of chemists, clerical, drafting, inspection, watchmen, and messenger service in navy yards, naval stations, and naval ammunition depots: Provided, That the sum to be paid out of this appropriation under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy for chemists, clerical, drafting, inspection, watchmen, and messenger service in navy yards, naval stations, and naval ammunition depots, shall not exceed $725,000: Provided further, That not exceeding $81,500 of this amount may be expended for the services of clerks, draftsmen, and such other technical assistants as the Secretary of the Navy may deem necessary in the Bureau of Ordnance; in all, $16,905,366.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 69, line 15, before the word "Provided," to strike out "For purchase and manufacture of smokeless powder, $20,000,000" and insert "For procuring, producing, reserving, and handling ammunition for vessels, $68,664,858," so as to make the clause read:

For procuring, producing, reserving, and handling ammunition for vessels, $68,664,858: Provided, That no part of any money appropriated by this act shall be expended for the purchase of powder other than small-arms powder at a price in excess of 53 cents a pound: Provided further, That in expenditures of this appropriation, or any part thereof, for powder, no powder shall at any time be purchased unless the powder factory at Indianhead, Md., shall be operated on a basis of not less than its full maximum capacity.

Mr. MARTIN. I send to the desk an amendment to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 69, line 14, it is proposed to strike out the word "reserving" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "preserving."

Mr. MARTIN. It is simply a verbal error.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, line 1, after the words "batteries for," to strike out "merchant auxiliaries" and insert "auxiliaries and merchantmen," so as to make the clause read:

For batteries for auxiliaries and merchantmen, $29,672,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, line 3, after the words "ammunition for," to strike out "merchant auxiliaries" and insert "auxiliaries and merchantment," so as to make the clause read:

For ammunition for auxiliaries and merchantmen, $19,988,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, after line 4, to strike out:

For procuring, producing, preserving, and handling ammunition for issue to ships, $60,664,858.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, after line 8, to strike out:

For a reserve of ordnance supplies, $19,260,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, after line 9, to insert:

For reserve and miscellaneous ordnance supplies, $29,260,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, after line 11, to insert:

In all, ordnance and ordnance stores, $198,066,024: Provided, That the President is hereby authorized to reapportion this amount among the purposes specified, from time to time, as may become necessary to meet the exigencies of the service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was under the subhead "Public works, Bureau of Yards and Docks," on page 71, line 23, after the word "magazines," to strike out "$100,000" and insert "$300,000," so as to make the clause read:

Quarters for marine guards: For temporary quarters for marine guard at naval magazines, $300,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 72, line 8, after the word "material," to strike out "$1,500,000" and insert "$3,000,000," so as to make the clause read:

Ordnance storage: For storage of ammunition, mines, torpedoes, and other ordnance material, $3,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 72, after line 8, to insert:

Naval operating base, Hampton Roads, Va.: For the acquisition, by purchase or condemnation, including all easements, riparian and other rights appurtenant thereto, of the tract of land known as the Jamestown Exposition site, on Hampton Roads, Va., and of such lands adjacent thereto as lie north of Nine-ninth Street and Algonquin Street and bounded on the northwest by Hampton Roads and Willoughby Bay and on the east by Bousch Creek, $1,400,000; and toward the equipment of this property as a naval operating base, including piers, storehouses, oil-fuel storage, training station, recreation grounds for the fleet, aviation, and other purposes, $1,600,000; in all, $3,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 72, after line 20, to insert:

Hospital construction: For emergency hospital construction, as may be necessary, at points not provided with hospitals, and when hospital facilities are not suitable or sufficient, or to rent or purchase same, $3,200,000; and for the establishment of naval medical supply depots at Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mare Island, Cal., by purchase or construction, $350,000; in all, $3,550,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 73, after line 2, to insert:

Naval magazine, St. Juliens Creek, Va.: The Secretary of the Navy is authorized to expend public money in the development of the tract of land to be added to the naval reservation at the naval ammunition depot, St. Juliens Creek, Va., without reference to the requirements of section 355 of the Revised Statutes, and that the provision in the naval appropriation act approved August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. L., 579), authorizing the purchase of additional land under the heading, "Naval magazine, St. Juliens Creek, Va.," is hereby amended to read as follows: "For additional land, to be secured by purchase or condemnation or otherwise, as the Secretary of the Navy may direct, $60,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Supplies and Accounts," on page 76, line 12, after the word "(female)" to insert "who shall hereafter be paid the same commutation as is or may be allowed members of the Nurse Corps of the Army," so as to read:

Pay of the Navy: Pay and allowances prescribed by law of officers on sea duty and other duty, and officers on waiting orders; officers on the retired list; commutation of quarters for officers on shore not occupying public quarters, including boatswains, gunners, carpenters, sailmakers, machinists, pharmacists, pay clerks, and mates, naval constructors, and assistant naval constructors; and also members of Nurse Corps (female) who shall hereafter be paid the same commutation as is or may be allowed members of the Nurse Corps of the Army.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Construction and Repair," on page 82, line 19, after the word "vessels," to strike out "$54,327,340" and insert "$57,327,340," and in line 22, after the words "expenditure of," to strike out "this fund" and insert "funds made available in this act," so as to read:

Construction and repair of vessels: For preservation and completion of vessels on the stocks and in ordinary; purchase of materials and stores of all kinds; steam steerers, pneumatic steerers, steam capstans, steam windlasses, and all other auxiliaries; labor in navy yards and on foreign stations; purchase of machinery and tools for use in shops; carrying on work of experimental model tank and wind tunnel; designing naval vessels; construction and repair of yard craft, lighters, and barges; wear, tear, and repair of vessels afloat; general care, increase, and protection of the Navy in the line of construction and repair; repair and maintenance of vessels of the Coast Guard and Lighthouse Services, submarine chasers, patrol boats; incidental expenses for vessels and navy yards, inspectors' offices, such as photographing, books, professional magazines, plans, stationery, and instruments for drafting room, and for pay of classified force under the bureau; for hemp, wire, iron, and other materials for the manufacture of cordage, anchors, cables, galleys, and chains; specifications for purchase thereof shall be so prepared as shall give fair and free competition; canvas for the manufacture of sails, awnings, hammocks, and other work; interior appliances and tools for manufacturing purposes in navy yards and naval stations; and for the purchase of all other articles of equipage at home and abroad; and for the payment of labor in equipping vessels therewith and manufacture of such articles in the several navy yards; naval signals and apparatus, other than electric, namely, signals, lights, lanterns, rockets, running lights, lanterns, and lamps and their appendages for general use on board ship for illuminating purposes; and oil and candles used in connection therewith; bunting and other materials for making and repairing flags of all kinds; for all permanent galley fittings and equipage; rugs, carpets, curtains, and hangings on board naval vessels, $57,327,340: Provided, That the limitations imposed by existing law relative to repairs to vessels of the Navy shall not apply to the expenditure of funds made available in this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 84, after line 19, to insert:

The foregoing appropriations for the Naval Establishment shall be available for similar expenses of the Coast Guard and Lighthouse Services while cooperating with the Navy in so far as the regular appropriations for these services are insufficient therefor; and, when expenditures are thus made, naval appropriations need not be reimbursed from the appropriations of the Coast Guard and Lighthouse Services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Naval Academy," on page 85, after line 1, to insert:

Pay of employees: Clerk, $1,320; 7 watchmen, at $840 each; in all, $7,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Marine Corps," subhead "Maintenance, Quartermaster's Department, Marine Corps," on page 92, after line 12, to insert:

East Coast Post: For the purchase of land, construction of buildings, and the installation thereon of water, light, plumbing, telephone and telegraph systems; necessary grading, roads, walks, docks; and all other necessary preliminary features toward the establishment of this post, $2,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 92, after line 17, to insert:

Depot of supplies, Marine Corps, Philadelphia, Pa.: For the purchase of a strip of land in rear of the depot of supplies, Marine Corps, Philadelphia, Pa., extending about 142 feet on Washington Avenue and about 226 feet on Fifteenth Street, with all buildings thereon, and for adapting said building to uses connected with the depot, $200,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 93, line 2, after the words "Marine Corps," to strike out "$20,208,161" and insert "$22,908,161," so as to make the clause read:

In all, for the maintenance of Quartermaster's Department, Marine Corps, $22,908,161; and the money herein specifically appropriated for the maintenance of the Quartermaster's Department, Marine Corps, shall be disbursed and accounted for in accordance with existing law as maintenance, Quartermaster's Department, Marine Corps, and for that purpose shall constitute one fund.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 93, after line 7, to insert:

INCREASE OF THE NAVY.

The limit of cost of the 46 submarines now under contract is increased by the sum of $10,000 each, and to meet the expenditures made necessary by said increased limit of cost there is hereby appropriated the sum of $460,000.

Mr. MARTIN. I move to strike out all of the amendment after the word "each," in line 10, in the following words:

and to meet the expenditures made necessary by said increased limit of cost there is hereby appropriated the sum of $460,000.

I do that because it is simply an authorization; it does not require an appropriation.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 93, after line 12, to strike out:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

Interior Department Building (new): For employees from May 1 to June 30, 1917, inclusive, at annual rates of compensation as follows: Assistant superintendent, $2,000; foreman of laborers, $1,000; 2 assistant foremen of laborers, at $900 each; laborers—27 at $660 each, 17 at $600 each, 14 at $540 each, 1 $480; 6 female laborers, at $400 each; 2 assistant engineers, at $1,000 each; 7 firemen, at $720 each; general machinist, $1,500; 2 wiremen, at $1,000 each; 2 electricians' helpers, at $720 each; painter, $1,000; plumber, $1,400; 2 assistant plumbers, at $1,000 each; 2 plumbers' helpers, at $840 each; 13 elevator conductors, at $720 each; 18 watchmen, at $720 each; in all, $13,940.

Court of Appeals Building, District of Columbia: For labor, materials, and all other expenses necessary to make the third floor of the Court of Appeals Building, District of Columbia, available to accommodate the office of the recorder of deeds, $12,000, to be expended under the direction of the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and Grounds and to be payable one-half out of the Treasury of the United States and one-half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia: Provided, That the appropriation of $5,000 for rent of temporary quarters for the office of the recorder of deeds, contained in the urgent deficiency appropriation act approved December 22, 1916, is repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 94, after line 15, to strike out:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.

BUREAU OF STANDARDS.

To enable the Bureau of Standards to cooperate with the War and Navy Departments by providing the scientific assistance necessary in the development of instruments, devices, and materials, and the standardization and testing of supplies, including personal services and rental of quarters in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; the erection of temporary structures; books of reference and periodicals; and all other necessary items not included in the foregoing, $250,000.

To complete the equipment of the new chemical laboratory building, including the construction, purchase, and installation of chemical desks, hoods, cases, special furniture, and other necessary equipment, including personal services in the District of Columbia, $35,000.

To provide by cooperation of the Bureau of Standards, the War Department, the Navy Department, and the Council of National Defense, for the standardization and testing of the standard gauges, screw threads, and standards required in manufacturing throughout the United States, and to calibrate and test such standard gauges, screw threads, and standards, including necessary equipment, rental in Washington, and elsewhere, erection of temporary structures, office expenses, books of reference and periodicals, personal services in the District of Columbia, and in the field, and all other necessary items not included in the foregoing, $150,000.

BUREAU OF LIGHTHOUSES.

To enable the Commissioner of Lighthouses to pay additional compensation to draftsmen employed on marine engineering work in the Bureau of Lighthouses, the pay of such draftsmen in no case to exceed the rate of $2,000 per annum, $1,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 96, to insert:

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION.

Detention of interned aliens: To enable the Secretary of Labor to detain, care for, and guard aliens in custody, pursuant to the requirements of sections 4067, 4068, and 4069 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, sections 9 and 10 of the Executive order of April 6, 1917, and the regulations made in pursuance thereof, to wit: For maintenance and hospital charges, food, medicines, and supplies, rental of quarters, including repairs and alterations thereto, salaries of officers and employees, furniture, fuel, light, water, and all contingent and miscellaneous expenses incident to the object stated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of Labor, $1,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 96, after line 16, to strike out:

LEGISLATIVE.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

To pay the widow of Henry T. Helgesen, late a Representative from the State of North Dakota, $7,500.

For stationery for the use of the committees and officers of the House, fiscal year 1917, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This completes the reading of the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. I offer an amendment. I do not think the chairman of the committee will have any objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill a new section, as follows:

SEC. 5. That, in addition to the reports now required by law, the Secretaries of the Treasury, War, and Navy shall each on the first Monday in December, 1917, and annually thereafter, transmit to the Congress a detailed statement of all expenditures under this act, and the officials of the Government under whom such expenditures are made be, and they hereby are, required and directed to take vouchers properly approved for all expenditures from the various appropriations made herein, which vouchers shall be presented to the proper accounting officers.

Mr. MARTIN. I have no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the chairman if he is through with all the committee amendments.

Mr. MARTIN. All the committee amendments have been disposed of.

Mr. KENYON. I offer an amendment as a new section, and I wish to say a word upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add a new section, as follows:

SEC. 6. A commission is hereby created for the purpose of advising the President and Congress as to the need of and plan for a national budget system. The said commission shall be composed of 12 members, to serve without compensation and without expense to the Government, and selected as follows:

Three members from the Cabinet, designated by the President, and three persons experienced in fiscal methods, to be appointed by the President; three Members of the Senate, to be appointed by the Vice President; and three Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker.

The said commission shall report a carefully worked out plan for the installation of a national budget system on or before the first day of the next regular session of Congress to the President and to Congress.

Mr. KENYON. I think possibly the Senator from Virginia may make a point of order against this amendment. I should like to speak for about five minutes upon it.

Mr. MARTIN. I will make the point of order, but I will delay it until the Senator has been heard.

Mr. KENYON. I am not at all certain about the point of order, but I am inclined to think it will be good, although this bill is full of legislation.

Mr. President, I have tried at different times in the last few years to secure some action by Congress looking to a budget system. I believe there is a universal demand in the country that Congress should adopt for this Nation, and especially now, a budget system.

We are the only civilized nation in the world, outside of Turkey, whose civilization may be somewhat in doubt, which does not have a budget system. We are going to spend, I assume, in the next two years ten or twelve billion dollars. The utter ignorance of Congress as to how the money is spent, with no system of accounting, with a system of auditing that no one seems to understand, with no correlation between committees either in the House or the Senate, with committees on both sides of the Capitol spending all the money they can, with no regard to where the money comes from or no regard to what other committees are spending, is simply appalling. The Government on these fiscal matters is simply groping in the dark. No one seems willing to take any particular interest in it. Just "appropriate the money" seems to be congressional doctrine.

Both political parties declared in their platforms for a budget system. The proposition I have presented here will not cost the Government one penny. It is simply an investigation of the question by three Cabinet officers, three Members of the Senate, three Members of the House, and three experts to be appointed by the President. I am prepared to say that experts in financial life and in business life are ready to donate their services as a part of the bit they may do for their country in helping to work out a plan for a national budget system.

Everybody believes in this. I do not believe there is a man on this floor or in Congress who is not in favor of some form of budget system, and yet we seem able to get no action at all upon it.

I want to place some matters in the RECORD because I hope that the country is going to wake up to the proposition before long, for this is a war measure just as much as anything else, and so I am trying to talk a little to the country instead of this large assembly of Senators this afternoon.

The United States Chamber of Commerce, composed of 152 boards of trade and chambers of commerce in 34 States, voted under their system of referendum on this question. There were 573 votes for and 10 against, and that represents about the business sentiment of the country.

The Democratic platform of 1916 said this:

ECONOMY AND THE BUDGET.

We demand careful economy in all expenditures for the support of the Government, and to that end favor a return by the House of Representatives to its former practice of initiating and preparing all appropriation bills through a single committee chosen from its membership in order that responsibility may be centered, expenditure standardized and made uniform, and waste and duplication in the public service as much as possible avoided. We favor this as a practicable first step toward a budget system.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to ask the Senator what is his object in reading a portion of the Democratic platform here?

Mr. KENYON. Does the Senator believe that it is out of order to read the Democratic platform?

Mr. NORRIS. It is not out of order.

Mr. BORAH. It is out of date.

Mr. KENYON. Out of date?

Mr. NORRIS. I suppose it is out of date, but everyone knows that no one is paying any attention to it now.

Mr. KENYON. I thought it was having a very enthusiastic reception in the Chamber. I am sorry the Senator injects that into my remarks. If the Senator prefers, I will read the Republican platform of 1916.

Mr. NORRIS. That will be better.

Mr. KENYON. Though I have an impression when the votes were counted the Democratic platform seemed to be sustained instead of the Republican platform, by a very narrow majority, however.

The Republican platform of 1916 said:

ECONOMY AND A NATIONAL BUDGET.

The increasing cost of the National Government and the need for the greatest economy of its resources in order to meet the growing demands of the people for Government service call for the severest condemnation of the wasteful appropriations of this Democratic administration, of its shameless raids on the Treasury, and of its opposition to and rejection of President Taft's oft-repeated proposals and earnest efforts to secure economy and efficiency through the establishment of a simple, businesslike budget system, to which we pledge our support, and which we hold to be necessary to effect a needed reform in the administration of national finances.

I also want to read into the RECORD a letter from the President of the United States to Senator TILLMAN, which is found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of the Sixty-third Congress, first session, March 17, 1913. In this letter the President said:

Ever since I was a boy I have been deeply interested in our methods of financial legislation. Ever since then I have insisted upon the absolute necessity of a carefully considered and wisely planned budget, and one of the objects I shall have most in mind when I get to Washington will be conferences with my legislative colleagues there with a view to bringing some budget system into existence. This business of building up the expenses of the Nation piece by piece will certainly lead us to error and perhaps embarrassment.

The balance of the letter is personal.

Mr. Hughes, in his speech accepting the Republican nomination, said:

It is time that we had fiscal reform. We demand a simple businesslike budget. I believe it is only through a responsible budget, proposed by the Executive, that we shall avoid financial waste and secure proper administrative efficiency and a well-balanced consideration of new administrative proposals.

Mr. Taft, in his message to Congress of January 17, 1912, said:

The United States is the only great Nation whose Government is operated without a budget. This fact seems to be more striking when it is considered that budgets and budget procedures are the outgrowth of democratic doctrines and have had an important part in the development of modern constitutional rights. The American Commonwealth has suffered much from irresponsibility on the part of its governing agencies. The constitutional purpose of a budget is to make government responsive to public opinion and responsible for its acts.

Mr. McAdoo, in the Outlook for March 7, 1917, said:

I am distinctly of the opinion that it would be well for Congress to consider the establishment of a budgetary or other fiscal plan for the purpose of more scientific treatment of the problem of Government expenditure in relation to Government income, and in this connection permit me to say that I recently submitted to the chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means, for the consideration of that committee, a suggestion of the appointment of a joint committee of the two Houses of Congress with direction to cooperate with the Secretary of the Treasury in studying and evolving such a plan for the consideration of Congress.

I also have here other statements which I will not take time to read, among them articles from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury advocating the same; one from President Hadley, of Yale University; from President Lowell, of Harvard University; from President Goodnow, of Johns Hopkins University, different remarks before the constitutional convention of New York from Mr. FITZGERALD, chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House. So I could go on for a long time citing the opinions of the leading men of this country, both in business and in politics, as to the necessity of the Government adopting a budget system.

I do not propose, Mr. President, to become discouraged at all in the task. I am going to keep at it as long as I stay in Congress. I believe there is nothing that is more needed in this country than a reform along that line. By it we will get rid of logrolling, we will get rid of the pork barrel; there will be some responsibility in these appropriations; there will be some knowledge of how money is going to be spent. Most of the States of the Union have adopted a budget system. Maryland just recently adopted a very strong system.

I will take time at some later date to discuss those matters.

If my amendment is subject to the point of order, which the Senator from Virginia I fear is going to make, I wish he might let me have a vote on this proposition. I shall propose this amendment to the revenue bill and every other bill that comes along until at last we secure an opportunity to get a vote on the question.

I shall not take any more time, as I know the Senator is anxious to get through, but I wish he would permit a vote on the question.

Mr. MARTIN. I make a point of order that the amendment is legislation on a general appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I offer the following amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 38, line 19, after the word "outfits," insert the following: "and for similar and other recreational purposes at training and mobilization camps now established, or which may be hereafter established"; and strike out "$150,000" in line 20, page 38, and insert in lieu thereof "$650,000."

Mr. MARTIN. I have no objection to that amendment. I believe it will be worth the cost to the morale of the Army.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NEW. I offer the following amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 19, line 15, after "$24,890,128," insert:

Provided, That the Secretary of War is authorized to enlist 1,200 competent cooks as sergeants, first class, Quartermaster Corps, for the duration of the war only, to be trained as cook instructors and to be employed as such.

Mr. NEW. I think the chairman of the committee will accept that amendment.

Mr. MARTIN. That is the amendment providing for cooks?

Mr. NEW. Yes, sir.

Mr. MARTIN. I have no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, I have no amendment to offer at this time, but I have had always a thought that items in a bill of this kind in the absence of a budget system should receive some explanation before we are required to vote upon it. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee as to the $1,000,000 appropriated for the Bureau of Immigration, on page 96, what is the necessity for that appropriation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair takes the liberty of suggesting to the Senator from Virginia that the Senator from New Mexico is making an inquiry.

Mr. MARTIN. The Senator will excuse me. I was diverted.

Mr. FALL. I understand that the Senator was occupied. I have no desire to detain the Senate, but I want to ask the Senator if he knows what the $1,000,000 appropriation on page 96 for the Bureau of Immigration was intended for and what is the necessity of it?

Mr. MARTIN. It is for the care of prisoners. That is stated in the amendment.

Mr. FALL. It does not say so. It says "detention of interned aliens."

Mr. SMOOT. That is what it is for.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can state to the Senator that we have taken a number of aliens off the foreign ships who are now prisoners of war. They were directed to be taken care of by the Department of Labor and they are in interned camps. This money is appropriated for the purpose of taking care of our prisoners of war whom we already have.

Mr. FALL. Does the Senator know from what fund the care of the 450 Chinese has been paid who have been interned near Columbus, N. Mex., who came out with the Pershing expedition and have been detained under charge of Maj. Parker? Does the Senator know what fund?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There was no information of that kind given to us.

Mr. FALL. I have no objection even to the payment of a deficiency for the retention of those Chinamen on this side, but I have been informed by the Department of Labor that those Chinamen could not be released for labor in the fields of New Mexico or elsewhere even under bond providing for their return or surrender at any time, because they have been turned over to the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army to work for the quartermaster at Fort Sam Houston. I thought no appropriation of $1,000,000 for them would be necessary.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator I do not know anything about the Chinese; the information given to the committee was that this money was to be used entirely for taking care of German prisoners of war.

Mr. FALL. I have no objection to it. My attention was attracted to it for this reason: For months the people of New Mexico have been attempting to cooperate with the General Government to carry out the President's plan of additional food production. Being short of labor they have, through myself, sought the release of the Chinamen who are interned, who are agricultural laborers, under an agreement that they were to make private contracts with the Chinamen and to pay them satisfactory amounts, and give individual bonds for the return of the Chinamen at any time when they desired to send them away. We wished to do something with them if they might be turned over in New Mexico for labor on the farms.

The matter was taken up by myself at the request of citizens with both the Department of Labor and the Department of War. At one time I thought I had assurances by which an arrangement of that kind could be worked out. I have received a letter in the last day or two to the effect that they have been ordered to Fort Sam Houston and that they are going to work in the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army. The people in my part of the country have been wiring me about it, and I thought I might probably get some additional information.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I wish to ask the Senator under what authority these Chinamen are interned in this country. We are not at war with China.

Mr. FALL. I presume it was simply through our desire to protect the lives of these Chinamen. They had been found by Gen. Pershing during his expedition working farms in Mexico. They cultivated truck patches and farms and sold the products to Pershing. The Mexicans who were following Gen. Pershing out announced that they would kill all parties who had had any communication with his command or who had rendered it any assistance, and among others they threatened to take the lives of these Chinamen. So Gen. Pershing allowed them to follow him across the line under, I presume, the rule or regulation referred to in this section of the appropriation bill. They have been held by Maj. Parker, military commander at Columbus, under military guard from that time until the present.

Mr. JONES of Washington. In other words, we brought them out of Mexico to save their lives and we are now keeping them prisoners and making them work for us.

Mr. FALL. Yes; until such time as we can in our wisdom determine what we shall do with them. The people of New Mexico propose to pay them $30, $40, and $50 a month apiece to work on farms. They are very desirous of securing their labor and offer to give bond. I offered myself, I may say, individually, to give a bond for the reappearance of 25 and employ them on my ranch.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Could not the Government of Mexico now protect them if they were sent back?

Mr. FALL. The Senator may be a little more optimistic than I am about the Government of Mexico. In fact, from his question I judge he possesses some of the optimism of the President of the United States.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. FALL. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. Has the United States Government any right to put those men in involuntary servitude?

Mr. FALL. I do not know, Mr. President; it is proceeding to put the people of the United States into involuntary servitude, and I should think it could do something with the Chinamen.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 48, after line 4, insert:

The Secretary of War is authorized to transfer to the owners of the adjacent land in partial consideration for the transfer to the United States of an easement in other land of said owners the title of the United States to a right of way now owned by the United States and located between the tract of land known as the Laguna Merced Reservation and an abandoned public highway formerly known as Ocean House Road (also called Ocean Avenue) in the city and county of San Francisco, Cal.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, this involves merely an exchange of a right of way and gives the Government access to a public road. The amendment is moved at the request of the War Department. I think it is well understood by the committee. I beg to ask leave to have printed the letter of the Secretary of War on the subject without having it read at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter referred to by the Senator from California will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, May 18, 1917.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
United States Senate.

SIR: The War Department project for additional battery construction at the defenses of San Francisco, Cal., contemplates the construction of emplacements at Laguna Merced, Cal., upon a parcel of land owned by the United States and located to the south of the Fort Miley Reservation, in the city and county of San Francisco, Cal., and also upon a parcel of land adjacent thereto, negotiations for the purchase of which, under authority of the fortifications appropriation act approved July 1, 1916, are now in progress.

2. In order to afford a means of communication to the existing Laguna Merced Reservation, a right of way, extending by an indirect route from the limits of the reservation to the then existing Ocean House Road (also called Ocean Avenue), was awarded, under condemnation proceedings, to the United States at the time the existing reservation was acquired. On account of the fact, however, that the Ocean House Road has since been abandoned by the city of San Francisco as a public highway the existing right of way is incomplete in that it does not now extend to any public way, and a new right of way is accordingly required.

3. In connection with the negotiations for the purchase of the additional land adjacent to the existing Laguna Merced Reservation, an advantageous offer has been secured from the owner of the land, involving, as a condition precedent, the recession of the existing right of way to the owner, in partial consideration for the transfer to the United States of a new right of way between the boundaries of the existing reservation and a public highway known as Sloat Boulevard. The new right of way will afford direct communication between the reservation and the city of San Francisco via Sloat Boulevard.

4. A draft of proposed legislation authorizing the Secretary of War to transfer the existing right of way is herewith, and it is recommended that it be enacted into law as soon as possible, either in a separate bill or as an item in some appropriation bill.

Very respectfully,

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. CURTIS. I did not care to ask a question. I wish to submit a few remarks on the amendment; that is all.

Mr. PHELAN. I will yield the floor to the Senator.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, personally I have no objection to this amendment, provided other Senators are permitted to offer and have considered the same kind of amendments. The committee adopted a rule that no amendment would be accepted on this bill except such as applied directly to the war emergency for the Army and Navy, to be used in connection with the war with Germany.

I offered an amendment which was reported upon by the department to be a war emergency, and after I was told that rule was going to be followed by the committee I consented not to urge the amendment, provided all other amendments of the same nature were left out.

The amendment offered by the Senator from California is meritorious, but it comes within that rule. If it is admitted to the bill, then I submit that those of us representing States in which there are forts where appropriations are needed for war purposes should be permitted to offer the same kind of amendments.

In view of that fact and in view of the action of the committee, I hope this amendment will not be agreed to, because in my judgment it is a direct violation of the rule that the committee applied to members of the committee as well as to other Members of the Senate.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. CURTIS. Certainly.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, I am disposed to believe the Senator from Kansas is laboring under some misapprehension.

The amendment which I have proposed does not involve any expenditure for war or for any other purposes. The facts are simply these:

The Government of the United States at the Laguna Merced Reservation, within the county of San Francisco, many years ago acquired a site for fortification purposes, and in acquiring that land by condemnation from the Spring Valley Water Co. they secured a right of way which gave them the privilege of getting out of the reservation by a public road. In the meantime the city closed the road and now they are denied access to the public road. Under those circumstances we have gone to the Spring Valley Water Co. and asked them for a new right of way in lieu of the abandonment of the old right of way. The object is now to give a right of way for a public road, involving no expenditure whatever to the Government, and absolutely necessary to make available the land on which they are now building emplacements for great guns for public defense. It does not involve an appropriation.

It is manifestly for war purposes. It is made at the urgent demand of the department. I judge by the implication from the Senator's remarks that his amendment carries an appropriation.

Mr. CURTIS. Yes. It is true the Senator's amendment does not carry an appropriation, but I want to say while it is not proper to discuss what occurred in the committee, the committee were of the opinion that this was an amendment similar to that and came within the same class as the one offered by myself, and as they applied the rule I think they ought to apply it all around. As I said, I believe the Senator's amendment should not be placed in this bill.

Mr. PHELAN. But the amendment of the Senator from Kansas carries an appropriation.

Mr. CURTIS. It did carry an appropriation, but it was recommended by the department. It was recommended as a necessity of war, as they need it now. But the committee has said that they expected there would be another deficiency appropriation bill, to which they prefer that all these items should be attached; and, so far as I am concerned, I agreed to let this matter go over until the other appropriation bill comes up; but I insist that the same rule shall be applied to the various Members of the Senate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. CURTIS. Certainly.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, speaking for the subcommittee, I desire to say that the statement which has just been made by the Senator from Kansas is correct. The subcommittee were inclined to put this item in this bill, and in their first draft they did put it in, but when they found that it would result in a large number of other items going in the bill that were not related to war expenditures, they agreed to strike it out. I think it would be most unfortunate, Mr. President, if items that do not relate directly to war expenditures—I say "directly"; I do not mean incidentally, but directly—should be put on this bill, and that a bill of this importance should be delayed either here or in conference by reason of those items.

I think there will be another deficiency bill, and when the other bill comes I shall be very glad, in committee and in the Senate, to vote for the Senator's amendment, because I think there is merit in it, but I do not think we can fairly allow this amendment to go into this bill and exclude an amendment such as the one to which the Senator from Kansas has referred. It is legislation; it proposes legislation that would allow a transfer of land; it is not an appropriation; and I make the point of order that it is legislation upon an appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is ready to rule on the point of order. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, I do not wish to offer an amendment, but I wish to make an inquiry about the appropriation for horses on page 36. I do not know about the size of these appropriations; that is to say, whether more money is being appropriated than is absolutely necessary; but my attention has been attracted to that appropriation because, presumably, it is to buy horses sufficient for an army of a million men. If my understanding is correct, it would require about 250,000 horses for the cavalry, artillery, and other purposes, for an army of a million men. Last year the War Department paid $149 apiece on an average for its horses. Therefore if we were going to supply a million men with a sufficient number of horses, including the Cavalry, we would only need an appropriation of about $38,000,000.

But my attention has been particularly attracted to this provision because it does not seem to me necessary, or even desirable, that we should buy Cavalry horses for this great host. We have been particularly requested by the foreign governments, if my understanding is correct, not to send Cavalry to Europe; that however many Infantry and however much Artillery we may send, not to send any Cavalry. As a matter of fact, the English and French have 200,000 Cavalry in France, which, practically speaking, have not been employed during the war. So that it would be futile for us to send Cavalry to Europe.

If we are going to send Cavalry, is it wise for us to appropriate money now, during the farming season, when horses are in use, to buy horses for Cavalry purposes when they can not possibly be used? Of course, the answer will be that, if it is not necessary, the horses will not be purchased. But I hesitate about appropriating money for purchase of horses when such a purchase would be not only harmful to the farming community but would be of no benefit to the Military Establishment of the Government.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. WEEKS. I yield.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My information is that this is a House provision, and not a Senate provision.

Mr. WEEKS. I understand that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Judging from the information I have, this money is not to be spent to buy Cavalry horses, and it is not the purpose of the Government to organize new regiments of Cavalry; but a very large number of horses are going to be used in the Artillery, which is a very important branch of the service, of course, and for the Quartermaster Corps, to be used in the wagon trains in the new army of 500,000 men to begin with and 500,000 more a little later on.

Mr. WEEKS. Let me say to the Senator that $20,000,000 would buy all of the horses necessary for the Artillery and the Quartermaster's Establishment for an army of 1,000,000 men.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, this is an estimate of the department. I concur in what the Senator says; and if I thought he was correct about the use of these horses, I admit I do not see any reason in the world for buying horses for Cavalry when we are not going to organize the Cavalry regiments; but my understanding is different from his.

Mr. WEEKS. The Senator will notice on the bottom of page 35, in the very last line, it is provided that the horses shall be "for the Cavalry, Artillery, Signal Corps, and Engineers," and so forth. I am not going to object to the appropriation, I merely wanted to call the attention of the Senate once more to the probability that we are appropriating very much larger amounts for specific purposes than can be used.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator that it will be agreeable to the committee, if he desires to do so, to have him move to reduce the amount of the appropriation, which will allow us to take it to conference, so that we can get further information on the subject.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, without going into anything definite about the amount which should be appropriated, in order to get it into conference, with the assurance that that phase of the question will be given consideration, I move to substitute "$25,000,000," in line 25, on page 36, for the amount there carried, "$73,582,250."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is agreeable, with the understanding on the part of the Senate that we shall take it to conference to be acted on after we get the information.

Mr. WEEKS. I have no objection to that course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 36, line 25, after the word "place," it is proposed to strike out "$73,582,250" and insert "$25,000,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, at this point I desire to make a statement called for by a remark made by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS]. I told the Senator from Kansas I was sure that there would be an additional deficiency bill. That, of course, was merely a personal opinion of mine. Deficiency bills must originate in the other House, but I do not see how we can get along without one.

Mr. CURTIS. I understood that.

Mr. MARTIN. I do not want the Senator to forego anything without knowing that it was simply my personal opinion that another deficiency bill would be necessary; but, as I have said, it will have to come from the other House.

Mr. CURTIS. I fully realize that. I know that all appropriation bills originate in the other House.

Mr. MARTIN. I thought probably the Senator might feel I had some information from the House, but I have not.

Mr. CURTIS. Not at all. I did not intend to have my remarks so construed. I did not intend to convey any such impression.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, in this connection I desire to say that there must be some further appropriation bills or some of the departments here will be absolutely in a position where they will not be able to carry on their work. Suggestions for those appropriations came before the committee to be placed upon this appropriation bill, but we uniformly refused to consider them for the reasons given by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD].

Mr. MARTIN. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I gave notice a few days ago of my intention to offer an amendment to the pending bill. The amendment now lies on the table. I offer it at this time, and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma offers an amendment, which the Secretary will state.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill a new section, as follows:

SEC. —. That there is hereby authorized a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress, which shall consist of the Vice President and four Members of the Senate, to be designated by him, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives and four other Members of the House, to be designated by him. It shall be the duty of said joint committee to visit, so far as practicable, the different countries now making common cause with the United States against a common enemy and investigate conditions therein and report to Congress at its regular annual session in December, 1917, such facts as may be necessary and proper for the guidance of Congress in future legislation looking to the vigorous prosecution and successful conclusion of the present war. Said joint committee shall elect a chairman and is authorized to incur and pay upon the certificate of its chairman such expenses in the city of Washington and elsewhere for the payment of the salaries of employees, clerks, stenographers, assistants, and such other necessary expenses as the committee may deem necessary for the purposes of its investigations: Provided, That the total expenses incurred for all purposes shall not exceed the sum of $35,000.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I shall make a point of order against the amendment, but not, of course, to interfere with the Senator, if he desires to speak on the subject. I wish to say to the Senator that the committee having the bill in charge, in order to expedite it and to confine it to war expenditures, have insisted and agreed with everyone who came before the committee that we would not allow any legislation or matters of appropriation to go on the bill that did not directly relate to war expenditures. So that the committee will be constrained to make a point of order, but I will reserve it for the present.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I have no desire to discuss the amendment. I will merely say that the amendment explains itself. The responsibility of legislation rests upon the Congress. We could not shift that responsibility if we would, and I believe that we would not if we could; at least, that is my personal attitude in the premises.

The object of this amendment is to enable Congress to obtain, through its own instrumentalities, the fullest light for its future guidance with respect to such legislation. I know that everybody desires the war to be conducted successfully and to a speedy conclusion; but there has been some complaint that Congress has not been provided with all the information which might be desirable. I offer this amendment in order to meet that situation, and, if possible, to silence that complaint in the future. I apprehend that possibly it would meet the fate just indicated by the Senator from Alabama, although I am not certain that it is not entirely germane to this bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I make the point of order against the amendment for the reasons I stated a moment ago.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee a question. The inquiry was propounded to me a few minutes ago by an official of the Navy Department whether the bill contains a provision to authorize the department to commandeer private yachts. I do not know whether that was in the House provision or not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly this bill as it is written would allow the commandeering of private yachts. It does not mention yachts, but it says "the word 'ship' shall include any boat or vessel and the parts thereof." I think beyond any doubt the definition is broad enough to cover yachts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. MARTIN. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and Mr. MARTIN, Mr. UNDERWOOD, and Mr. WARREN were appointed conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. MARTIN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE DANIEL W. COMSTOCK.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of DANIEL W. COMSTOCK, late a Representative from the State of Indiana, and transmitted resolutions of the House thereon.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, it is with great sorrow that I have to announce to the Senate the death of Hon. DANIEL W. COMSTOCK, a Representative in Congress from the sixth congressional district of Indiana. Judge COMSTOCK served his State loyally and gallantly as a soldier of the Union in the great Civil War and at various times has served his State with honor and distinction on the bench of its higher courts. He was gallant and brave as a soldier, efficient and distinguished as a jurist, and was serving honorably and with credit as a Representative in Congress at the time of his unexpected death.

I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the resolutions of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions of the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolutions, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
May 19, 1917.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. DANIEL W. COMSTOCK, a Representative from the State of Indiana.

Resolved, That a committee of 15 Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect this House do now adjourn.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, on some future day I shall ask the Senate to designate a time at which appropriate tribute may be paid to the memory of the deceased Representative. For the present I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk and ask for their adoption.

The resolutions were read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Senate resolution 66.

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. DANIEL W. COMSTOCK, late a Representative from the State of Indiana.

Resolved, That a committee of five Senators be appointed by the Chair to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased in Richmond, Ind.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, under the second clause of the resolutions, appointed as the committee on the part of the Senate Mr. NEW, Mr. WATSON, Mr. FERNALD, Mr. THOMAS, and Mr. HARDWICK.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m., Saturday, May 19, 1917) the Senate adjourned until Monday, May 21, 1917, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 19 (legislative day of May 17), 1917.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

James M. Cathcart to be internal-revenue collector for the district of Florida, in place of Henry Hayes Lewis, superseded.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate May 19 (legislative day of May 17), 1917.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

James M. Cathcart to be internal-revenue collector for the district of Florida.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

CHAPLAINS.

Rev. Oscar Lee Owens to be chaplain with the rank of first lieutenant.

Rev. Zachary Taylor Vincent to be chaplain with the rank of first lieutenant.

Rev. Merritt V. Eusey to be chaplain with the rank of first lieutenant.

Rev. Albert Kingsbury Mathews to be chaplain with the rank of first lieutenant.

VETERINARY CORPS.

To be assistant veterinarians.

Veterinarian John A. McKinnon.
Veterinarian James R. Shand.
Veterinarian Edward P. O'Connell.
Veterinarian Thomas H. Jones.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS.

To be second lieutenants.

Cadet Harris Jones.
Cadet Francis Lorenz Palmer.
Cadet William Francis Heavey.
Cadet Harold Roger Richards.
Cadet John Jefferson Flowers Steiner.
Cadet Daniel Noce.
Cadet Willis Edward Teale.
Cadet Clark Kittrell.
Cadet Samuel Rairigh Irwin.
Cadet Henry Hutchings, jr.

CAVALRY ARM.

To be second lieutenants.

Cadet Ray Harrison.
Cadet William Foster Daugherty.
Cadet John Tupper Cole.
Cadet Stephen Huntting Sherrill.
Cadet Charles Hunter Gerhardt.
Cadet Walter Herman Schulze.
Cadet Herbert Charles Holdridge.
Cadet Albert Cowper Smith.
Cadet Nicholas Winn Lisle.
Cadet Percy Gamble Black.
Cadet Albert Charles Stanford.
Cadet Laurence Bascum Meacham.
Cadet Louis Le Roy Martin.
Cadet William Kelly Harrison, jr.
Cadet Josiah Purman Morford.
Cadet Ernest Nason Harmon.
Cadet Joseph Scranton Tate.
Cadet Arthur McKinley Harper.
Cadet John Wesley Confer, jr.
Cadet Herbert Norman Schwarzkopf.
Cadet Robert Newton Kunz.
Cadet Charles Solomon Kilburn.
Cadet Charles Radcliffe Johnson, jr.
Cadet Bertrand Morrow.
Cadet Coalter Bates Comp[illegible].

FIELD ARTILLERY ARM.

To be second lieutenants.

Cadet Robert Marks Bathurst.
Cadet William Harrison Saunders.
Cadet Charles Everett Hurdis.
Cadet Henry John Schroeder.
Cadet James Kivas Tully.
Cadet John Matthew Devine.
Cadet Harold Albert Nisley.
Cadet Fenton Harrison McGlachlin.
Cadet James Louis Guion.
Cadet George Douglas Wahl.
Cadet Basil Harrison Perry.
Cadet Ray Hartwell Lewis.
Cadet Solomon Foote Clark.
Cadet Augustus Milton Gurney.
Cadet Oliver Byron Cardwell.
Cadet William Ormond Butler.
Cadet Rex Webb Beasley.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

To be second lieutenants.

Cadet Harold Rufus Jackson.
Cadet Morris Keene Barroll, jr.
Cadet Walter Wilton Warner.
Cadet Walter Francis Vander Hyden.
Cadet Ira Adam Crump.
Cadet Elbert Louis Ford, jr.
Cadet Samuel Hingston Bradbury, jr.
Cadet James Lord Hayden.
Cadet Scott Brewer Ritchie.
Cadet George Sampson Beurket.
Cadet Burnett Ralph Olmsted.
Cadet Joel Grant Holmes.
Cadet James Arthur Code, jr.
Cadet William Sackville.
Cadet Leroy Henry Lohmann.
Cadet Christian Gingrich Foltz.
Cadet Aaron Bradshaw, jr.
Cadet William Warwick Cowgill.
Cadet Harry Russell Pierce.
Cadet Lawrence Collamore Mitchell.
Cadet Alexander Hunkins Campbell.
Cadet Marvil Groves Armstrong.
Cadet John Richard Nygaard.

INFANTRY ARM.

To be second lieutenants.

Cadet Francis Eugene Dougherty.
Cadet Lyman Lewis Parks.
Cadet John Trott Murray.
Cadet Warfield Monroe Lewis.
Cadet Joseph Lawton Collins.
Cadet James Oscar Green, jr.
Cadet Daves Rossell.
Cadet Harold McClave White.
Cadet Lincoln Ferris Daniels.
Cadet Frederick Augustus Irving.
Cadet Matthew Bunker Ridgway.
Cadet Richard Mars Wightman.
Cadet Charles Walter Yuill.
Cadet William Willis Eagles.
Cadet Francis Anthony Markoe.
Cadet John James McEwan.
Cadet John Allen Stewart.
Cadet George Wilbur Sackett.
Cadet Francis Graves Bonham.
Cadet Norman Daniel Cota.
Cadet Robert Bundy Ransom.
Cadet Carleton Coulter, jr.
Cadet James Henly Frier, jr.
Cadet Leo James Erler.
Cadet Robert Denis Newton.
Cadet Willis Richardson Slaughter.
Cadet George Hatton Weems.
Cadet Roy Lindsay Bowlin.
Cadet William Claude McMahon.
Cadet Francis Michael Brennan.
Cadet Milton Baldridge Halsey.
Cadet Charles Love Mullins, jr.
Cadet Thomas Simons Sinkler, jr.
Cadet George Francis Wooley, jr.
Cadet Sterling Alexander Wood, jr.
Cadet William Francis Redfield.
Cadet Mark Wayne Clark.
Cadet Stewart Whiting Hoover.
Cadet David Sheridan Rumbough.
Cadet Francis John Heraty.
Cadet Donovan Swanton.
Cadet Francis Atherton Macon, jr.
Cadet Laurence Bolton Keiser.
Cadet Homer Caffee Brown.
Cadet Clare Hibbs Armstrong.
Cadet Harris Marcy Melasky.
Cadet Sidney Hooper Young.
Cadet John Clement Whitcomb.
Cadet Wallace James Redner.
Cadet Charles David Lewis.
Cadet Edward William Leonard.
Cadet Paul Hancock Brown.
Cadet William Stuart Eley.
Cadet Paul Winters York.
Cadet Ferdinand Gustav von Kummer, jr.
Cadet Joseph Pescia Sullivan.
Cadet Henry Henley Chapman.

Cadet Asa Parmele Pope.
Cadet Edwin Howard Clark.
Cadet Lewis Perrine.
Cadet Clarke Kent Fales.
Cadet John Addison Welshampel.
Cadet Malcolm Boord Helm.

PROVISIONAL APPOINTMENTS BY PROMOTION IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

To be first lieutenants.

Second Lieut. Frank L. Hoerner.
Second Lieut. Joseph P. Vachon.
Second Lieut. Harry O. Davis.
Second Lieut. Floyd Hatfield.
Second Lieut. Earl Landreth.
Second Lieut. Richard T. McDonnell.
Second Lieut. Harold P. Kayser.
Second Lieut. Basil D. Spalding.
Second Lieut. Henry J. C. Humphrey.
Second Lieut. Gordon W. Ellis.
Second Lieut. George L. Febiger.
Second Lieut. Theodore W. Sidman.
Second Lieut. Fred Stall.
Second Lieut. Claud E. Stadtman.
Second Lieut. Mitchell Hilt.
Second Lieut. John B. Warfield.
Second Lieut. Clarence R. Huebner.
Second Lieut. Harold G. Lewis.
Second Lieut. Frederick McCabe.
Second Lieut. Morton L. Landreth.
Second Lieut. Irving H. Engleman.
Second Lieut. Clarence W. Emerson.
Second Lieut. Frederick J. von Rohan.
Second Lieut. Frederick Schoenfeld.
Second Lieut. Earl J. Dodge.
Second Lieut. Paul J. McDonnell.
Second Lieut. Eustis L. Poland.
Second Lieut. Fred I. Massey.
Second Lieut. Curtis T. Huff.
Second Lieut. Paul Hathaway.
Second Lieut. Clarence F. Jobson.
Second Lieut. Alfred R. Hamel.
Second Lieut. Hardin C. Sweeney.
Second Lieut. Eugene M. Landrum.
Second Lieut. Arthur J. O'Keefe.
Second Lieut. James A. Anderson.
Second Lieut. Adelbert B. Stewart.
Second Lieut. William F. Lee.
Second Lieut. Donavin Miller.
Second Lieut. George W. Teachout.
Second Lieut. Clarence R. Oliver.
Second Lieut. Frederick W. Huntington.
Second Lieut. Howard J. Houghland.
Second Lieut. Thomas J. Griffin.
Second Lieut. Chester A. Davis.
Second Lieut. Conrad L. Dennis.
Second Lieut. Roland R. Long.
Second Lieut. Arthur Van Dine.
Second Lieut. Cordray W. Cutchin.
Second Lieut. Charles B. Oldfield.
Second Lieut. Charles J. Allen.
Second Lieut. John L. Dunn.
Second Lieut. Raymond Wortley.
Second Lieut. William B. Wynn.
Second Lieut. Louis A. Welch.
Second Lieut. Schiller Scroggs.
Second Lieut. Charles A. McGarrigle.
Second Lieut. Alexander P. Withers.
Second Lieut. Orville E. Lewis.
Second Lieut. Lonnie H. Nixon.
Second Lieut. William F. Freehoff.
Second Lieut. Shelby Ledford.
Second Lieut. Austin A. Adamson.
Second Lieut. Paul C. Turner.
Second Lieut. Charles M. Crooks.
Second Lieut. William G. Livesay.
Second Lieut. Robert L. Christian.
Second Lieut. William H. Crom.
Second Lieut. Leo E. Johnson.
Second Lieut. George R. F. Cornish.
Second Lieut. Delphin E. Thebaud.
Second Lieut. George S. Clarke.
Second Lieut. Adolph C. Weidenbach.
Second Lieut. Fred McI. Logan.
Second Lieut. Freeman Smith.
Second Lieut. Joseph W. G. Stephens.
Second Lieut. Adolph Unger.
Second Lieut. Richard K. Sutherland.
Second Lieut. Shelby M. Tuttle.
Second Lieut. Robert G. Moss.
Second Lieut. Emil W. Leard.
Second Lieut. Walter F. Adams.
Second Lieut. Joseph N. Greene.
Second Lieut. Sereno E. Brett.
Second Lieut. Harry L. Reeder.
Second Lieut. Jay E. Gillfillan.
Second Lieut. Lester T. Gayle, jr.
Second Lieut. Turner M. Chambliss.
Second Lieut. James N. C. Richards.
Second Lieut. Truman Smith.
Second Lieut. John F. Ehlert.
Second Lieut. Theron G. Methven.
Second Lieut. Francis M. Van Natter.
Second Lieut. Paul L. Ransom.
Second Lieut. Rice M. Yonell.
Second Lieut. James H. Holmes, jr.
Second Lieut. Manton S. Eddy.
Second Lieut. Charles E. Moore.
Second Lieut. Gabriel T. Mackenzie.
Second Lieut. Erskine S. Dollarhide.
Second Lieut. Barnwell R. Legge.
Second Lieut. Alexander W. Dillard.
Second Lieut. Edward M. Almond.
Second Lieut. Charles P. Stivers.
Second Lieut. Robert C. Van Vliet, jr.
Second Lieut. Charles L. Chaffee.
Second Lieut. Bohun B. Kinloch.
Second Lieut. Richard K. Smith.
Second Lieut. Percy W. Clarkson.
Second Lieut. Lee S. Gerow.
Second Lieut. Stuart G. Wilder.
Second Lieut. Harry I. T. Creswell.
Second Lieut. Charles E. Purviance.
Second Lieut. Lloyd H. Cook.
Second Lieut. John T. Bossi.
Second Lieut. Charles T. Senay.
Second Lieut. Egmont F. Koenig.
Second Lieut. Arthur H. Goddard.
Second Lieut. Peter K. Kelly.
Second Lieut. Edward M. Peters.
Second Lieut. James H. Edgarton.
Second Lieut. Lawrence J. I. Barrett.
Second Lieut. Wendell H. Woolworth.
Second Lieut. John R. Brooke, jr.
Second Lieut. Frank L. Culin, jr.
Second Lieut. Daniel S. Appleton.
Second Lieut. Ralph E. McLain.
Second Lieut. Ralph C. Smith.
Second Lieut. Thomas S. Arms.
Second Lieut. Raymond D. Bell.
Second Lieut. Archelaus L. Hamblen.
Second Lieut. William H. Humphreys.
Second Lieut. Paul W. Mapes.
Second Lieut. Robert C. Macon.
Second Lieut. Frederic C. Dose.
Second Lieut. Stephen P. Jocelyn, jr.
Second Lieut. John D. Townsend.
Second Lieut. Henry H. Worthington.
Second Lieut. George L. Kraft.
Second Lieut. John S. Switzer, jr.
Second Lieut. James C. Cook.
Second Lieut. Allen F. Kingman.
Second Lieut. Abraham Tabachnik.
Second Lieut. William A. Rawls, jr.
Second Lieut. Hamilton K. Foster.
Second Lieut. Constant L. Irwin.
Second Lieut. Willis E. Comfort.
Second Lieut. Leven C. Allen.
Second Lieut. Joseph Quesenberry.
Second Lieut. Robert O. Jones.
Second Lieut. Oliver A. Hess.
Second Lieut. Edward A. Allen.
Second Lieut. Carroll M. De Witt.
Second Lieut. Clarence B. Carver.
Second Lieut. Jedediah H. Hills.
Second Lieut. Edwin E. Schwien.
Second Lieut. Dan D. Howe.
Second Lieut. John E. Copeland.
Second Lieut. John H. Humbert.
Second Lieut. Joseph L. Lancaster.

Second Lieut. David R. Kerr.
Second Lieut. Everett G. Smith.
Second Lieut. Lyman S. Frazier.
Second Lieut. Howard E. Hawkinson.
Second Lieut. Julius A. Mood, jr.
Second Lieut. Sidney S. Eberle.
Second Lieut. Joseph N. Dalton.
Second Lieut. Charles N. Stevens.
Second Lieut. James S. Bailey.
Second Lieut. Henry C. Long, jr.
Second Lieut. William E. Lucas, jr.
Second Lieut. Victor Parks.
Second Lieut. Walter A. Pashkoski.
Second Lieut. Roscius H. Back.
Second Lieut. Oscar F. Carlson.
Second Lieut. Richard G. Tindall.
Second Lieut. Roy L. Taylor.
Second Lieut. Leander R. Hathaway.
Second Lieut. German W. Lester.
Second Lieut. Seely B. Fahey.
Second Lieut. Karl Engeldinger.
Second Lieut. Francis A. Byrne.
Second Lieut. Harry J. Selby.
Second Lieut. Farragut F. Hall.
Second Lieut. Orville M. Moore.
Second Lieut. William H. McCutcheon, jr.
Second Lieut. Walter R. McClure.
Second Lieut. Charles E. Speer.
Second Lieut. Baldwin Williams-Foote.
Second Lieut. Edmund Wilhelm.
Second Lieut. George H. Butler.
Second Lieut. Frank C. Foley.
Second Lieut. Leonard R. Boyd.
Second Lieut. Withers A. Burress.
Second Lieut. Arthur J. Hoffmann.
Second Lieut. Harry L. Bennett, jr.
Second Lieut. Joseph J. McConville.
Second Lieut. John C. Platt, jr.
Second Lieut. Thomas H. Ward.
Second Lieut. Edward H. Nichols.
Second Lieut. Alfred D. Hayden.
Second Lieut. Melville W. F. Wallace.
Second Lieut. Paul M. Ellis.
Second Lieut. Kirk A. Metzerott.
Second Lieut. Thomas E. Mount.
Second Lieut. John P. Pryor.
Second Lieut. Jewett C. Baker.
Second Lieut. Robert B. Moore.
Second Lieut. Charles W. Jones.
Second Lieut. Edward H. Cotcher.
Second Lieut. Robert S. Miller.
Second Lieut. Paul N. Starlings.
Second Lieut. Madison Pearson.

CAVALRY ARM.

To be first lieutenants.

Second Lieut. Harley C. Dagley.
Second Lieut. Charles L. Clifford.
Second Lieut. Gaston L. Holmes.
Second Lieut. George W. Wersebe.
Second Lieut. Milton R. Fisher.
Second Lieut. John S. Jadwin.
Second Lieut. Arthur P. Thayer.
Second Lieut. Edward R. Scheitlin.
Second Lieut. Edwin A. Martin.
Second Lieut. Frank G. Ringland.
Second Lieut. John B. Harper.
Second Lieut. Winchell I. Rasor.
Second Lieut. Oliver I. Holman.
Second Lieut. John J. Bohn.
Second Lieut. Harry B. Flounders.
Second Lieut. John C. Garrett.
Second Lieut. Grover R. Carl.
Second Lieut. Hugh D. Blanchard.
Second Lieut. James G. Monihan.
Second Lieut. Anthony J. Kirst.
Second Lieut. William G. Simmons.
Second Lieut. Rexford E. Willoughby.
Second Lieut. John D. Austin.
Second Lieut. John P. Kaye.
Second Lieut. Cleo D. Mayhugh.
Second Lieut. James W. Barnett.
Second Lieut. John C. Mullenix.
Second Lieut. Ross McCoy.
Second Lieut. Howard C. Tobin.
Second Lieut. John A. Weeks.
Second Lieut. Walter E. Buchly.
Second Lieut. Harold C. Mandell.
Second Lieut. Lester A. Sprinkle.
Second Lieut. Robert W. Grow.
Second Lieut. Terrill A. Price.
Second Lieut. William H. Kasten.
Second Lieut. Edwin Rollmann.
Second Lieut. Leon A. Ryder.
Second Lieut. Richard L. Creed.
Second Lieut. William M. Husson.
Second Lieut. Harry L. Putnam.
Second Lieut. Roderick R. Allen.
Second Lieut. Adolphus W. Roffe.
Second Lieut. Horace K. Havlicek.
Second Lieut. Robert C. Candee.
Second Lieut. Joseph L. Philips.
Second Lieut. Kenneth McCatty.
Second Lieut. Joseph W. Geer.
Second Lieut. Edwin D. Morgan, jr.
Second Lieut. Leslie B. C. Jones.
Second Lieut. Kramer Thomas.
Second Lieut. James R. Finley.
Second Lieut. Willard S. Wadelton.
Second Lieut. Hale S. Cook.
Second Lieut. John M. Jenkins, jr.
Second Lieut. Beverly H. Coiner.
Second Lieut. Albert D. Chipman.
Second Lieut. Arthur H. Truxes.
Second Lieut. Gordon J. T. Heron.
Second Lieut. Hugh M. Gregory.
Second Lieut. Oron A. Palmer.
Second Lieut. Stanley Bacon.
Second Lieut. Jay D. B. Lattin.
Second Lieut. Samuel V. Constant.
Second Lieut. William C. Chase.
Second Lieut. Norman E. Fiske.
Second Lieut. Donald O. Miller.
Second Lieut. Richard D. Gile.
Second Lieut. Wilson T. Bals.
Second Lieut. Cyrus J. Wilder.
Second Lieut. Harold C. Fellows.
Second Lieut. John T. Pierce, jr.
Second Lieut. Henry H. Anderson.

To be second lieutenant.

Corpl. Ralph L. Willner.

FIELD ARTILLERY ARM.

To be first lieutenants.

Second Lieut. Sherman L. Kiser.
Second Lieut. Emer Yeager.
Second Lieut. Marvin C. Heyser.
Second Lieut. Idus R. McLendon.
Second Lieut. Michael J. Fibich.
Second Lieut. Sidney G. Brady.
Second Lieut. George A. Pollin.
Second Lieut. David E. Finkbiner.
Second Lieut. Chauncey F. Ruoff.
Second Lieut. Erwin C. W. Davis.
Second Lieut. Emile G. De Coen.
Second Lieut. Arthur N. White.
Second Lieut. Patrick L. Lynch.
Second Lieut. Ivan N. Bradley.
Second Lieut. John J. McCollister.
Second Lieut. Frank A. Roberts.
Second Lieut. William D. Alexander.
Second Lieut. Herbert L. Lee.
Second Lieut. Richard J. Marshall.
Second Lieut. Ralph T. Heard.
Second Lieut. Harcourt Hervey.
Second Lieut. Francis W. Sheppard.
Second Lieut. Robert W. Daniels.
Second Lieut. John S. Winslow.
Second Lieut. George N. Ruhberg.
Second Lieut. Armand Durant.
Second Lieut. Thomas T. Handy.
Second Lieut. Frank B. Tipton, jr.
Second Lieut. Stanley F. Bryan.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

To be first lieutenants.

Second Lieut. Frederick W. Smith.
Second Lieut. Robert S. Barr.
Second Lieut. Charles J. Herzer.
Second Lieut. William M. Cravens.
Second Lieut. John B. Martin.
Second Lieut. Oliver C. Stevens.
Second Lieut. Edwin C. Mead.
Second Lieut. William T. Roberts.
Second Lieut. Carl J. Smith.
Second Lieut. Dugald MacA. Barr.
Second Lieut. James D. MacMullen.
Second Lieut. Charles W. Bundy.
Second Lieut. Charles D. Ostrom.
Second Lieut. Donald M. Cole.
Second Lieut. James C. Huston.
Second Lieut. Lenox R. Lohr.
Second Lieut. Francis A. Hause.
Second Lieut. Edward E. MacMorland.
Second Lieut. Henry B. Holmes, jr.
Second Lieut. Arvid M. Pendleton.
Second Lieut. Leslie V. Jefferis.
Second Lieut. Stuart A. Hamilton.
Second Lieut. Howard F. Gill.
Second Lieut. Gerald R. Butz.
Second Lieut. Joseph W. Barker.
Second Lieut. Shuey E. Wolfe.
Second Lieut. Frank J. Atwood.
Second Lieut. Carl C. Terry.
Second Lieut. Fred G. French.
Second Lieut. Edward A. Murphy.
Second Lieut. Jep C. Hardigg.
Second Lieut. Dale D. Hinman.
Second Lieut. George D. Davidson.
Second Lieut. Robert E. Turley, jr.
Second Lieut. Richard B. Webb.
Second Lieut. Moses Goodman.
Second Lieut. Kenneth Purdy.
Second Lieut. Jules E. Piccard.
Second Lieut. Robert E. Phillips.
Second Lieut. William R. Stewart.
Second Lieut. Edgar Nash, jr.
Second Lieut. Vincent B. Dixon.
Second Lieut. Wilmer S. Phillips.
Second Lieut. Edgar H. Underwood.
Second Lieut. Howard S. Thomas.
Second Lieut. Paul H. French.
Second Lieut. Horace L. Whittaker.
Second Lieut. Gordon de L. Carrington.
Second Lieut. James Q. Rood.
Second Lieut. James L. Hatcher.
Second Lieut. Ira B. Hill.
Second Lieut. Berthold Vogel.
Second Lieut. Odes T. Pogue.
Second Lieut. William Chason.
Second Lieut. Evan C. Seamon.
Second Lieut. Clarence E. Cotter.
Second Lieut. Gordon B. Welch.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS.

To be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Ernest L. Osborne.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

Lieut. Col. Edward M. Lewis to be colonel.
Capt. Berkeley Enochs to be major.
First Lieut. James H. Laubach to be captain.
First Lieut. George R. Harrison to be captain.
First Lieut. Ralph W. Dusenbury to be captain.
First Lieut. Thomas C. Spencer to be captain.
First Lieut. Fauntley M. Miller to be captain.
First Lieut. Ray C. Hill to be captain.
First Lieut. Patrick J. Morrissey to be captain.
First Lieut. Thomas M. R. Herron to be captain.
First Lieut. John D. Reardan to be captain.
First Lieut. Ernest L. Pell to be captain.
First Lieut. Joseph C. Hatie to be captain.
First Lieut. John W. Simons, jr., to be captain.
First Lieut. Edward G. Taylor to be captain.
First Lieut. Alfred H. Erck to be captain.
First Lieut. Fred P. Jacobs to be captain.
First Lieut. Walter S. Greacen to be captain.
First Lieut. Cary I. Crockett to be captain.
First Lieut. Homer H. Slaughter to be captain.
First Lieut. Henry C. K. Muhlenberg to be captain.
First Lieut. John F. Curry to be captain.
First Lieut. James E. Chaney to be captain.
First Lieut. William J. Fitzmaurice to be captain.

CAVALRY ARM.

Maj. William T. Johnston to be lieutenant colonel.
Maj. Harold P. Howard to be lieutenant colonel.
Maj. Elmer Lindsley to be lieutenant colonel.
Maj. William J. Glasgow to be lieutenant colonel.
Capt. Frank R. McCoy to be major.
First Lieut. William D. Geary to be captain.
First Lieut. Emil P. Pierson to be captain.
First Lieut. Clark P. Chandler to be captain.
First Lieut. Richard H. Kimball to be captain.
First Lieut. Abbott Boone to be captain.
First Lieut. William L. Moose, jr., to be captain.
First Lieut. Frederick S. Snyder to be captain.
First Lieut. William C. Christy to be captain.
First Lieut. Sloan Doak to be captain.
First Lieut. Leland Wadsworth, jr., to be captain.
First Lieut. Seth W. Scofield to be captain.
First Lieut. James L. Collins to be captain.
First Lieut. William C. McChord to be captain.
First Lieut. William R. Henry to be captain.
First Lieut. George F. Patten to be captain.
First Lieut. Robert M. Cheney to be captain.
First Lieut. Lawrence W. McIntosh to be captain.

FIELD ARTILLERY ARM.

Capt. Edgar H. Yule to be major.
First Lieut. Thurman H. Bane to be captain.
First Lieut. Albert K. C. Palmer to be captain.
First Lieut. Oliver A. Dickinson to be captain.
First Lieut. Frederick W. Stewart to be captain.
First Lieut. Herbert B. Hayden to be captain.
First Lieut. John T. Kennedy to be captain.
First Lieut. Thomas J. Johnson to be captain.
First Lieut. Leo J. Ahern to be captain.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

First Lieut. Townsend F. Dodd to be captain.
First Lieut. Furman E. McCammon to be captain.
First Lieut. Louis B. Bender to be captain.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS.

Capt. Thomas M. Robins to be major.
First Lieut. Gordon R. Young to be captain.
Second Lieut. Tattnall D. Simkins to be first lieutenant.

SIGNAL CORPS.

Lieut. Col. Edgar Russel to be colonel.
Maj. Carl F. Hartmann to be lieutenant colonel.
Capt. Alfred T. Clifton to be major.

CHAPLAINS.

To be chaplains with the rank of captain.

Chaplain James F. Houlihan.
Chaplain Louis A. Carter.

PORTO RICO REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

First Lieut. Leopoldo Mercader to be captain.

POSTMASTERS.

LOUISIANA.

Ambrose L. Marshall, La Fayette.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Margaret W. Swindell, Swanquarter.

OKLAHOMA.

Frances G. McGinn, Gate.

PENNSYLVANIA.

James H. Marker, West Brownsville.

TEXAS.

McIver Smith Daniel, Texline.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, May 19, 1917.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, our Eternal Hope, who holdest our life and appointest our lot, make us tractable unto Thy holy influence and strong to bear the burdens Thou hast laid upon us. Open Thou our spiritual ears that we may hear the call of Him who said: "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light."

Hear our prayer for us and for all who are bowed in sorrow and grief. Our hearts are touched once more by the visitation of the Angel of Death in our congressional home. Bless, we beseech Thee, those nearest and dearest to him and help them to learn of Him who taught us the way and the truth and the life. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. On what?

Mr. MEEKER. In reference to some of the latest reports in regard to the actual dispensing of liquors and drinks in European armies.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a resolution adopted by the Knox County Bar Association in reference to the war with the Imperial German Government.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ENLISTED STRENGTH OF THE NAVY AND MARINE CORPS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. PADGETT. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call up the conference report on the bill H. R. 3330, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

Mr. MANN. The report is shorter than the statement.

Mr. PADGETT. That is right.

The report was read, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 54).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3330) to temporarily increase the commissioned and warrant and enlisted strength of the Navy and Marine Corps, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 4, 5, and 21.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 18, and 20, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Page 2, in line 10 of the engrossed amendment, strike out the semicolon after the word "prescribe" and in lieu thereof insert the following: "to fill vacancies in the several grades as provided by existing law"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and the new matter inserted insert the following:

"That commencing June 1, 1917, and continuing until not later than six months after the termination of the present war, all enlisted men of the Navy of the United States in active service whose base pay does not exceed $21 per month shall receive an increase of $15 per month; those whose base pay is over $21 and does not exceed $24 per month, an increase of $12 per month; those whose base pay is over $24 and less than $45 per month, an increase of $8 per month; and those whose base pay is $45 or more per month, an increase of $6 per month: Provided, That the increases of pay herein authorized shall not enter into the computation of continuous-service pay."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 17: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Page 7, line 9 of said engrossed amendment, after the word "That," insert the words "in time of war"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of said amendment strike out the period, insert a colon, and add the following proviso: "Provided further, That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to direct the Secretary of the Navy to take such action on the records of proceedings of naval examining board and boards of naval surgeons for the promotion of officers of the Navy as is now required by law to be taken by the President"; and the Senate agree to the same.

L. P. PADGETT,
J. FRED. C. TALBOTT,
THOMAS S. BUTLER,
Managers on the part of the House.

CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
JOHN WALTER SMITH,
H. C. LODGE,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 3330) to temporarily increase the commissioned and warrant and enlisted strength of the Navy and Marine Corps, and for other purposes, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and submit the accompanying report on the amendments of the Senate, namely:

On amendments Nos. 1 and 2: Provides for the enlistment in the Navy and Marine Corps for the period of the war by simply changing these words to another part of the section, and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 3: Provides that the officers appointed shall be by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 4: Provides that temporary officers may be appointed in the Navy as high as the grade of lieutenant commander instead of lieutenant as provided in the House, and the Senate recedes.

On amendments Nos. 6, 7, and 8: Changes the verbiage without any change in legal effect.

On amendment No. 9: Provides that the board of rear admirals appointed to recommend promotions by selection in the permanent establishment shall be convened at such times as the exigencies of the service may require and recommend for promotion such number of officers as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe, and if nine rear admirals can not be convened without injury to the service, six rear admirals may constitute the board and four of the members must concur in the recommendation instead of six as prescribed under existing law, and the House recedes with an amendment by striking out the reduction in the number of rear admirals composing the board and restricting the number of promotions to be recommended to the number of vacancies in the several grades as provided by existing law.

On amendment No. 10: Is a change of verbiage, without any legal effect, and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 11: Adds to the House provision relating to marine gunners and quartermasters' clerks, nine clerks to assistant paymasters in the Marine Corps and the temporary appointment of eight additional clerks to assistant paymasters in the Marine Corps for the war, and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 12: Provides for the temporary appointments to be made by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 13: Provides for an increase in pay of the enlisted men of the Navy; and the House recedes with an amendment whereby said increase is made identical with the increase made for the enlisted men of the Army, as provided in the act to authorize the President to increase temporarily the Military Establishment of the United States in this Congress.

On amendment No. 14: Changes verbiage without legal effect; and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 15: Provides for the transfer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey to the War or Navy Department in much the same manner as is provided for the Light House Service to the Navy under existing law. It provides for no increase in pay of any of the personnel of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and makes available for use in the Navy of 14 vessels varying in displacement from 53 to 1,000 tons and the total enlisted crew of 491 men, with 50 officers of the seaman branch together with 105 engineers and aids. This transfer in time of war is recommended by the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy; and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 16: Corrects a conflict of law relating to precedence of officers in the Medical Corps of the Navy without any change of existing law as regarding promotions or pay; and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 17: Existing law provides for three admirals and three vice admirals, one of each to be first and second in command of the Atlantic Fleet, Pacific Fleet, and Asiatic Fleet, and restricts the selection of such officers to the list of rear admirals of the Navy without increasing the number of officers in the Navy. The Senate amendment permits the selection of the admirals and vice admirals from the grade of captain as well as rear admiral and removes the geographical restrictions relating to the duty of these officers. Under the Senate amendment it is possible to have one admiral and five vice admirals or as many as three admirals and three vice admirals. The House recedes with an amendment whereby the selection to be made from the grade as low as captain is restricted to in time of war. There is no increase in the number of officers or in the pay.

On amendment No. 18: Gives jurisdiction to the District Court of the Canal Zone of offenses committed within the Canal Zone or within any defensive sea area which the President may authorize under the terms of the naval appropriation act of last year, relative to the injury or destruction of harbor defenses or other public property, and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 19: Provides for examination for promotion of officers of the Staff Corps whereby they are examined for promotion for each regular advancement in rank and dispenses with a duplicate examination of the same character for officers of the Staff Corps when promoted from grade to grade, and the House recedes with an amendment by adding a proviso granting power to the President to direct the Secretary of the Navy to take such action on the report of the proceedings of an examining board for promotion of officers of the Navy as is now required by law to be taken by the President, thereby relieving the President of much of the routine work relating to the promotion of officers. The President personally approves of this change.

On amendment No. 20: Provides for an extra ration to be allowed enlisted men on the deck force when standing night watch between 8 o'clock p. m. and 8 o'clock a. m., and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 21: Permits the enrollment of Members of Congress in the Navy, including the Marine Corps and the Naval Reserve Force, and fixing the maximum age limit at 60 years instead of that provided by existing law, and the Senate recedes.

L. P. PADGETT,
J. FRED. C. TALBOTT,
THOMAS S. BUTLER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. PADGETT, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3330) to temporarily increase the commissioned and warrant and enlisted strength of the Navy and Marine Corps, and for other purposes.

NOMINATION OF CHAIRMAN OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I nominate as chairman of the Committee on Railways and Canals the Hon. CLEMENT BRUMBAUGH to fill a vacancy.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina nominates Mr. BRUMBAUGH for chairman of the Committee on Railways and Canals. Are there any other nominations?

There were no other nominations.

The question was taken, and the nomination was agreed to.

WAR REVENUE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House bill 4280.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4280, with Mr. FOSTER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill the title of which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair begs to call the attention of the gentleman from North Carolina for a moment to the fact that the Chair understands the Clerk has read the first paragraph of Title V.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; and that is open to amendment now.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LENROOT: Pages 20 and 21, strike out all of subdivision (e) down to and including the word "and" in line 2, page 21.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, the amendment that I have proposed seeks to strike out the proposed tax on electric power and light and heat. Just exactly how much that would reduce the revenue I am unable to state, but I would be glad if the chairman of the committee has the information.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is this provision in the bill confined to electric power or does it include gas for lighting?

Mr. LENROOT. I am unable to state, because I do not know what interpretation would be given to the language; but whatever interpretation is given to it I would strike it out.

Mr. MANN. I was asking for information.

Mr. LENROOT. I do not know; I think it is certainly ambiguous.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I think, subject to correction by the chairman of the committee, it does include gas, because that is the estimate sent by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. GARNER. It does not include gas.

Mr. MANN. I understood it struck out gas, but the way the language reads it is still susceptible to the construction that it applies to amounts paid for light or heat.

Mr. GARNER. It was not intended to include gas.

Mr. KITCHIN. I have some committee amendments I desire to offer.

Mr. LENROOT. I will ask the chairman of the committee if the report of the committee does not show the entire revenue from this provision as being $30,000,000? I would like to know if the chairman can inform the House as to what proportion of that $30,000,000 will be derived from the telephone tax?

Mr. KITCHIN. I regret I have not the information. It is lumped, and I have asked for it, and I expect to get it some time to-day. It was lumped together.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. My recollection is the $30,000,000, when that estimate was made, included the estimate for gas.

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. If the gentleman will permit, there can be no reason why there should be a discrimination between the users of electric light and the users of gas.

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly not.

Now, Mr. Chairman, as concerning the merits of my proposition, as my colleague from Wisconsin has stated, if it is now proposed to exclude from this tax the use of gas, why certainly the same consideration prevails for excluding the use of electric light and electric heat.

They are exactly in the same category, and, as to gaslight and electric light, there can be no possible reason for taxing one and failing to tax the other.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I hardly think the gentleman means to make his statement so extreme. As I have always understood, it is only the wealthy that use electricity for heat. Certainly I can not afford it.

Mr. LENROOT. I am speaking of light.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. But gas is sometimes used for heat, and is generally used both for heat and light by those who wish to economize and are of small means.

Mr. LENROOT. In reply to the gentleman, it is only the extremely wealthy people who can use gas for heat, outside of the gas regions.

Mr. SHERLEY. That is not always true as to either gas or electricity. Most of them are used in my city under certain circumstances as economies over the use of fuel, and that is true in most cases.

Mr. LENROOT. It would be just as true in the case of electric light as in the case of gas.

Mr. CRAMTON. Is it not true that in many cases the municipality operates the electric plant and a private company the gas plant, and the discrimination works to the benefit of the private concern as against the public concern?

Mr. LENROOT. That is true. Aside from all that, the very most that is supposed to be raised by this entire subdivision, including telephone charges, which I do not seek to strike out by this amendment, amounts to $30,000,000.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman, I suppose, has reference also in his opposition to the provision to the use of electric power for domestic purposes?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANN. Of course this provision, as I read it, covers the use of electric power not for domestic purposes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I would suggest that the chairman of the committee state what committee amendments are supposed to be offered here.

Mr. LENROOT. I will be glad to withhold my amendment, and I yield now to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN], if I can be recognized later in support of this proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] asks unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment temporarily. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 20, line 9, before the word "within," insert the following: "or on a stagecoach or automobile line" and a comma.

Mr. LENROOT. Will not the gentleman confine his amendment to this paragraph while we are considering it now?

Mr. KITCHIN. I withhold that amendment a minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] is withdrawn temporarily.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 21, line 1, after the word "uses," insert a comma.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] offers a further amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 21, line 2, after the word "heat," insert the word "service."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment. This amendment strikes out that proviso on page 21.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers a further amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 21, lines 5 to 8, strike out all after the word "calls," in line 5, through the word "tax," where it appears in line 8.

Mr. KITCHIN. You can not cover that anyway.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MANN. That leaves it merely covering gas.

Mr. LENROOT. Now I move to strike out all of subdivision (e) as amended down to and including the word "and," in line 2, on page 21.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LENROOT: Page 20, beginning on line 24, strike out all of subsection (e) down to and including the word "and," in line 2, page 21.

Mr. LENROOT. Now, Mr. Chairman, the committee amendments having been adopted, it is clear that it does include gas. It is further clear that it may include heat from coal, and in many cases probably would. And you are now proposing a tax that will reach the vast majority of the people in this country, many of whom have almost starvation facing them in the future, within the next 12 months, in many of the large cities of this country, for the sake of raising less than $30,000,000. Now, it may be that Congress will have to come and reach down with its taxing power to the humblest home in the land, but I insist that we ought not to go to this extreme now until we exhaust other sources of revenue that will be less burdensome.

And I say this for the reason that under the provisions of this bill the man who is working for his $2 or $3 a day, endeavoring to support a family, is going to pay his full share in the increased price of the things he buys with which to feed and clothe his family. His taxes are imposed in other sections of the bill; although they will not be paid directly, they will be paid indirectly by him.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. MEEKER. Is there any way that we can reach some sort of understanding by which we can cut this tax out and some others, and then go to the stamp tax on checks, as suggested by the genfleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY]? Can we not reach some arrangement by which these other things can be set aside, and get to that proposition?

Mr. LENROOT. I hope so. Mr. Chairman, this bill will still fall short by some $400,000,000 of raising the revenue necessary unless we authorize an additional bond issue. It is frankly stated that it is not proposed in this bill to attempt to add new sources of taxation to meet this $400,000,000. That means that the Committee on Ways and Means between now and next December, when we meet again, will be compelled to adopt a policy either authorizing an additional bond issue or finding new sources of taxation; and, that being true, we can well afford in this bill to strike out this provision that I now seek to strike out, and if it is necessary, add something more to this bill.

It can be done in a number of ways that will be less burdensome to the masses of this country. For instance, here is an automobile tax proposed in this bill, but in this bill not one penny of tax is proposed to be levied upon automobiles that are now in use, and there are 3,300,000 of them. Would it not be fairer, before you go into the laboring man's home and tax him for his light and heat, the very necessities of life, to strike this out and tax automobiles now in use a license fee of $5 or $10 or even $15 apiece?

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I think I agree with the gentleman in what he says. I would like to have explained the significance of the word "service" that has been added; whether that would include the heat that is supplied by the coal purchased from individual dealers or whether it is intended to apply to one selling heat.

Mr. LENROOT. I think not. But I do think it would do this: Here is the owner of an apartment house, and in renting rooms in that apartment house, if he includes heat service, as he would have the right to do, to those occupying that apartment house, of five or ten or fifteen dollars a month, and supposing that heat is produced by coal, the heat being either steam or hot air, they would be compelled under this provision to pay a tax upon that heat so furnished.

Mr. FESS. That is true.

Mr. LENROOT. It would compel every man in the natural-gas regions of this country who heats and lights his home through gas to pay a tax upon that heat and that light.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. Does the gentleman think this provision would apply to some individual landlord who happens to furnish heat to his tenants?

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly, if he furnished it and made a charge for it; heat furnished to one by another.

Mr. BORLAND. Would it apply to the ordinary boarding-house keeper?

Mr. LENROOT. If a heat and light service is furnished and a charge is made for it, there will be a tax imposed on it under this paragraph on that heat and that light.

Mr. BORLAND. There must be some reasonable limitation or construction of this. If the heat goes in with the board or shelter——

Mr. LENROOT. I say if there is a separate charge for light or heat there will be a tax imposed on that charge, whether it be coal or gas or electric light.

Mr. BORLAND. That would be rather rare, would it not?

Mr. LENROOT. In the natural-gas region that is the rule and not the exception. Before the gentleman from Missouri sits down I want to ask him, Is he in favor of this proposition?

Mr. BORLAND. I am not in favor of the proposition except as to public utilities. I think it should be limited to those who are engaged in the business of furnishing those things.

Mr. LENROOT. According to the gentleman's theory, if he is compelled to go to a public utility for light and heat, he would pay a tax to the United States Government. If he goes to an individual for that same light and heat, he would not be called upon to pay it. But if you are taxing a public utility, the gentleman's theory is correct. But this does not tax the public utility, but the consumer, and there can not be any distinction, when you tax the consumer, between a public utility and a private party furnishing the light or the heat.

Mr. BUTLER. Is not this tax placed upon the man that furnishes it?

Mr. LENROOT. No. It is placed upon the consumer.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Take a concrete example. I live in an apartment house. My contract was made two or three years ago. The people agreed to furnish me heat for my rooms. Would there be any reason for their charging an additional rental covering the value of the cost of that heat to me or any other tenants of that apartment house, and would we be required to pay a tax?

Mr. LENROOT. If there was a separate charge for that heat, you would have to pay without question; and if you were relieved of payment it would only be because of the difficulty or impossibility of ascertaining what the charge is for the heat.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I have an example. I would like to have the gentleman's opinion. I am making up the estimates of the expense of a college student who lives in a dormitory. You not only include the rental of the room, but a separate item of heat and light. That service would fall under this bill, would it not?

Mr. LENROOT. Unquestionably it would.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Do I understand from this that the coal dealer, furnishing coal to an individual in a city, would charge him a certain per cent under this bill for the coal that he furnished?

Mr. LENROOT. No; but if the man bought the coal and made heat out of it and then furnished it to others a tax would be imposed under this bill.

Mr. HUSTED. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. HUSTED. Is it not true if you buy gas or electricity that you have to pay those bills for lighting and heating purposes?

Mr. LENROOT. Under this bill?

Mr. HUSTED. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. Absolutely.

Mr. HUSTED. Why would you not pay on your coal bill? Is not that a source of heat?

Mr. LENROOT. It is the word "service." That is what defines it.

Mr. REED. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. REED. I am very much interested in this, because my district is entirely heated by natural gas. The farmers and the poor people use it. A gentleman in whom I have confidence told me the other day that this would not apply to them. He said this would apply only to electric heat. I will be glad to have the gentleman explain that.

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. What does the gentleman think of the constitutional effect of taxing light and heat, the use of gas and electricity for light, in the public service of the State or municipality?

Mr. LENROOT. That involves a question that I would not like to venture an opinion upon.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Knowing that the gentleman is an able lawyer, I thought he might be willing to discuss it.

Mr. LENROOT. I should not want to enter upon that discussion now.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. I will.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Many of the small cities in my part of the country have public utilities that furnish steam heat throughout the town. Does not the gentleman think that that service which charges at a certain rate would be subject to taxation?

Mr. LENROOT. No question about it; of course they would.

Now, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I want to repeat that although we are suffering for revenue we are not suffering to such an extent that we need at this time to reach into every home in the land and tax the light and heat that they use. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] the other day said that we ought not to increase the income tax, because we ought to leave some source of revenue. I submit that the sources of revenue to be left ought to be those of this character, and they ought not to be imposed as this subdivision seeks to impose them until it becomes absolutely necessary to do so. You do not propose to tax automobiles, and a large majority of the Members have automobiles—are you not willing to pay $5, $10, or $15 on that automobile of yours, and thus save thousands and hundreds of thousands of homes in this land from this burdensome tax?

The gentleman from Michigan suggested a tax upon bank checks. There is no question but that we can secure an enormous revenue from that source, and if we would make an exemption of $25 on checks we could do it without any injury to the deposits in the banks of this country or to anybody else.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. MANN. This is probably outside of the matter the gentleman referred to, but it has been said that the amount to be raised by the tax on bank checks would be large—the gentleman from Wisconsin said an enormous sum, and I have heard several gentlemen on the floor of the House say that you could raise a thousand million dollars. Now, as a matter of fact, the last year that the report was made for, the year ending September last, the total clearance in all the clearing houses of the country—160 or 170 in number—amounted to $241,000,000,000. Two cents on $100 would amount to less than $50,000,000.

Mr. LENROOT. I agree that no such amount could be raised; but does not the gentleman think we could raise $30,000,000?

Mr. MANN. Thirty millions? Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will my colleague yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. The checks that pass through the clearing houses do not include the checks that are drawn on the banks and paid by the banks themselves, which amount to many millions of dollars.

Mr. LENROOT. The estimate made by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] involved not a flat tax of 2 cents but 2 cents on $100.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit me, I want to say that I was in error as to the amount that the graduated tax—that it would raise a billion dollars. The gentleman from Illinois points out to us that the amount reported through the clearing houses in September was $241,000,000,000. But there passed through the clearings houses in 1916 $260,000,000,000, and therefore that graduated tax mentioned by me would yield on the paper going through the clearing house $52,000,000, which is a small portion of the checks issued throughout the United States. No check goes through the clearing house unless it goes from one town to another through a collection agency; therefore the great bulk of the checks issued in this country are paid out in the towns where they are issued.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Michigan is entirely mistaken in saying that no check goes through a clearing house unless it goes to another town. The gentleman's own town has a clearing house, and every city of any size has a clearing house. Nearly every check drawn in those cities goes through the clearing house. When we had a 2-cent stamp on every check it only amounted to $9,000,000.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Wisconsin may have time enough for me to make a brief statement. The gentleman from Illinois is absolutely in error, and every man that is familiar with business knows that he is in error. There is not a pay roll of this country that goes through the clearing house except in the large cities. A man goes to the bank and draws the money from the bank on a check directly from the bank where he has the deposit and gets the money for the pay roll. That check never goes through a clearing house. Nine-tenths of the money that is paid for labor in this country is paid in that way.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the gentleman will permit, I think he is in error.

Mr. FORDNEY. Where do you get the money for the pay roll? You go to the bank and give a check and get the money and that check goes no further.

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes; but if a check is drawn on the First National Bank of the city and is cashed by the Second National Bank it will go through the clearing house.

Mr. FORDNEY. That is what I said a few minutes ago. But I go to a bank in my own town where I have a deposit and get the money to meet my pay roll. I give a check for the money and pay it out on the pay roll, and that check never reaches the clearing house.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, how much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has three minutes.

Mr. LENROOT. I am glad to have this discussion because, although gentlemen disagree with each other, they all prove the point I made with reference to this matter, which was simply this: That before we resort to the tax proposed by this subdivision we can raise at least twice that amount by going to bank checks.

I want to suggest another source of taxation—I do not say that these things will be put in the bill, but the Committee on Ways and Means, when they come with a new bill next December, as they will have to come, can take into consideration a tax of one-half of 1 per cent on the gross sales and manufactures of merchandise in this country. That would raise easily $150,000,000. Ought we not to exhaust those sources of taxation before we resort to what is proposed in this subdivision?

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. SABATH. I take it for granted you are acquainted with section 501, which puts the tax directly upon the person or corporation that uses the heat or light. Now, what if we should change that section and say instead that instead of the tax being paid by the consumer it should be paid by the corporation rendering the service, namely, the quasi public corporation that gives the service?

Mr. LENROOT. There is no such proposition offered to this House by the Committee on Ways and Means; and that is another matter that I would suggest that the Committee on Ways and Means can consider when they report the new revenue bill in December. But there are questions in connection with that, which, I think, ought to be very seriously and carefully considered, because here is a public utility furnishing light or furnishing heat. Its rates are fixed by public authority, and fixed so as to give only a reasonable return upon that investment. It might be a very serious question whether we either could if we would, or should if we could, impose an additional tax that can not be passed on to the consumer in a case of that kind. I do not say that it could not be done, but I do say that it does present very serious questions, and that, in my judgment, the thing to do in this item of revenue, which is not very large, but at the same time is extremely burdensome upon those whom it will fall upon—the wise thing to do now is to cut this item out of the bill and take care of the revenue in some other way. [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to the amendment of the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] by way of perfecting the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania to the amendment of Mr. LENROOT: Page 19, line 24, after the word "utilities" insert the word "cotton"; and on page 20 strike out line 24 and the words "light and heat" on line 2 and insert the following: "tax on unmanufactured cotton of $2.50 a bale."

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to make a point of order so far as this paragraph and amendments to this particular section are concerned, and I do it only because I do not think it ought to be complicated with a cotton proposition. It is not germane to this particular paragraph.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I think it tends to perfect the paragraph.

Mr. LENROOT. A part of it does. I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the paragraph.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. The gentleman means not germane to the amendment, does he not?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] has introduced an amendment which proposes to strike out a portion of the paragraph, and, so far as the purposes of the bill are concerned, it proposes to strike out at least $30,000,000 of revenue. My amendment proposes not only to strike out the portion of the paragraph that the gentleman from Wisconsin proposes to strike out, but to insert in lieu of the words stricken out additional words which are germane, and which propose a substitute for the revenue which the gentleman from Wisconsin would strike out. My point is that it is germane, in that it tends to perfect the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will refer to the rule which was adopted providing for germane amendments.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the Chair pardon me for one moment further?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. This bill is intended to raise $1,800,000,000 of revenue, and the Committee on Ways and Means is endeavoring to stand by the proposition of raising $1,800,000,000 of revenue. Numerous sources subject to taxation are not included in this bill. Cotton is one of them. The gentleman from Wisconsin proposes to strike out revenue that might be developed from a tax on light, heat, and power, but he proposes no substitute for the revenue that he thus proposes to strike out. My contention is that, having offered an amendment which proposes to protect the paragraph with respect to the raising of revenue, it is germane.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. I do not contend that the amendment is not germane to the bill, in the proper place. My point is that it is not germane to this paragraph, or to the amendment I have offered to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not think the amendment comes within the rule as to being germane to the paragraph, and sustains the point of order.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. A parliamentary inquiry. Does the Chair rule that it is not germane to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks it is not germane to the paragraph.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The amendment proposes to amend the title by inserting the word "cotton," thus making cotton a subject of taxation. Advertising is a subject of taxation and is included, public utilities are subjects of taxation, and other methods of taxation are mentioned in the title. My amendment is to perfect the title by including cotton as a subject of taxation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not think it germane to the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. May I ask the Chair whether it would be germane, in the opinion of the Chair, to add one word to the title, adding a new source of revenue?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would not like to pass on that question at the moment. The Chair is inclined to think it would not be germane.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say a word for the information of the House as to this matter of striking out the tax on light and heat. Perhaps the object of this particular paragraph is to impose a tax upon receipts, where those receipts have enough margin to be able to bear it without falling upon the consumer. I have not a very clear opinion about the whole question of light, heat, and power, except from noticing that the watering of stock of light, heat, and power companies has been rather extensive, and the dividends have been rather large. But I do not speak from that. So far as gas light is concerned, I do happen to know something. Within two years I discovered that really good coal gas—not water gas—was being furnished at one of our New Jersey institutions. I had been very much struck with the horrible number of deaths from poisoning by water gas, and as we have been assured by the gas companies that they can not afford to furnish coal gas, and therefore furnish water gas, I was interested in looking at the cost of coal gas, and have the figures at home, not here. I found that the total cost of the coal gas of best quality, made with the greatest care, with a good gas receiver and with pipes that did not leak, and purified to such an extent that there was no smell about the works—the total cost was under 25 cents a thousand feet, and the gas companies are selling worse gas now for 80 cents and $1 a thousand. Of course, that does not include the cost of the great mass of pipes that goes through the city, from which there is large leakage.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, where was that?

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. This was in New Jersey, at one of our large institutions. I went carefully through the gas works and have the figures that I can get in a week if I could go home and get them, but I took the figures and carefully stated them, and I consider that 5 per cent is a small tax upon the receipts of such companies.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. Does the gentleman know that this bill especially relieves the company from paying the tax and compels the man who buys the heat and light from the company to pay it?

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I will say to the gentleman that if the man who buys from the company is forced to pay that tax, it will not be long before he will find out what the cost to the company is, and get relief upon that subject. I know no better way of securing a reform than to call attention to the cost of the gas.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I favor the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT]. I think that this item of taxation in the bill is subject to two very grave criticisms. In the first place, it reaches down to a purely consumptive tax, and will be exceedingly onerous upon all those who pay small bills for heat and light. It will not be valuable to the Government in those instances, because it will be as difficult to collect and cost as much to collect as the amount received, and in many instances very much more. The difficulty is that in the thousands and tens of thousands of little gas bills that reach down to 50 cents—and I suppose upon an average they are not greater than a dollar and a half—the amount received will not pay for the cost of collection. It is not a practical thing; it is not a valuable tax for that reason. I think it is entirely unnecessary to go to this class of items or to this class of individuals.

Mr. REED. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for information, so that I may ask him a question?

Mr. TOWNER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. REED. I feel that the gentleman is correct in his view, and I want to ask this question: Does this tax heat when it is used to manufacture power to run a sewing machine?

Mr. TOWNER. Yes.

Mr. REED. And an electric fan?

Mr. TOWNER. Yes; it taxes heat used for any purpose, and for power, for heat, or for light.

Mr. REED. I know of a large building in which the owner purchases natural gas to run a dynamo. The dynamo furnishes electricity to all of the apartments in that large building. In one of the apartments is a dressmaker who runs sewing machines and electric fans. How will they separate all of these things?

Mr. TOWNER. That is one of the objections to the tax—its difficulty of imposition and collection. I want to call attention also at this time, for the consideration of members of the committee, to the fact that we have by no means exhausted what are called extraordinary or emergency forms of taxation. It seems that no consideration has been given to some classes of taxation that are usually resorted to in such cases. Already it has been suggested a stamp tax on bank checks might be considered. Then one of the suggested forms of extraordinary taxation, considered and approved by many who give scientific consideration to these questions, is a tax upon gross sales. It is stated by those who have considered the matter that a tax of one-fifth of 1 per cent on the gross sales of all of the business of the United States above $5,000—that is, with an exemption of $5,000—would yield to the Treasury of the United States $1,000,000,000 and over a year. Is not that worthy of consideration? That is an equitable tax, if the business of the country is to be taxed. I call attention also to the fact that we have not considered the occupation tax. If a tax of $1 only to each occupation in the United States were levied, it would bring to the Government every year $30,000,000. If it were $2, it would bring into the Treasury $60,000,000, and if it were $3 we would collect $90,000,000 a year. Are these methods of taxation not worthy subjects of consideration? When you consider the objections to these varied forms of inquisitorial taxation that are proposed in this bill on items that will not yield in many instances even enough to pay for the cost of collection, it occurs to me that these other methods of taxation might be worthy of consideration also, so that we might eliminate many objectionable features now contained in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this tax, but I am in favor of the company which furnishes the power, light, heat, and the service being made to pay the tax. I do not know of any reason why section 501 should have been adopted making it applicable just to the consumer. If there are any corporations in the United States that can afford to pay the tax, they are the corporations that are rendering this kind of service. No one can say that the telephone companies have been losing any money in the United States. No one is bold enough to say that the pipe-line companies, the Standard Oil Co., have been losing any money. Why should we exempt them? Has anyone at any time charged that the Pullman Car Co. has been losing any money? Why should we exempt them and put it on the people, although in that respect, perhaps, the people who are using sleepers and the chair cars can and perhaps might be in a position to pay the tax. As to the electric companies, has anyone been able to ascertain any electric company that has been losing any money? I have not. They all have been making a great percentage upon their investment and upon their watered stock, and, to my mind, if there is an industry that should be taxed, it is that industry.

So far as the gas companies are concerned, I know in my own city, and it also applies to a majority of the cities, the gas companies have been accumulating millions out of the profits they have been making through furnishing gas to the people. With this proviso we are going to exempt the gas companies and put the tax upon the consumer, because the poor gas companies may not be able to pay.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman how he will prevent the corporations passing the tax onto the consumer except in such cases where the price charged to the consumer has been definitely fixed by law?

Mr. SABATH. I will say this to the gentleman, that in the last few years most of the States and municipalities have succeeded in having their legislative bodies regulate the price for gas, telephone, and electricity. Some of the States have created public-utilities commissions, and gave them the power to regulate the charges, and I am satisfied that in no State or city have the charges or prices made been too low.

I do disagree with the gentleman from Wisconsin that the rate is so low that they could not pay these taxes. I feel satisfied that in 99 out of 100 cases, notwithstanding the fact that the common council or the State legislature or commission that has been designated and empowered to fix these prices fix them so that they leave to the company a large profit, not only on the money invested but also on the watered stock that has been injected into these companies. For that reason I believe that the tax should be levied, but it should be paid by the corporations or those who are furnishing this service, namely, express, telephone, telegraph, Pullman, electric, and gas companies. Of course, there will be some who will say that the express companies of the United States will not be able to pay this tax. If there is a monopoly or a public-service company that should be taxed and should be made to pay over to the Government a certain portion of its overcharges, it is the express and telephone companies of the United States that have been robbing the people of this country for years, and the same can be said of all of the other utilities companies I have mentioned.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, in view of the experience I had yesterday about one amendment being introduced here and the entire debate being confined to the one amendment, when other very important amendments were introduced to the bill, in justice to those who are discriminated against I take advantage at this time to call attention to certain amendments which I expect to introduce to this bill under this title. I want to call attention—and I would not mention it if it had not been for the last remark of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]—that we have got here a transportation tax, and what is it? We have got a tax of 10 per cent on express companies, 3 per cent on freight charges, and nothing on parcel post. Now, let us see where it puts the express companies as well as the people forced to use express companies. The gentleman says that they are great monopolists in their line. They are, but they have got a very strong competitor now in our parcel post on the smaller packages. Now, let us see what they do. Last year they paid an excess profits tax—for instance, the Southern Express Co., that has its transportation lines confined to the South, paid last year in its excess profits tax of 8 per cent $258,000 of its profits into the Treasury of the United States. This year under its excess profits tax of 16 per cent, if its profits are equal to what they were last year, they will pay over $500,000 into the United States.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. Not now. I want to present this and then I will yield. Let us see what you do under this bill. I suppose that this House wants to be fair with all classes of business. I hold no brief for the express companies or for any other transportation lines of this country, but you absolutely destroy the goose that lays the golden egg in this instance. The man who goes up with a freight package pays 3 per cent upon that particular bill and charges upon it. The man who goes up with an express packags pays 10 per cent on that package. The man who goes up with a parcel-post package pays nothing. Now, what is the result? The freight transportation men will get all the business of large proportion; that is, the larger packages. The parcel post will get all the smaller packages, and you leave the express companies high and dry with differentials of 7 per cent and 10 per cent against them. That is the result of this discriminatory tax that has been placed upon it, and I want to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] or the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] why they should have discriminated against the express companies by making the tax 10 per cent, why they should discriminate against the publishers of this country by putting a zone rate on them, and why they should have also favored the mail-order houses on parcel post by not putting one single, solitary cent of tax on them? [Applause.]

Now, there is some equity in tax measures. People ought to be treated fairly, and you ought not to confiscate a business. For instance, in 1914, the Interstate Commerce Commission at one fell swoop cut the express rates of this country 50 per cent. Now, the railroads, who are only required to pay 3 per cent on their transportation, are asking for a 15 per cent increase on freight rates, and they will probably get it, unless all signs fail; and under this particular bill you simply put the express companies between the upper and the nether millstone and you grind them to death by these discriminatory rates, and I want to say I am against this entire business. Enough has been passed to the consumer already. He is groaning under the burdens he has got to carrry now, high prices, and this tax increasing the price of everything that he must eat and wear, and the consumer has about all he can stand under, and this tax we are going to put on transportation that will pass to the consumer will be the straw to break the camel's back. This tax is discriminatory, it is unfair, and it is unjust.

Mr. REAVIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. In a minute. One cent a package on parcel post will yield $10,000,000, according to the Postmaster General's report. Outside the first zone it will yield about $8,000,000, and a flat tax of 2 cents on each express package will yield another $8,000,000, or $2,000,000 more than they derive by this bill.

May I introduce these amendments now and have them pending?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to know what the request was.

Mr. HOWARD. I just requested that these amendments be pending.

Mr. LENROOT. I have no objection to that; but I do hope we can dispose of this amendment rather than go to the discussion of other questions.

Mr. HOWARD. I understand they are going to close debate in a few minutes, and I do not want to introduce an amendment without being able to explain it like I had to do on yesterday.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I want to introduce an amendment and have it pending.

The CHAIRMAN. Amendments can not be introduced now because there is already an amendment pending.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD] wandered considerably from the subject before the House. I think it will be best if we confine our discussion to the proposed amendment until a vote is taken upon it.

The amendment proposed was to strike out all of the following:

(e) a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the amount paid for electric power for domestic uses, and of the amount paid for light and heat.

I feel certain that any fair-minded man who gives this question two minutes' careful and intelligent consideration will vote for the amendment. The provision should be stricken out. It is fundamentally wrong and indefensible at this time. The present war needs does not require nor necessitate taxation of this character. Other sources of taxation should be first called upon and exhausted before any levy is made upon light and heat for domestic and household use.

It is simply another case of levying a tax, or endeavoring to levy a tax, on the man who can least afford to pay it, upon the men and women whom it will most inconvenience and most burden. Raising the excess profits tax 1 per cent would return a great deal more than levying this tax. And why, if we want more money, should we not raise the excess profits tax? Yesterday we heard a statement made here in the House that the Ford Automobile Co., on a capital stock of $2,000,000 last year, made $59,000,000, and has a surplus of $111,000,000; and it has been shown that the actual original capital invested in the Ford Co. did not exceed $60,000. The present capital and surplus over and above this $60,000 consists of left-over profits, made by the concern after paying millions in dividends to its stockholders during the last 15 years. The General Electric Co., and its subsidiary companies, are among the largest profit-making concerns in this Nation. Take the electric plants and heating plants in any town of over 5,000 and you will find that they are connected up in ownership in one way or another with the General Electric Co.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NORTON. Certainly.

Mr. BORLAND. Would the gentleman favor, then, a proposition to put the tax upon the company furnishing the service rather than upon the consumer?

Mr. NORTON. I favor putting the tax upon the excess profits of the company furnishing the utility; certainly.

Mr. BORLAND. Why not directly upon the public-service corporation?

Mr. NORTON. Why not directly upon the public-service corporation? I would place the tax upon their excess profits so that it might not by the corporations be passed on to the consumers.

Mr. BORLAND. I will call the gentleman's attention to this fact: That these little companies he speaks of, that actually furnish the service in the locality, are paying some sort of a royalty to the home company in Philadelphia, and you can not reach their excess profits through this method because they are loaded with heavy expenses.

Mr. NORTON. We can easily reach the excess profits of these parent corporations if we increase the excess profits tax and make proper provision for appraising their actual invested capital. Does the gentleman desire to place the tax upon the consumer of heat and light for household purposes?

Mr. BORLAND. I believe in the tax——

Mr. NORTON. Are you in favor of this character of tax as now proposed in the bill?

Mr. BORLAND. I believe in putting it upon the public-service corporation.

Mr. NORTON. Then vote for this amendment. I do not believe you will need to take more than half a minute's study to decide to vote to strike out this provision to levy a 5 per cent tax on light and heat for domestic use.

Clearly the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] should be adopted. No sound reason or logic can be advanced in defense of this character of tax at this time. Later in the war there may be need to resort to it, but there is no need to resort to it now when there are many other sources of taxation that should first be called upon. I am not going to take any more of the time of the House to discuss this item.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me the solution of this problem is the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]. Section 501 is an integral part of the whole proposition, because it provides expressly that the tax shall be passed on to the person who pays for the service. The way to get at all the evils that have been spoken of by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT], and all the objections he has made to the tax, is to change section 501 and provide that the tax shall be paid and paid only by the company that furnishes the service. Now, the only objection that has been raised to that is that the charges of the company who furnishes the service are in many cases fixed by law. In many cases they are not fixed by law, so that the company has liberty to charge what it pleases. But in all cases they ought to be fixed by law. In those cases in which they are fixed by law the imposition of this tax can be taken into consideration in fixing the charge of the company.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. In just a minute. If the addition of the taxes will render the charge confiscatory, the public-service commission will take that into consideration; but if the imposition of the taxes will not render the charge confiscatory, it ought not to be passed on to the consumer.

Mr. LENROOT. I will ask the gentleman as a practical question, would that not involve months and months of time in the readjusting of these rates? I say it could be done, but I see the difficulties of it.

Mr. BORLAND. I think not. I think in many cases it would not need to be done. The theory upon which this tax was drawn undoubtedly was that all of this class of objects, including sleeping-car fares, were something which people could buy or do without as they saw fit. In other words, they were in a class of semi or quasi luxuries.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield? Do you think people can do without them?

Mr. BORLAND. I am not saying so.

Mr. NORTON. Are you talking about the amendment?

Mr. BORLAND. Let the gentleman be patient a moment and he will see what my views are. I said the theory was that they were things that people could take or reject. I do not agree that that is the case in all of these taxes. I do not think that they are things that are quasi luxuries and things that people can take or reject. That is true of sleeping-car fares and other things. But it is not true in large cities of this country where people must rely on public-service corporations for their light and heat, especially in communities where they are depending on companies that handle gas and electricity for domestic uses. Those are not even quasi luxuries, but they are absolute, steady, constant necessities.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. In a moment. And so the theory that they can be rejected by the user, if he pleases, and therefore that he need not submit to the tax, does not apply to them all as a class. I admit that it does apply to such things as sleeping-car fares and long-distance telephones, but to the local things it does not apply.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Could you give us some assurance that there would be a law enacted by which it would not be passed along to the consumer?

Mr. BORLAND. In most communities such items of public service are regulated by public-utility commissions, by which all those charges are taken into consideration. The trouble has been that nearly all the gas companies of the United States are hooked up with the United Gas Improvement Co., of Philadelphia, and pay tribute to it. Most of the electric companies of the United States are hooked up with the General Electric Co., and must pay tribute to that company. They put a disguise on that tribute by making it assume the form of royalties and patents and things of that kind, but much of that payment, in my judgment, is a direct profit which is concealed from the eye of the local body or the council or other tribunals charged with the regulation of those charges. It is impossible for the local body to ascertain by evidence the exact amount of the cost of conducting that corporation. A large amount of it is concealed.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. KING. As I understand, some time in the near future a bill will be brought in here to fix food prices. I ask the gentleman if it is not possible, in view of that proposed war legislation, to fix the price also of gas and electric lights?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. I will yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin in a moment. I understand that we could, if we chose, give the President power to regulate the charges for such necessities. I think the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PARKER] was right in what he says as to the cost of manufacturing coal gas. There is scarcely a community throughout the country that is paying more than 70 cents per thousand for gas. Washington is paying 90 cents. The average community is paying 70 or more. I think it can be made at 40 cents a thousand. We have now a bureau of the Federal Government, the Bureau of Standards, working on a standard of heat and light and gas. I think we are soon to reach a standard by which the public-utility companies can be compelled to furnish gas or electricity of a certain strength. When the local authorities have correct information as to the heat units the public-service companies can be compelled to sell their product to the consumer at just a little above the cost of production.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be increased two minutes. I want to ask him a question

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I ask that his time be increased four minutes. I want to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. LENROOT. Many of these public utilities furnishing electric light and heat are municipal corporations. The gentleman agrees to that?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; furnishing light and water, but not heat.

Mr. LENROOT. Well, light.

Mr. BORLAND. Perhaps they may furnish heat.

Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman says he is in favor of so amending this bill as to compel those rendering the service to pay the tax. Is that true?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. Does the gentleman think we can compel a municipal corporation, as a public utility furnishing light to its inhabitants, to pay a tax to the Federal Government?

Mr. BORLAND. No; I rather think not.

Mr. LENROOT. Then the gentleman's whole proposition falls.

Mr. BORLAND. No. I think we would have to make an exception where the utility was actually conducted by a political subdivision of the State.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Missouri yield to me to ask a question of the gentleman from Wisconsin on that proposition?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. What is the opinion of the gentleman from Wisconsin—that you can not tax them?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. I agree with that.

Mr. SLAYDEN. The gentleman spoke of the difficulty of passing on to the consumer this tax when levied upon certain public utilities which supply gas and electric light, and he also stated that he had reason to believe that gas could be produced at 40 cents a thousand cubic feet.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman from Missouri may have a minute more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SLAYDEN. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PARKER] stated that in New Jersey there was a corporation that was making gas, high-class gas, at 20 cents a thousand cubic feet; but he said it did not take into consideration the cost of their plant.

Mr. BORLAND. The cost of distribution, as I understood.

Mr. SLAYDEN. No. I understood him to say the cost of the pipes.

Mr. BORLAND. Very well.

Mr. SLAYDEN. What percentage would that be of the cost of production of the gas?

Mr. BORLAND. I think about 50 per cent. I think what the gentleman from New Jersey was referring to was a large public institution making its own gas. In that case it did not have the pipe lines in the streets. I think the pipe lines in the streets add 100 per cent to the price of the gas.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Is it not impracticable to avoid the ultimate placing of this tax on the consumer?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; unless by the conscientious work of a public-service commission.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has again expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say a word in favor of this amendment. I believe the amendment should prevail, and that this item should be stricken from the bill, and that the money that would have been raised by this item in the bill as it is constituted should be raised in some other way, if necessary, by increasing the excess profits tax.

I am opposed to the substitute proposed by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] and that proposed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] for a great many reasons. It would be absolutely unfair because of the fact that pretty nearly all of the States, or a great many of the States of the Union, through their public utilities commissions, have already fixed the price that may be charged for these several commodities, especially light and heat and telephone service.

Now, in many of the cities of the State of Indiana there are municipal plants that furnish light and heat. There are also independent plants owned by the stockholders residing in the community furnishing the same character of commodity in that same municipality. You will see immediately the unfairness that would result, for the reason that you could not compel the municipal plant that is furnishing this commodity to pay any of this charge, and you would put that burden upon the independent plant that would have to bear it, resulting in a very great favor to the municipal plant and in a very great detriment to the independent plant.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. The presumption, of course, is that the municipal plant is not making a profit; that it is doing the service practically at cost.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. That is the presumption; and the presumption is also that the men who are investing their money as stockholders, the price of their commodity having been fixed by the utilities commission, are getting just a fair return upon their investment.

Now, I do not believe it is the intention of this body to confiscate any of this property. This would result in confiscation.

And there is another thing that you should take into consideration. In all these States where the price of these commodities have been fixed by law it has been fixed after an appraisement has been made of these various properties to fix the charge that can be laid. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] says that this could be very easily arranged; that it would not take much time. It would take in every individual instance, if a fair arrangement was made, a reappraisement of that property, and in the State of Indiana alone a reappraisement of the property could not be made within a year. The appraisement now going on there, that has been going on for two years under the public-utilities law that gives the commission the right to fix this charge, is not yet one-tenth complete. They have not one-tenth of the public-utility property of that State appraised up to this time. So you see it would not only result in unfairness, by reason of the fact that many of these companies are owned by individuals and many of them owned by municipalities, but it would result in confusion, and it would not be workable and could not easily be made. It would be far easier to strike this item out under this amendment and make other provision necessary to raise the amount by an increase on the excess profits of these companies, if you please, or upon a great many other companies that have not been touched at all. To my mind this tax should be distributed as nearly as possible among all of the corporations of the United States, and I think the great misfortune of this entire bill is that certain classes of industry have been singled out and discriminations made against them. I believe it would result in far greater returns, so far as the money is concerned, if a few individual manufacturing concerns were not singled out and discriminated against, but if the burden were distributed more equally throughout the country upon the various manufacturers, for the reason that as at present arranged it can not fail to injure those upon whom it has been applied specially. It will destroy the business in many instances. In consequence it will also destroy the return that we hope to get. Take the item of automobiles. When that item was estimated, no doubt the committee estimated from the business now being done that a certain amount of money will be raised. But it has become patent in the debate which has been heard here that at least one-half of that business is on the decline, and that if this tax is to obtain the business will more greatly decline, and in consequence there can not be the return come from that source that is expected. In consequence there will be a deficiency, whereas if that tax was distributed throughout the various manufacturing industries of this country, or laid upon excess profits, if you please, the money would be forthcoming, and business would not be materially injured. It would be better in all respects, for the reason that if one class of our citizens are made to feel that they and their business are discriminated against to their injury and to the benefit of other like business, it results in bad feeling all over this country, and God knows we have got enough bad feeling now on account of it. [Applause.]

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I think the Committee on Ways and Means have done their work marvelously well under the circumstances. I have not the slightest doubt that they have endeavored to bring in a taxing bill which will relieve the consumer as much as possible of the burden of meeting the staggering cost of this great war. But, Mr. Chairman, it is too much to expect that the gentlemen of the Committee on Ways and Means have been able, or will if they take until December, to devise a scheme of taxation which will not lodge the cost of the war upon the people generally. They have got to pay it. That is just as certain as that the consumer pays the tax on all imported articles that are used in this country, and the theory that the producer pays that tax, or that the manufacturer pays it is wrong, and every man knows it when he will sit down and calmly and honestly consider it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I wish the gentleman would repeat the last part of his statement. There was so much disorder in the Hall that I could not hear it.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Perhaps the gentleman has not missed much. In a word, what I was saying is this, That the difficulty in the assessment of these taxes is so great that in order to popularize them it is sought to put them onto the corporations. Now, we have just had an illustration of the difficulty of fixing the tax on public-utilities corporations and of avoiding its distribution to the people at large. It can not be done. There are certain corporations that produce gas and electric light and perhaps water whose charges are fixed by statute, by municipal ordinance or by State statute perhaps; but in the majority of cases that is not true, and whatever the cost may be the manufacturer or the public utility is certain to assess it on the people. The point I was going to make was this, that the people should be dealt with honestly, and they ought to be made to understand that this $1,800,000,000 or $2,245,000,000, or whatever sum may ultimately be determined upon, the people themselves must go down into their pockets and pay. The moral of it all is that hereafter when they are shouting for war they ought to realize that it is the most expensive enterprise that men ever engage in, and that they and no one else must pay the cost.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. Is it not a fact that if this tax we are speaking about were not passed on by the corporations to the consumer, the taxes and burdens that have been put on the corporations in the last 10 years would put them out of business entirely?

Mr. SLAYDEN. I think it very likely that it would bankrupt a great many such corporations, and possibly produce a panic, which would have a reflex disadvantage to the people at large, and perhaps bring about general commercial disaster.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, of course the House understands that in advocating personally many of the taxes in this bill I am going contrary to my own individual judgment as to the way I would impose them. That fact does not alter my opinion as to the justice of them. It is simply a political difference. I hope that this amendment will not be adopted. I hope the committee amendment will be adopted not because it is a committee amendment but on its merits.

What does it propose to do? The first proposition is that there shall be a tax of 5 per cent on electric power for domestic uses. Who does that hit? It hits nobody very hard, but who does it hit? It will hit the farmer so far as he uses domestic power in the operations of his farm, like running the churn, or something of that kind, in those sections of the country where there is electric power. Of course, you see at once that the great bulk of the farmers will not be hit at all. Some well-to-do farmers use power for churning, cutting hay, and things of that kind, and they will pay a very small tax. They can afford to pay it.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman state whether he thinks that power for cutting hay is a domestic use?

Mr. HILL. I so consider it, and also for churning butter. If it does not include cutting hay, the farmer would not have to pay the tax. I do not know of another provision in this bill that touches the farmer except as it touches every other American citizen.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. On the proposition of taxation here, would you discriminate against the farmer who uses electric power and exempt the farmer who uses gasoline power?

Mr. HILL. I would not, for I favor a tax on gasoline, but I am defending this part of it now. I have an idea that this House is dealing with this question like children playing in the sand, by making little images for their own desire and gratification, which the first storm of this war is going to sweep away. [Applause.] I think we ought to recognize the fact that we have the greatest task on hand which this Nation has ever seen or will ever see in its history. We ought to go at it and forget our little petty ideas and petty conceptions of what the people will do. I think the time will come before this war is ended—ended, as we all hope it will be, in victory—when every man on the farm, the workshop, and everybody else will be glad to stand up before the American people and say, "I have done my part: I have done my share; I have contributed my services in some way." And we are mistaken in assuming that any difference is going to exist by and by. I look with contempt on the man who stands up in the House and says he objects to this or that because it is going to cost one of his constituents 5 cents a month. I think we ought to deal with this question in a different way. Now, this will hit very lightly, in my judgment, the few farmers in the United States.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. NORTON. Does not the gentleman think it is a splendid way to carry on the war to begin by levying taxes on those who are the least able to bear them and relieve from taxation those who are best able to pay the taxes?

Mr. HILL. I think the best way to begin the war is to levy taxes on every man according to his ability.

Mr. LENROOT. Then, why do you not do it?

Mr. LANGLEY. This bill does not do it.

Mr. McCORMICK. Then, we should strike out the retroactive income tax, the present provision for an excess-profits tax, and the tax on power and heat and light.

Mr. HILL. I have not any criticism to make of any man who differs with me. I would make the excess profits tax furnish the Government four times what it will furnish under the provisions in this bill, properly constructed. That is no reason why, in my judgment, if it is not properly constructed, we should be obliged to strike it out and lose $400,000,000.

Mr. McCORMICK. The gentleman has imputed to other Members of the House unpatriotic motives when they are actuated by the same patriotic motives as he.

Mr. HILL. Every man must judge of that for himself. I am trying to do my duty and I can do no more.

Now, what does the second proposition do? It is a tax upon domestic light and heat. My understanding of that proposition is that it taxes electric light and heat and gaslight and heat. The provision of this bill is that that shall be passed on to the man that pays the bill, and it ought to be passed on. You can not stop it if you wanted to. I know what I am talking about. I was president of a gas company for a number of years. They will pass it on in spite of you, no matter whether the law provides for it or not.

Mr. LANGLEY. Does the gentleman mean to say that he did that when he was president of the gas company?

Mr. HILL. You must recognize things as they are, not as you would like to have them. Now, who pays the tax on the gaslight and heat and the electric service? It is a small part of the amount that will be paid. The whole thing, electric-light, power, gaslight, telegraph, telephone, are all estimated together at $30,000,000.

Mr. SWITZER. Does the gentleman think that that includes heat produced by coal?

Mr. HILL. Of course it does not; it is an electric heat and service. It has nothing to do with a man buying his coal and making his own heat.

Mr. SWITZER. Where it is made by the individual?

Mr. HILL. Now, the great bulk of it would be paid by persons with an income of two, three, or five thousand dollars, by married people—not by single men who have no home. It will be paid largely by people who are exempt from conscription, who are taxed in no other way except as you and I are taxed—indirectly—perhaps through the tariff or in some other general way. Why should they not contribute their mite to the support of this Government in the vigorous prosecution of the war? What will it amount to? Take an ordinary family with an income of $2,000 or $2,500, and the gas bill will probably amount to $50 a year for light and perhaps $50, $75, or $100 for heat as well as light, so it would probably amount, at the outside, to $5 at the extreme for the average family in the United States. Why should we exempt them? Why should a man with an income of $2,000 or $2,500 be exempt from the only tax laid in this bill that would touch him? You can go to work and tear the bill to pieces in little unimportant features like this. Gentlemen, you have got to make it up in some other way. The bills have got to be paid. This country is not going to stand defeat simply because it will not raise the money to pay the expenses. How are you going to raise it? As I said, I would raise it differently, but the administration is not of my way of thinking and the majority of Congress is not of my way of thinking. Am I going to stand here and say that I shall oppose a vigorous prosecution of this war simply because everybody in the House does not think as I do?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Is it not a fact that these taxes were specifically recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. HILL. Certainly; they were suggested by the Treasury. What are you going to do about it? Say that there shall be 99 per cent of the people of the United States who shall contribute nothing except personal service, and that only 10,000,000 of those shall contribute personal service; that between those two figures there shall be a great majority of the people of the country who will not be taxed at all? Is that the position you are going to take? Oh, I recognize what some men may say; that they are taxed indirectly in various sources. I am speaking now of direct taxation. This is direct taxation upon the man who uses that service, and the classes of people who use that service are practically exempt from military service and practically exempt from any other taxation in this bill. If the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] wants to strike that all out and say that there shall be a great body of the American people who shall pay nothing at all under the provisions of this bill, why, his amendment will do it; but it does not seem to me that it is even patriotic to offer such an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut has again expired.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon the Lenroot amendment relative to heat and light and other amendments thereto shall close in 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate upon the Lenroot amendment and other amendments respecting the light, heat, and power provisions of this title shall be limited to 30 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, it is a strange coincidence that no matter what section of this bill we take up, no matter what compromise is made, New York gets the worst end of the deal, and it does seem hard that a Member of this House dare not stand and express himself and the views of his constituents without incurring the contempt of the distinguished gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL]. I think it is bad taste for a member of the committee, and especially an old member, to endeavor to stifle the free expression of a younger Member of this House. If I have to sacrifice the courage of my convictions and fail in my duty to express my views upon any bill that touches my district in order to avoid the contempt of the gentleman from Connecticut, then I shall have to suffer under that disgrace. The gentleman from Connecticut said that the people who will have to pay the tax upon this provision—light and heat—will pay no other tax. Let us see for a moment. Let us take a man, say, with a family of five, living in New York City. He will pay a tax of $1.46 a year upon his tea and coffee. He will pay a tax of at least 75 cents a year upon his tobacco; that is, assuming that he smokes only 5 or 10 cents worth a day.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. One moment, please; I only have a few minutes. He will pay a tax of $1.60 a year upon his life insurance, assuming that he takes an insurance of $2,000. He will pay a tax of 5 cents a year on the fire insurance for his furniture in his little home. He will pay a tax of about $1 a year on his club dues. He will pay a tax of 20 cents a year on the chewing gum for his children. He will pay a tax of at least 75 cents a year on the soap, toilet articles, cosmetics, drugs, and medicines for his family. He will pay a tax of $1.50 for amusement, shows, concerts, circus, or the movies—and that is only allowing $3 a year for each member of the family. He will pay a tax of at least $2 for wines and alcohol and soda water—and that is allowing only a moderate amount of liquor for medicinal purposes. That amounts to $10.66, and then the gentleman from Connecticut says this tax on light amounts to very little. It amounts to $1.35 a year for the average family living in New York City. That is a very conservative estimate. Then the gentleman says that the average American is not being taxed.

I was much amused with the gentleman's stand in seeking to justify his position in saying we are not taxing the farmer with this provision. He points out that the average farmer does not use gas and electricity supplied by public-service corporations. Good heavens! Is the whole country made for the farmer? Are we legislating for farmers only. If the people of the city do not consume what your farmer produces, what is your farmer going to do?

Mr. LANGLEY. And if the farmer does not produce, what will the city do?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. We will starve. It is mutual, and therefore you should make your tax equal.

In New York City we are compelled to use gas and electricity furnished by public-service corporations. We can not use anything else; but in the country the gentleman from Connecticut assures us that they can burn petroleum. Then why do you not tax petroleum? [Applause.] This tax is discriminatory and should not be adopted. I shall support the Lenroot amendment to strike out the provision. I urge the committee to seriously consider the hardship it will work and to support the amendment. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, I am not at all in sympathy with the lecture of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] delivered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA]. I am sure that I have the highest respect for the judgment of the gentleman from Connecticut, and I know that he sincerely believes everything that he is advocating at this time pertaining to this bill. I am sure that he would under no circumstances advocate a system of taxation which he believed would work peculiar hardship upon any particular class of people or special industry; but I am opposed to placing a tax upon light and heat. It seems to me that this tax is peculiarly obnoxious, and I trust the time will never come when I have to vote for a tax to keep from a person the winter's cold. There is something about this that is abhorrent, and I shall support the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin to eliminate this provision from the bill. There is no way, I believe, by which you can impose this tax to raise the Government anything like a fair revenue from this source by placing it upon the corporation.

That has been pointed out by the gentleman from Indiana and others who have just preceded me, because many of our public-service corporations are owned by municipalities, and in my own State I know many electric-light plants are owned by the cities and villages, particularly the villages, and I see no way by which you can place a tax upon corporations without creating many injustices and inequities; but I believe that, as we have raised additional revenue here by means of increased taxes on large incomes, that this committee can well afford to cut out this obnoxious tax upon light and heat. The very idea of taxing a man who wants light in his house for his family or who wants heat in his home is something I do not want to come to at this time. Now, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] says this is recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury. Many other taxes were recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury, and they were not adopted by the Ways and Means Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] seems to think that it is unpatriotic to strike out some of the provisions of this bill imposing consumption taxes. He complains because it is easy to pick this bill to pieces. The trouble with this bill is that it came into the House in pieces, and no one seems to be able to put it together. [Applause.] The bill is so unscientific it can not be put together. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] said he intended to close his eyes and vote for it, and it has been suggested by some Washington newspaper that the members of the Ways and Means Committee must have had their eyes closed when they wrote the bill.

We must carry on the war in a vigorous way. We must raise the money necessary to carry on the war, and no one objects to levying taxes for that purpose if the taxes are just and have uniform application. But what we do object to is this unscientific bill that does not attempt to lay taxes on those who are making large profits out of the war, and who can best afford to bear them, but instead taxes the necessaries of life. The committee seems to object to laying taxes on war profits or profits that are made out of the war. Take this provision, where it is proposed to lay a tax of 5 per cent on gas, light, and heat. The incandescent light of to-day performs the service of the tallow candle of a few years ago. The gas jet to-day is the woodpile of yesterday. Now, you propose to lay a tax of 5 per cent on the consumer of these necessaries. You propose to lay a tax on the washwoman's power to earn an honest living, in order that war profits may be piled hoard on hoard and escape their just share of the expenses of the war. You propose to lay a tax on those things that the ordinary workman must use every day, in order that large war profits may escape their just share of the expense of the war. Already living expenses have almost doubled since the outbreak of the war. And this tax but adds to the problem of the high cost of living.

If you take this bill and analyze it, you will find that there are but few provisions in it where a part of the tax will not be passed on to the ultimate consumer. Many of the provisions like this impose a direct consumption tax. The committee was well aware of that fact, and yet they come here and propose a tax that will increase the living expenses of the persons using gas and electricity. It is difficult for me to understand the committee's attitude in imposing these heavy consumption taxes. Under the provisions of this bill this consumption tax commences in the morning when one turns on his gas to prepare his breakfast, and it continues throughout the whole day until he turns out his electric light at night. In this respect the bill is consistent. All will agree that we need large sums of money to carry on the war. If we are to raise it, we will eventually conclude that we must go to the man who has it, instead of hampering the man who does not possess it. There was a plan, a scientific plan, that could have been adopted, that would have brought in several hundred millions of dollars annually to carry on the war, and the tax under such a plan would scarcely be felt. A tax on war profits is just and scientific. Had we laid a tax of, say, $5,000,000 on the war profits of the Hercules Power Co., for example, that made $15,000,000 more last year out of the war than they made on an average for over three years before the war, who would have felt that tax? Who would have entered a complaint against it? That enormous profit did not arise through the transaction of normal business; that profit was created solely because of the world war. Let it assume greater part of the expense of the war.

Mr. HILL. Is it not taxed now 12½ per cent direct?

Mr. GOOD. Oh, yes; but that concern made $15,000,000 more than its normal profit, and why did not the committee reach out, as Great Britain has done, and take some of these war profits from all concerns making war profits to carry on this war. The gentleman from Connecticut has suggested that there was some deal here. I think that should be explained. He suggested there was a deal between sugar and tobacco, and the gentlemen are silent about that. Is there a deal in this bill? Is there a deal here between sugar and tobacco? Is there any deal of that kind? Gentlemen are silent about that, silent as the grave, and are apparently willing to cover up this deal, if there was one, and put a tax on tea and coffee, and a tax on electric light, and a tax on gas.

Mr. HILL. Of course the gentleman wants to be fair and admits that I have not said any such thing, as he said I said. I explained exactly what the trouble was.

Mr. GOOD. The gentleman said the trouble was between sugar and tobacco.

Mr. HILL. And stated why.

Mr. GOOD. And the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] asked what the trouble was.

Mr. HILL. And I stated why, that sugar would furnish $150,000,000, and tobacco should have been made to furnish a very much larger sum.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I am greatly obliged to my colleague for the compliment he has paid the Ways and Means Committee. So far as that part of his statement is concerned I do not intend to reply to it, but when he deliberately misrepresents the gentleman from North Carolina, I do intend to reply to it. The gentleman knows perfectly well the gentleman from North Carolina never said that he was going to vote for this bill with his eyes shut. He said as far as the tariff provision was concerned, as far as that part of the bill was concerned, as one who had always entertained the tariff views he had heretofore expressed upon this floor, that he would have to vote for that part of the bill with his eyes shut. That is what he said, and the gentleman from my own State concurred with certain newspapers in misrepresenting the gentleman from North Carolina with reference to his statement. [Applause.]

Now, Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Ways and Means, giving their whole thought to this bill, and the value, if it had some value, of years of study to the subject of taxation, prepared the measure in what they deemed to be a scientific way until it came down to this tariff provision, which everybody admits is not scientific, but to which there seems to be less objection on this floor than to anything else. In preparing this bill they wanted to avoid consumption taxes as far as possible. They desired, if possible, to avoid putting taxes upon those even of moderate means, and up to any reasonable point they wanted to put it on what I might call, for want of a better term, the surplus wealth. And that is what they did. And what kind of propositions have we had here instead of the provisions which have been put in this bill? They say we are seeking to impose a discriminatory tax which does not bear equally on all persons. Gentlemen of the House, there never was a tax imposed that will bear equally on all persons. You can not frame any such tax. You must select certain objects for taxation on certain principles, and we selected certain consumption taxes where we thought they could best be placed and imposed. They can not be made to bear equally upon everybody.

What are the substitutes proposed? One gentleman proposes a tax on all kinds of business, that every business man should pay a tax, and it has been specified here by a number of gentlemen as a tax which should take the place of some of the taxes in this bill. A tax that would impose the same amount, require the same payment, from every peanut vendor that it does from John Wanamaker. This they call a fair tax, I suppose.

Mr. BORLAND. That would be the most unfair tax of all, would it not?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Absolutely.

Mr. BORLAND. Because some men who do a large volume of business make a rather moderate income.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman from Missouri said that a tax of that kind would be the most unfair tax that could possibly be levied, and I agree with him in that statement for many reasons. I refer to a tax requiring each business man to pay the same sum. My colleague, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] proposed an amendment yesterday concerning excess profits taxes that would not yield as much of an income as the excess profits tax we have in the bill now, but he said we did not hit the powder companies hard enough. We have hit them 12½ per cent on their net receipts and 60 per cent on excess profits, and all these gentlemen will have to pay an income tax, and when they get through with this there is a corporation tax of 4 per cent; and take it all in all, they will pay somewhere, as near as we can figure out, from 75 to 80 per cent of their income.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I would like a minute more.

The CHAIRMAN. The time has been fixed.

Mr. FORDNEY. I ask that the gentleman yield to me.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I wanted to call attention to the fact that the excess profits tax that was proposed by my colleague [Mr. GOOD] on yesterday would not have put any tax on the subsidiary corporations of the Standard Oil Co. and all those other corporations which were making immense profits before the war, even 200 per cent or 300 per cent, but would leave them free of any tax.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the trouble with this bill is that it taxes somebody, and there is not a man on this earth that wants to be taxed. He wants to put the tax on the other fellow. [Applause.] The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] the day before yesterday voted against a tax upon himself and now he wants a tax on everybody else. [Applause.] That is the trouble with you and every other man that talks against this bill. If you are going to raise money somebody else should pay the tax, so far as you are concerned.

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. I have only one minute, and I decline to yield. I would like to answer the gentleman if I had time, because I want to be courteous.

I want to say to you that if we raise money somebody has got to be taxed, and I have not found a man in this House but that is willing to put the tax on somebody else and not on himself. And that is the trouble. These taxes, if placed upon the people, take but a small pittance from the average man. Every man ought to realize that we are in war with a great nation and ought to be willing to give up a little something to carry on that war and help his neighbor's son fight the battles. No man is so unpatriotic that he is not willing to pay 5 cents on a $1 electric-light bill. If he is so unpatriotic his patriotism goes but a little distance. There is no deal that I ever heard of, except by intimation of some demagogue, between any members of the committee on tobacco or sugar or anything else. It has been intimated several times by men on this floor that there has been a deal of that kind. If so, I never heard of it in the committee or anywhere else, except from somebody that wanted to demagogue. Tobacco is heavily taxed. I have tried, as other members of the committee have tried, to keep away from a consumption tax on food and clothing, and we have succeeded pretty well, gentlemen. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, this tax is a tax upon the efforts of the average man to build a home and an American family. When a poor man comes to the city he begins to save his money, gets a wife, and buys a little house on installments. Pretty soon he is better off, and he puts in city water. You might as well tax the water as tax the electricity. When he puts the water in, and saves a little more money, his wife and himself figure the thing over and they put in gas and electricity. You might as well tax gas as electricity. That tax, too, should be removed from this bill. He gets them in, and every dollar that he figures on he figures on definitely and with infinite care, and they sit up at night to figure whether they can spend the money or not. It is not merely a question of 5 cents monthly. When he puts in this electric light he pays for the equipment that goes in there. If this were his only tax or expense it would be no burden. But everything he buys is higher than a cat's back. He is caught for a nickel at every turn. The widow at Jerusalem only dropped her mite in once. Nowadays she hands one to each and all comers. When a man finds that he has to add a nickel more on a dollar, he has to think it over very carefully.

Gentlemen, this is a tax on the efforts of a man who is attempting to achieve success. That man is trying to raise good citizens, soldiers for the Republic. I think we ought to let him alone until he has gotten somewhere, and until he has placed his family in such shape as to present a decent example of civilization as a typical American family. Big incomes and big profits should finance this war. They will fatten on it. Mr. Chairman, this is a tax against the civilizing influences of the American social structure. I think it ought to be stricken out. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] has suggested that the offering of this amendment is not patriotic.

Mr. HILL. I think so.

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to know the gentleman's definition of what patriotism is if he says the offering of an amendment of this kind is not patriotic. His idea—and I would never have believed it unless he had made this statement—his idea seems to be that the sacrifices for this war shall be doubled upon the masses of the people and lightened as much as possible on the rich men of this country. [Applause.] He says that the man with a $2,000 income and married will pay no taxes under this bill if we strike out an item of this kind.

Mr. Chairman, who is making sacrifices to-day, before any taxation law goes into effect because of this war? Is it the gentleman from Connecticut? Is it myself? Is it Members of Congress? The sacrifices that we are making because of this war to-day are infinitesimal. But how is it with the man geting $1,000 a year, paying $15 a barrel for flour, paying $10 a pair for shoes, paying $4 a bushel for potatoes? Is he making a sacrifice? Is there a sacrifice involved upon the cost of this war? And yet the gentleman from Connecticut contends that that man shall go on making those additional sacrifices and at the same time he says we must impose burdensome taxes upon him in addition.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. LENROOT. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin declines to yield.

Mr. HILL. The gentleman ought to yield.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I want equality of sacrifice in this war. [Applause.] And because I want equality of sacrifice I want to put the burdens of these taxes upon those who can bear them with the least sacrifice. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman may have one minute more, in order that I may ask him a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Wisconsin may proceed for one minute. Is there objection?

Mr. SNYDER. I object. We have got to go on with this thing.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is made. The gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. STINESS] is recognized.

Mr. STINESS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment to the next subdivision. I send it to the desk to have it read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Rhode Island.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. STINESS offers the following amendment: Page 20, line 16, after the word "effect," insert "or if cash fare be paid"; and on page 20, line 18, after the word "book," insert the following: "on paying the cash fare," so as to read:

"If a ticket or mileage book for such transportation or accommodation has been purchased before this section takes effect, or if cash fare be paid, the tax imposed by this section shall be collected from the person presenting the ticket or mileage book or paying the cash fare by the conductor" etc.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to make the point of order that that is not in order at this time.

Mr. STINESS. As I understand it, Mr. Chairman, that was merely read for information.

Mr. LENROOT. Then I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman has a right to speak for a minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. STINESS. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to take up any time on this matter. I simply wish to say that provision is made for the payment of the tax on tickets, presumably at the ticket office. The provision provides that the tax on commutation tickets and tickets purchased before the passage of this act shall be paid to the conductor. There is no provision for the payment of a tax on a cash fare, and this amendment simply provides that the tax on a cash fare shall be paid to the conductor, and simply conforms to the rest of the provisions in respect to such taxes. [Applause.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, the item in the bill under consideration provides for a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the amount paid for electric power for domestic uses and of the amount paid for all light and heat service. The amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] seeks to strike these items from this bill: Five per cent of the amount paid for electric power for domestic uses and for light and heat service.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD], in a fine frenzy of cheap oratory, insists that we provide in this item for taxing the widow's woodpiles and the tallow candles of the washerwoman. The gentleman had not read this bill before he indulged in those mock heroics on this floor, which make his speech and all speeches like it so ridiculous. We are taxing only those who are able to pay this small tax. When a man comes into his home and is able to turn on as he enters a flood of electric light—if he is able to wire his house for that, he is able to pay the small tax imposed by this bill.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there for a question?

Mr. RAINEY. I am afraid I have not time. Make it very short.

Mr. HULBERT. It will be very short. Does not the gentleman know that in large cities like the city of New York, in the very poorest tenements of the city, they depend for both heat and light upon gas, which would be taxed under this provision?

Mr. RAINEY. I know that; and in the section of the city to which the gentleman has called attention I am not willing to believe that they are not as patriotic as in the wealthier sections of his city. A man has not discharged his duty to his country when he has simply placed a flag in front of his home, during this crisis in the history of our country, and imagines that he has thus performed all the service that is to be expected of him during the period of this awful war. Other gentlemen, in mock heroics directed against this bill, insist that they are opposed to taxing the heat that keeps away from the homes and from the persons of the citizens of the United States the cold of winter. Who is talking about any taxes of that kind?

We are taxing these luxuries—expensive light and heat and power service—and in the poorer quarters of New York City, where they turn on electric light when they come in, they will pay probably 5 cents a month on account of this tax, and probably 2 cents a month on account of this tax on heat, and they are in that manner doing their bit toward helping the country in this time of national stress.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. They will pay $1.35.

Mr. RAINEY. There will be 500,000 young men soon living in tents where there are no electric lights, where there is no heat furnished by companies from great distances, enduring all these hardships; and no matter if these men are in moderate circumstances, when they go into their homes and flood them with electric lights, when they enjoy the comforts of homes made possible by these free institutions under which we live, they ought not to object, and I refuse to believe they are so unpatriotic as to object to these small taxes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. It is particularly easy for the gentleman from New York who seeks now to interrupt me, and for these other gentlemen who object to this bill, to make these speeches for home consumption, challenging all these items in this bill.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. No. They can go back home with the record they have made here, and they can say, "Why, we objected to this clause. Look at the speeches we made." Why, they voted for this war, every one of them, and they voted for these tremendous expenses. [Applause.]

Mr. HULBERT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, when men on this floor resort to demagogic harangues, it is simply impossible for them to confine themselves within the limits of truth. [Applause.] I never said, on this floor or elsewhere, that this bill was so bad that I was going to shut my eyes and vote for it. I have said on this floor that the items of taxation in this bill would be a cruel injustice to the people in times of peace, but as a bill to raise money in time of war, with the exception of the tariff provision, the provisions were the best balanced and wisest and least burdensome of any war-revenue bill that has ever been presented to Congress or to any other legislative body. I said with reference to the tariff provision that I did not like it, that I did not want it in the bill, but that it would raise $200,000,000, that it seemed we could not get that amount from other sources, and that I was going to shut my eyes and vote for that provision of the bill.

Now, it has been intimated by some gentlemen in these demagogic speeches that there was a deal between the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] and myself with respect to sugar and tobacco, sugar in his district and tobacco in my district. I denounce such statement or intimation unqualifiedly as a falsehood. [Applause.] There is not a Republican or Democrat in this House who knows me, there is not a man in my State or elsewhere who knows me who believes that I would make a deal with anybody in matters of legislation with respect to any special interest in my district or elsewhere. [Applause.] I remember in 1909 I stood alone of all the Democrats of North Carolina in the House and at the other end of the Capitol and voted for free lumber, against the protests of the big lumber interests that were in every nook and corner of my district and State. If I made any deal with Mr. FORDNEY or anybody else with reference to sugar and tobacco, I did not get my part of the deal, because this bill puts 100 per cent additional tax upon manufactured tobacco the raw material of which is raised in my district, which produces more than any other five districts in the United States. [Applause.] We levy on manufactured tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, smoking tobacco, and chewing tobacco $70,000,000 by this bill, twice as much as we are now levying under existing law.

They have made speeches here against this little tax of 5 per cent upon bills for light and heat furnished not by yourself, not on your coal bill, not on your wood bill, as the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] would have you believe. There is no tax upon that. The tax is only 5 per cent upon the bill which you pay, that anyone pays to another person or corporation that furnishes light and heat for your home. That is all that tax is, yet they would make you believe that this is a great burden upon the poor people, and they lift up their voices and cry out "Tax wealth, tax wealth! Raise it all out of incomes, all out of excess profits, all out of war profits!" We are taxing wealth. We have taxed wealth. Two years ago, June 30, 1915, we collected from incomes and profits less than $85,000,000. With the bill proposed here and existing law we will tax incomes and profits $1,375,000,000, and yet the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] cries, "Tax wealth, tax wealth; do not tax the poor man." They tell us that is a tax upon poverty. You know it is not. You know that $19 out of every $20 that will be collected by that tax will be collected from men like you and me. There is not a poor man in this country or a little family that will pay more than 10 cents a month extra; but it will cost men like you and me maybe from a dollar to two dollars extra, and we ought to pay this little tax without complaint. [Applause.]

In 1862, when the Confederate armies were turning toward this Capital and every man, woman, and child in the North were trembling at their advance, a tax measure was introduced in this House in order to raise money to support an army to resist this march. In that bill there was a tax, nearly as large a tax as this, on tallow candles, which were practically the only light that the poor as well as the rich people of this country had. There was a license tax upon the manufacture of candles and then an ad valorem tax of 3 per cent. There were demagogues then, though they stood almost within the very sight of Confederate bayonets, who got up on this floor and asked the Members of the House to vote against that tax, because it was a tax upon the poor man. They made the same argument then that those who are in favor of the Lenroot amendment make to-day; but there were men in this House who had the courage and patriotism, in spite of audacity and demagoguery, to vote for that tax and every other tax in that bill. By that tax bill they raised and supported an army which defended this Capital and the Nation, and saved the Union [applause]; and patriots now, South and North, thank God they did. [Applause.]

Mr. LENROOT rose.

Mr. KITCHIN. No; I have not time to yield now. Let no man vote against this item or that item in this bill, because it is going to affect some poor man. [Applause.] There are items in this bill that are going to affect the poor man and the rich man alike, but we have put the large burden of taxation on the wealthy. They should pay. I believe that the poor man in the city or the country is willing to pay this little pittance of 5 cents or 10 cents a month on the little light or heat bill in order to sustain this great Government in the mightiest struggle in which it ever engaged, and I hope the gentleman's amendment will be voted down. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired, and the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. LENROOT.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, is it in order to offer an amendment to perfect the paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. RAINEY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RAINEY. Is not the House entitled to vote now on the Lenroot amendment?

Mr. HULBERT. But this is a preferential motion to perfect the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 21, after the word "heat," insert in line 2 the words "when the same amounts to $5 per month."

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to modify that amendment so that it will come in after the word "service" instead of the word "heat."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the modification stated by the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. LENROOT.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. LENROOT) there were 58 ayes and 116 noes.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment officered by the gentleman from Rhode Island, Mr. STINESS.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, after the word "effect," insert "or if cash fare be paid." On page 30, line 18, after the word "book," insert the following: "or paying the cash fares," so as to read:

"If a ticket or mileage book used for such transportation or accommodation has been purchased before this section takes effect, or if cash fare be paid, the tax imposed by this section shall be collected from the person presenting the ticket or mileage book, or paying the cash fare, by the conductor or other agent."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I think that amendment is a just one.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 20, line 17, after the word "another," insert:

"Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to require the carrier paying such tax to list separately in any bill of lading, freight receipt, or other similar document if the total amount of the freight and tax be therein stated."

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, this is to avoid the trouble of a lot of work in making out freight bills and in stating the amount of the tax in every one of them. There has been considerable reference to that on the part of the clerks who have to make up the list of the bills, and it seems to me entirely unnecessary.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I see no objection to that amendment.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, there seems to be some feeling with regard to reference that has been made on the floor of the House about sugar and tobacco. I love both the gentleman from Michigan and the gentleman from North Carolina; they are big men. [Applause.] I did not intend to accuse either of them of any deal; I have not even mentioned their names. I do not accuse them, I only asked for an explanation of the suggestion made yesterday which indicated there was something out of the ordinary that had transpired, and my reason for asking for an explanation was the rather remarkable speech made the other day by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL], from which I read:

Now, here is the proposition. What are we going to do? I asked the chairman of the committee what he was going to do on subsequent amendments. Are we going to strike out the postage because somebody does not like it; are we going to strike out the retroactive clause because somebody does not like it? I say, let us stand for the bill and go down in defeat if necessary rather than embarrass the administration. There is the situation. It can be done; there is no trouble about it at all, Mr. Chairman.

There are two things that stood fundamentally in the way of this bill; one is sugar and the other is tobacco. We might as well understand it.

* * * * * * *

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. In conversation here there are some of us who do not understand precisely what the gentleman from Connecticut means by his reference to sugar and tobacco.

Mr. HILL. Oh, the gentleman is too innocent.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am one of the innocent Members of this House, and the Ways and Means Committee, with that statement in the RECORD, owes it to the membership of this House to explain what the gentleman from Connecticut referred to when he said the difficulty in the way was two things, one was sugar and the other was tobacco. The implication in the remark of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] I thought needed explaining. His explanation does not remove the implication contained in his answer to the question of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, if I can have five minutes I am ready to explain, as I did explain the other day, and if the gentleman would read the rest of my remarks——

Mr. GOOD. I have read them.

Mr. HILL. I have explained on the floor of the House two or three times. I am a protection Republican. I believe that we ought to get revenue out of a tariff. I have said it over and over again. I say now, in order to satisfy the extremely critical ideas of the gentleman from Iowa, if the gentleman from North Carolina will pardon me, that at the beginning man announced that whatever action the committee saw fit to of the discussion in the Ways and Means Committee the chair- take in regard to tobacco he would cheerfully and loyally accept. [Applause.] I do not think it needs any more explanation. I believe from my political standpoint that we ought to raise more. I said in committee that I intended to offer an amendment to raise the manufactured-tobacco tax to 25 cents a pound instead of 16 cents a pound, notwithstanding I came from a State where the second largest crop is tobacco.

But after the statement made by the chairman of the committee in full meeting of the committee, and the committee had raised it to 16 cents, I declined to make the motion to raise it any further. I accepted his statement. In regard to sugar, I did offer a motion to raise $150,000,000 from sugar. If that had been done it would not have been necessary to put in some of these other taxes. The committee saw fit to vote it out. I believed in it honestly and conscientiously, and the fact that it was voted out upon the ground that the committee did not want to impose any consumption taxes, contrary to my ideas, did not imply any wrong. It was simply a statement of fact, and when the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] asked me the question I said he was too innocent, and went on then and explained exactly what I meant; and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] has done me the injustice to read a part of my remarks and not go on and read the rest of them. [Applause.]

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote upon my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this section, 500, be closed in 50 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate upon this section and all amendments thereto shall close in 50 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SEARS: Page 20, line 4, after the word "another," insert "Provided, That said tax shall not be levied or assessed upon amounts paid for transportation of fruits, vegetables, and grain."

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I listened with a great deal of interest to the argument of the majority leader about demagoging on the floor of this House, and desire to say I fully agree with him. I therefore trust I shall not be accused of demagoging because I have offered the above amendment, for I assure you such is not the case. I have only offered it because I believe it is equitable and just, and I shall endeavor to prove to you that same should be adopted. I would offer an amendment exempting all food products from the additional 3 per cent freight tax, if I believed I could secure the passage of such an amendment, but I do not believe the House would go that far, and so I have only offered the amendment exempting fruits, vegetables, and grains. I want to say, in passing, that I heartily agree with the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD] when he says there should be no discrimination between freight rates and express rates, and I trust the amendment he has offered will pass. I trust this House will consider seriously the amendment which I have offered, and I am only sorry, if a division should be demanded, so many who will vote upon the question if a division is demanded are not here to listen to the argument presented. The facts are these. The Interstate Commerce Commission about two years ago granted an increase of from 10 to 15 per cent on all freight rates in the southeastern district. The Interstate Commerce Commission is now considering and, I fear, will grant an additional increase in freight rates of 15 per cent. If this is done, it means, in my State alone, something like $1,400,000 increase of freight rates on the fruits and vegetables of that section. I want to say in fairness, I do not believe the Committee on Ways and Means took into consideration this prospective increase when they incorporated this provision in the bill. If you increase the freight rate this 3 per cent, I want to warn you that you will place on the fruit and vegetable growers of my State alone an additional burden of more than $250,000, and thereby cause the food question in this country to become more acute than it is at present.

Mr. Chairman, much has been said about discrimination against the cities. Let me say to my colleagues who represent the cities that if this amendment is defeated the people in the cities will suffer more than the people on the farm. You will create a situation in this country that is similar to the one in Russia, where, I am told, the price of production is so much in excess of the market price the people will not only not plant but will not even harvest the crop planted. I want to place this House on notice, and I want to warn my colleagues unless you take this amendment seriously you will have a food crisis in this country which will prove even more serious than any which now exists in Europe.

We have spent large sums of money investigating the high cost of living. The administration is now asking for the passage of a bill to control and regulate the food situation, and no doubt we will again be called upon to appropriate large sums of money for that purpose. And yet we are about to again place an additional burden on the producer.

In my State alone there are hundreds of acres of vegetables to-day that, even with the present express and freight rates, can not be shipped to the cities. My colleagues, it will be your constituents who will suffer and cry out for food. If this is demagoging, then I am guilty of demagoging. If to make it so we can carry to your people in the cities vegetables and grain constitutes demagoging, then I am guilty of the charge.

Grain does not affect my district very much; but do you gentlemen realize when you pass a 3 per cent increase in the freight rates upon grain you are passing a double taxation? You are, because when you ship your wheat or corn to the mills you pay the additional 3 per cent freight rate, and when it is shipped back to the consumer as flour and meal they pay another 3 per cent increase of freight rates, thus making, as a matter of fact, an increase of 6 per cent over what they are now paying to have it transported. Bread is now practically out of the reach of the poor people, and if this is true, imagine if you can what the condition will be if the Interstate Commerce Commission allows the 15 per cent advance, and in addition to that we place this extra taxation of 6 per cent on flour and meal. Why not stop spending the people's money for investigations and do some real thinking while we are legislating. Your people are complaining—at least mine are—because they can not get flour for less than $15 to $17 a barrel, and frankly I must confess I do not blame them nor do I know what they will do unless some relief is afforded.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida has expired.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I have two amendments which I desire to present.

The CHAIRMAN. We will first dispose of this amendment of the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. HOWARD. I supposed that the Chair would dispose of the amendments all at one time.

The CHAIRMAN. There was nothing said about it, but unless otherwise directed, the Chair will dispose of them as they are offered. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SEARS) there were—ayes 19, noes 32.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the Clerk to read the first amendment I have offered.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 20, line 4, after the word "another," strike out all of subsection (d) and insert in lieu thereof the following: "(d) a tax equivalent to 2 cents on each shipment by express companies consigned from one point in the United States to another."

Mr. HOWARD. Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I do not know if you gentlemen take this as a serious proposition or not, but I want to call your attention to the fact it is. I have two amendments here. The committee seeks to raise revenue. Under the express transportation charges they seek to raise $15,000,000. Now, I do not care what they get out of express companies; we are only concerned in doing what is just and fair. I have got nothing to do with their business or what amount of taxes they pay on excess profits, but incidentally I want to remind you that you did get under the present law $270,000 out of one of the smallest express companies in the United States, and under the proposed bill you will get twice that amount in excess profits. But here is what I am concerned about: The people in the State of the gentleman from Florida are the greatest producers of perishable goods in the United States. The people of Georgia are great producers of berries, strawberries, and peaches. We are forced by the very nature of the product we produce in less than carload lots to use the express companies. Let us see what burden you put on the shippers of perishable goods. On a crate of peaches from Mount Airy, Ga., to Washington City the express charge is about 85 cents. Ten per cent under this bill means 8½ cents, and, as we have no fractional money, under the provisions of this bill it means 9 cents added. Who pays it? The people. Now, I say that the express charges under this bill are excessive and unreasonable from the standpoint of the public that have that much added to the cost of their food. Now, let us see what the other condition is. You are discriminating unjustly and unfairly, and I can appeal to the conscience and mind of any man on this floor and demonstrate to you that you are discriminating against the express companies and practically putting them out of their very useful field in the transportation of perishable stuff.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield? I am interested in this discrimination.

Mr. HOWARD. I will tell you why. Three per cent is your freight charge on all nonperishable stuff. As was said by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER], who ships about 200 packages a day from his place of business, he will divide up the packages now between the express and the parcel post. Under this bill he will divide them up between freight and parcel post. Now, why? Because it is 3 per cent on freight charges and nothing on parcel post.

Mr. FESS. Why should there be nothing on parcel post?

Mr. HOWARD. I do not know. I have an amendment making a flat rate on each package. Sixty-five per cent of the entire business done by the parcel post in the United States is done by mail-order concerns. Twenty-five per cent is done within the first zone, and my amendment exempts the first zone. There comes in my amendment and protects a little over 11 per cent of the people of the country. It is fair and will raise $10,000,000, and, according to the estimate of the Postmaster General, we carried last year 1,000,000,000 packages by parcel post. We are raising the postage on first-class matter; we are raising the postal rates by zones upon second, third, and fourth class matter. It would not add but 1 cent that anybody will feel on all those packages outside the first zone and raise $10,000,000, and why discriminate against the common carrier of the people of the South that raise these perishable fruits in due season, which the people in the Northwest also raise in due season, and make the people who consume the perishable and necessary vegetables and fruits of this country pay the tax, which, in fact, is outrageous. By my two amendments you would get $18,000,000. Under the provisions of this bill, as brought in by the Committee on Ways and Means, we only get $15,000,000. The proposition is in favor of the Ways and Means bill by $3,000,000 under the actual figures, and I appeal to you gentlemen on the floor of this House, I appeal to you to vote for both of these amendments, which are just, which are equitable, which are fair, and I know that no man wants to do an injustice to the shippers of my section, who will be forced to use the express companies no matter how outrageous this tax may be.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SLOAN. What is the average price paid for carrying a parcel-post package covering the period of a year?

Mr. HOWARD. I can not at this moment recall the exact figures.

Mr. SLOAN. I wanted to know how it relatively——

Mr. HOWARD. I can say to the gentleman I think about 25 or 30 cents.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I ask that the gentleman have five minutes additional.

The CHAIRMAN. The time has been fixed for debate.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, in line with what the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD] has just said, I hope that some member of the committee will, before we conclude on this amendment, explain, if he can, why this tax on express and freight and no tax upon parcel post is provided. Surely to a man who is looking on and seeing that the fair thing is done to everybody there must be some reason given. As has been pointed out by the gentleman from Georgia, I have no interest whatever in the express companies as such other than as a public-service corporation upon which the people must depend.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. SABATH. I am not a member of that committee, but I have certain figures right here that might interest the gentleman as to express companies. I notice that in 1915 there was a balance to the credit of the Adams Express Co. of $6,000,000——

Mr. MEEKER. That is all from the gentleman on the Adams Express Co.; that is enough from the gentleman from Illinois, and I decline to yield further.

Mr. SABATH. And also the Southern Express Co.——

Mr. MEEKER. The gentleman has gotten that out of his system for the seventh time to-day on my positive count.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is wrong in that, the same as he is on every other thing in this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois must not interrupt.

Mr. MEEKER. I decline to yield.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman did yield to me.

Mr. MEEKER. I decline to yield further.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman has no information, and I am trying to give him some.

Mr. MEEKER. I am not getting it from you; that is, not what I want.

Mr. SABATH. These are statistics.

Mr. MEEKER. The fact of the business is, Mr. Chairman, that the individual shipper will pay this to the express company, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] now is a friend of the express company in this particular instance, although he does not know it. This tax will come from the individual consignor, and that rate will rest upon the individual who ships that, while by parcel post he will go scot free, and if by freight 3 per cent only. It has not a thing to do with the income of any express company in the country. It is the shippers from the southern part of the country who are compelled to send their fruit and vegetables into these northern States, which fruits and vegetables the people are compelled to have if we are going to feed our cities, that we should consider. The express companies will not lose a nickel if this goes through, but they can stand that loss much more easily than can the people down in the southern States, who are going to be compelled to put up this extra cost on every package that goes through the express company. That is the point in this thing that we are contending against. As it is written in the bill it is not just unless there is some reason back of any that has yet been given in the committee as to why we should lay on the producers of these commodities this additional duty.

The gentleman from Georgia, in the amendment that he has offered, provides for a flat rate rather than leaving the figuring out with the 10 per cent and the fractional pennies that will come through this, as provided in this bill—a flat stamp of 1 cent and 2 cents on the parcel post. I should think that they should all carry that burden, if it is a burden. Nevertheless, in this provision as it is here, it is not going to simply strike the men who are protesting yonder, but it is going to put up the fruit and vegetable market in every city in the North, for the stuff will rot in the gardens of the South unless these men are still able to get the service of this company at a reasonable rate. And in the amendment, which I hope will carry, they certainly have a simple solution of it all.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I wish to offer.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak on this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman and gentleman of the committee, I am in favor of this amendment. I have heard it stated on the floor of the House—I was going to say for the last week, but I will extend it to the last three weeks—that we should have and that we need sufficient revenue with which to carry on this, the greatest war in the history of the world. We have been asked to point out certain things on which revenue could be raised. This is one place where a revenue can be raised, and by so doing mete out absolute justice to the enterprise that is being carried on. I want to ask any gentleman of this committee if he were in the business of transportation and the Government of the United States, or any other person, company, or firm were given the right to compete with him, and the Government or his competitor did not pay a cent of charges for that privilege, while he was charged or taxed 10 per cent on his business, what excuse could we make for this discrimination? Would we want to be in the express business or any other and pay 10 per cent for conducting or carrying on that business when our competitor did not pay one cent? I will ask you whether or not that is fair treatment?

Mr. HARDY. Will the gentleman yield for a question there?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes; I will yield. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. KITCHIN. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 23, noes 26.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of no quorum.

Mr. HOWARD. I ask for tellers, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. It is too late. The point of no quorum has been made.

Mr. HULBERT. I will withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. HOWARD. Then I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] will take their places as tellers.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent, on account of having been requested to do so by several gentlemen, to tell what this amendment is that we are about to act on.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask to have it reported.

Mr. HULBERT. There are men voting on this thing who were not here when it was debated.

Mr. GARNER. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. Has the question of tellers and no quorum been settled?

The CHAIRMAN. It has.

The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HOWARD: Page 20, line 4, after the word "another," strike out all of subsection (b) and insert in lieu thereof the following: (b) a tax equivalent to 2 cents for each shipment by express companies consigned from one point in the United States to another.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD] will take their places and act as tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 42, noes 49.

The CHAIRMAN. On this vote, as counted by the tellers, the ayes are 42 and the noes are 49, and the amendment therefore is rejected.

Mr. HOWARD. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have another amendment to this section pending. I would like to have the amendment reported, if the Chair please.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HOWARD: Page 21, after line 17, after the word "conversation," insert a new subsection (g): "(g) upon each package or parcel deposited for transportation by parcels post beyond the first zone there shall be paid 1 cent per parcel in addition to the rate prescribed by law."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noes seem to have it.

Mr. HOWARD. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 25, noes 46.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Mr. BATHRICK. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. On page 20, line 4, strike out the word "ten" and insert the word "five."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MANN: Page 20, line 4, strike out the word "ten" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five."

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

Mr. MANN. The time was not divided among certain gentlemen in any request that was made. I ask unanimous consent for five minutes. I was on the floor and reserved the right to object to the agreement, stating that I wanted the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I am not especially interested in express companies. Express companies do not pay the tax.

But here is a bill that levies against the shipper a tax of 3 per cent on freight receipts, nothing on parcels post shipments, and 10 per cent on express receipts. I do not know how the committee figure it out, but freight and express and parcels post are in competition with each other. If it was the intention of the committee to endeavor to compel the shipments of early vegetables and fruits by freight instead of by express, or by parcels post instead of by express, then certainly they have gone a long way toward accomplishing the purpose.

Now, these three services are in competition. To say that you will tax one nothing and tax another 3 per cent and tax another 10 per cent is utterly unjust. The Interstate Commerce Commission has the power to regulate the rate by freight and the rate by express, and after a long series of years they have endeavored to regulate the freight and express rates in such a way as that they are in fair competition with each other, according to the service which is rendered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is the gentleman taking into consideration what will be the effect on this rate if the Interstate Commerce Commission increases the freight rates 15 per cent above what they are now?

Mr. MANN. No; because they have not increased it; and I do not think they are going to increase it that much.

Mr. BARKLEY. I hope the gentleman is correct.

Mr. MANN. I think they are going to increase it some. They are just as likely to increase the express rate as the freight rate; that is all. There is a large class of business that has to go by express—perishable stuff that has to go by express. That ought not to be discriminated against. There is a large class of business that can go either by express or freight, and we ought not to undertake to determine which way it shall go. Let the shipper determine that. He knows best. Why should we say to a man, "If you want to send it the best way for your goods, we are going to make you pay a good deal more than formerly you were required to pay or compel you to send by the other way, the poorer way"? I hope the committee will recognize the justice of this. In no other place is the rate fixed higher than 5 per cent.

Mr. KITCHIN. I think the proportion would be 3 and 6. I hope the gentleman will agree to 6.

Mr. MANN. Of course, whatever the committee says about that I will agree to.

Mr. KITCHIN. I am convinced that 6 and 3 would be the right proportion.

Mr. MANN. On most of the shipments the express rate is not very great. I always consider the convenience of people in reference to these matters. Now, so far as I am concerned, I am quite handy with figures myself, but it is a great deal more convenient when you are figuring things to figure them on a decimal system, and it is easier to figure half of 10, and it is rather complicated to figure 6 per cent unless you owe money. [Applause.]

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, if the percentages on express bills are not in proportion to the difference between the rate charged by the express companies and the railroad companies then there is discrimination against one or the other. It is my information that express charges are three and one-half times the freight charges, and as the percentage on freight bills is 3 per cent, if I am correct—if that information has been given correctly to me—then the rates on express charges ought to be three and one-third times 3 per cent, or 10 per cent.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. FORDNEY. I will.

Mr. HOWARD. That may be true in some classifications, but not in general classifications.

Mr. FORDNEY. In general it is. There are five classes of freight, and more than that many classes of express goods. On the other hand——

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Let me finish that sentence. The parcel-post rate is 5 cents a pound in the first zone, and running up to 12 cents a pound in the eighth zone, or beyond 1,800 miles. Five cents a pound is $100 per ton. Railroad companies make no such charge as that. Express companies make no such charge as that, except on goods of a very high class or of great value; and to increase the parcel-post rates would be entirely out of joint with these other rates.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman referred to the percentage of difference between express and freight charges. Does the gentleman think that is true as between express and fast-freight charges?

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not know just the difference between those rates.

Mr. MANN. Take a carload of oranges coming from California, for instance, which may come by fast freight or by express.

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. There is a slight extra charge for express, but no such percentage of difference as the gentleman stated.

Mr. FORDNEY. It is my information that generally on freight and generally on express rates of every description the difference is about three and one-third times.

Mr. MANN. Wheat and coal and iron do not go by express.

Mr. MADDEN. Investigation of railway mail pay before the Post Office Committee disclosed the fact that fast-freight rates average about 4½ cents per ton-mile.

Mr. FORDNEY. And your parcel-post rate is 5 cents a pound. Then where is the justice in increasing the parcel-post rate?

Mr. MANN. There is no proposition pending before this House concerning the parcel post.

Mr. FORDNEY. It was suggested here that the parcel-post rates ought to be raised.

Mr. GILLETT. Will the gentleman from Michigan yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GILLETT. Even if it does cost three times as much to send by express as by freight, why should the tax be three times as much?

Mr. FORDNEY. It is on your freight bill and on your express bill.

Mr. GILLETT. It is 10 per cent on your express bill, and the express bill is much larger per hundred pounds, so that even if it were 3 per cent on each it would be a greater tax on express than on freight, because the freight charge is much greater.

Mr. FORDNEY. You will discriminate against one or the other.

Mr. GILLETT. I should think it would treat both alike to have the same rate on each.

Mr. HOWARD. I want to say to the gentleman that since he has taken the floor I have been informed by a gentleman who is in a position to know about the rates that under the adjustment by the Interstate Commerce Commission of express rates in 1914 there is hardly two times the difference between freight rates and express rates.

Mr. FORDNEY. I should like to have some man present that here and to know that it is correct.

Mr. HOWARD. And in many instances the difference is less.

Mr. FORDNEY. If that is true, I want it in writing from somebody who knows. The same as everybody else, I have exercised my best judgment, on the best information I could obtain, and I voted to put that rate in the bill, and I think it is right, and I think, unless some man knows to the contrary, who has greater knowledge than myself, I am going to stick to the information I have so far; but I want some man to come here and offer reasonably correct information showing that I am wrong, and I will not take the say so of any average man.

Mr. HOWARD. If the gentleman will yield right there——

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. HOWARD. The people who are in a position to give that information do not have the privilege of coming on this floor.

Mr. FORDNEY. Who are they?

Mr. HOWARD. But I will say positively in my place that the express rates are not three and a third times as much as the freight rates.

Mr. FORDNEY. Let the gentleman put it in writing.

Mr. HOWARD. I will have it in writing in three minutes if the gentleman desires it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. STAFFORD. I understand it is the gentleman's impression or understanding that the express rates are three and one-third times the freight rates on first-class freight transportation?

Mr. FORDNEY. That the average express rates are three and one-third times the average freight rates. You must understand that there are five classifications of freight, and each class pays a different rate, and that is true as to express packages.

Mr. STAFFORD. Is it not a fact that the express rates are allied to first-class freight rates?

Mr. FORDNEY. I have stated my position on the subject.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to modify the amendment that I offered by striking out "ten" and inserting "six."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment in the respect indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Modification of the amendment offered by Mr. MANN: Page 20, line 4, strike out the word "ten" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. KITCHIN. The committee have no objection to that. We accept it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BATHRICK. Mr. Chairman, I ask the Clerk to read the amendment which I have sent to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BATHRICK: Page 20, line 24, strike out the words "amount paid for the transportation of oil by pipe line" and insert the words "value of oil transported by pipe line."

Mr. BATHRICK. Mr. Chairman, I want the attention of the committee for about three or four minutes. I want to ask the chairman of this committee if this clause puts any tax upon the oil in the pipe line belonging to the owners of these pipe lines? It seems to tax the shipper, who pays for transportation, but does not tax concerns like the Standard Oil Co., who owns a pipe line.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATHRICK. Just for a question. I have only five minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The committee on its information, after investigating it a good deal, found that these rates imposed by the pipe lines were merely paper rates; that such conditions were imposed; that the independent refiners shipped but very little oil through these pipe lines, and that the rates by the pipe lines were about 60 per cent of the rail rates.

Mr. BATHRICK. The Interstate Commerce Commission has authority over pipe lines, because they are common carriers, and if you impose this 5 per cent upon the oil shipped by the independent refiners and do not impose it upon the oil shipped through the pipe lines by the owners of them, you will create an enormous power to be used against the independent refiners in this country.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The bill does impose a tax on all the oil.

Mr. BATHRICK. Not the oil owned by the pipe-line companies.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; it does.

Mr. BATHRICK. The amount paid for transportation?

Mr. KITCHIN. If they transport their own oil, they must pay at the same rate.

Mr. BATHRICK. There is nothing of that kind in the bill.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. BATHRICK. I would like to have some Member tell me where there is any such provision in this bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. In section 501.

Mr. SABATH. Section 501 will cover it.

Mr. BATHRICK. Very well, if the gentleman from North Carolina thinks that it is already covered, Mr. Chairman, I will ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment he has offered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. MONDELL: At the top of page 30 strike out subdivision (a), reading as follows: "a tax equivalent to 3 per cent of the amount paid for the transportation by rail or water of property by freight consigned from one point in the United States to another."

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, my amendment is to strike out the subdivision which provides for the 3 per cent tax on freight shipments. I think there are very few who believe in a consumption tax. There is no consumption tax I can think of so burdensome and far-reaching as a tax on freight shipments. Of course gentlemen on the committee will say they propose by this provision to raise $77,000,000, and if we do not raise it in this way, how shall we raise it? That is not the proper view to take of any provision in this bill. If a tax is unfair and inequitable, it ought not to be laid, even though it will produce a large amount of revenue, and I know of no tax more unfair and more inequitable than a tax that increases the price of everything that people buy and use. That is exactly what this freight tax would do.

The railroad companies will not pay it; the shipper and consumer will. It is a tax direct on the consumer, and the consumer will not only pay 3 per cent but he will pay considerably more because of this 3 per cent tax.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. And the consumer pays going and coming. He will pay on the wheat that goes in and the flour that comes back.

Mr. MONDELL. That is true, and the gentleman calls attention to another reason why the tax is inequitable and unfair. It is a tax particularly burdensome on the farming sections of the country and on the interior and the Far West.

The country in which I live ships much of its products at least 500 miles to a primary market, and then those products must, in the main, go another 1,000 miles to reach the consumer. Everything that we wear, much that we eat, and most of the things that we use are hauled by rail from 1,500 to 1,800 miles. An ordinary car of mixed freight landed at the little town where I live has a freight charge on it from $300 to $400, and you gentlemen are proposing to lay a 3 per cent tax on top of that already enormous burden and thus further increase the cost of living.

The burden will not, it is true, fall so heavily upon those who live near sections of manufacture and production of manufactured articles, so far as these classes of articles are concerned, but it will fall heavily on them on those products that come from long distances—cattle and the grain that is shipped from our western country to the consumer in the East.

If the committee had started out to find a tax that would be as directly burdensome on the ordinary citizen as it could be made in comparison with the amount raised, if it had started out with the view of laying a direct consumption tax affecting every citizen in the Union, affecting every article that the citizen uses—if that had been the purpose of the committee they could not have selected a better tax for that purpose than this, a tax on consumption, a tax on bread, a tax on meat, a tax on clothing, a tax on everything that we use. In other words, 3 per cent added to the already tremendously high cost of living. And, as I have said, the tax is laid in a particularly burdensome way on these sections of the country that are compelled to ship their products a long distance to market and then on the other hand are compelled to ship the manufactured articles they use still greater distances from manufacturing centers. Certainly there is some way of raising $77,000,000 more equitably than by this burdensome and oppressive consumption tax. [Applause.]

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to detain the House but a minute. The argument of the gentleman from Wyoming is about on a line with the other arguments that have been made. The gentleman has treated this as if it was a 3 per cent tax on the consumption of the article. The freight rate is of very small proportion compared with the value of the articles that are shipped. This is a 3 per cent rate on the freight, a percentage on a percentage. When it gets to the consumer it is a trifling matter, distributed over all of the people of the country.

Mr. MONDELL. It is $77,000,000; is that a trifling amount?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It is a trifling amount compared with the whole amount of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I want to ask some member of the committee about the 3 per cent tax on the amount paid for rail transportation of freight, page 20, lines 1 to 3, and since the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] has the floor I will ask him. I have a telegram here from the Pacific coast which reads:

Proposed tax of 3 per cent on freight bills would be a serious item to lumber shippers from the Pacific coast. Freight runs $200 to $600 per car. Present contracts, involving approximately 30,000 cars, were not figured to cover this item. Bills should provide that receiver of freight must pay this tax, as he alone is in a position to protect himself. If left in doubt who shall pay, it will lead to endless litigation. In many instances the freight on this material which would be subject to the tax will amount to more than the stock itself at point of shipment.

Now, what I want to ask is, What does the bill provide as to the payment of the tax on shipments not yet made but which have been long since contracted for?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. How is it sold—f. o. b.?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes; and thirty or forty thousand carloads sold a month or longer ago, but no cars on which to deliver and not likely to be for perhaps 60 days.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Were they sold with an agreement to pay the freight?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. Lumber is always sold on a delivered price.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the sellers get caught for this stuff that has been already sold?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I think so.

Mr. MANN. They ought to be thankful that they could sell it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Oh, well, we are thankful that we can sell some lumber after the lean years of the Underwood Tariff Act, but when we get a chance to sell the freight cars disappear; and when we begin an agitation that seems likely to get us some freight cars we are staggered with a demand that the Interstate Commission authorizes a 15 per cent increase in freight rates, catching us with thousands of cars sold but not delivered; and now we are further staggered with a proposed 3 per cent tax on our freight bills. I am in hopes that this bill will be amended so as to carry a clean-cut provision as to vendor and vendee, so as to prevent litigation, at least.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wyoming.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 501. That the taxes imposed by section 500 shall be paid by the person, corporation, partnership, or association paying for the services or facilities rendered.

In case a carrier by rail, water, or pipe line does not, because of its ownership of the commodity transported, or for any other reason, receive the amount which as a carrier it would otherwise charge, such carrier shall pay a tax equivalent to the tax which would be imposed upon the transportation of such commodity if the carrier received payment for such transportation: Provided, That in case of a carrier which on May 1, 1917, had no rates or tariffs on file with the proper Federal or State authority, the tax shall be computed on the basis of the rates or tariffs of other carriers for like services as ascertained and determined by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue: Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as imposing a tax upon the transportation of any commodity which is necessary for the use of the carrier in the conduct of its business as such and is intended to be so used.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SABATH: Page 21, line 20, strike out the word "paying" and the word "rendered" and insert, after the word "association," the word "rendering."

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, by the adoption of this amendment the section would read as follows:

That the taxes imposed by section 500 shall be paid by the person, corporation, partnership, or association rendering the service or facility.

In other words, that the tax would be paid by those rendering the service instead of those receiving the service.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GREEN of Iowa: Page 21, line 20, after the word "rendered," strike out the period and add in new line the following: "to the United States at such times and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe."

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, this is simply to provide that the Secretary of the Treasury may make regulations so that the railroad companies will not have to pay these taxes in driblets.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, that is unnecessary. We have a general clause in the bill farther on that takes care of all of that.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. And the gentleman thinks that applies to this?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I thought the general clause did not apply. I shall withdraw my amendment, with the consent of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I had an amendment which I desired to offer to section 500, which is agreeable to the committee. I was called out of the Chamber for a moment——

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I shall ask to go back to that after we get through with this other.

Mr. CRAMTON. Very well.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 502. That no tax shall be imposed under section 500 upon any payment received for services rendered to officers or employees of the United States, or of any State or political subdivision thereof, in the course of their official business.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out section 502.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 22, strike out section 502.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to direct the attention of the committee to this section. I understand that owing to constitutional provisions or implications, it is not possible for us to tax a State or any of its governmental agencies, and hence in the enforcement of this law something such as is proposed by this section is necessary. I suggest that it would be better to leave the question to the courts to determine in which cases we must exempt and in which cases we are not required to rather than to have this particular language, because, on the one hand, this will open the door wide to abuse and graft and will exempt a great many cases that ought not to be exempted. For instance, I am a Member of Congress and I am an officer of the United States. I go up into Michigan on official business. I go down here to the railroad station, and I tell the agent that I am a Government official, and I am going to Michigan on official business. The agent has no option, but must take my statement, and it may be that I am going up there to talk politics or on some private business. The agent who sells me the ticket must accept my statement and sell me a ticket without the tax. It is the same with a prosecuting attorney of some county in a State. He may make the same statement, and the agent will not even know that he is a prosecuting attorney, but the agent must accept his statement. It opens the door for abuse and graft. I might multiply the instances. For instance, in the matter of furnishing heat and light to an officer, say, to a prosecuting attorney, who is one-tenth of the time acting as prosecuting attorney and the other nine-tenths of the time practicing law privately. Perhaps you will have to exempt his bill for electric light for his office which is used more for private purposes than as an official. On the other hand, you have not exempted a municipality or a State. You have exempted officers, but not the city, county, or State itself. Hence the electric light furnished to a municipality by a lighting concern is to be taxed, according to the language, for service furnished directly to the State or the subdivision thereof is to be taxed. I tried to look into this question as to how far we could tax things used by a State in its governmental functions, and I find that the question is an involved one and not easily decided. It was assumed here this afternoon that if a municipality manufactures electric light the Federal Government could not tax the municipality furnishing the electric light in the event the tax was placed upon the concern furnishing the light, whereas in the South Carolina case where the State assumed to sell liquors, it was held by the United States Supreme Court that the Federal Government could tax a business agency undertaken by the State. It is a complicated question, and I think that each case should stand upon its own footing. Let the courts decide when they are exempt and when not.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. As I understand it, the whole taxes covered by section 500 are not to be paid by the corporation itself, but are to be collected from the consumer?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. And if the municipality owns the water plant and the light plant, they do not pay the taxes themselves, but the consumer does.

Mr. CRAMTON. The gentleman misunderstood me. I admit that is true under the bill as read, but if a municipality is a customer, and not the manufacturer, then this bill does not exempt the municipality although I presume the courts would. I was trying to point out the difficulty of laying down a rule. It was assumed here in debate that if a municipality was the manufacturer of electricity and attempted to sell it, and we tried to tax it instead of passing it to the consumer, we could not do it, whereas in the North Carolina case the court said that we could do it. So I suggest either this section ought to be left out entirely and leave it to the courts to lay the boundaries, or it ought to be greatly modified and improved.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to give the committee an illustration which I think would not be an uncommon one. I am a member of the House Office Commission. The Capitol power and light plant is under the control of the House Office Commission. The Interior Department Building has just been erected. We gave permission recently to furnish electric power to the Interior Building, although the matter has not been finally adjusted, at a certain rate. It is to be paid for out of the appropriations made for heat, light, and power purposes in the Interior Building. Now, after that how ridiculous it would be to say that when that is adjusted the Interior Department shall pay, in addition to what we figure the cost which is charged against their appropriation, a 5 per cent tax. The purpose of this section is to prevent that very thing. Without this section to every appropriation that we have made for heat, light, or electric power in all the public buildings of the United States you would have to add the 5 per cent tax to the bill and then turn it into the Treasury of the United States in a way and pay it out for the very thing for which it is turned in. It would create a great amount of bookkeeping which would be very onerous, and you might just as well, if you strike out this section, say that a man who has $10 in one pocket and through purpose or absentmindedness pulls it out of that pocket and shoves it in his other pocket, must pay a 5 per cent tax for that purpose.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield for an interruption?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Section 500 relates not only to the 5 per cent electric power for domestic use, etc., but its use for the transportation of passengers.

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Section 502 provides that you shall not charge anything extra for carrying an alderman of the city or an engineer of the city, or any other official of the city, anywhere on official business. Now, when do they determine that that is official business, and who decides, and what is to prevent an official from giving these men, their favorites, commutation tickets and many other tickets at a less figure than the ordinary man will pay. There is no certificate required that this is on official business.

Mr. MANN. It is very certain there will be certificates that it is on official business or it will be paid.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I do not see that there is any certificate required and there never used to be any certificate, and, as the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] has pointed out, this opens up the door for the widest sort of favoritism.

Mr. MANN. They will pay unless it is shown it is on official business.

Mr. CRAMTON. That is one side of it; now as to the other side of it. My home municipality buys the electricity which lights our city streets from a private concern. Is there anything in this section to exempt that city from paying the tax?

Mr. MANN. Why, certainly.

Mr. CRAMTON. It is the municipality which is the consumer.

Mr. MANN. The municipality will not pay taxes for city purposes.

Mr. CRAMTON. I think the city would be exempted by reason of the Constitution, but would not by reason of this section.

Mr. MANN. The Constitution has nothing to do with it.

Mr. CRAMTON. Well, the implied provisions of the Constitution. There is nothing in this section, because the light is furnished, not to officers but to the city.

Mr. MANN. I know, but payments are made by the officers.

Mr. CRAMTON. The service was not rendered to the employees.

Mr. MANN. No——

Mr. CRAMTON. That is what the section says. The section says "for services rendered to officers." It does not say bills rendered, but "services rendered to officers."

Mr. MANN. I do not think the language of the bill is very perfect. The gentleman, however, has not proposed to perfect it. Do not accuse me of trying to defend the language of any provision of this bill; I have not.

Mr. MONDELL. If the gentleman will yield. None of the members of the committee have explained, and I would like to have the gentleman's opinion as to how this would affect the telephone or lighting bill of an Army officer in this city or anywhere in the country. Would it relieve him from the payment of taxes?

Mr. MANN. I should think not, although they have an allowance.

Mr. MONDELL. Yes; they have a commutation.

Mr. MANN. They have an allowance for this purpose.

Mr. HELVERING. The exemption does not attach simply because the fellow claims it; he must do it.

Mr. MANN. Claiming it would not do.

Mr. CRAMTON. I want to say to the gentleman from Illinois, who suggests that I have not offered an amendment to perfect the language, that I am not claiming to be able to write the proper language; I am simply calling attention to it.

Mr. MANN. I have no criticism of the gentleman on that point—far from it. I feel the same way.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 504. That from and after the 1st day of June, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the amount paid by any person, corporation, partnership, or association to any other person, corporation, partnership, or association for advertising or advertising space other than in newspapers and periodicals.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we pass over this section for the present.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer this amendment and have it pending.

Mr. KITCHIN. All right.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I desire to move to strike out the paragraph and insert the following.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, pending that, I should like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina if he will not consent to amendments being introduced and read at this time for information.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not object to that.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That all amendments be offered now and read for information.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] asks unanimous consent that all amendments proposed to be submitted to this paragraph be sent to the desk and reported, and at the expiration of the reporting of these amendments the section and the amendments thereto be passed for the present without prejudice.

The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD].

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. FITZGERALD moves to amend section 504, page 23, by striking out, on page 23, in line 9, the word "five" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "one," and in line 13, on page 23, by striking out the words "or advertising space other than in newspapers and periodicals" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "other than newspapers whose circulation does not exceed 5,000 copies: Provided, That the gross receipt for advertisements to the amount of $1,000 by any person, persons, firm, or company shall be exempt from the tax."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment that will be sent to the desk.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I understand the purpose of the gentleman from North Carolina is to have this passed over?

Mr. KITCHIN. We are going to have another meeting before we finish the bill, and we want to take this into consideration.

Mr. SABATH. You desire to pass the section with the amenments offered thereto?

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask that they be printed in the RECORD instead of being read.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. My amendment need not be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] asks unanimous consent that all amendments in this connection be sent to the desk to be printed in the RECORD without being read at present.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I object, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: Page 23, line 12, strike out the words "or advertising space other than in newspapers and periodicals," so that the section will read:

"SEC. 504. That from and after the 1st day of June, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 2 per cent of the amount paid by any person, corporation, partnership, or association to any other person, corporation, partnership, or association for advertising."

Mr. MANN. If this section is to be passed over, how can an amendment be offered to it?

The CHAIRMAN. It is part of the request of the gentleman from North Carolina that all these amendments be sent to the desk and reported, and that the section and the amendments be passed over.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I desired to ask permission to withdraw an amendment which I have sent to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 4280 and had come to no resolution thereon.

REGISTRATION FOR SELECTIVE DRAFT, ETC.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. DENT. To ask unanimous consent that there be printed as one public document the Army law recently approved by the President, the registration regulations approved May 18, 1917, to carry that law into effect, and the President's proclamation, and that there be printed 1,000,000 copies of this document, to be distributed through the folding room.

Mr. MANN. I will say to the gentleman it can not be done by the action of the House. We have no authority to print beyond the sum of $500 without a concurrent resolution.

Mr. DENT. I spoke to the chairman of the Committee on Printing, Mr. BARNHART, and he could not be here to look after it, but he said it could be done that way. I am sure I am not familiar with the procedure.

Mr. MANN. The House can not order printing beyond a limit of $500 at a time.

Mr. GARNER. How much will it cost?

Mr. DENT. About $7,000.

Mr. MANN. You will have to get the information from the Printing Office, and prepare a concurrent resolution, which the House could consider later in the day.

Mr. DENT. I already have the information about the cost. A million copies will cost about $7,000.

Mr. MANN. Prepare a concurrent resolution that the House can pass when the committee rises.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 3330. An act to temporarily increase the commissioned and warrant and enlisted strength of the Navy and Marine Corps, and for other purposes.

WAR REVENUE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4280.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4280.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4280, with Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 505. That from and after the 1st day of June, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid the following taxes on the issuance of insurance policies:

(a) Life insurance: A tax equivalent to 8 cents on each $100 or fractional part thereof of the amount for which any line is insured under any policy of insurance, or other instrument, by whatever name the same is called: Provided, That the provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to any fraternal beneficiary society or order, or farmers' purely local cooperative company or association, or employees' relief associations operated on the lodge system or local cooperation plan, organized and conducted solely by the members thereof for the exclusive benefit of its members and not for profit.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LONERGAN: Page 23, line 21, section 505, clause (a), after the word "called," insert "except that no policies of group life insurance covering groups of not less than 100 lives in the employ of the same person, firm, or corporation, the tax shall be equivalent to 2 cents on each $100, or fractional part thereof, of the amount for which any life is insured under any such policy or other instrument."

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, the purpose of this amendment is to equalize the taxation to be imposed under this section. Under the bill as proposed, a tax of 8 cents on each $100 or fractional part thereof of the amount for which a life is insured would, under the regular forms of life insurance issued, assuming the average premium to be $30 for each $1,000 worth of insurance, produce to the Government a tax equivalent to 2⅔ per cent of the annual premium paid for insurance.

In the case of group life insurance the average annual premium per thousand paid by the employer is in the neighborhood of $8 per thousand. Hence, at the rate proposed by the bill the tax of 8 cents on each $100 or fractional part of the amount for which the life is insured would produce to the Government, from group life insurance, a tax in excess of 10 per cent of the annual premium paid.

Now, group insurance, gentlemen of the committee, is insurance issued at the instance of the employer for the benefit of the employees. We will take, as an example, a manufacturer employing 1,000 men. Under a blanket policy he would pay the premium and insure the lives of all of his employees. The rate of insurance per thousand would approximate $8. The average rate of insurance premiums on ordinary insurance is $30 per thousand, and this law proposes a tax at the rate of 8 per cent on each $100 of insurance issued, and under this section it would mean a tax of 10 per cent, as against the tax of 2⅔ per cent on ordinary insurance.

The group insurance is issued annually. Hence we find one of the injustices of the proposed tax. The purpose of this amendment is merely to equalize the taxation. It is very apparent that the Committee on Ways and Means, with its many able gentlemen, was altogether too busy to look into this detail. This is a class of insurance by which insurance companies earn a comparatively small profit. I have talked with some of the ablest insurance men in Hartford, Conn., who have given me this assurance.

The insurance companies in my town have made no complaint at all on account of the tax to be imposed under the provisions of this bill. They merely ask for the change of rate on group insurance so it will reflect the rate on regular life insurance. One company alone in my city is to pay a tax of approximately $400,000, and there is no complaint. The only thing that they ask for is that this tax be equalized, as it should be, because, gentlemen, the payment of the premium on group insurance must necessarily come out of the overhead expense of the employer, and group insurance has done a great deal toward promoting efficiency on the part of the employees. It has done a great deal toward cementing friendly relations between the employer and the employee, and it is one of the best forms of insurance that have been designed in recent years. It is comparatively new. I think it has been issued only in the last five to eight years. And I say, gentlemen, that this is a proposition to which I hope you will give your favorable consideration.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. I will.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I simply want to get into my mind the benefit that goes to the employee.

Mr. LONERGAN. The benefit that goes to the employee is this: Many men do not have their lives insured for the benefit of their wives and dependent children, and under this form of insurance the employer does that part for them. Under the provisions of this act, subdivision (a), the provision is, gentlemen of the committee—

Provided, That the provisions of this subdivision shall not apply to any fraternal beneficiary society or order, or farmers' purely local cooperative company or association, or employees' relief associations operated on the lodge system or local cooperation plan, organized and conducted solely by the members thereof for the exclusive benefit of its members and not for profit.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. In a moment.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there for a moment?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Do I understand, then, that the employer pays the premium for the life insurance policy, the money of which goes to the family of the employee?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. LONERGAN. I will yield in a minute. Now, the point is, gentlemen, that to be sure this is a form of insurance that is issued for profit, but——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut has expired.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Connecticut may proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Rhode Island?

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent that he may proceed for 10 minutes. I want to ask him a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Connecticut may proceed for 10 minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LONERGAN. I thank the gentlemen. To be sure, this is a form of insurance that is issued for profit, but the premium is paid by the employer and the benefit is derived by the employee.

Now, I have no authority to use the name of the man with whom I talked a few days ago, but I want to say to you, gentlemen of this committee, that I talked with one of the ablest insurance men of this country, the president of one of the leading insurance companies of this country, located in my home city of Hartford, and that gentleman told me that this form of insurance is carried by the insurance companies at the closest margin of profit of any that is issued by the insurance companies. It is used, of course, not only for profit but as a means of advertising the business of the insurance companies, and is accepted by the employers who furnish other classes of insurance business which is profitable to the insurance companies that get their business. For patent reasons it is not so expensive as other forms of life insurance.

Now, I would like to read to the members of the committee a statement issued by Commissioner Mansfield, the insurance commissioner of Connecticut, in a speech made in July, 1912, to a convention of insurance commissioners assembled in Spokane, Wash., in which he said:

> Life insurance in groups is a progressive step. In consonance with acts regulating workmen's compensation in case of accident, sickness, and death, old-age pensions, and the like, all striving for the better protection of those who are employed in mechanical, business, or other pursuits. Any plan for its development can not be perfect at the start. Many obstructions, real or imaginary, may retard its progress; but they are only of temporary nature, and it seems to me that as public servants we should welcome such a measure and join with both employer and employed, with both the insurer and the insured in all reasonable efforts for its promotion.

Now, gentlemen of the committee, let me call your attention to the fact that there is no class of business in this country that will assume the liability as a consequence of this war that the life insurance companies of this country will assume. They carry millions upon millions of liability in the way of issued policies, noncontestable in character, and thousands upon thousands of the men who carry those insurance policies will be among the army of the conscripted, and they will be obliged to go to the front, and of course out of that number of thousands upon thousands will be young men who will not return to this country, because they will die in the trenches abroad, which, of course, we all deeply regret. Now, these life insurance companies should be given consideration. They are not asking for any favor. They are only asking for equitable treatment here.

I talked with one of the honorable gentlemen of the Committee on Ways and Means, and his argument to me was, "Why, we impose a tax of 5 cents upon a telegram which costs perhaps only 25 cents, and we impose a tax of 5 cents upon a telegram which perhaps costs $5. I maintain, gentlemen of the committee, that the cases are not parallel. The 5-cent tax made for the sending of a telegram is distributed among the millions and millions of people in this country who have occasion to send telegrams, and you know and I know that the average man seldom sends a telegram, that the average small retail merchant sends a telegram but occasionally, and the larger users of the telegraph companies of this country, who do send many telegrams, can well afford to pay. But in that case, gentlemen of the committee, the tax is distributed throughout the country, whereas in this case this tax, unfair and disproportionate, falls upon a comparatively few, who are already obliged to carry an unusually heavy burden under the provisions of this bill and who will carry that burden patriotically and without complaint.

Mr. NORTON and Mr. SWITZER rose.

Mr. LONERGAN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWITZER].

Mr. SWITZER. As I understand, the 8 cents on every hundred dollars on life insurance is only paid once, and that is when the policy is taken out?

Mr. LONERGAN. I understand this is a tax that is imposed every year.

Mr. SWITZER. I do not so understand it.

Mr. LONERGAN. That is my understanding.

Mr. SWITZER. I will ask the gentleman from Michigan, Is the 8 cents on the hundred dollars payable every year or only when the policy is issued?

Mr. FORDNEY. Only when it is issued.

Mr. SWITZER. That is the way I understood it, payable only when the policy is issued.

Mr. NORTON. I observe that the tax on marine, inland, and fire insurance and on casualty insurance is on the premium paid. May I ask the chairman of the committee why that tax on life insurance is on the amount of the policy, rather than on the insurance premium paid? Here is a tax levied on the amount of the policy in the case of life insurance, and in the case of casualty, marine, inland, and fire insurance levied on the premium.

Mr. KITCHIN. We followed the law of 1898 on that.

Mr. SWITZER. If the tax were levied on the premium paid, it would meet the objection that the gentleman from Connecticut made, which seems to be very meritorious.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The premiums on life insurance are paid every year, but on fire, marine, and inland insurance they are all paid at one time and do not have to be paid again, as far as any that I ever knew of.

Mr. NORTON. Oh, they are paid for three or four years, two years, or one year, and they are computed on yearly rates, and so are casualty and life insurance.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I do not understand the point of the gentleman's question.

Mr. TILSON. If my colleague will yield for a moment, I wish to ask about these group policies. If an employer takes out a group policy for 200 lives, we will say, and he pays this tax one time, does he have to pay it again, and does that continue indefinitely?

Mr. LONERGAN. Every year.

Mr. TILSON. He pays the premium every year, but do I understand it correctly that he takes out a policy for a group of 200 men, then next year takes out another policy for another group, or does he continue the first group indefinitely?

Mr. LONERGAN. If there are changes made in the group—if there are deaths, dismissals, or resignations—other names are substituted.

Mr. TILSON. And thus he must pay an additional tax.

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes. Now, gentlemen of the committee, I would call attention of the body to the report issued by the Ways and Means Committee. The last item of the estimate is insurance, $5,000,000. The honorable chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in conversation with me admitted that the tax proposed in this bill levied against the insurance companies will raise approximately $9,000,000. I maintain, gentlemen, because it is equitable and because it is just and because it is fair, that you ought to give favorable consideration to the amendment which I offer here to-day.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. I will.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I ask purely for information. The gentleman has referred to an increased risk assumed by the companies during the war. Is it or not the fact that premiums have been advanced on the policies of men who have volunteered?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes; on insurance issued from now on, but what about the hundreds of millions of outstanding liabilities on the part of these companies on policies that have been issued for a great many years and which are noncontestable? I hope, gentlemen, that you will give serious and favorable consideration to the amendment I have offered.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have five minutes more time, because I think we ought to have a very clear understanding of this proposition. I want to get it before the committee, because I want to vote for it if it is a just amendment. I want to know whether the employer or the employee gets the benefit of this policy of insurance; does it go to the family of the employee?

Mr. LONERGAN. It does.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Rhode Island asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Connecticut may have five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Connecticut has been speaking 20 minutes, or 10 minutes over his time, and I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes, and I want 5.

Mr. FORDNEY. I want about three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 15 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. LONERGAN. I will.

Mr. KITCHIN. Is not four-fifths of this group insurance issued for the protection of the employer against death of employees in his mill or factory from alleged negligence?

Mr. LONERGAN. No, sir.

Mr. KITCHIN. None of it?

Mr. LONERGAN. I know of nothing of the kind. We have a workman's compensation law in Connecticut, and there is one in many States.

Mr. KITCHIN. Who pays the premium?

Mr. LONERGAN. The employer.

Mr. KITCHIN. And it is not charged to the employee?

Mr. LONERGAN. No, sir; it goes to overhead expenses.

Mr. FORDNEY. Who pays the premium of the employer's liability?

Mr. KITCHIN. I think four-fifths of this insurance is to indemnify the company against the risk of killing men by negligence.

Mr. LONERGAN. This is the first time I ever heard that point advanced.

Mr. IGOE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. IGOE. Does not the gentleman from North Carolina refer to casualty insurance instead of life insurance?

Mr. LONERGAN. I think he must. I want, before I forget it, to say that the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON] interrogated the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] and asked the question why the tax was not imposed upon life insurance the same as upon fire insurance, and the gentleman from North Carolina said that they copied the law in operation in 1898. I want to say that this form of insurance had its inception about the year 1911 and 1912, or thereabouts, and of course it could not have been incorporated in the law of 1898.

Mr. KITCHIN. Has the gentleman a copy of one of the policies?

Mr. LONERGAN. I have not, but I can procure one.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. As I understand, the objection of the gentleman from North Dakota was a different one from that stated by the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. JAMES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. JAMES. Life insurance is issued for 10 or 20 years or for life, and group insurance is issued yearly and paid by the employer yearly, so there would be that tax yearly instead of once in 20 years or the lifetime.

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Will the gentleman yield for one more question?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Does this insurance tend to make the employee more efficient and to make him more contented with his work?

Mr. LONERGAN. That is one of the purposes of it.

The point I want to make is that if the bill stands as proposed there will be a tax of 10 per cent levied against this form of insurance, as against 2⅞ per cent levied against insurance that most of us carry on an ordinary policy.

Mr. PLATT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. PLATT. Does not the gentleman think that there may be a discrimination between term insurance and life insurance. Some are insured for 10 years, and the group insurance is term insurance.

Mr. LONERGAN. The advantage would be on the other side. If you get life insurance for one year, you pay a higher rate than if you get it for a number of years.

Mr. PLATT. I think there ought to be a difference between life insurance, term insurance, and group insurance. It would be more equitable.

Mr. AYRES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes.

Mr. AYRES. Is it not a fact that the insurance is paid to the employee only when the employer is liable for the death of the employee?

Mr. LONERGAN. No; if the man dies from any cause, natural or otherwise, the dependents of the employee are paid the money. Take the case of the Underwood Typewriter Co., with 4,000 employees. It stands to reason that the employees are shifting, on account of death, resignation, and dismissal, and when one place is vacant and taken by another man the insurance company is notified that William Smith takes the place of John Jones.

Mr. TILSON. And the company has to pay the premium annually?

Mr. LONERGAN. Yes. [Applause.]

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, you get right back to the fact again that nobody wants to be taxed. Here is a gentleman complaining because we are going to put a tax of 8 cents a hundred dollars on life insurance placed on him or his neighbor. Oh, how burdensome; how cruel it is for Congress to put 8 cents on each and every $100 insurance on a man's life! The gentleman does not offer anything as a substitute from which we can collect this money. Why not throw out everything in the bill and raise $2,000,000,000? How——

Mr. LONERGAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. LONERGAN. Can the gentleman tell how much money would be derived from the tax as proposed on group insurance alone?

Mr. FORDNEY. No; and I do not care.

Mr. LONERGAN. It amounts to very little.

Mr. FORDNEY. It is figured out by the experts, but even if it is a small amount, there is less occasion for the gentleman's complaining about this small tax.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. Can not the gentleman see any distinction between paying once on a life insurance policy and paying on one as a group policy when that group is continually changing?

Mr. FORDNEY. There is some difference, but a great number of men here yesterday voted to put three taxes on a corporation, and then they get up here and complain about 8 cents a hundred on life insurance policies. Offer something in lieu of those things you would like to strike out and find out where you are going to land in getting the $2,000,000,000 to carry on this war.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Michigan takes out a policy of life insurance to protect himself, the company only pays the tax once; but if Mr. FORDNEY, the employer takes out insurance to protect his employees in case of death, then they would pay 20 times.

Mr. FORDNEY. Let me ask the gentleman, where does liability insurance rest? Who pays it? Does the employee?

Mr. JAMES. But the company would pay 20 times instead of once.

Mr. FORDNEY. It does not make any difference whether the company pays it or not.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. LONERGAN. Does the gentleman maintain that this is liability insurance—group insurance?

Mr. FORDNEY. There are many kinds of insurance. I have not the time to discuss all of them now, but I know this, that 8 cents a hundred on life insurance is not going to hurt anybody, and I know that 1 cent or a dollar on a hundred of fire insurance is not going to hurt anyone. You get up here and complain about items in this bill, but you offer nothing as a substitute. If we were to strike out everything that everyone on the floor of the House wants out, you would have nothing in your bill at all on which to put a tax except—oh, well, you know what. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONERGAN. I want to ask the gentleman whether this is not life insurance instead of liability insurance?

Mr. FORDNEY. Life insurance is life insurance and liability insurance is another kind of insurance, whether it is life or accident or what.

Mr. LONERGAN. This is life, is it not?

Mr. FORDNEY. You are not talking about life alone, but you are taking in the whole thing.

Mr. LONERGAN. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. FORDNEY. I so understood the gentleman, but it does not make any difference whether it is life insurance or not. You do not want anybody to be taxed, do you, and yet you want to raise $2,000,000,000, do you? Shame on the men who will come up with such little petty propositions as that!

Mr. LONERGAN. I have voted persistently and consistently with this committee.

Mr. FORDNEY. And I hope the gentleman will continue to do so. You are a good fellow, but heavens above, who is there here who does not want to tax somebody else besides himself?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, there is a great deal in what the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN] said, and I sympathize to some extent with the argument he advances, but I do not think it is quite strong enough to justify us in relieving these insurance companies, if they are engaged in the business for profit. He says some of these insurance companies are not in it for profit, that they constitute a local organization—mutual companies. Such companies will be exempted anyway under this provision.

The committee will offer an amendment exempting all insurance companies of every kind—fire, life, all kinds—that are now exempted in the income-tax law. These will be exempted as in the income-tax law. The income-tax exemption provision reads as follows:

Farmers' or other mutual hail, cyclone, or fire insurance company, mutual ditch or irrigation company, mutual or cooperative telephone company, or like organization of a purely local character, the income of which consists solely of assessments, dues, and fees collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting its expenses.

Mr. TILSON. Will not the gentleman distinguish between a straight life policy which is taken out once on a man's life and runs the rest of his life and this group insurance, which is not in a strict sense life insurance? It is taken out for a group of men in a company's employ, which changes from year to year. If a man comes in and takes the place of a man who has been discharged or who has voluntarily left, the employer must pay on that policy when he comes in. The fact is the group is constantly changing from year to year. Is it not different, and should it not be put upon a different basis from a straight life policy, which is issued but once, taxed but once, and then runs for a lifetime?

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not know. The same thing occurs in straight life policies. People are dropping out every three or four months, or they only stay in that long, and others come in. Then take this little weekly industrial insurance. They drop out, thousands and thousands of them, and, as some gentleman here suggests, they are only insured for a year at a time.

Mr. TILSON. This runs only for a short period, and it is more like paying the premium on a fire insurance policy.

Mr. KITCHIN. I see the gentleman's argument.

Mr. JAMES. Why not put it in class C and tax it according to the premium—1 per cent?

Mr. KITCHIN. It is a very small tax. It is not going to hurt anyone. It does not come out of the employee at all. It is for the benefit of the employer who pays it as well as for the employee.

Mr. GORDON. It is for his indemnity, is it not?

Mr. KITCHIN. In four-fifths of the cases I would say so.

Mr. LONERGAN. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. The first paragraph of section 505 has this as the concluding statement:

And paid the following taxes on the issuance of insurance policies.

Now, this form of insurance is issued yearly, is it not?

Mr. KITCHIN. I understand yes.

Mr. LONERGAN. The ordinary insurance is issued but once upon the life of the person?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; upon the life.

Mr. LONERGAN. Does the gentleman know what the average premium rate is on group insurance as compared with ordinary insurance?

Mr. KITCHIN. I would say it is about 50 per cent.

Mr. LONERGAN. I will say to the gentleman that the maximum rate of group insurance is $8 per thousand and on ordinary insurance it is $30 per thousand, and when those policies average $1,000, which we tax at the rate of 8 per cent per hundred, the insurance issued then——

Mr. KITCHIN. I think this is a fair tax.

Mr. LONERGAN. The proposition is to enact an equitable and proportionate measure.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut.

The question was taken, and the chairman announced the noes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. LONERGAN) there were—ayes 20, noes 72.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

(c) Casualty insurance: A tax equivalent to 1 cent on each dollar, or fractional part thereof, of the premium charged under each policy of insurance or obligation of the nature of indemnity for loss, damage, or liability, issued or executed or renewed by any person, corporation, partnership, or association transacting the business of employer's liability, plate glass, steam boiler, burglary, elevator, automatic sprinkler, automobile, or other branch of insurance (except life, personal accident, and health insurance, and insurance described and taxed or exempted in the preceding paragraph, and excepting also workmen's compensation insurance carried on by the members thereof solely for their own protection and not for profit): Provided, That policies of reinsurance shall be exempt from the tax herein imposed by this subdivision.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to strike out that section and insert the following. I will say the change made in striking out the provision is that instead of having amendments to each one of the subdivisions striking out certain provisos in certain lines making certain exceptions we have put the exemptions in one separate paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from North Carolina means to ask unanimous consent, because we have already adopted this paragraph?

Mr. KITCHIN. I do ask unanimous consent to offer this amendment now.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to return to the paragraph just passed for the purpose of offering the amendment at the desk as a substitute therefor. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On pages 23 to 25, strike out section 505 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 505. That from and after the 1st day of June, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid the following taxes on the issuance of insurance policies:

"(a) Life insurance: A tax equivalent to 8 cents on each $100 or fractional part thereof of the amount for which any life is insured under any policy of insurance, or other instrument, by whatever name the same is called: Provided, That on all policies for life insurance only by which a life is insured not in excess of $500, issued on the industrial or weekly-payment plan of insurance, the tax shall be 40 per cent of the amount of the first weekly premium: Provided further, That policies of reinsurance shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this subdivision.

"(b) Marine, inland, and fire insurance: A tax equivalent to 1 cent on each dollar or fractional part thereof of the premium charged under each policy of insurance or other instrument by whatever name the same is called whereby insurance is made or renewed upon property of any description (including rents or profits), whether against peril by sea or inland waters, or by fire or lightning, or other peril: Provided, That policies of reinsurance shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this subdivision.

"(c) Casualty insurance: A tax equivalent to 1 cent on each dollar or fractional part thereof of the premium charged under each policy of insurance or obligation of the nature of indemnity for loss, damage, or liability (except bonds taxable under subdivision 2 of schedule A of Title VIII) issued or executed or renewed by any person, corporation, partnership, or association, transacting the business of employer's liability, workmen's compensation, accident, health, tornado, plate glass, steam boiler, elevator, burglary, automatic sprinkler, automobile, or other branch of insurance (except life insurance, and insurance described and taxed in the preceding subdivision): Provided, That policies of reinsurance shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this subdivision.

"(d) Policies issued by any person, corporation, partnership, or association, whose income is exempt from taxation under Title I of the act entitled 'An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes,' approved September 8, 1916, shall be exempt from the taxes imposed by this section."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I wish the chairman would explain the changes the committee amendment proposes from that carried in the bill. I notice from the reading of the amendment that industrial life insurance——

Mr. KITCHIN. That was omitted.

Mr. STAFFORD (continuing). Is on a different basis of taxation than it was as carried in this bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. It was omitted in this bill, if the gentleman will notice. I do not know why it should——

Mr. STAFFORD. It was not omitted; but the exception was not made, I suppose the gentleman means. Class A would apply to industrial life insurance, and the gentleman had made no exception, as suggested in the proposed amendment.

Mr. KITCHIN. The amendment is—

Provided, That on all policies, for life insurance only, by which a life is insured not in excess of $500, issued on the industrial or weekly payment plan of insurance, the tax shall be 40 per cent of the amount of the first weekly premium.

Mr. STAFFORD. This is a new provision covered by this amendment——

Mr. KITCHIN. It is the same provision that was in the act of 1898, except that on the policies over $500 the tax will be 8 cents on each $100, like regular life insurance.

Mr. STAFFORD. I suppose that many of these industrial life insurance policies lapse within a month or two after issuance?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. STAFFORD. There are some other changes?

Mr. KITCHIN. The other changes are to make the exceptions uniform and definite and to make the exceptions apply to all companies that were excepted by the income-tax law. We say:

Policies issued by any person, corporation, partnership, or association, whose income is exempt from taxation under title 1 of the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, shall be exempt from the taxes imposed by this section.

Mr. STAFFORD. I notice in the reading of the amendment there is a change in the phraseology by incorporating some exceptions in the "c" subdivision, so far as bonds are concerned, which is not included in the bill as presented by the committee.

Mr. KITCHIN (reading)—

Except bonds taxable under subdivision 2 of schedule A of Title VIII,

Mr. STAFFORD. That is to conform to existing law.

Mr. KITCHIN. So there would not be a double tax on those bonds.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will.

Mr. WALSH. Do these exemptions which have just been read following each subdivision take care of the farmers' local co-operative companies?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; that takes care of them.

Mr. WALSH. So they will not be subject to any of this tremendous burden?

Mr. KITCHIN. No insurance company—fire, life, or any other—which is exempt from paying an income tax will have to pay the taxes imposed by this section.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. FOSTER). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina by way of a substitute.

The question was taken, and the substitute was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 506. That every person, corporation, partnership, or association, receiving any payment for advertising or advertising space upon which a tax is imposed by section 504, or issuing policies of insurance upon the issuance of which a tax is imposed by section 505, shall, within the first 15 days of each month, make a return under oath, in duplicate, and pay such tax to the collector of internal revenue of the district in which the principal office or place of business of such person, corporation, partnership, or association is located. Such returns shall contain such information and be made in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may by regulation prescribe.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer a new title unless the gentleman does not propose to go on to-night.

Mr. KITCHIN. We wanted to finish the reading of that section in order that we could get onto the war tax on manufactures on Monday.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. May I reserve the right to offer a new title to this on Monday?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. FOSTER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 4280 and had come to no resolution thereon.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE COMSTOCK.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sorrow that I announce to the House the death in this city this morning of my colleague and friend, Judge DANIEL W. COMSTOCK, a Member of this House. At a later time I will ask that a day be selected when the Members will be given opportunity to pay appropriate tribute to his life, character, and public services. At this time I desire to present the following resolutions.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolutions.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 83.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. DANIEL W. COMSTOCK, a Representative from the State of Indiana.

Resolved, That a committee of 16 Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolutions.

The question was taken, and the resolutions were unanimously agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed the following committee in accordance with the foregoing resolutions:

Mr. DIXON, Mr. COX, Mr. BARNHART, Mr. DENMAN, Mr. BLAND, Mr. SANDERS of Indiana, Mr. MOORES of Indiana, Mr. VESTAL, Mr. PURNELL, Mr. WOOD of Indiana, Mr. KRAUS, Mr. FAIRFIELD, Mr. TIMBERLAKE, Mr. PARK, Mr. HEINTZ, and Mr. DEWALT.

HOUR OF MEETING MONDAY.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. on Monday next. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

REGISTRATION FOR SELECTIVE DRAFT, ETC.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the concurrent resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 9.

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the United States (the Senate concurring), That there be printed as a House document 1,250,000 copies, in one document, of the act to increase temporarily the Military Establishment, approved May 18, 1917; registration regulations prescribed by the President under authority of said act, approved May 18, 1917; and the proclamation of the President of same date fixing June 5, 1917, as the date of registration, 875,000 for the use of the House and 375,000 for the use of the Senate, the same to be distributed through the folding room of the House and Senate, respectively.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. BARNHART, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE COMSTOCK.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the other resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect, this House do now adjourn.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to; accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 56 minutes p. m.) the House, under its previous order, adjourned until 11 o'clock a. m., Monday, May 21, 1917.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Acting Secretary of War transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on reexamination of Pearl River below Rockport, Miss. (H. Doc. No. 145), was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. PARK, from the Committee on Accounts, to which was referred the resolution (H. Res. 45) authorizing clerks and assistant clerks to certain committees of the House, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 56), which said resolution and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the resolution (H. Res. 44) authorizing clerks to certain committees of the House, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 57), which said resolution and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. SCOTT of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 4604) providing for the waiver of pay and compensation by persons entering the military service of the United States; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FRENCH: A bill (H. R. 4605) providing for handling as official business mail matter relating to naturalization; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. OSBORNE (by request): A bill (H. R. 4606) to obtain a national anthem by means of competition of composers and subsequent vote of the people; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. MILLER of Minnesota: A bill (H. R. 4607) authorizing the President to commission as second lieutenants in the Regular Army and in the Officers' Reserve Corps qualified persons who have attained the age of 20 years; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4608) to amend the second paragraph of section 2 of an act to reorganize and to increase the efficiency of the Artillery of the United States Army, approved January 25, 1907; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: Memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, favoring amendment to the laws relating to performance of manual labor on mining claims in Alaska, so as to allow claim owners to pay certain sums of money in lieu of work; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BRITTEN: A bill (H. R. 4609) granting a pension to Minnie Baker; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BRODBECK: A bill (H. R. 4610) to compensate Thomas G. Allen for injuries received while employed in the General Land Office of the United States, and making an appropriation therefor; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 4611) to reinstate Henry Read Leonard, jr., as an ensign in United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HAYDEN: A bill (H. R. 4612) granting a pension to John J. Collins; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WHEELER: A bill (H. R. 4613) to promote on the retired list of the United States Army Brig. Gen. David S. Gordon, United States Army, retired; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of Federation of Catholic Societies and Parishes of St. Clair County, Ill., relative to Irish freedom; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also (by request), memorial of Washington Central Labor Union, against increase in postage on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), memorial of Luxemburger Brotherhood of America, pledging loyalty and support to the President and Government; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BRODBECK: Papers filed in support of House bill 4610, to compensate Thomas G. Allen for injuries, etc.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CARY: A brief to the Finance Committee of the Senate on behalf of Pathe Exchange (Inc.), respectfully suggesting that proposed method of taxation will ruin industry while Canadian system, one tax on entire industry at box office, will yield a larger revenue than now demanded, enable the industry to meet future levies, and yet not halt the growth of the industry, which promises to soon monopolize all markets of the world, 90 per cent of industry favor Canadian system, and Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America submitting brief urging it; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: Memorial of Missionary Society of West Side Presbyterian Church, Beloit, Wis., asking prohibition in Porto Rico; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. DALE of New York: Petition of Washburn Realty Co., of Boston, Mass., against 1-cent tax on 5-cent theaters; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and sundry publishing companies against increase in postage rates on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FOSS: Petition of sundry citizens of Chicago, Ill., opposing prohibition as war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FULLER of Illinois: Petition of Local Union No. 1624, United Mine Workers of America, of Seneca, Ill., asking legislation to reduce the high cost of living; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Charles W. Helmig, of Peru, Ill., praying that municipally owned water and light companies be exempt from Federal taxation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the Priscilla Publishing Co. and Streator (Ill.) Brick Co., opposing increase of letter postage and zone system; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of Streator Post No. 68, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Illinois, favoring vigorous prosecution of the war and the Roosevelt volunteers for service in France; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: Memorial of New York Association for the Protection of Game, relative to protection of migratory birds; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GRIEST: Petition of E. W. Coble, of Lancaster, Pa., and Grit Publishing Co., of Williamsport, Pa., protesting against increase in second-class postage rates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of A. H. Armstrong Advertising Co., of Harrisburg, Pa., protesting against 5 per cent gross tax on street car advertising; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Petitions of Brooklyn Sunday School Union and Swedish Mission Young People's Covenant, of Cook County, Ill., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Patent Cereals Co., of Geneva, N. Y., against prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of National Special Aid Society of New York City, favoring increasing Aviation Corps in the Navy and Naval Militia; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of Washburn Realty Co., of Boston, Mass., against tax of 1 cent on 5-cent theaters; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of L. Schepp Co., of New York, and Joseph Wild & Co., of New York, against 10 per cent duty on goods on free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry publishing companies, against increase in postage rates on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of New York, relative to amendment to the revenue bill affecting the jewelry interests; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOWARD: Petition of Foote & Davies Co., of Atlanta, Ga., against tax on newspaper advertising; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of J. W. English, of Atlanta, Ga., against special tax on automobile manufacturers; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HULBERT: Petition of hull division, navy yard, New York, relative to more pay for clerical force of at navy yards; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. LINTHICUM: Petitions of C. Read & Co. and others, of Baltimore, Md., against any increase in letter postage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry publishing companies of Maryland, against increase in postage on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., favoring passage of the daylight-saving bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Branch No. 73, Glass Bottle Blowers' Association, of Bellaire, Ohio, against increased rates on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Washburn Realty Co., of Boston, Mass., against 1-cent tax on 5-cent theaters; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of William H. Brown & Bro. Co., of Baltimore, Md., against increased tax on alcohol; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LONERGAN: Memorial of Convocation of New Haven County, Conn., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MORIN: Petition of the Federated Temperance Committee of Allegheny County, B. L. Scott, secretary, requesting the Government of the United States to prohibit both the sale and manufacture of liquor during the period of the war; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MOTT: Memorial of New York Association for Protection of Game, favoring the passage of the migratory-bird act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of Poster Advertising Industry of the United States, relative to the war-revenue cost; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of employees of the Dodge Street Pulley Corporation, of Oneida, N. Y., favoring prohibition as war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RAKER: Petition of F. B. Ackerman, of Yreka, Cal., relative to tax on patents, perfumes, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Mayer & Talbott Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., indorsing bill providing for revision of our postal rates; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of William E. Bonton, of San Francisco, Cal., asking exemption from stamp provision of building and loan associations; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RAMSEYER: Petition of Local Union 1799, United Mine Workers of America, favoring control of foodstuff, etc., by United States Government; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. RANDALL: Petition of 121 citizens of Los Angeles County, Cal., favoring prohibition as war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROWE: Petitions of sundry publishing companies of New York, against increase in postage on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of M. Rusling Wood, of New York City, against 5 per cent tax on advertising; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of Farmers' Feed Co., of New York; Penn Grain & Feed Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.; and Milwaukee (Wis.) Grain & Feed Co., against prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petitions of A. Dougherty and Russell Playing Card Co., of New York, relative to tax on playing cards; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

MONDAY, May 21, 1917.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we thank Thee for a faith that is clear, strong, and all-conquering, our faith in God. In the midst of times that test, that put us to the utmost trial, times that are dark and uncertain, times that are wringing the hearts of mothers, times that try the courage of our boys, amid the darkening cloud along the pathway of our national life, we bless Thee for the supremacy and power of our faith in God. Grant that our hearts may be true to Thee, that there shall be no forgetfulness of God on the part of any of the leaders of this people. May we not by any personal sin add to the weight of anxiety and care which rests upon any home, but with our hearts cleansed from sin and true lives, under the guidance of God may we go forward to accomplish Thy great purpose in this time of trial. To this end do Thou lead us in the discharge of the duties of this day. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of the legislative day of Thursday, May 17, 1917, when, on request of Mr. SMOOT and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

PRESENTATION OF FLAG.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The flag which is just back of the chair of the Vice President has been presented to the Senate of the United States in a letter which the Secretary will read.

The Secretary read as follows:

To the President, the Hon. WOODROW WILSON,
The White House, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I am taking the liberty of expressing a flag made throughout by my own hands, which I would like to have presented through you to the Senate.

With my kindest wishes, I beg to remain,
Sincerely, yours,

Mrs. J. M. TARELLE,
Savannah, Ga.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 9) providing for the printing as a House document of 1,250,000 copies, in one document, of the act to increase temporarily the Military Establishment, approved May 18, 1917, etc., in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 3330) to temporarily increase the commissioned and warrant and enlisted strength of the Navy and Marine Corps, and for other purposes, and it was thereupon signed by the Vice President.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which will be incorporated in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Territories.

The concurrent resolution is as follows:

THE NINTH LEGISLATURE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 26, 1917.

The honorable the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE
OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: In conformity with the terms thereof, I have the honor to transmit herewith senate concurrent resolution No. 9, introduced in the Senate of the Ninth Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii by the Hon. Robert W. Shingle, senator from the third senatorial district, which was unanimously adopted by the senate and concurred in by the house of representatives.

Most respectfully, yours,
O. P. SOARES,
Clerk of the Senate.

Concurrent resolution 9.

Whereas the several political parties of the Territory of Hawaii have pledged themselves to support a change in the organic act to the end that the female citizens of the Territory shall be empowered to vote at elections held under the laws of the Territory of Hawaii; and

Whereas the Hon. J. K. KALANIANAOLE, Delegate from Hawaii, has introduced in the House of Representatives of the United States of America a bill granting the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii the power to submit to the voters of the Territory of Hawaii the question of whether or not the female citizens of the Territory shall be empowered to vote at elections held under the laws of the Territory of Hawaii: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested and respectfully petitioned to pass the bill introduced by the Hon. J. K. KALANIANAOLE, Delegate from Hawaii, on the 22d day of December, 1916, granting to the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii additional powers relative to elections and qualifications of electors; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

—

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 2, 1917.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was this day adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii.

CHAS. F. CHILLINGWORTH,
President of the Senate.
O. P. SOARES,
Clerk of the Senate.

—

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 11, 1917.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was this day adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which will be incorporated in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Territories.

The concurrent resolution is as follows:

THE NINTH LEGISLATURE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 26, 1917.

The honorable the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE
OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: In conformity with the terms thereof, I have the honor to transmit herewith senate concurrent resolution No. 8, introduced in the Senate of the Ninth Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii by the Hon. Robert W. Shingle, senator from the third senatorial district, which was unanimously adopted by the senate and concurred in by the house of representatives.

Most respectfully, yours,
O. P. SOARES,
Clerk of the Senate.

Concurrent resolution 8.

Whereas the people of the Territory of Hawaii had, previous to the annexation of the islands to the United States, maintained and upheld an independent government, the principles of which were based upon and in accord with the Constitution of the United States, and had thereby demonstrated not only their capacity for self-government, belief in, understanding of, and attachment to the principles which should govern a free people; and

Whereas the voters of the Territory of Hawaii have naturally ample knowledge of the qualities, abilities, and attributes which should be required of a person called upon to act as their chief executive, and have intelligence sufficient to guide them in the making of such a choice and would be better satisfied with a chief executive chosen by themselves: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1917 (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested and respectfully petitioned to pass the bill introduced by the Hon. J. K. KALANIANAOLE, Delegate from Hawaii, on the 18th day of December, 1916, to provide for the election of the governor and secretary of the Territory of Hawaii; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

—

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 2, 1917.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was this day adopted in the Senate of Territory of Hawaii.

CHAS. F. CHILLINGWORTH,
President of the Senate.
O. P. SOARES,
Clerk of the Senate.

—

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 3, 1917.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was this day adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a joint memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, which will be incorporated in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The joint memorial is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY FOR THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA,
Juneau, Alaska, May 9, 1917.

The Hon. PRESIDENT,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

SIR: By direction of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, the session of which has just been completed, I am sending you herewith a certified copy of Senate joint memorial No. 16.

Yours, very truly,

CHARLES E. DAVIDSON,
Secretary of Alaska.

Senate joint memorial 16. (By Senator Sundback.)

To the President of the United States, the United States Senate, and the United States House of Representatives:

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the Territory of Alaska most respectfully represent that—

Whereas the construction of wagon roads and trails is vitally essential to the development of Alaska; and

Whereas this has been recognized both by Congress and the Territorial Legislature in large appropriations made for road purposes in order that rich mineral districts in all parts of Alaska be afforded a base of supplies, without which their development is retarded and often prevented; and

Whereas the laws of the United States require the owners of mining claims in Alaska, as well as elsewhere, to perform at least $100 worth of labor or improvements during each calendar year on each mining claim; and

Whereas it is a well and long-established fact that a very large proportion of the labor and improvements performed to hold mining claims is absolutely wasted and thrown away; and

Whereas in a multitude of instances mining claims are so distant from the base of supplies that the cost of travel and transportation for the purpose of performing annual labor far exceeds the su mof $100: Now, therefore,

We, your memorialists, the legislature of the Territory, most respectfully urge that the laws of Congress relating to the performance of annual labor on mining claims in Alaska be so amended as to permit the owner of such claim, at his option, to pay in lieu of the work required by law, the sum of $100 into the road fund of the divisional road commission in which such claim is located; said money so paid to be expended as far as practicable on roads in the vicinity of the claim.

Passed the senate May 3, 1917.

O. P. HUBBARD,
President of the Senate.

Attest:

W. M. EDDY,
Secretary of the Senate.

Passed the house May 3, 1917.

LUTHER C. HESS,
Speaker of the House.

Attest:

A. H. ZIEGLER,
Chief Clerk of the House.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Territory of Alaska, ss.:

I, Charles E. Davidson, Secretary of Alaska, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true, and correct copy of Senate joint memorial No. 16 of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, passed at the 3d session thereof.

Witness my hand and the seal of the Territory of Alaska, affixed at Juneau, the capital, this ninth day of May A. D., 1917.

[SEAL.] CHARLES E. DAVIDSON,
Secretary of Alaska.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a telegram from the international executive board, United Mine Workers of America, of Indianapolis, Ind., which will be incorporated in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The telegram is as follows:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 18, 1917.

Hon. THOMAS R. MARSHALL,
Vice President of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

The international executive board, United Mine Workers of America, representing 500,000 miner workers, directs the undersigned to protest against the increase upon second-class postage from 1 to 6 cents per pound, as proposed in the pending war-revenue bill. Such an increase in second-class postage is confiscatory. We could not publish the official magazine of our union and pay this increase in second-class postage. Our official publication, as well as many other labor-organization magazines, must cease publication under such unreasonable increase in second-class postage rates. This would strike at a free press, because only magazines and newspapers whose income would justify could pay this proposed increase. Also we appeal to you to actively and vigorously oppose this proposed increase.

JOHN F. WHITE, President.
FRANK J. HAYES, Vice President.
WM. GREEN, Secretary and Treasurer.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a petition of the Luxemburger Brotherhood of America in annual convention at Chicago, Ill., pledging support to the President, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Friends of Irish Freedom, of Youngstown, Ohio, praying for the freedom of Ireland, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the Wisconsin State Council of Defense, praying for Federal control of explosives, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a telegram in the nature of a petition from the West Side Business Men's and Taxpayers' Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit speculation in food products, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. POMERENE. I present a resolution in the nature of a petition from the Pennsylvania Conference of the Primitive Methodist Church in America, sent to me by Rev. W. C. Hall, president of the conference. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The Pennsylvania Conference of Primitive Methodist Churches in the United States of America, convening in Youngstown, Ohio, this 2d day of May, 1917, unanimously adopts the following resolutions:

"Whereas after two and one-half years of unparalleled patience and long suffering, under divine Providence the President and Congress of these United States, expressing the will of the people, have been led to declare a war existing between these United States and Germany; and

"Whereas the moment calls for the dedication of the life of the Nation to the task of safeguarding the sacred rights of liberty and humanity; and

"Whereas the supreme call of the hour is for that poise of mind, that sanity of spirit, that charity of judgment that will unite all elements and solidify citizenship and best help to preserve those principles that gave to our country her birth, her happiness, and peace, which she has long treasured; and

"Whereas our Nation enters the great war with open eyes, knowing and counting the cost, with no illusion of glory and no dream of conquest, but because the issue has been drawn between autocracy and the democracy for which we stand and because of the necessity for sharing with democratic peoples of the world in the endeavor to save for our children the heritage won by our fathers: Be it therefore

"Resolved, That we heartily indorse the action of our most illustrious President, Woodrow Wilson, and the Congress of these United States as the action of those who have at heart the safeguarding of the sacred principles of democracy, viz, liberty, equality, freedom of the seas, justice, intelligence, and integrity. And be it further

"Resolved, That we assure the President of our loyalty as individuals and also as a collective body. We feel that this is the solemn hour of the Nation's history; and since the President, in language worthy of the man, the hour, and the country, has challenged us to our task, we pledge ourselves to heartiest cooperation, assuring the President of our whole-hearted devoutness to the great task of establishing the principles of liberty and democracy. And be it further

"Resolved, That we assure our President of our sympathy and our prayers for his well-being and strength in this hour of trial. We have recognized in him a man of indomitable zeal, whose unexampled labors have been expended for the glory of God and the blessing of the Nation, and with his hand directing the affairs of the hour we feel assured of the glorious victory of the Government 'for the people, by the people, and of the people.' And be it finally

"Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the President of these United States, the senior Senators of the States of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and the governors of the States of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and that a copy be also printed in the Conference Yearbook."

WILLIAM CHARLES HALL,
President of the Conference.
WESLEY BOYD,
Secretary for Foreign Missions.

Attest:

N. WHITE,
Secretary of the Conference.

Amendment: Resolved, That we also express ourselves as unanimously in favor of national prohibition as absolutely essential to the life of the Nation.

Mr. POMERENE. I present a preamble and resolution in the nature of a petition passed by the City Council of the City of Cleveland, Ohio, relating to the subject of the income tax, which I move be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FLETCHER. I present a resolution adopted by the Board of Trade of Tampa, Fla., which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, as follows:

Resolution adopted by Board of Trade of Tampa, Fla.

Whereas there are pending before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce certain bills intended to regulate the matter of car service, including exchange, interchange, and return of cars used in the transportation of property by common carriers; and

Whereas that known as the Esch bill (H. R. 328, 65th Cong., 1st sess.), entitled "A bill to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' as amended, in respect of car service, and for other purposes," already passed the House, having the indorsement of the individual members of the Interstate Commerce Commission as embodying their official recommendations to the Congress in their thirtieth annual report, would seem fully to cover the requirements from shippers' standpoint; and

Whereas shippers of this State are vitally interested in effectual control of car supply: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Tampa Board of Trade in regular meeting assembled, That we indorse the said Esch bill (H. R. 328) and respectfully call upon our Senators, Hons. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER and PARK TRAMMELL, to use their influence in having the said bill promptly reported favorably by the committee, and thereafter to work for its enactment into law; and be it further

Resolved, That this action be communicated to the said Hons. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER and PARK TRAMMELL by telegram and confirmed by a formal copy of this resolution under seal of this organization.

Passed this the 16th day of May, 1917.

W. G. BROREIN, President.

Attest:
[SEAL.] L. P. DICKIE, Secretary.

Mr. BRADY. I present a telegram from the pastor and congregation of First Congregational Church, at Mountain Home, Idaho, praying for the passage of a prohibitory law to have effect during the war. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD without reading.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MOUNTAIN HOME, IDAHO, May 13, 1917.

Senator JAMES H. BRADY,
Washington, D. C.:

Please convey to President Wilson and to Congress the fact that by unanimous vote the congregation of the First Congregational Church here took action urging national prohibition as a war measure, in the interest of food conservation, increased production, and general efficieny at home and in the field.

CHAS. E. MASON, Pastor.

Mr. BRADY. I also present resolutions adopted by the Burke Miners' Union, No. 10, of Burke, Idaho, relative to taxation. I ask that they may be read at the desk.

There being no objection, the resolutions were read, as follows:

Whereas the United States is at war with Germany; and
Whereas immense war appropriations must be made immediately to supply the Government with funds necessary to carry on the war; and
Whereas it is of paramount importance in this crisis that the financial burden of the war should be distributed among the citizens of the United States in accordance with their ability to bear it; and
Whereas in the interest of national unity and a spirit of harmonious cooperation between all classes it is necessary that every citizen should know that the cost of the war will be paid promptly and not remain as a future burden upon those who have fought and their children: Therefore be it

Resolved, That all bonds, certificates, of indebtedness, and other obligations issued by the Government for war purposes shall be paid by a tax levied on all net incomes in excess of $2,000 for unmarried persons and in excess of $3,000 for all married persons, beginning at 2 per cent, and increasing on a sliding scale to a point which will permit of no individual retaining an annual net income in excess of $100,000, such war tax to continue until said bonds, certificates of indebtedness, and other obligations issued for war purposes are paid; and be it further

Resolved, That all war supplies or war service, including transportation, shall be furnished to the Government at a reasonable profit, to be fixed by Congress; that Congress shall enact legislation preventing the sale of necessaries of life during the war at excessive profits; and that intentional failure to supply the Government with correct figures as to income or as to profits on such sales and service and that furnishing the Government with defective war supplies shall be a felony, punishable by imprisonment.

Adopted by Burke Miners' Union, No. 10, I. U. of M. M. and S. W., this 4th day of May, 1917.

PHILIP RYAN, President.
[SEAL.] M. P. VILLENEUVE, Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. KENYON. In the nature of a petition I ask to have read a letter, as it is so unusual, in relation to taxes.

There being no objection, the letter was read, as follows:

FARMERS' SAVINGS BANK,
Ruthven, Iowa, May 15, 1917.

Senator W. S. KENYON,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Whenever we find anything to kick about in regard to the national legislation we do not hesitate to write you and advise you of our feelings. At this time when so many are objecting to the large taxes that must be assessed to raise the necessary revenue we wish to state that we will gladly pay what is found necessary to assess to us, and that we will have no objection whatever, and we are with you in every way that we possibly can be.

Those of us who can not go to the front should certainly be willing to do what little we can to help in a financial way.

Very respectfully, JOHN H. BALE.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. On Saturday we had a discussion here in reference to transportation and distribution through our car service. In the nature of a petition I send the following telegram to the desk and ask that it may be read and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

There being no objection, the telegram was read and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, as follows:

PORT ROYAL, S. C., May 20, 1917.

Hon. E. D. SMITH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Gentlemen, our attention has just been called to an embargo that has been placed by the Pennsylvania Railroad on all shipments of fruits and vegetables consigned to Jersey City and New York. We, the undersigned shippers, feel that this is a great injustice to us as well as the consumer, and ask that you insist that the Government take action in this matter at once, so as to prevent the possibility of the great loss that a condition of this nature will bring us. We suggest that the Government, if necessary, take charge of the situation temporarily while investigation is being made, and if it is on account of longshoremen strike, unload all shipments of fruits and vegetables with recruits of the Army or Navy or any contingent of either that may be available.

BEAUFORT TRUCK GROWERS' ASSOCIATION,
PAT WALL.
W. H. HULL, Secretary.
S. M. RICE.
I. M. GREGORIE.
C. BURCKMYER & CO.
H. B. ATTAWAY.

Mr. PENROSE. In connection with the telegram just read at the request of the Senator from South Carolina I should like to ask him whether any effort has been made to secure information from the Pennsylvania Railroad as to the complaint referred to in the telegram?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. My reference will develop that. I asked to have the telegram referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and that committee doubtless will take such steps as are necessary to ascertain just what is the condition.

Mr. PENROSE. Sometimes it is not amiss to find out as an individual what the trouble is before appealing to a governmental bureau, and whether there is any valid reason for delay.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I take it for granted that the committee having charge of interstate commerce will be the proper agency to investigate the question and do justice to all parties. Hence I had the telegram referred to that committee.

Mr. CALDER. I have here a letter from the chairman of the committee on resolutions of the National City Planning Conference recently held in Kansas City, Mo. I should like to have it read.

There being no objection, the letter was read, as follows:

NEW YORK, May 12, 1917.

Hon. WILLIAM M. CALDER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR CALDER: As chairman of the committee on resolutions of the National City Planning Conference which has just been held in Kansas City, I presented on the behalf of the committee the following resolution:

"Whereas the United States Government proposes to establish certain plants for the manufacture of armor plate and of other materials which may be required for the effective prosecution of the war, which plants will require the services of a large number of workers:

"Resolved, That the National Conference on City Planning strongly urges the President, the Secretary of War, and any other officers of the Government who may be charged with the location, planning, and construction of such plants to profit by the examples of our allies in providing for the proper housing of the workers in such plants to the end that their efficiency may be increased to the highest possible degree and that these servants of the country may not be exploited by land speculators and builders but that decent and sanitary homes may be provided for them at reasonable cost."

This resolution met with unanimous approval and will be forwarded to the authorities named. I venture, however, to add my personal appeal to you, as this is a matter which will probably require action by the Congress. I have been informed, and I think that the information is probably trustworthy, that at Charleston, W. Va., where the armor-plate plant is to be located, land speculators and builders are already very busy, while the Government has secured only the land needed for the actual plant. Great Britain and Canada appear to have been confronted with this same problem of protecting the employees of their munition and other plants from exploitation by those who expect a rich harvest from the concentration of large numbers of operatives and to have taken steps to see that proper homes as well as suitable workshops are provided for them. The additional cost of doing this would probably be slight in comparison with the higher degree of efficiency which would result from insuring wholesome and sanitary surroundings. I hope that this is a matter which will appeal to you and will have your support.

Let me assure you that the position which you have taken upon matters of vital importance which the Congress has thus far considered is a source of much gratification to those whom you represent in the Senate.

With best wishes, I am yours, very truly,

NELSON P. LEWIS.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I present a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Washington, and I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the memorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
THE STATE OF WASHINGTON,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

To all to whom these presents shall come:

I, I. M. Howell, secretary of state of the State of Washington and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of house joint memorial No. 8, of the fifteenth session of the Legislature of the State of Washington, with the original copy of said memorial as enrolled, now on file in this office, and find the same to be a full, true, and correct copy of said original, and of the whole thereof, together with all official indorsements thereon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Washington. Done at the capitol, at Olympia, this 15th day of May, A. D. 1917.

I. M. HOWELL,
Secretary of State.
[SEAL.] By J. GRANT HINKLE,
Assistant Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 8.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled.

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, in legislative session assembled, do most respectfully state, represent, and petition as follows:

Whereas as a result of senate joint memorial No. 6, introduced by Senator Troy at the 1911 session of the Legislature of the State of Washington, H. R. 18631 was introduced into the Sixty-second

Congress of the United States, second session, which was in words and figures as follows:

"IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
"January 24, 1912.

"Mr. Warburton introduced the following bill, which was referred to the Committee on Railways and Canals and ordered to be printed:

"A bill making an appropriation of $62,500 for the construction of a canal between Port Townsend Bay and Oak Bay.

"Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $62,500 be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available and to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, for the construction of a canal between Port Townsend Bay and Oak Bay, only when land and right of way for deposit of dredged material is furnished free of cost to the Government"; and

Whereas as a result of action taken by the said United States Congress on said H. R. 18651, the Government of the United States did appropriate the sum of $62,500 therein called for, to be expended and which was expended upon the construction of a ship canal between Port Townsend Bay and Oak Bay in Jefferson County, Wash., by which expenditure and subsequent additional advancement there was constructed and now exists for commercial use and is used a canal of 75 feet width on the bottom and of 15 feet depth at mean lower low tide; and

Whereas the use of said canal for the approximate period of two years last past has demonstrated the commercial necessity of this improvement and the requirements for further development in commercialism and as a strategical channel in the general development of preparedness in the northwest country in connection with Forts Flagler, Worden, and Casey, located in the immediate vicinity of said canal; and

Whereas it has been further conclusively demonstrated by tests and use that, in order to render said canal most desirable and efficient for the purposes for which it was constructed, and for the greater probable uses in the general preparedness program, its depth should be increased to 25 feet, at least, at mean lower low tide and its width made 150 feet, at least, on the bottom: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of Washington, in legislative session assembled, do hereby respectfully request and petition the Congress of the United States to pass an act referring the matter of widening and deepening said canal for the purposes above enumerated and toward attaining the measurements above stated to the Chief of Engineers of the United States of America for reference by him in due course and through proper channels to the local corps of engineers stationed at Seattle, Wash., for survey, estimates, report, and further proceedings necessary to effectuate the improvement; and be it further

Resolved, That the chief clerk of the house and the secretary of senate be instructed to transmit a copy of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Member thereof from the State of Washington for their use in endeavoring to secure the passage of such legislation.

Passed the house, February 27, 1917.

GUY E. KELLY,
Speaker of the House.

Passed the senate, March 1, 1917.

LOUIS F. HART,
President of the Senate.

Mr. PHELAN. I present several telegrams in the nature of protests from labor organizations in California against a modification of the Chinese-exclusion law. I ask to have them printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SACRAMENTO, CAL., May 17, 1917.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

SIR: The Sacramento Federated Trades Council vigorously protests against any attempt to temporarily repeal the Chinese exclusion act or to otherwise weaken the immigration laws for the purpose of permitting the importation of oriental labor.

SACRAMENTO FEDERATED TRADES,
WM. C. EDDY, Secretary.

—

SAN PEDRO, CAL., May 18, 1917.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The Central Labor Council protests against any attempt to set aside present Asiatic exclusion laws in order to flood California with coolie labor. We urge upon you the vital necessity of protecting California workers by uncompromising opposition to these vicious measures. Keep California white.

HARRY POTHOFF, Secretary.

—

LOS ANGELES, CAL., May 17, 1917.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The Los Angeles County Building Trades Council urges you to offer vigorous and uncompromising opposition to any attempts to flood our State with cheap labor by the importation of Asiatics under the false and hysterical cry of shortage of labor. Let us save California from the yellow peril confronting it.

TOM BARKER, Secretary.

—

RICHMOND, CAL., May 17, 1917.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: There has been information received by the Contra Costa Central Labor Council that a determined effort is now being made to temporarily repeal the Chinese exclusion act and weaken other immigration laws in order to bring in cheap labor. This council vigorously protest such a move and urges that you do all in your power to defeat such a move.

Respectfully submitted.

J. C. LEBER,
Secretary-Treasurer Contra Costa Central Labor Council.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a petition of New Durham Quarterly Meeting of Free Baptists, of Rochester, N. H., praying for national prohibition, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the petition of Gilbert A. A. Pevey, of Boston, Mass., praying that mutual insurance companies be put on the same basis as stock insurance companies in the matter of taxation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HUSTING. I present patriotic resolutions adopted by the Council of Defense of Polk County, Wis., which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions adopted at the organization of the Polk County (Wis.) Council of Defense, at Balsam Lake, Wis.

Whereas the autocracy of Germany, in its endeavor to extend its power over peoples enjoying representative government, has committed acts of barbarism heretofore unknown to enlightened peoples, and our Nation has long and patiently suffered indignities and the murder of its citizens rather than resort to arms; and

Whereas continued endurance has proved only the invitation of further barbarities and the sacrifice of the great purpose of democracy to enjoy in peace, according to the laws of civilization, the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and

Whereas our President and Congress have, in obedience to the conscience of the people of the United States, declared that a state of war exists with the Government of Germany, and the President by proclamation has appealed to all our citizens to meet the ultimate test of democracy to prove that a government by the people is worthy to exist: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the citizens of Polk County in public assembled, That we respond to the President's appeal as becomes free men who love our institutions and the happiness and general welfare of future generations; that we adhere to the principle of universal responsibility, and therefore assume our full share of the strife for the future peace and security of the world; that we do this by the encouragement of enlistments; and that we strive by careful economy and simple living to control and economize in the use of our material resources; that we approve the movement to prevent cereals needed to satisfy hunger from being used in distilleries and breweries;

Resolved, That we strive to the utmost to increase the productiveness of our industries, to grow more on our farms, to feed the hungry, and lend succor to our Government; that we urge our representatives in Congress to help prevent, as far as possible the unwarranted manipulation of the Nation's food supply by those who handle it on the way to the consumer, so that soulless greed may not thrive at the expense of those who bear the burden;

Resolved, That we urge our representatives in the various lawmaking bodies to see that the wealthy and rich bear their just share of the burdens of warfare, and that we consider it just as fair to draft into use and service the hoarded wealth of the rich as it is to draft our young men into the trenches; and further be it

Resolved, That we stand ready to uphold wisely and in no uncertain spirit the cause in which our country is engaged, and to help further the means that the experience of our allies have shown to be effective in the common cause; that we pledge our lives and our substance to the preservation of democracy and its extension throughout the world to the end that the terrible blight of war may cease to curse mankind; and further be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that if it can be practicably arranged by our Government that ships carrying provisions and munitions to our allies across the Atlantic should carry back from our allies able-bodied prisoners of war, under reasonable restrictions, to be fed and employed on the farms and in the factories of this country, in order to save carrying provisions for these people at great hazard across the Atlantic, as well as to relieve the labor situation in this country; and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the governor of this State, our United States Senators and our Congressman, as well as to the State Council of Defense.

Mr. HUSTING. I present resolutions adopted by citizens of Washburn, Wis., pledging faith and support to the Government, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Patriotic resolutions adopted by citizens of Washburn, Wis.

Whereas the United States is now in a state of war with foreign powers in accordance with the edicts of the President and the Congress of this country; and

Whereas the people of the city of Washburn are loyal Americans and have faith in their Executive and Congress: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the people of this city and neighborhood in mass meeting assembled, knowing that "in union there is strength," do hereby pledge our faith, support, and fealty to the flag of our country, to the cause of liberty, and to the arms of the Nation; and we are also

Resolved, To abstain from incendiary remarks that may bring reproach upon the Stars and Stripes or which may arouse internecine strife among our neighbors, and that we will now and hereafter, so long as this war shall continue, do our utmost as good citizens to support the Constitution of the United States and its defenders at home and abroad.

NELS M. OSCAR,
Presiding Officer.

Mr. HARDING. I present resolutions of the Slavic-American Patriotic League of the Mahoning Valley, Ohio, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas we, Slavs of the Mahoning Valley, fully appreciate the liberties and the privileges enjoyed by us in these United States of America; and

Whereas we, Slavs of the Mahoning Valley, fully approve and indorse the decision of these United States of America to war not only for humanity and civilization but also for the liberation of the smaller European States from tyranny, despotism, and oppression, which instills our hearts with the new hope that at last our long-cherished dreams and aspirations—the national independence of the subjugated and downtrodden Slavic Nations—will again become a reality; and

Whereas in this hour of great national crisis we, Slavs of the Mahoning Valley, believe it the duty of each and every one of us to bear his full burden in upholding and supporting the President of the United States and the National Government in the step they have taken: Therefore be it

Resolved, By the Slavs of the Mahoning Valley, numbering over 25,000 souls, that we pledge our continued and unconditional support of the President and the Congress of this Nation in their determination to protect its honor and its ideals of right and humanity; and to this great cause we dedicate our lives and our fortunes; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President and to the House of Representatives and to the Senate of the United States of America.

JNO. A. WILLO, Chairman.

PRODUCTION OF POTASH.

Mr. PITTMAN. On May 5 I introduced a bill for the purpose of increasing the production of potash in the United States. I sent a letter to the Council of National Defense in regard to the bill asking for their opinion upon it as an emergency war measure. In the letter I set forth certain facts showing the necessity for potash and the effect of the bill. I ask unanimous consent that the letter may be printed in the RECORD together with the bill for the information of the Senate.

There being no objection, the letter and the bill were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON TERRITORIES,
May 19, 1917.

Hon. NEWTON D. BAKER,
Chairman Council of National Defense, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I herewith inclose you Senate bill 2156, introduced by me on the 5th day of May of this year, and referred to the Public Lands Committee, which committee now has it under consideration. The purpose of the bill is to increase the production of potash in the United States and to reduce its cost to such an extent that it may be practically used as a fertilizer. It provides a method for utilizing a large potash deposit in the United States that is now, and for several years has been, permitted to lie idle and be unproductive because no law exists under which such deposit can be utilized. I refer to the potash supply in Searles Lake, Cal. This lake, according to the estimates of the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines, contains at least 20,000,000 tons of chloride of potassium in solution. It is the only concentration or deposit of potash yet discovered in the United States that is sufficiently extensive and so constituted as to permit the production of potash salts at a price sufficiently reasonable to justify their extensive use in fertilization. This concentration is in every respect similar to the great concentrations that have been developed for many years in Germany, and upon which not only Germany, but England, France, and the United States have depended almost entirely for such fertilizer. Experts, who have made a study of the production of potash, give it as their opinion that potash may be produced from the Searles Lake concentration in competition with the German supply.

A grave doubt exists as to whether or not the existing mining law applies to the location and acquisition of a deposit such as that at Searles Lake. However, even if it be conceded that such liquid concentration could be acquired and utilized under the existing mining laws, it would not avail in the present case as the area embracing the lake has been withdrawn by the Government from the operation of the mining laws. While I am personally opposed to many of the withdrawals made by the Government, I am satisfied that this withdrawal was justifiable. A syndicate or corporation controlled by foreigners, who are prohibited under our mining laws from acquiring lands by location, have attempted to acquire practically the entire lake through what I believe to be fraudulent dummy entries and through the subterfuge of dummy corporations.

Again, it is difficult to conceive how the fluids in the lake could be equitably and satisfactorily mined under the existing mining laws even if they applied. It is my opinion, and I believe the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior, that this deposit can be satisfactorily worked and made to produce large quantities of commercial potash without the danger of monopoly and with equal protection to the Government and the operators under the plan submitted in my bill. The substance of this bill was included in the general leasing bill, which passed both the Senate and House in the Sixty-third Congress. The bill, however, died in conference. The same bill containing the same provision with regard to potash passed the House in the Sixty-fourth Congress and was favorably reported by the Public Lands Committee of the Senate. While there was considerable opposition to other provisions of the general leasing bill, I believe that it was generally conceded that the same objections did not exist with regard to the provisions concerning potash, which are now incorporated in this separate bill which I have introduced.

The absolute necessity for potash as a fertilizer in this country is fully realized by all who have given the subject any consideration. It is the chief ingredient of nearly all fertilizers and is essential to the commercial production of many of our most important foodstuffs. The following enormous loss in production by reason of the lack of potash is given as a sample by a statistician:

In Indiana the yield of corn per acre fertilized with potash, 75.7 bushels; without fertilizer, 32.1 bushels.

Pears fertilized with potash, 205.8 bushels; without fertilizer, 58.8 bushels.

In Michigan, pears fertilized with potash, 22.7 bushels per acre; without fertilizer, 5 bushels.

The same comparison in production of fertilized and unfertilized land equally applies to many other grains, fruits, and vegetables.

I am informed that potash as a fertilizer is almost essential to the successful raising of cotton. In the report of the statistics committee of the National Fertilizer Association it is said: "The absence of a sufficient amount of potash in the soil has caused the appearance of a disease commonly called 'rust,' but it is too early at this time to forecast to what extent this trouble will obtain."

It is unnecessary to test the accuracy of these figures. It is well known that the proper use of fertilizers will increase the production of most crops from 50 to 100 per cent.

The United States has got to produce foodstuffs to the maximum capacity of its lands. The farms of England and France are going to ruin by reason of the withdrawal of men for military purposes and the lack of essential fertilizers. A large portion of our own production, which we are attempting to supply to those unfortunate people, is being wiped out of existence by the submarine warfare of the enemy. These misfortunes place a duty and obligation upon us that we must meet with expedition and energy. They can not be met except through the most intensive production, and this production can not be obtained except through the maximum use of fertilizers. The successful termination of the world war depends upon it. It is as vital and pressing as any problem that we now have to consider. This production can not be obtained without an ample supply of potash. Where can we obtain it? Prior to the war practically all of the potash used in the United States, Holland, Great Britain, and France came from Germany. In 1911 the consumption of potash in the principal countries of the word was as follows:

Germany, 422,341 metric tons, or 49.8 per cent of the total production.

United States, 237,453 metric tons, or 28 per cent of the total production.

Holland, 34,375 metric tons.

Great Britain, 21,217 metric tons.

To-day, while Germany is producing enough foodstuffs for its 80,000,000 people on an area not as great as that of the State of Texas by reason of an ample supply of potash, England and France are finding it impossible to produce half enough to supply their own people by reason of a lack of such fertilizer.

The production of crops in the United States is steadily decreasing for the same reason at a time when the greatest production is required. To-day the United States is only producing and has available about 16,000 tons of potash per annum. Prior to the war potash was selling or $39 per ton. It is now selling for about $400 per ton.

The following table discloses the amount of potash that is required in this country for fertilizer each year and the amount that we have available:

In 1913 we imported 529,000 tons; the domestic production was 400 tons.

In 1915 we imported 93,000 tons; the domestice production was 1,800 tons.

In 1916 we imported about 10,000 tons; the domestic production was 16,000 tons.

In 1913 about 20,000 tons of potassium chloride were used in the industries and about 500,000 tons were used in agriculture.

I contend that this bill should be treated as a war measure. Unless it is so considered by Congress it will not receive consideration at this session.

I have written you fully with regard to this matter, as I hope that you will assist me in impressing upon Congress the necessity for the immediate passage of this bill or a measure of similar purport. I would appreciate receiving an early reply to this letter, so that I may present it to the Senate in support of the immediate consideration and passage of the bill.

Very truly, yours,

KEY PITTMAN.

A bill (S. 2156) to authorize exploration for and disposition of potassium or sodium.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to grant to any applicant qualified under this act a prospecting permit which shall give the exclusive right to prospect for chlorides, sulphates, carbonates, borates, silicates, or nitrates of potassium, or borates, carbonates, or nitrates of sodium, or borates of calcium, or associated similar salts, on public lands belonging to the United States for a period of not exceeding two years: Provided, That the area to be included in such permit shall not exceed 2,560 acres of land in reasonably compact form.

SEC. 2. That upon showing to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that valuable deposits of one of the substances enumerated in section 1 hereof have been discovered by the permittee within the area covered by his permit, the permittee shall be entitled to a patent for 640 acres of the land embraced in the prospecting permit, to be taken in compact form and described by legal subdivisions of the public-land surveys, or if the land be not surveyed, then in tracts which shall not exceed 2 miles in length, by survey executed at the cost of the permittee, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior. All other lands described and embraced in such a prospecting permit from and after the exercise of the right to patent accorded to the discoverer, and all other lands known to contain such valuable deposits as are enumerated in section 1 hereof and not covered by permits or leases, may be leased by the Secretary of the Interior, through advertisement, competitive bidding, or such other methods as he may by general regulations adopt, and in such areas as he shall fix, not exceeding 2,560 acres, all leases to be conditioned upon the payment by the lessee of such royalty as may be specified in the lease and which shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior in advance of offering the same, and which shall not be less than 2 per cent on the gross value of the output at the point of shipment, which royalty, on demand of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be paid in the product of such lease, and the payment in advance of a rental, which shall be not less than 25 cents per acre for the first year thereafter; not less than 50 cents per acre for the second, third, fourth, and fifth years, respectively; and not less than $1 per acre for each and every year thereafter during the continuance of the lease, except that such rental for any year shall be credited against the royalties as they accrue for that year. Leases shall be for indeterminate periods, upon condition that at the end of each 50-year period succeeding the date of any lease such readjustment of terms and conditions may be made as the Secretary of the Interior may determine, unless otherwise provided by law at the time of the expiration of such periods, and a patentee under this section may also be a lessee.

SEC. 3. That in addition to areas of mineral land to be included in prospecting permits or leases the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, may grant to a permittee or lessee under this act the exclusive right to use, during the life of the permit or lease, a tract of unoccupied nonmineral public land not exceeding 40 acres in area for camp sites, refining works, and other purposes connected with and necessary to the proper development and use of the deposits covered by the permit or lease.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Interior shall reserve the authority and shall insert in any preliminary permit issued under section 1 hereof appropriate provisions for its cancellation by him upon failure by the permittee or licensee to exercise due diligence in the prosecution of the prospecting work in accordance with the terms and conditions stated in the permit.

SEC. 5. That no person shall take or hold any interest or interests as a member of an association or associations or as a stockholder of a corporation or corporations holding a lease under the provisions hereof which, together with the area embraced in any direct holding of a lease under this act, or which, together with any other interest or interests as a member of an association or associations or as a stockholder of a corporation or corporations holding a lease under the prvisions hereof, exceeds in the aggregate in any area 50 miles square an amount equivalent to the maximum number of acres allowed to any one lessee under this act; that no person, association, or corporation holding a lease under the provisions of this act shall hold more than a tenth interest, direct or indirect, in any agency, corporate or otherwise, engaged in the sale or resale of the products obtained from such lease; and any violation of the provisions of this section shall be ground for the forfeiture of the lease or interest so held; and the interests held in violation of this provision shall be forfeited to the United States by appropriate proceedings instituted by the Attorney General for that purpose in any court of competent jurisdiction, except that any such ownership or interest hereby forbidden which may be acquired by descent, will, judgment, or decree may be held for two years and not longer after its acquisition.

SEC. 6. That said Secretary, in his discretion, in making any lease under this act may reserve to the United States the right to dispose of the surface of the lands embraced within such lease under existing law or laws hereafter enacted, in so far as said surface is not necessary for use of the lessee in extracting and removing the deposits therein: Provided further, That if such reservation is made it shall be so determined before the offering of such lease; that the said Secretary, during the life of the lease, is authorized to issue such permits for easements herein provided to be reserved.

SEC. 7. That each lease shall contain provisions deemed necessary for the protection of the interests of the United States, and for the prevention of monopoly, and for the safeguarding of the public welfare.

SEC. 8. That any lease issued under the provisions of this act may be forfeited and canceled by an appropriate proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction whenever the lessee fails to comply with any of the provisions of this act, of the lease, and the lease may provide for resort to appropriate methods for the settlement of disputes or for remedies for breach of specified conditions thereof: Provided, That no provision or limitation shall be inserted or included in any lease waiving or requiring the waiver of the right of the lessee or of the United States to resort to the courts.

SEC. 9. That the provisions of this act shall apply to alll ands of the United States which may have been or may be disposed of under laws reserving to the United States the phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, or sodium with the right to prospect for, drill, mine, and remove the same, subject to such conditions as to the use and occupancy of the surface as are or may hereafter be provided by law.

SEC. 10. That 50 per cent of all moneys received from royalties and rentals under the provisions of this act, excepting those from Alaska, shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury after the expiration of each fiscal year to the State wherein the leased premises are situate. The remaining 50 per cent shall be paid into, reserved, and appropriated as a part of the reclamation fund created by act of Congress approved June 17, 1902, known as the reclamation act.

SEC. 11. That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to prescribe necessary and proper rules and regulations and to do any and all things necessary to carry out and accomplish the purposes of this act.

SEC. 12. That the deposits herein referred to shall be subject to disposition only in the form and manner provided in this act, and except as herein otherwise provided all laws or portions of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed, except as to valid claims existent at date of the passage of this act and thereafter maintained in compliance with the laws under which initiated.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment:

S. 70. A bill providing for an additional judge for the district of Montana; and

S. 1484. A bill ratifying the compact and agreement between the States of Oregon and Washington regarding concurrent jurisdiction over the waters of the Columbia River and its tributaries in connection with regulating, protecting, and preserving fish.

CAR-SERVICE SHORTAGE.

Mr. POMERENE. From the Committee on Interstate Commerce I report back favorably with an amendment the bill (H. R. 328) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," as amended, in respect of car service, and for other purposes; and I submit a report (No. 43) thereon.

I desire to state in presenting the report that the purpose of the committee is to confer fuller authority upon the Interstate Commerce Commission in connection with the distribution of cars. I can not under the rule ask for the consideration of the bill to-day, but I shall hope to call it up at the earliest moment possible.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan subsequently said: Mr. President, in reference to the report which was made a moment ago from the Committee on Interstate Commerce by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE], and which he gave notice of his intention to press before the Senate, I desire to ask the Senator from Ohio if the bill is to be pressed for consideration to-day?

Mr. POMERENE. I understand that there is another bill pending, being the unfinished business, and if there is any objection to the consideration of the car-shortage bill, of course, I can not bring it up to-day.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If the Senator will allow me, I desire to ask is his report from the committee on that bill a unanimous one?

Mr. POMERENE. It was a unanimous report of the quorum present. I think there were, perhaps, eight members present.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And the bill deals with the question of the distribution of freight cars?

Mr. POMERENE. It does.

I may say to the Senator from Michigan that in January last the Interstate Commerce Commission, by a divided vote of 4 to 3, held that under the interstate-commerce act they had the power to deal with this subject; but I think it is only fair to say that there is room for an honest difference of opinion. The bill known as the Esch bill was introduced in the other House and recently passed that body. The report which I have made is upon that bill, which reenacts several sections of the law and is 15 or 18 pages in length. The committee thought it would be wise to redraft the bill and to incorporate in a substitute therefor just the new matter which it was sought to add to the interstate-commerce act.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I think if the Senator from Ohio should give notice that he is going to call up the bill to-morrow it would advise Senators as to his intention. I regard the bill as very important legislation. I want to say to the Senator that I listened with much interest to the speech of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] last week, and, according to my information, there are 2,500,000 freight cars in this country which because of the lack of systematic distribution work only two hours a day, and that, too, at a time when it is so essential that they should be properly and economically used in handling the congested business of the country and with which our welfare is so intimately related. If it is true—and I think I am well within the facts—that 2,500,000 freight cars are used only two hours a day, the situation calls for some prompt legislation in order that our crops may be moved at the appropriate time with facility and dispatch.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, there is much truth in what the Senator from Michigan has said on that subject, and I think every member of our committee felt that the Interstate Commerce Commission should have fuller authority to deal with the situation.

I now give notice that I shall call up the bill to-morrow, and shall ask the Senate to consider it, assuming, of course, that there is no unfinished business in the way.

Mr. FLETCHER. Before the Senator from Ohio takes his seat may I ask him a question with regard to this report?

Mr. POMERENE. Certainly.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have been receiving a great many telegrams, letters, and resolutions indorsing heartily what is known as the Esch bill, and evidently that bill meets with very considerable favor. I inquire of the Senator from Ohio whether the report which he has made on the Esch bill will correspond and agree with the provisions of that bill as it passed the other House, or whether there will be any divergence?

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, without attempting to answer completely the Senator's inquiry, I may say that the purpose of both bills is one and the same. At the last session of Congress I introduced in the Senate a duplicate of the Esch bill, and I have also introduced it at the present session. I think that if this bill is passed, assuming that there are differences—and there are a few differences—they can be readily worked out in conference.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to make a brief statement?

Mr. POMERENE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ROBINSON. Touching the inquiry of the Senator from Florida the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission under the so-called Pomerene amendment, which the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate has ordered reported, is broader and more general, in my opinion, than that which is contained in the Esch bill. As an illustration of that fact, the Esch bill authorized the commission in case of emergency to make orders for the distribution and movement of cars, while the Pomerene amendment, which the Senate committee has reported, gives the commission the general authority to exercise that power regardless of any emergency. The word "emergency" is vital in the Esch bill. There are other differences, but that is the one material difference.

Mr. POMERENE. Yes; and I may say to the Senator from Florida that another important difference between the two bills is this, that the Esch bill defines car service as meaning "exchange, interchange, and return of cars," while the substitute defines car shortage as including the movement, distribution, exchange, interchange, and return of cars. I think that when we take the matter up for fuller consideration the Senator will see the necessity of that change.

Mr. FLETCHER. I look upon it as a very important matter, and I hope the Senator will be able to get it up as early as possible and complete its consideration.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I was not in the Chamber when the Senator from Ohio made his request. Did the Senator ask for immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. POMERENE. I did not. There is another bill which has the right of way; but I gave notice that I would call it up to-morrow for consideration.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I had hoped the bill might be disposed of to-day.

Mr. POMERENE. If an opportunity presents itself, I would be glad to have it disposed of to-day.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order. If this matter ever comes before the Senate, it will be properly debated; it is not before the Senate now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded. The introduction of bills and joint resolutions is next in order.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMPSON:

A bill (S. 2327) further to provide for the support of the Army by the prevention of the waste of the food products of the United States during the period of war and to prohibit their manufacture into alcoholic liquors, except in certain cases, to provide for the distillation of liquors in bond or heretofore manufactured, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2328) to provide for the settlement, registration, transfer, and assurance of titles to land, and to designate a court of land registration, with jurisdiction for said purposes, in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

A bill (S. 2329) to establish a landschaft system of rural credit in the United States; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. PENROSE:

A bill (S. 2330) granting an increase of pension to George Bessor; and

A bill (S. 2331) granting a pension to Jeanette Jenkins; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BANKHEAD:

A bill (S. 2332) for the naturalization of Francois Wilhelm Hiddinga; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. WEEKS:

A bill (S. 2333) authorizing the Postmaster General to increase prices for certain supplies to conform to abnormal market conditions; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. MYERS:

A bill (S. 2334) to authorize absence by homestead settlers and entrymen, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND:

A bill (S. 2335) to promote on the retired list of the United States Army Brig. Gen. David S. Gordon, United States Army, retired; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 2336) granting a pension to James Chaffin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BORAH:

A bill (S. 2337) granting an increase of pension to John H. Denny (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HALE:

A bill (S. 2338) granting a pension to John Aldrich (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 2339) granting an increase of pension to George A. Stanhope (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 2340) granting a pension to Flora Hopkins Devereux (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 2341) granting a pension to Melinda A. Smiley (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 2342) granting an increase of pension to William M. Somers (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TOWNSEND:

A bill (S. 2343) authorizing the President to recommission in the Regular Army as additional number Brice P. Disque; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RANSDELL:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 67) to fix the status and rights of officers of the Public Health Service when serving with the Coast Goard, the Army, or the Navy; to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine.

PNEUMATIC MAIL-TUBE SERVICE.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I introduce a joint resolution and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 66) making immediately available moneys appropriated for the investigation of the pneumatic mail-tube service in the act approved March 3, 1917, was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the appropriation for the investigation of the pneumatic mail-tube service, under the provision of the act approved March 3, 1917, be, and the same is hereby, made immediately available.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I ask that the joint resolution may again be read.

The Secretary again read the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENTS TO THE PENDING BILL.

Mr. WADSWORTH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense, to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels, and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. THOMPSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense, to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels, and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CUMMINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense, to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels, and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FLETCHER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense; to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels; and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HUSTING submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense; to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels; and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I submit two amendments which I intend to propose to the bill which is now the unfinished business. These amendments relate substantially to the same matter covered by the bill introduced to-day by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. THOMPSON], if I caught the reading of that bill correctly. I ask that the amendments may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, with the hope that the committee may have a meeting to consider the subject. I desire to give notice to Senators who complained when this matter was presented during the consideration of the bill which was passed here a few days ago that ample time for consideration of the subject could not then be had, that these amendments will be pressed on the pending bill, and that it is to be hoped that a vote will be had upon them or upon some other measure embodying the proposition before any agreement is made fixing a 5 or 10 minute debate.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I inquire to what the amendments relate that have just been offered by the Senator from Washington?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I thought I had announced to what they relate.

Mr. STONE. No doubt the Senator did, but I was engaged at the moment.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I beg the Senator's pardon.

In brief, the amendments authorize and direct the President to commandeer such intoxicating liquors as may be now on hand as he may deem to be necessary for munition purposes, and to prohibit the use of food products in the further manufacture of intoxicating liquors except for munition purposes, and under a permit to be issued by the Secretary of the Treasury. That is, in brief, the purpose of the amendments. I ask that the amendments be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that action will be taken.

The amendments are as follows:

SEC. —. That for the purpose of conserving the man power and resources of the Nation and to increase the efficiency and safety of the Army, Navy, and the people throughout the country during such war, the manufacture, sale, gift, importation, or transportation in interstate commerce of any alcohol or alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

SEC. —. That in the judgment of Congress it is necessary and proper for the successful prosecution of the war with the Imperial German Government to prevent the wasteful use of food products, to promote the health and efficiency of and to amply support the men of the Army and Navy and to conserve in the highest degree the resources and power of the Nation, and to these ends it is enacted:

First. That the President of the United States is hereby authorized and directed, during the period of such war, to requisition and commandeer such part of or all of the intoxicating liquors now in existence as he may deem necessary for the purpose of supplying the needs of the Government in the prosecution of said war, together with any or all distilling plants deemed by him necessary for the redistillation of the same, and to pay the owner thereof just compensation therefor to be determined by him, and if the compensation so determined shall be unsatisfactory to the person, firm, corporation, partnership, or association entitled to receive the same such person, firm, corporation, partnership, or association shall be paid 75 per cent of the sum so determined by the President and shall be entitled to sue the United States to recover such further sum as added to the amount so paid will be just compensation for such liquor, in the manner provided by section 24, paragraph 20, and section 143 of the Judicial Code.

Second. That during the period of such war it shall be unlawful to manufacture alcohol from food products for beverage purposes or at all, except upon a permit from the Secretary of the Treasury, who is authorized to issue a permit to any reputable and properly qualified person, firm, corporation, partnership, or association to manufacture alcohol from food products for munitions or for any other purpose necessary to carry on the war or to manufacture intoxicating liquors for industrial, scientific, or medicinal purposes under such rules or regulations as he may prescribe.

Third. That during the period of such war any person, firm, corporation, partnership, or association may use in, manufacture, or redistill into alcohol for, the manufacture of explosives or other military, industrial, or scientific purposes any or all intoxicating liquors now in existence or which may be manufactured or distilled within 30 days after the passage and approval of this act, and when such liquor is so used, manufactured, or redistilled the tax thereon for beverage purposes as now provided by law shall be waived, refunded, or credited on the amount of tax due on such liquor from the owner thereof under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Fourth. That during the period of such war the importation of any alcohol or any alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes shall be unlawful.

Fifth. That any person, firm, corporation, partnership, or association doing anything declared unlawful by this section or in willful violation of any rule or regulation prescribed thereunder shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding one year or by both such fine and imprisonment.

WAR REVENUE.

Mr. KENYON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—REBECCA J. ABEL.

On motion of Mr. BRADY it was Ordered, That the papers accompanying the bill (S. 3640) granting a pension to Rebecca J. Abel, Sixty-fourth Congress, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made.

SOCIALIZATION OF THE LAW.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I have here a very interesting article, written by Mr. James Harrington Boyd, of the Toledo (Ohio) bar, on the subject of "Socialization of the law." It is printed in the Case and Comment, the lawyers' magazine. I suggest that it be referred to the Committee on Printing for a report as to the advisability of having it printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be so referred.

INCREASE OF MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 9) of the House of Representatives, which was read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed as a House document 1,250,000 copies, in one document, of the act to increase temporarily the Military Establishment, approved May 18, 1917; registration regulations prescribed by the President under the authority of said act, approved May 18, 1917; and the proclamation of the President of same date fixing June 5, 1917, as the date of registration; 875,000 for the use of the House and 375 for use of the Senate, the same to be distributed through the folding room of the House and Senate, respectively.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate concur in the resolution of the House. I may state with reference to the matter, Mr. President, that I am receiving hundreds of requests from all over the country for copies of the registration regulations prescribed by the President and the proclamation of the President in reference thereto.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The concurrent resolution only provides for the printing of 375 copies for the use of the Senate, so many requests could not well be supplied.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I was going to suggest that the word "thousand" be inserted in the resolution after the numerals "375."

Mr. SMOOT. I suggest that the concurrent resolution be referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I did not note that the resolution only provided for 375 copies for the Senate. As it passed the House, it provided for 375,000 for the use of this body. I therefore ask that it be referred to the Committee on Printing.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The concurrent resolution will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

FOOD CONTROL.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no concurrent or other resolutions, morning business is closed.

Mr. GORE. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be laid before the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense, to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels, and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I inquire if the bill has been read?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill has been read as far as section 6.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let reading of the bill be continued then, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I ask that the previous sections be printed in the RECORD in connection with what the Secretary is about to read, so that the whole bill will appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it will be so ordered. The Chair hears none.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill, which in full is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That by reason of the existence of the state of war there is a national emergency, and it is essential for the national security and defense further to assure an adequate supply and equitable distribution and to facilitate the movement of foods, feeds, and fuel, hereafter in this act called necessaries, for the Government and people of the United States, and to protect them against injurious speculation, manipulations, and controls affecting such supply, distribution, and movement. For such purposes the powers, authorities, obligations, and prohibitions hereinafter set forth are conferred and prescribed.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to investigate and ascertain the demand for, the supply, consumption, costs, and prices of, and the basic facts relating to the ownership, production, transportation, manufacture, storage, and distribution of foods, food materials, feeds, seeds, fertilizers, agricultural implements and machinery, and any article required in connection with the production, distribution, or utilization of food. It shall be the duty of any person, when requested by the Secretary of Agriculture, or any agent acting under his instructions, to produce books, letters, papers, documents, or reports, or to answer correctly, to the best of his knowledge, all questions necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this section. Any person who shall refuse or willfully neglect to produce such books, letters, papers, documents, or reports, or who shall refuse or willfully neglect to answer any such question, or who shall willfully give answers that are false, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

SEC. 3. That it is hereby made unlawful for any person to hoard, or to hold, or enter into any contract or arrangement for any necessaries in excess of an amount reasonably needed to supply his individual or business requirements for a reasonable time; to monopolize or attempt to monopolize, either locally or generally, any such necessaries; to engage in any discriminatory and unfair or any deceptive practice or device in handling or dealing in or with such necessaries; to enter into any contract, arrangement, or conspiracy to restrict the supply or, except as permitted by law, for preventing gluts and for effecting equitable apportionment of perishable products among markets, to restrict distribution, or to enhance the prices of any such necessaries; to exact excessive prices for any such necessaries; or to aid or abet the doing of any act made unlawful by this section: Provided, That this section shall not apply or extend to any accumulating or withholding by any farmer, gardener, or other person of the products of any farm, garden, or other land cultivated by him.

SEC. 4. That no person shall conspire, combine, agree, or arrange with any other person to limit the facilities for transporting, producing, manufacturing, supplying, storing, or dealing in any necessaries, or to restrain or injure trade or commerce in relation to any necessaries, or to prevent, limit, or lessen the manufacture or production of any necessaries, or to enhance the price thereof, or to prevent or lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, barter, sale, transportation, insurance, or supply of any necessaries.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of Agriculture may, from time to time, establish and promulgate standards for grade and other classification of foods, food materials, feeds, seeds, other agricultural products, and fertilizers, hereafter in this section called commodities, by which their quality and value may be judged or determined, and standards for receptacles for commodities, by which the capacity of such receptacles may be judged or determined, and may make regulations governing the marks, brands, and labels used or to be used upon receptacles for commodities, for the purpose of showing the name and address of the producer or packer and the quality, nature, or quantity of the contents, and for the purpose of preventing deception with reference thereto. Before promulgating any standard under this section the Secretary of Agriculture may make such investigation and hear such representatives of trade interests concerned as he deems essential. Whenever the Secretary of Agriculture deems it essential to establish a standard for any commodity or receptacle, and a standard therefor shall then be effective under any act of Congress, such standard shall be promulgated as the standard for such commodity or receptacle under this section. Whenever any standard for grade or other classification of any commodity becomes effective under this section, no person thereafter shall pack for sale, offer for sale, consign for sale, or sell any such commodity by any grade or other classification other than that of such standard: Provided, That any person who packs for sale, offers for sale, consigns for sale, or sells any such commodity without regard to grade or other classification shall specifically describe such commodity or plainly mark the receptacle thereof in accordance with the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, in such manner as to indicate that such commodity is ungraded or unclassified. Whenever any standard for a receptacle becomes effective under this section no person thereafter shall pack for sale, offer for sale, consign for sale, or sell, in a receptacle, any commodity to which such standard for a receptacle is applicable, unless the receptacle conform to the standard, subject to reasonable variations therefrom permitted in the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, or unless the receptacle be so different in form, shape, and capacity as upon ordinary observation clearly to be distinguishable from the standard: Provided, That such requirements and regulations shall not apply to highly perishable fruits and vegetables. Whenever any regulation governing the marking, branding, or labeling of a receptacle for a commodity becomes effective under this section, no person thereafter shall pack for sale, offer for sale, consign for sale, or sell any such commodity in a receptacle to which such regulation is applicable, except in accordance with such regulation. This section shall not apply to offers for sale, consignments for sale, or sales in the original package of foods or feeds imported from a foreign country. Any person who violates any provision of this section, or of the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture thereunder, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or both.

SEC. 6. That whenever the Secretary of Agriculture shall find it necessary, in order to carry out the provisions of this act, he may license the manufacture, storage, or distribution of foods, food materials, feeds, and fuels, and, after having publicly announced such necessity, no person shall, after a date fixed in such announcement, engage in or carry on any business specified in such announcement of manufacture, storage, or distribution of such articles, or any of them, unless he shall secure and hold a license issued by the Secretary of Agriculture. For the purposes of this section the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to prescribe such reasonable regulations governing the conduct of the business of licensees as he may find to be necessary. Such regulations may include requirements for systems and auditing of accounts to be kept by licensees, submission of reports by licensees, and the entry and inspection by the Secretary of Agriculture, or his duly authorized agents, of the places of business of licensees. Any person who, without a license issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, shall engage in or carry on any business for which a license is required under this section, or willfully violates any provision of this section or any regulation of the Secretary of Agriculture under this section, or willfully fails or refuses to comply with any order of the Secretary of Agriculture under this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 and by imprisonment not exceeding one year.

SEC. 7. That whenever the Secretary of Agriculture shall ascertain and publicly announce that any specified mixture of wheat, wheat flour, or other wheat product with any other cereal or cereal flour or other material of vegetable origin is wholesome and economically fit for food, such mixture, if marked or labeled so as plainly to disclose the kinds and relative amounts of the ingredients of the mixture and prepared in accordance with regulations made by the Secretary of Agriculture, shall not be deemed to be adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the act of June 30, 1906, as amended, commonly known as the food-and-drugs act, or to be subject to the provisions of the act of June 13, 1898, as amended, commonly known as the mixed-flour law.

SEC. 8. That any person who violates any of the provisions of this act, except as otherwise provided, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding five years, or both.

SEC. 9. That words used in this act shall be construed to import the plural or the singular as the case demands. The word "person," wherever used in this act, shall include individuals, partnerships, associations, and corporations. When construing and enforcing the provisions of this act, the act, omission, or failure of any official, agent, or other person acting for or employed by any partnership, association, or corporation within the scope of his employment or office shall, in every case, also be deemed the act, omission, or failure of such partnership, association, or corporation as well as that of the person.

SEC. 10. That the sum of $1,500,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, available immediately and until expended, for the carrying out of the purposes of this act, including the payment of such rent, the expense of such printing and publications, and the employment of such agencies in the Department of Agriculture, such persons, and such means, in the city of Washington and elsewhere, as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary.

SEC. 11. That this act shall cease to be in effect when the national emergency resulting from the existing state of war shall have passed, the date of which shall be determined and proclaimed by the President; but such date shall not be later than one year after the termination, as ascertained by the President, of the present war between the United States and Germany.

During the reading,

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, if I catch the meaning of section 6, it obliges, at the pleasure of the Secretary of Agriculture, every person engaged in the manufacture, storage, or distribution of food, food materials, and so forth, to procure a license to do business.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. The reading of the bill was ordered by the Senate, and I think the reading ought to be completed.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think so, too. I wanted to see if I caught this correctly. I think I have. If so, I want to say something about it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reading of the bill has been ordered.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the reading of the bill be concluded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. HARDWICK. I suppose the general discussion of this bill is now in order?

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I have prepared a series of amendments to the bill, and I should like to offer them first.

Mr. HARDWICK. I yield, of course, to the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. GORE. The amendments vary, and I may say that some of them are highly important and some of them less so. Any amendment of any serious consequences that any Senator desired to have passed over will, of course, be passed over for further consideration. Some of them, however, I can present, I think, and have adopted and clear the way for the more serious matters.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I desire to offer, but will postpone it until the offer of the amendments by the chairman of the committee.

Mr. GORE. There is a series of these, Mr. President.

Mr. HARDWICK. If the Senator from Oklahoma desires to dispose of the committee amendments before the general discussion takes place——

Mr. GORE. These, I may say, are not committee amendments. The committee amendments have been agreed to. But they are amendments which I have discussed more or less with the members of the committee.

Mr. HARDWICK. If that is the situation, unless the Senator much prefers it, I will go on now with what I have to say.

Mr. GORE. I would much prefer it, because I think it would perhaps change, or at least modify, the character of the Senator's discussion.

Mr. HARDWICK. In deference to the Senator's wishes I yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. GORE. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. FLETCHER. I desire to offer an amendment, simply to have it printed, and will ask to take it up after the amendments submitted by the Senator from Oklahoma have been disposed of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. GORE. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to ask the Senator whether he has had prepared a comparative print of the bill as reported to the Senate and the bill as it would be, including the amendments he proposes to offer?

Mr. GORE. No, sir; there is no comparative print. There is a comparative print of this bill in parallel columns with bills pending in the House.

Mr. SMOOT. That is House bill 4125?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir; and still another bill; I think it is House bill 4188.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. GORE. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I should like to ask the Senator from Oklahoma, the chairman of the committee, if section 6 is intended to apply to canners of food products—whether they are to be licensed or not permitted to do business in interstate commerce?

Mr. GORE. I will say that I have here an amendment to section 6. Such an amendment is included among those to which I referred; and if it pleases the Senator, I should be glad to omit that discussion until we reach that amendment.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I will not interrupt the Senator. I simply want to remind him, however, of an experience which we had in Congress a few years ago when we undertook to establish what was known as the denatured-alcohol business in this country. We supervised it in the same general way that we are seeking to supervise this situation, and it failed, and failed utterly, although other countries demonstrated that it was a matter of very great value to them. To-day it stands the German Empire in very good stead that it is able to make denatured alcohol.

I do not want to see this legislation surrounded with so much of detail that the business man who seeks to engage in enterprises of this character or scope will be hampered and limited and restricted and discouraged from going on with his business. I hope the Senator's amendment may touch that very matter. It is very important.

Mr. GORE. I may say that I think the industry referred to was perhaps supervised out of existence. I hope we can arrange this bill so as not to strangle any business we handle.

I send to the desk the first amendment to which I wish to call the attention of the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 1, line 8, after the word "people," it is proposed to insert "and for the Army and Navy," so that it will read:

To assure an adequate supply and equitable distribution and to facilitate the movement of foods, feeds, and fuel, hereafter in this act called necessaries, for the Government and people and for the Army and Navy of the United States.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If you say "Government," that covers the others.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I want to ask the Senator in charge of the bill a question. I notice that this bill was introduced by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] by request on May 11, and has been reported practically as it was introduced. I should like to be informed whether this bill emanates from a department of the Government?

Mr. GORE. What was the Senator's inquiry?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I should like to be informed whose product this bill is. Who drafted it?

Mr. GORE. I will say that the Department of Agriculture prepared two different bills, sending, as I am informed, copies to the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture of the House, and also sending copies to myself. I do not remember the number of the first bill as introduced in the House. I introduced a similar bill—an identical bill, I may say—in the Senate, by request. Later another bill was sent to the chairman of the House committee and to myself. The chairman of the House committee introduced that bill in the House. I did not introduce that measure in the Senate. I did, however, if I may use the expression, cut ribs out of its side, and prepared a separate bill, including certain sections.

I had several reasons for pursuing that course. I thought the bills as drawn had perhaps pooled the opposition instead of dividing the opposition, that some Senators might object to one section and favor all the rest, and so on, and that by marshaling too much opposition the bill might fail. That is one reason. Another reason for not introducing the last bill sent to me is the fact that it contained a taxing clause, and of course could not originate in the Senate. There were other reasons than that why I did not introduce that measure, which I need not detail at this time.

With regard to the separate bills including different sections which I introduced, the committee took them under consideration, and consolidated a number of them into a measure which was then introduced by me as a distinct bill, referred to the committee, and reported back to the Senate. That is the pending measure, Senate 2263, varying in many important particulars from the drafts sent up by the department, and containing two or three sections which were not embodied in those drafts.

That is the history of the legislation up to date. I may say, however, that it was deemed necessary to have a food survey or census, and I requested the department to prepare a bill covering that subject, and suggesting the amount of money necessary for its execution. Afterwards I received the measure suggested, which of course covered a great deal more ground than that.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, the object of my inquiry is to ascertain whether this bill, introduced by the Senator by request and in the manner he has described, as at present reported has the approval of the Department of Agriculture?

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I am unable to answer that question. I do not know whether the changes made by the department meet the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture or not. I am not prepared to say.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. It is true, however, that the bill as reported is the bill suggested by the department in modified form. The present bill does not go to the extent that the bill suggested by the department went.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

Mr. GORE. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. I was only going——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. REED. The Senator from Connecticut does not have the floor.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I desired to have a matter read from the desk, but I will yield to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend. The Senator from Missouri is mistaken. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Connecticut, and he asked a question of the Senator from Oklahoma. The Senator from Oklahoma was on the floor by courtesy of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If I control the floor, I do not want the Senator from Misosuri to understand that I decline to yield to him at all. I am perfectly willing to yield to the Senator, but I do not wish to lose the floor.

Mr. REED. It is immaterial now.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Then, Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from Oklahoma if there is a written report accompanying the bill?

Mr. GORE. There is not, Mr. President. I may say that it was my intention to prepare a report analyzing the bill, but I have not had an opportunity to do so. Being a member of the Committee on Finance, which holds meetings in the forenoon, I have been denied the opportunity. I will say to the Senator that there is a comparative print of this bill, which will be illuminating if he will obtain it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Of course, we are engaged now in the passage of the bill.

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. And any report that the committee may make later on analyzing it will not be of service now in enlightening us as to how we shall vote upon the different amendments and sections of the bill.

Mr. GORE. That is true.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Was the testimony taken before the committee printed, and is it obtainable?

Mr. GORE. It is obtainable; yes, sir.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. There are copies in the committee room?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Can the Senator state in general what experts or witnesses appeared advocating the bill?

Mr. GORE. I will say that there seemed to be a consensus of opinion that the Government ought to take steps of some kind to meet the situation with reference to foods and feeds, and to anticipate, if practicable, a possible dearth or scarcity.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But I wanted to know the names of the witnesses who advocate the bill.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I do not know that I can say offhand, without consulting the RECORD; but a number of them were examined more particularly as to the price-fixing proposition. Some of them advocated that. Generally, they did advocate it. There were one or two that did not. I think Mr. Dillon, of New York, perhaps was opposed to the price-fixing plan. I think Dr. King, of the University of Pennsylvania, favored it. I think Dr. Huebner, of the University of Pennsylvania, favored it; and I think probably George W. Perkins favored it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator means, I assume, that they favored some plan of Government control of food products.

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Not necessarily favoring this particular bill in every respect?

Mr. GORE. Well, I may say to the Senator that this bill was drafted after the hearings had been concluded. The hearings were on the general situation, and on the bills introduced in the House, and the bill introduced by myself in the first instance. This bill is a sort of recast after the hearings were over.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I send to the desk and ask to have read by the Secretary a printed article sent to me by a newspaper, the article being a reprint from the New York Globe of May 17, 1917, being an article by Alfred W. McCann, bearing upon the general proposition of having control by the Government through a director, or whatever they call him, of food products. I should like to have the Secretary read it before the amendments are acted upon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

[From the New York Globe of May 17, 1917.]

HOOVER SAYS HIS FOOD FIGHT WILL BE FOR PLAIN PEOPLE—MAN WHO MAY BE DICTATOR WON'T ALLOW POLITICIANS OR THEORISTS TO INTERFERE, HE TELLS MCCANN—PREDICTS FLOUR AT $6.60—BELIEVES IN 81 PER CENT MILLING.

[By Alfred W. McCann.]

WASHINGTON, May 17.

"As an economic aid to our shipping larger quantities of wheat to our allies I would be glad to see everyone in the United States eat 100 per cent bread, but I will never act the part of an engine to drive them to eat it."

This statement was made to me last evening by Herbert C. Hoover, prospective food dictator of the United States, in his apartments in the New Willard, Washington.

Hoover is a tired man, a depressed man, an impatient man, but a strong man. For two years he administered the work of feeding 10,000,000 ravished Belgians on food which has, as he himself says, left them so woefully underfed that they are now subject to every disease that scourges humanity.

HOOVER SHUDDERS AT MEMORY.

"We built our own flour mills in Belgium with American machinery and milled the wheat to 81 per cent. That 81 per cent of the wheat grain, with fats and soup, has been all that the broken Belgians have had to eat for two years," he said with a faint suspicion of a shudder, as if he would have blotted from his memory a picture too horrible to contemplate.

"We tried at one time in desperation to squeeze more of the wheat into the flour, but the Belgian mortality increased immediately by a thousand deaths, and we did not after that dare to mill more than 81 per cent of the grain.

"If it falls to my lot to control the food supply of the United States," he said, "I shall begin at once to cut off every official and every theorist. There must be, above all, no professors on this job. The commercial interests of this country are the only people who know anything about food that is practical, and to them I shall look exclusively for aid in helping me to solve the big and complex problems which are involved in this work.

"I will not be shackled by anybody in the Department of Agriculture and will not allow a single job hunter or profit monger to help me.

"Patriotic and unselfish men, every one of them working without pay or compensation of any kind, will be my assistants."

He spoke with a finality that reflected the present state of mind of the President, who, as was freely rumored in the corridors of the Capitol during the day, no longer reposes full confidence in Secretary Houston or any of the old bureaucrats who for years have worked under cover in the Department of Agriculture.

HIS BIG JOB.

"My big job," he said in a manner that did much to convince me he had accepted the job, "will be to drop the outrageous price of flour to $6.60 a barrel.

"I know of no more diabolic or wicked thing in all this hellish business than the crime committed against humanity by the damned robbers, for that is exactly what they are, who have shot up the price of flour to its present level.

"There are thousands of abandoned flour mills scattered all over this country which can be reopened to bring about the drop in price, which I hold to be the most important and most radical move now up to the American people. Local milling will establish direct lines between producer and consumer and cut off the grabbing hands between.

"Those mills will have to get at least 81 per cent out of the wheat, and there will be no flour milled under this standard. Those that want to mill a hundred per cent can do so, but there will be no regulations compelling them to go further than 81 per cent.

"There was down here a fellow named Johnson, who came from New York to tell us about his 100 per cent bread. We investigated it and found the flour which he thought was whole wheat was merely 75 per cent. He had been fooled by the millers and was fooling his customers in turn.

"The millers have been lobbying around Washington ever since I came here," he went on, "but they have made no impression upon me. What they actually want is no change at all."

I asked him if the Belgians were getting sufficient food in quantity to keep them in health, for it seemed that what he said was an indication that he did not believe in the wholesomeness of flour containing more than 81 per cent of the wheat.

NOT SUFFICIENT FOOD.

"No; they have not had sufficient food to keep anybody in health," he answered.

"But there seems to be in your mind the conviction that bread containing all or most of the wheat is not good food and that your single experience with whole-meal bread caused the death of a thousand Belgians. Is not the malnutrition of those people probably attributable to too little food of any kind rather than to the little whole meal which they received?" I asked.

"I saw people die when we increased the percentages of wheat in their bread, and I do not want to shoulder the responsibility of making the entire country eat whole wheat unless it wants to.

"Moreover, there are certain people who can not eat bran, and the keeping qualities of their flour must be considered. If we could mill flour within 30 days of its consumption, it might be a different thing, but I don't want the responsibility of deciding this issue," he repeated.

I reminded him that the reopening of the county mills, mills near the cities and in the cities, would bring the flour well within the 30-day period which he had in mind, and that the very millers who were lobbying for white flour were themselves advertising and selling in fancy packages, for its medicinal value, the bran which they had taken out of that white flour.

He said he knew that.

I told him about the making 100 per cent bread, 50,000 loaves of it a week, and the bakers of Chicago who were doing the same thing, and of our own little group of 75 undernourished boys who were restored to health on a diet of 100 per cent bread.

NEEDED WHOLE WHEAT, SAYS M'CANN.

I told him of the experiments of Moore, Eddy, and Sympson, of England, of Gautier, of France, of Vert, of Germany, of Sullivan Towles, and Voegtlin, of the United States Public Health Service, and of numerous others who had demonstrated that in such a diet as he was forced to rely upon in feeding the Belgians nothing could save such people from malnutrition but the very elements which were lost in 81 per cent bread.

He shook his head grimly, the act of an honest man who has suffered a dreadful and heartbreaking experience, and said:

"But I saw a thousand Belgians die on such bread."

"Mr. Hoover," I replied, "I believe in you. Patriotism, unselfishness, and great ability are written all over you, but your sad experience is incompatible and irreconcilable with the known and proved facts. There was some other factor behind the experience which has led you to your unshakable convictions, and if you will let me I will place myself at your convenience to bring another set of facts before you."

He was tired almost to exhaustion, and told me how heavy was his task and how few the hours in which he had to perform that task.

"Some time in the future I hope we may discuss this thing again," he said.

Before leaving his apartment I reminded him of the great army of clerks and other workers who were striving to support life on incomes averaging less than $20 a week, and of their all too restricted diet, urging him to consider the meaning to them of adequate bread containing the salines which they could find in none of the modern processed foods, and without which their watery tissues and thin blood made them subject to the very plague of diseases, including tuberculosis, which he had seen overtake the half-starved Belgians.

HE'S FOR THE MASSES.

He stood straight up and cried with an earnestness that no politician has ever successfully simulated:

"It is for them, the great inarticulate and helpless masses, that I am thinking all the time. It is for them that I am working. It is for them, by God, that I am here."

Oh, what a service this strong, stubborn, unselfish man has attempted to render his fellows and what a service is within his power to render!

May God assist him. After such a talk with such a man one realizes the awfulness of the curse that has been visited upon this earth. Hoover has seen it, has felt it, has lived with it. He knows that Attila has been reincarnated and lives. He know that Attila must die.

Would that I could make him believe that the surest and quickest way to destroy the still living destroyer of men, women, and children is by keeping our soldier and civilian population of our allied nations physically fortified with the food elements which all humanity, thanks to the American miller, now disregards.

Hoover speaks of the difficulty of changing national habits, of bringing about the popularization of whole meal bread. Humanity, realizing the dreadfulness of the task before it, would eagerly change its bread habits if those educational forces already in possession of the facts began at once to tell the truth.

Hoover himself needs to hear those truths again and again and again if only to make less vivid the impression which tragedy and barbarism have burned into his soul.

President Wilson, if your own scientists—Sullivan, Towles, and Voegtlin—have worked to any purpose at all, now is the hour to call them into conference with this man. What they informed the world through a public document, compiled at public expense and printed by the United States Government just one year ago, must be imparted to Hoover. Let them do it now. Across the street from the House they work. In five minutes they can reach Hoover. Send them. Send them now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I believe I can be of some service to the Senate by very briefly calling attention to what each of these sections in a general way apply to.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Senator proceeds, will he permit me to ask the chairman of the committee whether the testimony of Mr. Hoover and Dr. Taylor has been printed?

Mr. GORE. It has been printed, in part 4.

Mr. NORRIS. I did not catch the Senator's answer.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is in part 4.

Mr. KENYON. It has been printed, I will state to the Senator.

Mr. FALL obtained the floor.

Mr. McCUMBER. I wish to ask the chairman of the committee whether there will be any proposition coming from the committee in the form of an amendment for fixing the prices of food products?

Mr. GORE. My judgment is that there will not be. That proposition, I assume, will come over to the Senate from the House and will then be considered by the Senate. I do not speak finally, however, as to what the committee might decide in order to facilitate the consideration of the bill, and that question might be submitted as an amendment to the pending measure.

Mr. McCUMBER. But at least no such proposition will come from the committee at this time upon the bill.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. What proposition?

Mr. McCUMBER. The proposition for fixing either a minimum or a maximum food charge.

Mr. GORE. I can not answer that question finally, because in order to facilitate the consideration of the measure the committee may report such an amendment to the Senate after it has been introduced in the House in final form. I can not speak advisedly on that point. There is great contrariety of opinion among members of the committee on the subject. I think I speak within limits when I state that they have not brought out definitely any final conclusion on that subject.

Mr. McCUMBER. That is all I desired to know.

Mr. GORE. Nothing of that sort is immediately in prospect.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, before we proceed to the discussion of the bill to occupy the time of the Senate at any length in discussion of it I should like to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the statement of the President of the United States, followed by the statement of Mr. Hoover, as published in all the daily papers of yesterday. I have before me the Washington Post of Sunday, May 20. It seems to me that upon reading the statement of the President it will be seen that there is a very strong conflict between some of the provisions of the proposed bill and the ideas of the President as he proposes to insist upon them, and that, taking into consideration the recommendation of the President, it might be a good idea to ascertain further what he wants before we proceed with this bill.

I call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the fact that the bill provides for certain duties to be performed by the Secretary of Agriculture and that department, while the President announces that he proposes to impose the work upon a commissioner. I will ask that the article be read in full a little later:

All measures intended directly to extend the normal activities of the Department of Agriculture in reference to the production, conservation, and the marketing of farm crops will be administered as in normal times through that department, and the power asked for over distribution and consumption, over all imports, prices, purchase, and requisition of commodities, storing, and the like, which may require regulation during the war, will be placed in the hands of the commissioner of food administration appointed by the President and directly responsible to him.

The suggestion that I make is, first, that this statement be read now, and then I will ask the chairman whether he thinks it is advisable to proceed with this bill until after consultation.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. FALL. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I had the floor and I yielded it for a question by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]. I did not intend to yield the floor. I believe that I could in five minutes call the attention of the Senate to what the bill covers and what is omitted, and thereby help the Senate, those who are not members of the committee in appreciating the situation as it is now presented to the Senate.

Mr. FALL. I had the floor under the recognition of the Chair. I did not intend to usurp the time of the Senator at all. The Chair recognized the Senator from New Mexico.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. May the Chair interrupt the Senator for one moment, because the question has been raised once or twice this morning? The Senator from Georgia was recognized, but he resumed his seat, and before he again rose the Senator from New Mexico addressed the Chair and was recognized. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] did not notice that the Senator from New Mexico was recognized and proceeded to address an inquiry to the chairman of the committee. The Senator from New Mexico is properly now upon the floor.

Mr. FALL. The Senator from New Mexico had in view exactly the same idea that has just been announced by the Senator from Georgia—that it is possible the Senate, with full information before it, may proceed to legislate in accordance with the desire of the President of the United States in the conservation of time. I ask that this article be read. It appears on pages 1 and 4 of the Washington Post of yesterday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I object.

Mr. FALL. Then I will read it.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. All right; let the Senator read it.

Mr. FALL. With very great pleasure.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, there is a rule of the Senate that when an objection is made to the reading of a paper the question shall be submitted to the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. But the Chair thinks that the Senator from New Mexico was proceeding to read it as a part of his remarks, which, of course, he is entitled to do.

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly; I have no objection to that.

Mr. FALL. I will proceed.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. FALL. I do.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to suggest to the Senator as he reads the article to indicate what part of the statement of the President conflicts with any provisions of the bill.

Mr. FALL. I will read the statement first and then indicate the portions of the bill that I think conflict.

It is very desirable, in order to prevent misunderstandings or alarms and to assure cooperation in a vital matter, that the country should understand exactly the scope and purpose of the very great powers which I have thought it necessary in the circumstances to ask the Congress to put in my hands with regard to our food supplies.

Those powers are very great indeed, but they are no greater than it has proved necessary to lodge in the other governments which are conducting this momentous war, and their object is stimulation and conservation, not arbitrary restraint or injurious interference with the normal processes of production.

INTENDED TO BENEFIT FARMERS.

They are intended to benefit and assist the farmer and all those who play a legitimate part in the preparation, distribution, and marketing of foodstuffs.

It is proposed to draw a sharp line of distinction between the normal activities of the Government represented in the Department of Agriculture in reference to food production, conservation, and marketing on the one hand and the emergency acitivities necessitated by the war in reference to the regulation of food distribution and consumption on the other.

I will call the Senator's attention to the fact that section 4 of this bill does provide for the regulation of the distribution of food products and, indirectly, of consumption. There is something in each of the different sections with reference to it. Section 6 is the one which I have particularly in mind. The statement continues:

ANNOUNCES THE COMMISSIONER.

All measures intended directly to extend the normal activities of the Department of Agriculture in reference to the production, conservation, and the marketing of farm crops will be administered as in normal times through that department, and the power asked for over distribution and consumption, over all imports, prices, purchase and requisition of commodities, storing, and the like, which may require regulation during the war will be placed in the hands of a commissioner of food administration appointed by the President and directly responsible to him.

The objects sought to be served by the legislation asked for are: Full inquiry into the existing available stocks of foodstuffs and into the costs and practices of the various food producing and distributing trades; the prevention of all unwarranted hoarding of every kind, and of the control of foodstuffs by persons who are not in any legitimate sense producers, dealers, or traders; the requisitioning when necessary for the public use of food supplies and of the equipment necessary for handling them properly; the licensing of wholesome and legitimate mixtures and milling percentages, and the prohibition of the unnecessary or wasteful use of foods.

WOULD ESTABLISH PRICES.

Authority is asked also to establish prices, but not in order to limit the profits of the farmers, but only to guarantee to them when necessary a minimum price which will insure them a profit where they are asked to attempt new crops, and to secure the consumer against extortion by breaking up corners and attempts at speculation when they occur by fixing temporarily a reasonable price at which middlemen must sell.

I have asked Mr. Herbert Hoover to undertake this all-important task of food administration. He has expressed his willingness to do so on condition that he is to receive no payment for his services and that the whole of the force under him, exclusive of clerical assistance, shall be employed so far as possible upon the same volunteer basis.

VOLUNTEER COOPERATION NEEDED.

He has expressed his confidence that this difficult matter of food administration can be successfully accomplished through the voluntary cooperation and direction of legitimate distributers of foodstuffs and with the help of the women of the country.

Although it is absolutely necessary that unquestionable powers shall be placed in my hands in order to insure the success of this administration of the food supplies of the country——

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. If the Senator from New Mexico would prefer that the article be read at the desk, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. FALL. No; I thank the Senator for his exceeding courtesy. As I have started, I shall proceed, so that the Senator can not offer any objection.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. All right.

Mr. FALL. The President continues:

I am confident that the exercise of those powers will be necessary only in the few cases where some small and selfish minority proves unwilling to put the Nation's interests above personal advantage and that the whole country will heartily support Mr. Hoover's efforts by supplying the necessary volunteer agencies throughout the country for the intelligent control of food consumption and securing the cooperation of the most capable leaders of the very interests most directly affected, that the exercise of the powers deputed to him will rest very successfully upon the good will and cooperation of the people themselves, and that the ordinary economic machinery of the country will be left substantially undisturbed.

MEETS MANIFEST EMERGENCY.

The proposed food administration is intended, of course, only to meet a manifest emergency and to continue only while the war lasts.

Since it will be composed for the most part of volunteers, there need be no fear of the possibility of a permanent bureaucracy arising out of it.

May I pause here to congratulate the President upon his calling volunteers into the service, Mr. President, and assuring the country against bureaucracy by virtue of such measures? I resume the reading:

All control of consumption will disappear when the emergency has passed.

I digress again to remark that that is one of the benefits of volunteer democracy, Mr. President. The article proceeds:

It is with that object in view that the administration considers it to be of preeminent importance that the existing associations of producers and distributors of foodstuffs should be mobilized and made use of on a volunteer basis.

NO PRUSSIAN AUTOCRACY.

The successful conduct of the projected administration by such means will be the finest possible demonstration of the willingness, the ability, and the efficiency of democracy, and of its justified reliance upon the freedom of individual initiative.

The last thing that any American could contemplate with equanimity would be the introduction of anything resembling Prussian autocracy into the food control in this country.

It is of vital interest and importance to every man who produces food and to every man who takes part in its distribution that these policies thus liberally administered should succeed and succeed altogether.

It is only in that way that we can prove it to be absolutely unnecessary to resort to the rigorous and drastic measures which have proved to be necessary in some of the European countries—

I suppose he has reference to some selective-draft proposition.

HOOVER TELLS OF PLANS.

Mr. Hoover last night issued a statement saying he would accede to the request of the President upon the assumption that he grant the necessary authority for setting up a competent administrative system.

"I hold strongly to the view," he said, "that while large powers are necessary for minority cases, they will probably need but little application, for the vast majority of the producing and distributing elements of the country are only too willing to serve our national necessities.

RECOMMENDATIONS HE MAKES.

"I have recommended to the President five cardinal principles of food administration:

"First. That the food problem is one of wise administration and not expressed by the words 'dictator' and 'food controller,' but food administrator.

"Second. That the administration can be largely carried out through the coordination and regulation of the existing legitimate distributive agencies supplemented by certain emergency bodies composed of representatives of the producers, distributers, and consumers.

ASKS VOLUNTARY CONSERVATION.

"Third. The organization of the community for voluntary conservation of foodstuffs.

"Fourth. That all important positions, so far as they may be, shall be filled with volunteers.

"Fifth. The independent responsibility of the food administration directly under the President, with the cooperation of the great and admirable organization of the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Commerce, the Federal Trade Commission, and the railway executives."

NEEDS AID OF HOUSEWIVES.

Mr. Hoover also emphasized the necessity of cooperation on the part of the housewives of the country in the intelligent purchase and use of foodstuffs. He purposes to submit to them a scheme by which every woman at the head of a household will pledge herself to carry out the instructions she will be given from time to time.

"We do not ask," he said, "that the American people should starve themselves, but that they should eat plenty, wisely, and without waste."

ON VOLUNTEER BASIS ONLY.

"I have represented to the President," he added, "that I am confident that the whole of this service can be carried out by the men and women of this country on a volunteer basis, and that I can see no other means by which the problem can be adequately solved in the United States. If this can not be done, I shall certainly willingly surrender the task to some other method of emergency. I hold that democracy can yield to discipline and that we can solve the food problem for our own people and for our allies in this way, and that to have done so will have been greater service than our immediate objective, for we will have demonstrated the rightness of our faith and responsibility to defend ourselves without being Prussianized."

Mr. President, I had no intention of reading this entire article when I arose, but I have done so. I have not read it in personal opposition to this bill nor any of the provisions of the bill, but it appears to me that the suggestions contained in it are in entire opposition to the bill. The bill does provide for certain drastic regulations with reference to foods; it does undertake to vest large powers in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture; and Mr. Hoover's theory appears to be that he can do all that is necessary to carry out his object by voluntary cooperation between himself and the food producers and those who sell the foods and who handle the foods of the country.

It was with the best intention that I called the attention of the Senate to the fact that this statement had been given out, because if we are to be notified later, after proceeding at great length to discuss the present bill, that it does not meet with the executive approval, but that other measures will be insisted upon in conflict with it, necessarily then our work would have been useless. It was with that idea and that alone, sir, that I arose.

Mr. GORE. I desire to say to the Senate and to the Senator that I intend to offer certain amendments, some of which will meet the criticisms suggested by the Senator from New Mexico. I realize that the bill as it now stands is open to his criticisms.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. GORE. I do.

Mr. POMERENE. Have those amendments been printed?

Mr. GORE. They have not. I prepared them this morning and intend to offer them. I will say that if there is any amendment which any Senator desires to have passed over, it will be passed over, so that it may receive his and the Senate's fullest consideration.

Mr. POMERENE. I hope the Senator will consent to that.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator if the amendments might not be submitted and a "rush" order entered to have them printed? In that event they will be back here before we adjourn this evening probably and we will be able to examine them.

Mr. POMERENE. I was going to make that same request to the Senator.

Mr. GORE. I think I can arrange to do that in a few moments. Some of the amendments, I think, will provoke very little opposition. At the same time, they put a different aspect on the bill in many particulars. I was anxious to have those amendments considered, so that, if adopted, the bill could be considered on the basis suggested by the Senator from New Mexico. I will have them sent to the desk and read to the Senate, in order that Senators may have them in mind, and then try to have them printed on a rush order.

Mr. GALLINGER. There can be no objection to that, it seems to me. They will appear in the RECORD to-morrow morning at least, and the Senator in the meantime can have them printed; but I think that if there is any amendment that is contested the Senator ought not to insist upon a vote on that amendment this afternoon.

Mr. GORE. Not at all. I intend to pass them over if there is any objection and to have them printed, so that Senators may be fully advised as to them.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me to interrupt him, suppose, then, that we proceed and, if there is any objection to an amendment, let it go over, but let those not objected to be adopted.

Mr. GORE. I will say to the Senator that that was the program that I had hoped to see carried out.

Mr. HARDWICK. I think that would be a proper procedure, because the bill might be changed so that some of us would not be quite so strongly opposed to it as we now are. There is certainly room for improvement.

Mr. GORE. I was anxious to do that before the discussion proceeded; but, of course, I have no control of that situation.

Mr. HARDWICK. Suppose the Senator offers the amendments now.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. GORE. I do.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I should like to inquire whether or not the amendments referred to by the chairman of the committee have been considered by the committee or whether they have been prepared since the committee has had the bill under consideration?

Mr. GORE. I will say that they have not been considered by the committee, although I have conferred with several members of the committee in regard to them. As Senators know, we are all pretty busy at this time. I myself am a member of the Finance Committee, which occupies the entire forenoon in the consideration of the forthcoming revenue bill. That will have to serve as my apology, both to the committee and to the Senate, for not having taken these amendments up formally with the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask that all the amendments the Senator proposes to offer shall be read for the information of the Senate.

Mr. GORE. Does the Senator desire that done at once?

Mr. GALLINGER. I should like to have it done at once; otherwise, I shall object to their consideration.

Mr. GORE. I thought that would be more confusing than simply to offer the amendments separately. Then if any Senator asked that any particular amendment go over I should be glad to consent to let it go over.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senate can take them up after they have been read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendments proposed by the Senator from Oklahoma will be read without action immediately.

The Secretary read as follows:

On page 1, line 8, after the word "people," insert "and for the Army and Navy."

On page 2, line 3, after the word "Agriculture," insert "or such other officer or agent of the Government as the President may direct."

On page 2, line 10, after the word "food," strike out the period and insert a colon and the following:

"Provided, That in ascertaining such cost or other facts herein required the Secretary of Agriculture, or such other officer or agent of the Government as the President may direct, shall avail himself of the result of any investigations into like subjects on the part of the Federal Trade Commission or any other department, bureau, or officer of the Federal Government, and it shall be the duty of such commission, department, bureau, or officer to cooperate with the Secretary of Agriculture, or other officer or agent, in carrying out the provisions of this section."

On page 2, line 23, after the word "person," insert "wilfully to destroy or make away with, or."

On page 3, line 1, after the word "necessaries," insert "essential to the support of the Army or maintenance of the Navy of the United States, or which are involved in or constitute a part of commerce among the States or with foreign nations."

On page 3, line 18, after the word "shall," insert "monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or."

On page 3, after line 26, insert:

"The word 'necessaries' as used in this section shall be construed to relate to such necessaries as are essential to the support of the Army or the maintenance of the Navy of the United States, and the words 'trade or commerce' shall be construed to mean trade or commerce among the States or with foreign nations.

"Any such necessaries owned by any such person or combination, or any such monopoly, or conspiracy, being in course of transportation from one State to another, or to a foreign country, shall be forfeited to the United States, and may be seized and condemned by like proceedings as those provided by law for the forfeiture, seizure, and condemnation of property imported into the United States contrary to law, and such forfeiture and condemnation shall be in addition to the other penalties imposed by this act."

On page 6, line 9, strike out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the word "President."

On page 6, line 12, after the word "fuels," insert "which constitute a part of trade or commerce among the States, or with foreign nations."

On page 6, line 18, strike out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "President or such officer or agent of the Government as he may direct."

On page 6, line 19, strike out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the word "President."

On page 6, line 21, strike out the word "licenses" and insert the word "licensees."

On page 6, line 24, strike out the words "the Secretary of," and on line 25 strike out the word "Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "such officer or agent of the Government as the President may charge with the administration of this act."

On page 6, line 25, strike out the word "agents" and insert the word "representatives."

On page 7, line 2, strike out the words "by the Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "in accordance with this section."

On page 7, line 5, strike out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the word "President."

On page 7, line 7, strike out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof the word "President."

After section 7, page 7:

"SEC. —. That whenever the President finds it essential in order to prevent undue enhancement or fluctuation of prices of, or in order to prevent injurious speculation in, or in order to prevent unjust market manipulation or unfair and misleading market quotations of the prices of necessaries, hereafter in this section called evil practices, he is authorized to prescribe such regulations governing operations, practices, and transactions at, on, in, or subject to the rules of any exchange, board of trade, or similar institution or place of business as he may find essential in order to prevent, correct, or remove such evil practices. Any person who wilfully violates any regulation made pursuant to this section, or who knowingly engages in any operation, practice, or transaction prohibited by the President pursuant to this section, or who aids or abets any such violation or any such prohibited operation, practice, or transaction, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 and by imprisonment for not exceeding two years."

"That the President is authorized, from time to time, to ascertain the needs of the country for preference movements by common carriers, in interstate commerce, in order to assure an adequate and continuous supply of necessaries, and, whenever he shall find that any such preference movements are essential for the purpose, he is authorized to transmit his findings, so far as concerns preference movements by common carriers other than by water, to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and, so far as concerns preference movements by common carriers by water, to the United States Shipping Board. Upon receipt of any such findings, the Interstate Commerce Commission, or the United States Shipping Board, as the case may be, is authorized and required, in so far as practicable, to make and enforce appropriate orders and regulations to carry into effect such findings. Every common carrier to which such an order or regulation is directed or applies shall comply with the same. In case of failure or refusal on the part of any common carrier to comply with the terms of any such order or regulation, such carrier shall be liable to a penalty of $1,000 for each offense and $100 for each and every day of the continuance of such offense, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States. In addition, any person who wilfully fails or refuses to comply with the terms of any such order or regulation shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $10,000, or by imprisonment for not more than two years, or both."

During the reading,

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I observe from the reading of the new section proposed to be inserted after section 7 that it does not include a clause limiting those necessaries to such as constitute a part of interstate and foreign commerce. I should like to modify that.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, it seems to me the importance of this bill is generally recognized, and also the importance of the various amendments which have just been submitted by the chairman of the committee. I understand that they do not come here as committee amendments; but I wonder if it would not be possible to have the bill printed showing these amendments just as they would appear if they had been submitted as committee amendments?

Mr. GORE. I intended to make that request as soon as the reading of the amendments was finished, and I will make it at this time.

Mr. LODGE. I suggest that the reading of the amendments be completed.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I supposed that had been done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is the regular order, as suggested by the Senator.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the amendments submitted by Mr. GORE.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to ask the Senator from Oklahoma whether the amendments that have just been read have been offered with the authority of the committee? Are they committee amendments?

Mr. GORE. They have not been, Mr. President.

Mr. LODGE. Then they are offered by the Senator in his individual capacity?

Mr. GORE. They are; but I will say that they were contained in the drafts of the bill that were sent up from the department, with one or two changes. The one with reference to preferential shipments, as prepared by the department, related both to interstate shipments and to intrastate shipments. The phrase "interstate shipments" is not contained in the amendment that I offered. The amendment relating to boards of trade not only authorizes the President to prescribe rules and regulations governing the transactions of boards of trade, but it also gives him power to prohibit those transactions in whole or in part. Owing to certain proceedings in the committee with reference to this matter, that clause was omitted in the draft which I presented. These amendments were discussed more or less in the committee.

Mr. LODGE. If I may ask, why was not that bill, or these amendments, reported by the committee?

Mr. GORE. I can not answer that question, Mr. President. The committee did not see fit to report it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, is not this the situation: The Senator says that most of these amendments were in the draft of the bill which the committee considered.

Mr. GORE. No; the last——

Mr. BRANDEGEE. So they really stand here as having been rejected by the committee and offered by the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. GORE. No; the Senator is mistaken. The last two were in the bills as sent up, and were introduced by me by request as separate bills. The one relating to boards of trade was considered and was not reported; but owing to the discussion in the Senate a few days ago on an amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS], it was decided by certain members of the committee with whom I conferred—we have not had a meeting of the committee since—that it might be well to present this proposition to the Senate.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LODGE. I think I have the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts was recognized.

Mr. LODGE. I had the floor, and asked the Senator from Oklahoma to answer a question.

Mr. HARDWICK. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. LODGE. I shall be through in one moment.

Mr. HARDWICK. I do not intend to go on until the Senator has finished.

Mr. LODGE. I was only seeking information. What I understand is that the bill that is upon our desks then is the only bill that comes here with the authority of the committee.

Mr. GORE. It is.

Mr. LODGE. I say that because the amendments that have just been read are most extreme. The bill itself is a pretty strong measure, but the amendments go much further and completely change the whole subject. I think we ought to have them before us in some comprehensive form. We can not act on amendments that are merely read from the desk.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me for just a moment. I agree thoroughly with the Senator from Massachusetts. The bill, as modified by the Senator's proposed amendments, is one that we can all consider, at least; it is undoubtedly within the constitutional power of Congress, whereas this other one is not, as I think I can demonstrate. Would it not be wiser, then, to recommit this bill to the committee and have the committee report this bill, or something like it, with the amendments suggested by the Senator, so that the Senate can give it some real consideration?

I do not want to interfere with the Senator's committee or with his bill, but it does look to me like the Senate itself would get a more intelligent view of this question and could make a more intelligent disposition of it if that were done.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, at this point, before answering the Senator's question, I desire to ask unanimous consent to have the bill printed with the amendments just read shown as proposed amendments, whether they shall be agreed to or disagreed to during the day. I will say further to the Senator from Georgia that I apprehended that the present consideration of certain of these amendments would be objected to, very properly; and any amendment suggested to which any Senator objects will, of course, be passed over. I have no desire to rush the consideration of the measure. I appreciate the feeling of the Senator from Georgia, and the feeling of other Senators, and I may say that I share those feelings in very great measure, and I shall have no disposition to press the bill unduly.

Mr. HARDWICK. Would the Senator think it was all right to have the bill recommitted and let the committee pass on these various amendments?

Mr. GORE. I will say that I think certain of the amendments would probably be agreed to without opposition. I hope we can proceed with the consideration of the bill, passing over the amendments to which any Senator may make any objection, and I will try to assemble the committee, if deemed desirable after a conference with them, for further consideration of the matter by them.

Mr. HARDWICK. I would not want to make a motion to recommit unless it was agreeable to the Senator in charge of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma has submitted a request for unanimous consent regarding the printing of the bill with the proposed amendments.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I do not know that I shall object, but I want to say a single word. Our usual method of doing business here is to have a bill reported from a committee, and then we deal with that bill as reported from the committee, and with the committee amendments. Then any Senator is at liberty to offer amendments.

Here we have a bill from the committee. The chairman presents now what is really a new bill, and a much more extensive one, in his amendments, which have not the authority of the committee. They are his individual amendments. I think we ought to have the whole thing brought in with a report from the committee, so that we may know how the committee stand who have been giving consideration to this subject; and there should be a printed report. They should let us know what they accept and what they do not accept. Of course, the opinions of a chairman of a committee have great weight in the Senate, and justly so.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

Mr. GORE. I will say, Mr. President, before the Senator goes on, that most of the amendments are designed rather to limit and confine the powers sought to be conferred in the bill. The last two amendments are subject to the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts. They undertake to confer additional powers, one relating to boards of trade, and the other to preferential shipments.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

Mr. GORE. One of those has been pretty thoroughly discussed before the Senate. I may say that really I apprehended that the other one, with respect to preferential shipments, probably would encounter very little opposition. Of course, in that I may be in error.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. These amendments create a food controller, and they give him power to grant preferential rates, as well as I can judge, or preferences in interstate and foreign commerce. I am not discussing the merits of the matter now; but I think the Senate must see that that is pretty extensive legislation, and I do not think we can consider it properly in the way in which it is presented. That is all I am trying to get at.

Mr. GORE. Very well; I withdraw that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Oklahoma withdraws his request.

Mr. GORE. No; I do not. I withdraw the particular amendment referred to by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will have to get the matter straightened out.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I hope the Senator will at least have it printed——

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I ask if, in order to be recognized, it is necessary for Senators not to address the Chair?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Iowa, who has endeavored to get recognition. The Chair is unable to tell to which amendment the Senator from Oklahoma refers, and the secretaries are also unable to do so.

Mr. GORE. The one relating to preferential shipments.

Mr. HARDWICK. If the Senator will pardon me, I think it had better be——

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I make the suggestion again: Is it necessary not to address the Chair in order to get recognition?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator can not hear the Senator from Iowa. What is his inquiry?

Mr. KENYON. I have asked to be recognized two or three times, and I observe Senators rising and being recognized when they do not address the Chair. I should like to know if that is to be the practice?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will say that he has noticed a considerable amount of that to-day, and sincerely hopes Senators will not proceed along that line. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Iowa as soon as the request of the Senator from Oklahoma is disposed of.

The request of the Senator from Oklahoma is that the amendments which have been read from the desk, with the exception of the one relating to preferential shipments, be printed as a part of the bill, in such a manner as to indicate that they are his proposed amendments. Is there objection?

Mr. ROBINSON and Mr. JONES of Washington addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I want to inquire of the Senator from Oklahoma why he does not also have that amendment printed?

Mr. GORE. It has been read and will appear in the RECORD.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well. I think it will be more convenient, however, to have it printed so that Senators may easily have access to it.

Mr. GORE. I have no objection to its being printed for the information of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the request of the Senator from Oklahoma includes that relating to preferential shipments?

Mr. GORE. Yes; except that that shall not be regarded as a pending or proposed amendment. It is simply to be printed for the information of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington.

Mr. JONES of Washington. As I understand, these amendments are to be printed in the body of the bill just as we have been accustomed to printing committee amendments. Is that the request?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not, of course, know further than has been stated how the printing will be done.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I think the request ought to cover that.

Mr. GORE. The request is that the amendments shall be indicated as amendments.

Mr. JONES of Washington. In printing the bill?

Mr. GORE. Yes; in the print.

Mr. JONES of Washington. As I understand, these are not committee amendments.

Mr. GORE. They are not.

Mr. JONES of Washington. They are individual amendments, the same as those presented by any other Senator; and if any amendments are printed in the body of the bill, all amendments that have been presented by Senators should be printed in the bill, so as to give them the same standing. If the Senator would include that in his request—that all amendments that have been presented as intended to be proposed to this bill may be printed within the bill—then I shall not object.

Mr. GORE. Mr President, I have no objection to any amendments that have already been printed and are lying on the table being included in that request. Of course, any Senator can present an amendment at any time and ask to have it printed.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Oh, yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair now understands the request to be that the bill be printed with all amendments proposed shown as amendments.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. KELLOGG. I desire to offer an amendment, which I have sent to the desk. If the amendments are to be printed, I should like to have that also printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Including the amendment just offered by the Senator from Minnesota. Does the Senator desire to have his proposed amendment read?

Mr. KELLOGG. No; I have no desire to have it read at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I understand now, under the unanimous consent, if it is granted, that every amendment that has been proposed to this bill will be printed. For instance, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. THOMPSON] has introduced this morning an amendment with relation to the liquor question. The Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] has introduced another amendment with relation to that question; and we will have a bill with two or three different amendments on the same subject included within the bill. It seems to me it is a perfectly absurd proposition.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. KENYON. I do.

Mr. ROBINSON. Reenforcing what the Senator has just suggested, these amendments may be offered in such form as to make it physically impossible to print the bill with the amendments, as has been suggested by the chairman. Suppose half a dozen amendments, for instance, are to be inserted at a given place. It would be physically impossible to print the bill with those amendments in it without creating great confusion. The correct action, it seems to me, if I may make the suggestion, is to print all amendments and let the bill as reported by the committee remain before the Senate. I do not think we would make anything by attempting to print in the body of the bill amendments that have no standing except that of amendments by individuals.

Mr. KENYON. It would seem that the amendments introduced by the chairman of the committee, perhaps, ought to have more persuasion than the amendments that are introduced. I should like to see the bill printed with those amendments, and not others. I believe those amendments will receive the sanction of the committee. But while I have the floor I want to say a word which I think should be said.

There seems to be a good deal of confusion about this bill, and I am not surprised that this should be true. The bill known as the Lever bill, which was very broad in its scope, was introduced in the House, considered by that committee, and reported by that committee of the House to the House itself. The discussion was commenced in the House on that bill. It is divided now, I think, into a number of different bills. When the bill came to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry it was given a great deal of attention. Hearings were held for two weeks, and the hearings were closed. It was thought then by the committee that the bill might be divided into different parts. There are clear-cut lines of distinction in this food proposition. There is the question of stimulating production. That can be taken care of in one bill. There is the question of getting rid of speculation. That can be taken care of in another bill. It is a question that has many ramifications. So the committee took the Lever bill and took those parts concerning which it thought there would not be lengthy discussion and about which there was nearly unanimity of opinion and introduced that here as this bill.

I think I ought to say that the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry is not at all settled in its conviction about many of the propositions in this food-control bill, but they felt that it ought to be out on the Senate floor and let the Senate hammer it out. I believe this offers a skeleton upon which amendments can be placed and a better bill worked out. I think we might as well understand that for the purpose of the argument which can be made there will be many amendments offered to the bill, and there will be amendments along the line of giving to the President the power and authority to fix a guaranty of minimum prices on certain staples. I believe there will also be an amendment along the line of fixing a guaranty of maximum prices outside of the hands of the producer—not while they are in producers' hands. I think that agitation and that provision in the original Lever bill produced around the country a great hysteria and a great opposition to the bill among the producing classes. The fixing of a maximum guaranty has proved an absolute failure in every country that has tried it, and they have tried it during the war. I believe a plan will be worked out whereby that maximum can be used to break corners and to break speculation, but that it will not be attempted to be used on the producers of the country.

While I am very earnestly in favor of some food legislation, I believe it would be a great mistake for us to attempt to fix any maximum price in this country that would apply to the producer. The ramifications of that question are so great that I would not undertake at this time to discuss them.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield a moment? I do not care to divert the Senator, but would the Senator care to state whether he has reached a conclusion as to whether there should be an authority to fix minimum prices.

Mr. KENYON. I have in my own mind. I believe unquestionably that it will stimulate production, and while late for this year, when the year's wheat is practically all in, and the corn will soon be in, but for such staples as potatoes, beans, and possibly peas it will stimulate production for this year. But this war may not be finished this year, and we need to stimulate the question of production for the years that are to come. England has a minimum guaranty that has just taken effect a few months ago.

I merely rose to get before the Senate the status of this bill. The committee is trying to present these propositions so that they may be ironed out by the Senate, but either there will be a great many amendments to this bill or else there will be a new bill covering some of the lines of thought I have suggested.

I believe it would be wise to have the bill printed, with the amendments offered by the chairman of the committee, which I think reflect the views of the committee as well as can be done.

Mr. THOMAS. I desire to offer an amendment to the pending bill to be known as section 4a. I ask that it be printed and lie on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma as now framed?

Mr. GORE. I wish to ask the Senator from Washington if he will withdraw his request relating to all other amendments, because it would lead probably to more confusion than would the original proposition.

Mr. JONES of Washington. If the amendments proposed by the Senator were presented by the committee as committee amendments, of course I would have no objection to their being printed as a part of the bill, but the Senator has expressly stated that they are not committee amendments. They are individual amendments, and it seems to me that it would simply complicate the matter and lead to confusion to have certain individual amendments printed and not others. We all know what influence printed amendments in the body of the bill have upon Senators who have not given the matter especial study and consideration. They will consider them as committee amendments and accept them as the judgment of the committee.

Mr. GORE. I withdraw the request, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request of the Senator from Oklahoma is withdrawn.

Mr. HARDWICK. I obtained the floor.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. HARDWICK. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I should like to suggest to the Senator from Washington that it seems to me there would be no impropriety in granting the request made by the chairman of the committee. It is evident that the amendments offered by him are intended to perfect the bill; and while they do not come from the committee as committee amendments, yet as a matter of fact they are presented here by the chairman of the committee and are concurred in by a number of the members of the committee. I am sure it would facilitate the consideration of the bill to have the amendment offered by the chairman of the committee printed in the same manner as they would have been printed had they been offered as committee amendments. I am sure it will aid the Senate in the consideration of the measure if that course should be followed. That is the reason why the request was made to have the bill printed in that manner, not printing the amendments offered by other Senators because other amendments are intended to supersede something in the bill, or they present some independent suggestion. I sincerely trust the request of the chairman of the committee will be granted.

Mr. JONES of Washington. There are some of the amendments proposed by the chairman of the committee that relate to entirely new matter and cover matters of very great importance. I do not know what is the character of the other amendments and I am not objecting to them on that account, but it is contrary to the universal practice of the Senate to have individual amendments printed in the body of a bill and it seems to me that it would lead to utter confusion.

It appears to me that we ought to follow one of two courses. We ought to take up the bill and have the amendments presented in the regular way as suggested by the Senator from Arkansas a moment ago, or else we should have the bill sent back to the committee, as suggested by the Senator from Georgia, so that the committee may pass upon the different amendments and whatever they indorse let them report back here as committee amendments. I think we would save a lot of time by doing that; many of them having the indorsement of the committee would be accepted and it would save time. Bringing in here a bill on which apparently the committee differs and is not united, it is bound to create confusion and cause much more debate than if the amendments were considered in committee long enough at least for a majority of the committee to reach a conclusion in reference to vital propositions in the bill. Of course, I am not criticizing the committee at all, but I am making these suggestions in what I believe to be in the interest of saving time and in the interest of prompt action on the bill.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia has the floor. Does he yield further to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. HARDWICK. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I wish to say that the purpose of my insisting upon this request was to obviate the possible necessity of recommitting the bill. I think we should have the bill printed in the form suggested, and if that can not be done I think the bill ought to be recommitted.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. HARDWICK. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to ask the chairman of the committee if he has offered all the amendments he intends to present?

Mr. GORE. I can not answer that question, because it depends somewhat upon the fate of the amendments already offered.

Mr. SMOOT. None of the amendments the Senator has offered has been acted upon by the committee or by the Senate?

Mr. GORE. No, sir.

Mr. SMOOT. Then it seems to me the Senator ought simply to have his amendments printed as amendments offered by him and let them lie on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma has withdrawn his request that the amendments be printed in the body of the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. He has withdrawn his request to have them printed in the bill, but he has not withdrawn his request to have them printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Of course not.

Mr. SMOOT. That I think ought to be done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be done automatically, the Chair will state.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, it seems to me we have a somewhat confused situation here. We have a number of committee amendments which are printed in the bill.

Mr. GORE. They have been acted on.

Mr. HARDWICK. They have been acted on and approved in the Committee of the Whole, and now the Senator from Oklahoma presents certain amendments of the utmost importance changing the very form and structure and character of this proposition. The Senator from Iowa says he has a belief that the committee will approve them. My own belief is that we will get a disposition of this business a great deal quicker and a great deal more satisfactorily if we will let the bill go back to the committee and let them whip it into shape, which I think they ought to do. If the Senator from Oklahoma is not going to seriously oppose it, I think I will move to recommit the bill.

Mr. GORE. My idea was that we would proceed with the consideration of the amendments which would not provoke serious opposition.

Mr. HARDWICK. But we can not tell. For instance, let me illustrate to the Senator what I have in mind. Of course I would find it impossible, under my view of the Constitution, to vote for the bill unless it was confined to interstate and foreign commerce and to the necessities of the Army and Navy. I think it may be that the Senator from Oklahoma might find himself in the same position, and I have enough faith to believe that a majority of the Senate will find itself in the position when it carefully considers the question.

Therefore it is of the utmost importance to know that the vital amendment suggested by the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma is or is not to be incorporated in this bill. If it is, a great many Senators—I started to say, I believe the majority of the Senate—will approach the consideration of the bill from a different standpoint and from a different frame of mind than they would approach it if the bill was left as originally reported. It seems to me that we ought to have an early determination of that question.

Mr. KELLOGG. To which amendment does the Senator refer?

Mr. HARDWICK. I refer to the amendment in which the Senator from Oklahoma suggested that the provisions of the bill be confined to transactions in interstate and foreign commerce, and transactions necessary to supply the Army and Navy of the United States. That is the extreme limit of the power of Congress and exhausts the power of Congress to deal with this subject. My judgment is—and I do not hesitate to state it openly and publicly—that if the bill as reported by the committee had passed the Senate and Congress and had received the approval of the President no judge in the United States would ever uphold its constitutionality. We have no power even in times of war to do the sort of thing this bill proposes in a State with respect to intrastate business, unless it is strictly for the Army and Navy.

Of course, the Senate can see at once what my position is. I do not like to move to recommit the bill, yet at the same time I am going to oppose the bill if this amendment is not adopted. It seems to me the question raised is fundamental, and ought to be settled before going into a discussion of details and before considering other amendments. If it is adopted, it changes the form and structure of the bill.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

Mr. HARDWICK. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota. I had almost concluded.

Mr. GRONNA. I wish to say to the Senator that I think in justice to the members of the committee it is hardly fair to state that the amendments proposed by the chairman would be agreed to by the committee.

Mr. HARDWICK. I suppose the Senator from Iowa expressed an opinion, merely giving his own judgment, and of course he may be in error about it, but I hope not.

Mr. GRONNA. I have not talked with the individual members, but I can say that the amendment proposed by the chairman this morning has not been considered by the whole committee. It may have been considered by individual members of the committee. I should like very much to see the bill recommitted, and I am quite sure we would save a great deal of time if that is done.

Mr. HARDWICK. If the Senator will pardon me, I hope the Senator from Oklahoma will not take it amiss, but I am within my right, and willing to take the responsibility, and I move to recommit the bill to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if I vote to recommit the bill I do so because I think it will save time. I dislike, however, to vote to recommit the bill just brought out if the chairman of the committee is going seriously to oppose its recommittal. I have no doubt from the amendments which have been offered, if the committee could either bring out a bill which would incorporate them or if they rejected them, we would save much time.

Mr. HARDWICK. If the Senator will pardon me, that was the real reason I stated for my motion, and I want to state it openly in the Senate, that I think we will save time by allowing the committee to make some recommendation.

Mr. BORAH. I should dislike very much to vote to recommit the bill if the chairman is going to resist the motion very strenuously.

Mr. GORE. I shall make no resistance to the Senator's motion. I am not sure but that it would be the most expeditious course to pursue. I will not ask that it be done; I will let that responsibility rest on the Senate; but I shall interpose no objection to the motion.

Mr. McCUMBER. I suppose it is understood that included in the motion are all the amendments that have been offered?

Mr. HARDWICK. Of course, the committee will consider the question anew and consider all the amendments.

Mr. McCUMBER. If offered at this time they would not necessarily go back to the committee. I want that understood.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBINSON in the chair). The question is on the motion to recommit the bill to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, before that motion is put I just want to make a brief statement. To prevent undue speculation in one of the most important food products—to wit, wheat and flour—we have recently had an object lesson, and we had another object lesson in the early part of the war in respect to another matter. When at the beginning of the war Europe dumped a whole lot of American securities on this country for sale the price went down and down to such an extent that it almost produced a panic, and for protection against that panic and that cut in prices the New York Stock Exchange was closed for a long time. During the closing of the stock exchange to prevent a great tumbling in prices below the level, owing to the action of the Agricultural Department in part and partly owing to the agitation here in Congress and through the press that we are suffering from a food shortage, as soon as the report of the Department of Agriculture for April came out that there was going to be a deficiency in the winter wheat crop, wheat went up 50 cents a bushel. When the May report came out it was not really more unfavorable, but it was coupled with the excessive agitation and clamor about food shortage, and the result was the speculators raised the price of wheat another 50 cents a bushel until it went up to $3.25 a bushel.

Now, what transpired? It got so rank that the Chicago Grain Exchange less than 10 days ago closed the sale of all futures in wheat except to complete existing contracts. What was the result of that action of the Grain Exchange of Chicago? It reduced the price of wheat immediately from 40 to 50 cents a bushel.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. NELSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I would like to ask the Senator if he does not think we are now approaching the season of the year when parties who manipulate the price of wheat are interested in reducing the price, so that when the new crop comes in they may get it for less money?

Mr. NELSON. There may be something in that, but I refer to those two instances, the one on the New York Stock Exchange, to prevent prices from going too low, and the other on the Chicago Grain Exchange, to prevent prices from going too high. To my mind, if you want to check speculation in such food products as wheat and flour or wheat, for instance, or rye, the best way to do it is to give the President power at the proper time, when such a course of speculation exists, to suspend all future sales or to close up even the stock exchanges.

I do not take the narrow view of the Constitution that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] takes. I hold that when we are in a state of war we have broader powers in those things relating to the welfare of the country than we do in time of peace; but I will not go into that question now. I merely made this suggestion to the members of the committee that if they want to check speculation in wheat that object lesson on the Chicago Grain Exchange should furnish them the proper key to the situation.

I want to make another suggestion on another branch of the case. My friend from Kansas and my friend from Washington have reintroduced what I call—and I hope they will not be insulted by it—the liquor amendments, to prohibit the use of cereals in the manufacture of all kinds of liquor. I want to call their attention to this fact: The manufacturers of whisky have enough manufactured ahead and in cold storage in Government warehouses for two years or more, and if you succeed in closing the breweries and leave the door open for that two years' supply of whisky you will make our people instead of a beer-drinking Nation a whisky-drinking Nation.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. NELSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I merely wish to suggest that we do not leave that door open. That is taken care of, I think, to the satisfaction of the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. NELSON. It was not the other day in the Cummins amendment.

Mr. JONES of Washington. This is a different proposition.

Mr. NELSON. I am glad to hear it is on a different line. If it was like the Cummins amendment, it would have the effect of making us a whisky-drinking country instead of a beer-drinking country.

I make these suggestions for the benefit of the committee to be applied to all these amendments.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, before the motion to recommit is entertained I desire to state that I offered this morning during the morning hour a proposed amendment to this bill somewhat of the same nature as those offered by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. THOMPSON] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES]. It is not my desire that that amendment shall be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry in the event the bill is sent back to that committee. I now ask that my amendment be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York?

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask what is the nature of the proposed amendment?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is about half a page of typewritten matter, and——

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator can state it in a word, I imagine.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It prohibits the use of food products in the manufacture of distilled spirits, and limits the percentage of alcohol that can be used in the manufacture of beer or malt liquors. That is the object of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from New York will be referred to the Committee on Finance. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I understand the bill is now to be recommitted to the committee. The motion has been made, and I wish to say one word.

A circular was read here this morning from the New York Globe. I do not know what the purpose was in asking to have it read. It was with reference to Mr. Hoover and what Mr. Hoover had to say. The circular seemed to imply some friction between the Agricultural Department and Mr. Hoover.

I want to say this, Mr. President, that I feel, after having listened to Mr. Hoover, that criticisms of Mr. Hoover and the work he is trying to do are out of place. He is giving his service to the Government with absolutely no compensation. He is a great, patriotic American, and is interested in this question only for the good of his country.

Mr. Hoover had in Belgium charge of all that work. He had an army mostly of volunteers under him for that work of 175,000 people, and what he did there for humanity the whole world has applauded.

The same idea of getting friction into the departments of the Government has been observed here and there. It seems to me it is an unfortunate thing. The country is told that there is friction between the President and Congress. That is unfortunate, and not true. Now, this circular tells us, impliedly at least, that there is friction between Mr. Hoover and the Agricultural Department. I know that is not true, and I do hope that in this work he is undertaking we will not criticize him unless it be warranted, and that we will help him. It is a great question, this food question, and a difficult question, and it is going to require the best thought of us all. We can get along better in everything in this crisis if criticism between different departments and different officers of the Government is ended.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, before the bill is recommitted I should like to have some little information as a member of the committee. I understand if such action is taken it is taken for the purpose of having the committee consider amendments that have been proposed and determine whether they will incorporate or reject wholly or in part the amendments. It is for that purpose, if it is recommitted, the recommittal will be made.

Mr. HARDWICK. Of course, the committee will have full power to amend the bill in any respect.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I was going to ask this question: Upon its being recommitted, aside from considering the amendments which have been offered, the committee will then be at liberty to incorporate any other matter?

Mr. HARDWICK. It is simply a motion to recommit. The parliamentary situation the Senator knows. If the motion prevails the committee will have full charge of the bill and full power to do as it pleases.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I should like to have that clearly understood.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President, we can not hear the Senator from South Carolina on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Caroline will suspend. The Chair requests Senators to cease audible conversation.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The point I am getting at is this: I take it that there is a partial instruction, if it is recommitted, that the present form of the bill does not at this time meet the approval of the Senate, and the bill is sent back for the committee to consider it, together with such modifications as the committee itself may originate.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I understand the object is to put the bill in better form rather than to recommit it with instructions.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. That is indirectly answering the inquiry. I want to get it clear to the Senate that the suggestion of the recommittal of the bill and its consideration there is that the Senate is not in favor of it in its present form, and to consider modifying amendments and such other modifications as the committee may see fit to incorporate in it is the reason for its return. I want to know that we can modify it in some particulars. I have a pretty clear idea along what lines a modification seems to be desired. For that reason I want to get it clearly in my mind that that modification is asked by the Senate.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, there was one amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] to the bill that he asked be referred to the Committee on Finance, and he very properly asked that it be so referred, because it relates to a restriction of different agricultural products in the use of intoxicating liquors. As we are preparing to raise a very important amount of our war revenue on the taxation of liquors, it becomes most important that all amendments which relate to that subject should go to that committee.

I desire to ask the Senator in charge of the bill whether while I was out of the Chamber there were ony other amendments offered to the bill that pertain to the restriction of agricultural products either in the manufacture of beer or distilled spirits.

Mr. THOMPSON and Mr. GORE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. McCUMBER. I am trying to get information from the chairman of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend. The conversation in the Chamber is so loud that the proceedings can not be carried on. The Chair again requests Senators to cease from audible conversation.

Mr. McCUMBER. I have asked the question of the chairman of the committee, and I take it that he is ready to answer.

Mr. GORE. I will say that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. THOMPSON] has offered an amendment relating to that subject, and I believe an amendment has also been offered by the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], but upon that point I am not certain. I know of no other amendments of the kind. Of course, they may have been presented this morning, and they would not have come to my notice.

Mr. McCUMBER. It seems to me that those amendments should follow the amendment offered by the Senator from New York, and they should go to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. GORE. I may say in this connection that there are two bills relating to the liquor question now pending before the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with a view of conservation. I assume that that is the reason why the Senators offered their amendments to the pending bill.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield.

Mr. THOMPSON. I simply rose to inform the Senator that I introduced an amendment of that character this morning, and if there is any question about my amendment following the course suggested by the Senator from Georgia I request that my amendment go to the Comittee on Agriculture and Forestry, where I think the subject can be properly considered. It relates to the conservation of the food products of the country, which we are considering thoroughly, on which we have held hearings for several weeks, and all the facts are before the committee.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I think the Senator can realize that we are going to get matters very much complicated, for the Committee on Finance, who are now meeting every day and considering the measure for raising a portion of our revenues from distilled and malt spirits, will then have another bill designed to prohibit the manufacture of the very articles from which it is proposed to obtain that revenue.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. HARDWICK. I merely wish to suggest to the Senator, and for the benefit of the Senator from Kansas, that, of course, the Senator from New York escaped the parliamentary situation by having his amendment, by special action of the Senate, referred to another committee; but if the motion to recommit prevails, every amendment to this bill pending in the Senate goes with the bill to the committee——

Mr. McCUMBER. It certainly does, unless——

Mr. HARDWICK. Unless the Senate takes contrary action.

Mr. McCUMBER. Unless there is a motion made that the amendments be referred to another committee.

Mr. HARDWICK. That is true. I say, unless the Senate takes contrary action.

Mr. McCUMBER. And I think they should all go together. To bring this matter before the Senate, I move that the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] be referred to the Committee on Finance. I will take one amendment at a time.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, the Senator from North Dakota will gain no time by that, because I can offer my amendment to this bill when it comes up on the floor of the Senate, and I propose to do so. The amendment has been referred to the Committee on Agriculture; it was so referred when I introduced it this morning. I desired that done because I wanted the Committee on Agriculture to pass upon the matter. If the Committee on Agriculture, after considering it——

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order. The motion before the Senate is to recommit this bill. I do not wish to take the Senator from Washington off the floor, but I think that we ought to dispose of one thing at a time; and I do not think the motion of my colleague is in order.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I am perfectly willing for the vote to be taken, although I do not think that the Senator ought to make that motion, because a motion that would take the amendment of the Senator from New York from the Finance Committee and refer it to the Committee on Agriculture would be just as much in order as is this motion, and I think there would be much more reason for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] moves to recommit the bill with all amendments to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The Chair understood the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] to offer a substitute for that motion, that a certain amendment—to wit, the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES]—be referred to the Committee on Finance. The Chair thinks that motion is in order.

Mr. McCUMBER. That was my intention; but in order that the matter may not be complicated at this time—and I suppose that it will come up later, the chairman of the Committee on Finance [Mr. SIMMONS] being present—I will withdraw the motion and leave the matter to the chairman of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question, then, is on the motion of the Senator from Georgia, that the bill with all amendments be recommitted to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I understand that debate is now in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, before this bill goes to the committee, and because there have been some observations made upon the floor which I think are entirely erroneous, I desire to discuss some matters which I think are somewhat misunderstood.

Every once in a while some Senator charges that the price of grain is due to speculation. Thereupon the vials of senatorial wrath are copiously poured forth upon the heads of the wheat speculators. It is for the time being taken as a fact that all the rise in the price of wheat is due to the wicked speculators. A short while thereafter another Senator will undertake to justify a food dictatorship upon the ground that there is such a shortage of wheat in this country and in the world that everybody is liable to starve to death. Of course, if the latter case be true, it accounts fully for the high price of wheat. If the two causes exist together, then they ought to be considered together and each charged with its share in the production of the high prices.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that in our desire to regulate conditions which exist we may if we are not careful do a great deal more harm than we shall do good. The most dangerous thing ever attempted is for half-informed men to undertake to interfere with the business of well-informed men. There has never yet been a man upon this earth who undertook to run the business of the people of any nation who has not made a mess of it, and for the simple reason that every man knows more about his own business than any other man can possibly know. The business of the country is the aggregate business of individuals and the knowledge of the individuals engaged in that business. If you interfere with the management of the private businesses of millions of men you must substitute for their close and intimate knowledge the knowledge of some one man. That man is necessarily ignorant of all the details of each private business, and even uninformed regarding its general aspects. This must be true unless the dictator is possessed of intelligence little short of that of the Infinite God. Accordingly whoever undertakes the job is bound simply to make a mess of the business of a nation.

With that preliminary observation I want to submit to the Senate some facts which I think completely disprove certain assertions that have been made. It is asserted that the present price of wheat is unprecedentedly high. Reasoning from the high price, these gentlemen find no difficulty in concluding that it is caused by a tremendous shortage. That sort of logic soon leads them to declare that $2.15 wheat means world starvation.

Mr. President, the shortage of wheat always will have something to do with the price of wheat; but the present shortage of wheat does not account for the increased price of wheat. Speculation in wheat may also have something to do with the price of wheat, but the speculation in wheat can not justify the present price of wheat. There are causes outside of those two conditions that must be considered. I believe, if I can have your attention for a little bit, that I can, at least, make a suggestion that will furnish food for thought.

The present crop prospects of wheat in the United States are not much below what they were in 1916. The crop shortage in 1916 was not enormously below that of 1912, when we had no such prices as now prevail. The amount of wheat exported is not sufficient to account for this difference in price. It is a false logic that starts with the high price of an article and argues back to a shortage. Likewise it is a false logic that starts with a high price and argues back to speculation. Each may contribute, yet it does not follow that either is a potential cause. We must look further.

Now, let me prove that. The price of coal in the United States has enormously increased; it has increased almost in proportion to the increased price in wheat. Is there a real coal shortage in the United States? Has the coal output suddenly proven a failure? Mr. President, the scientists tell us that there is enough coal in the bowels of the earth, reasonably accessible to man, to supply the wants of this world for 20 centuries, yet coal has advanced almost as rapidly as wheat has advanced. When you find that condition, therefore, you must look for some other cause than a world shortage in the crop. So also you must look for some other cause than the speculation upon the board of trade, because coal prices are not so controlled.

The cotton crop of last year was nearly an average crop, falling, perhaps, a little below that of the average; and yet the price of cotton mounted to the extraordinary figure of 20 cents a pound. That is the highest price that cotton has been within the memory of man, almost. When did it go higher than that?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Soon after the late war.

Mr. REED. Fifty years ago.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The price of cotton is now the highest in 40 years.

Mr. REED. Well, 50 years ago, of course, when the South was prostrated by the war, there was but little cotton being raised; but, with the exception of the time during that war, the highest price for which cotton has ever sold is now being paid. That can not be accounted for by speculation in the cotton market. There may be some speculation, but the present high price can not be accounted for by the wicked trading on the Board of Trade in Chicago or in New York. You must seek another cause.

We find if we examine the matter that the price of corn has gone up just about as fast as has the price of wheat; and yet there is no tremendous world shortage in corn, and the corn prospects for this year, notwithstanding the reports that may have been sent out of a pessimistic character, are as good as they have been in the history of this country for the past 10 or 12 years. There is no indication of such a shortage as will account for the increased price.

There was a great shortage of potatoes last year, but the singular fact is that the potato price runs in its increase just about with these other prices.

Let me call your attention to manufactured products. The raw materials for steel are inexhaustible. There is no limit to the amount of steel that can be produced in the United States except the capacity of the mills. That capacity, of course, can be multiplied as rapidly and as often as capitalists feel there will be a remunerative return upon additional mills. The supply of iron ore is practically exhaustless, and yet the price of steel of all kinds has gone up as rapidly as has the price of wheat or corn. That is not all. The price of locomotives has gone up about as rapidly; the price of freight cars has gone up about as rapidly; the price of nearly all of the great staples, whether they be food for the table or clothing for the back, or the instrumentalities of transportation, or fuel for the household or for the factory, has mounted, all in about the same way.

So, Mr. President, the Senator who rises on the floor and assumes that the world is starving to death, or is going to starve to death, and proves it by the price of wheat, or the man who undertakes to prove that the price of wheat and the price of other edibles is controlled by speculators upon boards of trade is confronted by the fact that in those lines and vocations of life not at all concerned with the speculator in wheat the same rapid and unusual increase of price has taken place. This leads me to inquire whether it is not well for us to pause and endeavor to ascertain what the real reasons are for the remarkable increase in prices?

Mr. President, I undertake to assert that an examination will demonstrate that while speculation has something to do with all of these increased prices it has not been the controlling factor, and while the shortage of production of wheat or corn has had something to do with the price it has not been the controlling factor; that, outside of those considerations, there are other influences that have produced the greater part of the present conditions.

What are those influences? I believe they are made up of a multitude of things, all contributing to one general result. I talked this morning with one of the best-informed dealers in grain in the western country. He is a man who simply handles or trades upon commission; he does not own or buy wheat for himself. I asked him what the cause was for the remarkable price of wheat. He said frankly, "There is an element of speculation that has contributed to some extent to the increased price of wheat, but that is not the real and vital cause. The real and vital cause," said this gentleman to me, "is undoubtedly to be found in the fact that the allies have been placing orders for enormous quantities of wheat in this country. They have placed these orders to such an extent that it is known throughout the trade that there is a remarkably strong movement of concentrated buying; that some powerful influence has gone into the market and is buying all the grain that it can secure. The result has been that everyone concerned in buying grain has felt that influence." The purchases on behalf of the allies have been made in good faith, but those purchases run into the millions of bushels and have affected the price of grain. That movement now is not speculative, and the increase in price is simply a response by the market to the existing conditions of trade; for, plainly, if there was no war in Europe and European agents suddenly came over here and placed orders for 100,000,000 or 200,000,000 or 300,000,000 bushels of wheat at almost any price the price of grain in the country would be bound to rise.

I talked this morning with a great railroad builder—and I would unhesitatingly give his name to any committee, but I do not care to drag it into the public debate here—in regard to the cost of articles that railroads are obliged to buy. We were not considering the question I am now discussing. In the course of our conversation this gentleman told me that the railroads were paying prices now for steel rails that were twice as great as the prices paid a few years ago; that they were paying for spikes a price which, if I recollect aright—and I may be in error in my recollection—was approximately three times the amount paid only two or three years ago. I asked him, "Why are these prices exacted? Is it the result of combination, or what is it the result of?" He replied, "It grows out of the fact that the mills can sell to the allies and other European nations practically all the surplus products of their mills, and almost at their own prices." Now, observe that is not speculation. It is an abnormal condition, and it may be a condition that can in some degree be remedied; but what I am arguing to the Senate is that we ought not to go chasing a will-o'-the-wisp; we ought not to follow any false scent, but the Committee on Agriculture, charged now with the responsibility of this bill, ought to go to the bottom of these matters before it brings the bill back to the Senate.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I can understand how the price of steel would increase because of the greatly increased demand, but that would not altogether be the case with foodstuffs. There is more steel being used now than ever before, but there are no more foodstuffs being used, because people eat about the same quantity from one year to another.

Mr. REED. I say that there is some food shortage, and that that is an honest reason for an advance in price. I say that there is probably some speculation, and I am calling the attention of the Senate to the fact that there is probably this great buying movement on the part of the allies, who have entered into our markets and who are seeking to gain possession of all the grain possible.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Is it the purpose of the Senator to establish the fact that the price of foodstuffs has not been affected by the wholesale gambling and speculation on exchanges and boards of trade?

Mr. REED. It is my purpose to try to get the committee to go into the facts and not to guess at the facts. I have heard them guessed at on the floor.

Mr. VARDAMAN. The Senator is entirely correct as to that.

Mr. REED. And it is my purpose to call attention to the fact that the mere existence of a high price for food does not necessarily indicate a speculative movement. Now, let me call the Senator's attention to a matter which I think may elucidate what I am going to say. I have no theory to maintain here. I have no pet hobby to ride.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I want the Senator to understand that I did not intend to create that impression. I merely wanted to get the trend of the Senator's argument that I might follow him.

Mr. REED. I understand the Senator, and I think he understands me. I simply mean to say that I do not rise here for the purpose of trying to ride a hobby under the wire. I am, on the other hand, pleading that an impartial investigation shall disclose the real truth. To that end I call attention to the fact that speculation in wheat is not the controlling cause of high wheat prices, and I cite this as an illustration: I am informed that although ordinarily wheat for future delivery runs in its price away ahead of wheat for present delivery, the present condition of the market is that wheat for July delivery is away below wheat for present delivery. That condition I am told has been occasioned by the enormous buying orders that have been placed by the allies with the principal grain men of the country; that is one thing that I think has caused this rise.

Another thing that I think has caused the rise in price is that the departments of the United States, every one of them that have had anything whatever to say, have said the things necessary to create a food panic in the United States. I do not want to say this harshly or in criticism, but I think that is not an exaggeration, when one reads such statements as this from the Agricultural Department:

> The condition of winter wheat on May 1, this year, 73.2, was the lowest it has been on that date since 1888. The abandonment of acreage planted is the heaviest ever recorded, nearly 31 per cent of the acreage planted. The forecast of production, based upon the condition and the acreage remaining for harvest, 366,000,000 bushels, is the smallest production of winter wheat since 1904. It compares with a production of 482,000,000 bushels last year and 674,000,000 in 1915—

And so forth.

When the Agricultural Department puts out that kind of statements, and when Mr. Hoover puts out his interviews, and when we are solemnly told that we must have somebody to control this situation or we are going to starve, and when we are talked to about eating doctored bread—a composite of bran, shorts, and middlings—when we find on the table of the Senate restaurant a recipe for making bread out of cottonseed hulls, and when the miserable stuff is actually put before us——

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. When the alarmist is upon every platform and every stump shouting, "Woe, woe, woe!" and the fellow with the cottonseed meal is standing in the public places crying "Eat this or starve"—when you have conditions like that coordinating and cooperating, is it any wonder that every man who has a bushel of wheat hides it from sight and that the prices go skyrocketing?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KING in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. REED. I yield for the defense of cottonseed meal. I know that is what is coming. [Laughter.]

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, the cottonseed meal needs no defense at my hands, or at least not at the hands of those who had occasion to eat it the other day down on the table. I wanted to call the Senator's attention to the fact that it was out of that meal that this bread was made; and it is an assurance along the line of his argument that even though there might be a shortage in the amount of wheat flour that we have, we could fall back upon an adequate supply of cottonseed meal made in the form of the bread we had the other day.

I think the actual conditions will show that a wheat shortage does not yet exist, or should not; because, if the Senator will allow me, I should like to call his attention to the fact that in 1915 we made 1,025,000,000 bushels of wheat, which was the largest crop up to that time ever made in the history of America. In 1916 we made 639,000,000 bushels of wheat. Adding the two together and dividing it by two, we have for the two years an average of something like 840,000,000 bushels, which was 120,000,000 bushels higher than the 10-year average up to 1915.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, we are told that in order to keep prices within proper limits we must have somebody to fix these prices. What does that mean to everybody who has anything to sell? Is it not notice that there is a frightful shortage? Is not its direct result to make all who have wheat cling to it and all who need wheat willing to buy while yet there is an open market?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Before the Senator leaves the statement of the causes which might necessarily and legitimately advance prices I want to ask him if it is not also a fact that there is another great and far-reaching cause which always prevails in war times, and which is especially potent at this time, namely, the great expansion in the currency of the world and the fact that a great many men are taken out of productive employment?

We know that France, for instance, has expanded her currency something like three thousand million dollars. Germany has expanded her currency in about the same amount; and there has been brought into the United States over two thousand million dollars of gold, so that we have had a great expansion in currency. It is a well-known economic fact that this expansion of the currency of the world will inevitably lead to an increase in the level of prices—a great law that is well understood, that is very potent, and that can not be controlled by legislative action.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Senator has anticipated me. I was coming to that point, but he states the proposition from a little different angle and states it splendidly, and I thank him for his contribution.

I beg that Senators will approach this question thoughtfully, not in a spirit of excitement, and I hope nobody in any public position will play politics. Of course that would be impossible in the Senate. But in line with what the Senator from Nebraska has just said, that a general increase of prices results from an expansion of the money volume, I call attention to the fact that a general increase of price usually means a change in money value, so that frequently there is an apparent increase of price, when in reality there has been a depreciation in the value of the money itself.

I do not know that authority is any longer of any value in court, in the Senate, or in any other place, because we have been breaking down all the milestones and destroying the red lines on all the intellectual maps; but John Stuart Mill laid it down that a general rise in prices affects no one except those with fixed incomes, and that a general rise in prices really means a change in money value, not in the value of the article itself.

What I was starting to say when the Senator from Nebraska rose was that about two-thirds of that thing which causes business to go is confidence in the result. Our friends the Republicans taunted us Democrats a few years ago with the statement that what we needed was a restoration of confidence. The truth is that if you can inspire every man in the country with a confident belief that business is going to be good, business will be good, for every man will begin to buy and begin to sell, begin to plant and begin to sow, so will come the increase of the harvest. So when people all conclude that business is going to be good it makes business good, and when business improves in one section of the country it is bound to improve in other sections of the country.

On this question of price, let us look for a few minutes at what has been going on. Nearly three years ago war was declared in Europe. At that time a good many American mills were languishing. At that time there was some degree of uncertainty; but when war was declared in Europe, and when European agents came here and began buying very large quantities of steel, it, of course, had an immediate and stimulating effect. In a short time that effect spread. Then they began buying horses all over the United States; they began putting in orders for wheat, for corn, for cotton, for mules, for wool, for every sort of thing. Is it remarkable that prices went up?

Now, if prices go up on certain staple articles it forces prices up on other articles. Every freshman student of political economy knows that is true. For instance, if corn were this year to go to $1 a bushel, and wheat were to remain at 60 cents or 70 cents a bushel, and that were continued for two or three years, it is certain that everybody would begin planting corn, and that the price of wheat would have to come up. If men are making enormous profits in agriculture, it is certain that that will be soon felt in every other line of industry. So we must recognize the fact that the stimulating effect of this war has been such that it has put up prices everywhere, on every kind and on every sort of thing that there is in the United States.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. That does not include real estate, however, because there are many places in the United States today where real estate is at a lower price than it has been in many years.

Mr. REED. Possibly; and yet you will find that while real estate lies outside of the zone of immediate control, yet the real-estate market does follow the movements of commerce. You will find that if farm products keep to their present figure for a few years, farms in the United States will go up largely in value.

Mr. President, if, then, we find it is true that there has been a general revival of business in the United States, if along with that general revival of business there has been a general increase of prices, if the wages of labor have been increased, if the price of corn and wheat and oats and rye and barley have been increased, if the price of cattle and hogs and sheep and wool and cotton have been increased, if the price of steel has been increased, if the price of copper has been increased, if the price of lead and zinc have been increased, if the price of everything has been increased, then will somebody tell me what sense there is in trying to interfere with that great law of supply and demand which has increased prices all along the line, and which, while it imposes its burdens, at the same time grants its benefits?

I am not talking about the cornering of things. I am not talking about the criminals. I am not talking about that scoundrel whom we have legislated against for years, who tries to forestall the market. I am not talking about the man who conspires to do some wicked thing of that kind, but I am talking about the general proposition of the control of prices; and I submit that when you interfere with the general law of supply and demand you are liable—to use the expression I employed before, for want of a better one—to mess things all up, to introduce chaos and ruin.

Let us see, when you come to a practical test of these matters, where you come out.

A farmer, under this law of supply and demand, finds that he is able to get $1.75, or even $2, for his bushel of wheat. We appoint some gentleman now, and give him arbitrary power, and he says: "The price of wheat shall not exceed $1.25 a bushel. That is enough for anybody to pay for wheat. It is enough for any farmer to receive." I grant you that if times were normal, perhaps $1.25 is all the farmer would need to receive. But now, when things are not normal, we step in and interfere with the price of wheat for this farmer. Likewise, it may be said to this farmer: "You can only have 80 cents for your corn, and you can only have 60 cents for your oats," and so on, down the line.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I understand that this bill does not undertake to control the price in the hands of the producer.

Mr. REED. I understand that, but please let me proceed with my argument. I am delivering this little homily here on general principles. I do not know what is coming in here. Only the Lord God of Hosts can look ahead and tell us what is coming. What I say may be of no value, but I want to say it.

I was saying suppose that you put this limit upon the price the farmers are to receive for their wheat and their corn and their oats, and likewise you limit the price of their cattle and of their hogs. Now, you have covered food products, the thing most complained about. Ah, but how about the farmer now! He has to buy, and in what markets must he buy? He must buy from the hardware merchant, who buys indirectly from the great steel producers of the country; and when he buys anything, from a pound of nails to an agricultural implement, to a tool that he uses on his place, he must pay an advanced price. In some instances the advance has not been great; in some instances it has been enormous.

When he hires a man to work upon his place he hires a man who demands higher wages, because wages have gone up in all parts of the United States and because the man, from the shirt on his back to the shoes on his feet, has had to pay more for everything he wears, and that man demands higher wages. When the farmer brings his grain to the market and puts it upon the railroad tracks he pays a higher freight rate than was paid a few years ago, and, if I mistake not, he will soon be paying a very much higher freight rate to get his grain to the market than he is paying now, for I believe there will be an increase in freight rates. So, now, if you are going to reduce the farmer's price upon his grain, upon his hogs, upon his cattle, and upon his cotton, then, clearly, you must protect that farmer upon everything that he buys. If you are going to fix a maximum and a minimum price for him, then you have got to fix a maximum and a minimum price for every man who sells anything that the farmer has to use. That is the farmer's end of it.

I see, sitting here on my left, a great cattle raiser, and yet I have no doubt that if he were to rise in his seat he would say that notwithstanding the enormous increase in the price of cattle there has been nothing like a corresponding increase in the profits of the cattle raiser, and would give you the reasons why, and would tell you of the increased burdens and costs that have fallen upon the cattle raiser. So, Mr. President, if you carry on this project you must protect all classes. If you are going to regulate the price of foods produced on the farm you must regulate the price of farm labor, or otherwise your farmer will find himself unable to pay the wages that are being charged. You must also protect the farmer on his shoes, his clothes, on all he must buy.

My friend says they have done that in England. Very well. Then if you regulate the price of the farm laborer's wages you must regulate the price of all other wages, because if you do not reduce the wages in other employments correspondingly nobody will work for the farmer at the arbitrary price you have fixed. The farmer will find his grain rotting in his fields and no one there to do the work, because you have reduced the price of his labor so low that nobody will work, and there will be no one to harvest the crops, unless the law lays its hand upon them and you introduce slave labor upon the farms of this country; for I do not care, sir, whether you put the individual in the uniform of this Government and have him pitch hay in a khaki coat or whether you put him in a cotton shirt; if he works at that kind of labor against his will, he is a slave, sir, whether he be white or black.

If you are going to reduce the wages of all labor in order that you may preserve this equality, you will, of course, proceed to reduce the price of steel to the steel maker, the price of coal to the coal-mine owner, and accordingly you will also go down the line and you will reduce the wages of the men who dig the coal and who make the steel, because manifestly the proprietors of these institutions can not pay the high prices that they are now paying if you reduce their prices to too low a point. So, when you get through what have you done? You have reduced the price of everything the farmer produces; you have reduced the price of everything that everybody else produces, including the labor of men. The result of all your efforts is that you have cut the price of everything, including wages, but you have also to the same degree cut the ability of all men to get money. Hence nobody is any better off than he was before you interfered at all.

Mr. President, these observations are not new. They have been regarded as fundamentals all down the course of the years since old Adam Smith's day. They are elaborated and dwelt upon by the philosophers who have considered questions of this character; and yet, singularly enough, it is now proposed, in certain bills that are in Congress, to give to the Secretary of Agriculture an almost arbitrary right to deal with the question of food value and food prices, and so forth; and perhaps we shall also have a bill proposed to regulate wages, for, if once we begin to regulate prices produced by combinations or forestalling, who shall say we must not include wages?

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. REED. I do.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Did the Senator ever stop to consider this phase of the question—that the creation of this benevolent, altruistic food despot is but the beginning of a policy which the German Government and the English Government have been forced to resort to, which puts the Government in control not only of the production but of the consumption and distribution and dissemination of the work of man's hands and the product of man's industry? That is to where it tends.

Mr. REED. That is not only to where it tends but that is—to follow the phraseology—to where it inevitably goes, if you accomplish anything; because, now, if an arbitrary power interferes with and limits the price of articles and the price of labor and the production of articles, it has yet accomplished nothing for the general good unless it also regulates the distribution of the articles; otherwise, the man having the advantage either in money or in position might get it all, and the man who lacked these advantages would get nothing. But in addition to that you get nowhere, as I have undertaken to show, by your regulation of prices, because you must regulate all prices downward if you regulate any price downward. Barring, I mean now, unjust speculations, barring criminal acts, you get nowhere unless you regulate all of them downward, and even then you have gotten nowhere; for if you were to cut wages 50 per cent and cut all prices 50 per cent, everybody would still be in the same relative position he was in before you made any regulation. So that in order to accomplish anything you must go the next step; you must say how much men can consume. You must enter every household, peep into every larder, or, by bread tickets and meat checks and milk certificates limit the amount the people of the United States are to be permitted to eat.

Mr. President, I venture to ask you to consider this thought: A thing which may be vitally necessary under one set of circumstances may be absolutely foolish and destructive under another set of circumstances. If a man has me crowded in a corner with his knife at my throat it may be highly justifiable for me to kill him. If the man be a thousand miles or 3,000 miles removed from me it may be absolutely foolish and criminal for me to seek him out to the end that I may have occasion to kill him. That is not a fortunate illustration because you might be applying it to the war. I am not applying it to the war but to commercial conditions. If a citadel be encompassed about with the enemy, if its ordinary means of access have been cut off, if it is a question whether the fortress can hold out until the enemy may be driven away or exhausted, it may be highly important for the commander of that fortress to put his people upon almost starvation rations, to weigh every ounce that enters between their lips, to the end that he may preserve enough strength to hold the citadel until reinforcements come. Everything is subordinated to that one supreme, overmastering necessity. But under ordinary times with the enemy a thousand miles away, it would be foolish to close down the industries of that city, it would be destructive to stop all labor and the usual avocations of life. It would be injurious to the last degree, because you would stop the production of wealth and arrest the powers of the people.

Sir, the wise man observing the enemy a thousand miles away and marching toward his fortress would endeavor to keep the productive capacity of the people at the highest point without interfering with it in any way except to stimulate it to the greatest degree. The wise man would keep the productive capacity going, the machinery of life in operation as long as he could until the enemy was almost at the gates. Then he would close down only because of the higher necessity.

So, Mr. President, because conditions in Europe have called for radical action, for an overturning of all the usual affairs of life, and a revolution in every business capacity and in every kind of organization, it does not follow that it is wise for us to pursue any such course.

Mr. President, let me give you an illustration. Let us suppose that the States of Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania were surrounded by a cordon of fire and steel. It would then, in a way, represent the condition of Germany. Under those circumstances what would be the duty of the Government? Manifestly, the Government would act as the commander of the fortress would have acted in the illustration I used a few moments ago; he would gather in all the food, he would parcel it out, he would compel everybody to produce only that which could be utilized to hold the battle line and help win the fight. That would be a reasonable and rational thing for him to do.

But, sir, if the war was 3,000 miles away, and if the things he was required to contribute were men and money, and there was no enemy at his gate, what would the wise controller of this imaginary province I am speaking of do? Would he not say to the business man and the manufacturer, "Keep the wheels of your industry running; create, create, and still create; put on three shifts of men and run night and day if you can"? Would he not say to the agriculturist, "Plant, plant, and still plant; let every acre of ground bring forth its golden fruitage, for every bushel of wheat and every bushel of corn is as valuable to us as a bullet or as a bayonet"? Would he not stir the energies of his people and seek to keep them at their highest point of efficiency? It seems to me that by doing that he would create the wealth necessary, he would create the resources necessary, he would create those great forces in the mighty struggle which are at last to determine the issue. That is what a wise man would do. But would a wise man under those circumstances expect to get that result by interfering with the organized business of the people, by setting up some arbitrary agency that would undertake to tell every man what he should do? A thing of that sort would be utterly foolish. The thing to do is to hold before the people a general reward. What is that general reward? The general reward that puts into play every faculty of mind and every muscle for the highest money to be paid.

If I wanted to set every mill in this country running on full time, if I wanted to double the capacity of every mill in this country and had the arbitrary power to do it, I would so arrange it that every man who built a new mill would be certain of good prices for some time to come. If I wanted to have plenty of wheat and corn and rye and oats and barley and cattle, hogs, sheep, chickens, and eggs, and things we must have, then I would make it so that every farmer in the country would be certain that his labor would receive a rich reward when the harvest time came.

So instead of interfering because they interfere in Europe, where the enemy are thundering at their gates, we ought to stand here to encourage the business of the United States. We ought to stand here to encourage the farmer and the laborer and the merchant and all other men who produce. There is no necessity for shackling business.

Mr. President, I grant you that if we could have a man as food regulator who was wise enough to look with infinite sweep of vision down into the homes and hearts and lives of people and appreciate their wants, and guard with the wisdom of the Almighty One all the energies of the earth, then there would be some use in having a food dictator. But, sir, I said the other day, and I repeat in substance what I then said, there is scarcely a farmer of ordinary intelligence between the Atlantic and the Pacific, between the Canadian line and the Rio Grande River, who is living on a farm that he has worked for a year or two who does not know better how to run that farm and get results than the Secretary of Agriculture. He knows more about it than any expert who is down here in the Agricultural Department. I admit that an expert from the Agricultural Department may come to a farmer who has a farm and say, "Here is an improved variety of corn we have discovered; try it." And the Agricultural Department may come to another and say, "Here is an improved variety of wheat; try it," and the farmer with his practical knowledge may take that bit of scientific knowledge and add it to his own and he may make a better farm. So with fertilizers. But in these instances the Government is coming in simply to aid, not to control; simply to encourage, not to boss; simply to contribute, not to seek to manage. But I say to you, if you turn your ordinary agricultural expert loose on 160 acres of land out in any of the States, he will have to go to the farmers who have farmed the ground around him in order to learn how to plant his crops, in order to learn how to harvest them.

I happened to have been born and reared upon a farm, yet I was a grown man before I ever saw the white snowballs of the cotton fields. I did not know anything more about raising cotton than a fellow born and reared under the Equator knows about skating on the ice of the North. No man at the Agricultural Department is capable of managing the business of the American farmer or the American business man.

Sir, I do not want to make this personal, and yet we can not disregard personalities when personalities appear in Congress and, with bills in their hands, ask that they themselves be created a supreme dictator of the business of our country.

I know farmers in the country, and you all do know them, who have amassed princely fortunes at farming, men who have studied climate and soil and crops and markets, great masters in their business, and with such men the Secretary of Agriculture can not as an agriculturalist be compared. I say that kindly. I have the utmost respect for the Secretary of Agriculture. In his own line and in his own business, as the teacher in an agricultural college, I think him a very fine man; but when you talk about taking the business of the farmers of the United States from their hands and giving its direction to a man who never saw their farms you propose an infinite absurdity. I assert that I can take from the farms of this country men who if they were put in the same field of human activity with any agricultural expert there is in Washington would outstrip that expert.

Let me tell you, sirs—and it is time the fact was known—that appointment or election to an office does not give any man an intellectual superiority. Let me tell you that men mentally in this world differ no more than they do physically. There is a great common and general average of men physically, men who can do about the same amount of physical labor and endure about the same amount of toil. Beneath them is a class of those who are physically deficient. Above them is a class of men who are a little superior to the general average physically. So it is in the intellectual world. But there are no intellectual kings or monopolists, as there are no monopolists of physical power. You can take an ordinary citizen and put him in office down here at the other end of the Avenue or at this end of the Avenue and he does not know a bit more after he is put in than he did before he was put in, and the day before he was put in office he did not know any more than a hundred other men in the community. When you talk about taking the business from men who have created their business and put it in the hands of one, two, or three men who did not create that business you propose a thing monstrous and horrible and destructive.

Mr. President, we are a funny set of creatures in this world. I have seen an ordinary lawyer practicing at the bar who, when he was called into consultation with lawyers at the same side of the table, they would express great doubt as to whether he knew anything about his own case. When they met him in the forum as antagonists they unhesitatingly attacked him with supreme confidence in their own power. I have seen that man peddle his own petition, I have seen his friends peddle it, to have him appointed to a judicial position. I have seen the disgust written upon the faces of the members of the bar at the supreme impudence of the fellow asking for a high judicial position. I have seen him appointed, and 24 hours afterwards I have seen them banquet him and call him judge, and two months afterwards they would quote everything he said from the bench as though it were said by the Lord God of Hosts. Yet he knew no more upon the bench than he did before. He had a little more authority.

I have seen men engaged in struggle for political office; I have seen them defeated by a few votes; I have seen the victor win by a few votes or by a few tricks; and then I have seen it suddenly claimed that the victor is a man possessed of remarkable wisdom and prescience, while the man who was defeated is regarded as no longer worthy to wash the feet of the great. Yet between the two men there was nothing but a political accident. We have seen this repeated over and over again. I have seen men taken from the obscurity of private life, men who had never won a single position of prominence, who had never done a thing to attract public attention, who had not risen to any commanding position in anything they ever undertook, who had been merely ordinary humdrum fellows of no special mark—I have seen those men put into office and suddenly they are quoted as though they spoke with all the accumulated wisdom of the ages. They knew no more in office than they knew when they were out of office. You may take a man from the obscurity of private life, you may elevate him to a position in the Cabinet of the President, and a great President, yet that man does not know one thing more the day he went into office than he knew the day before, except that he has an office, and the day before he would have been open to your challenge at every turn. You would have refused to blindly follow him the day before; you would have taken his judgment along with the judgment of your fellow men as no better than that of the average man; but suddenly we find it asserted that whatsoever he says is a verity.

Mr. President, I am one of those who believe in the intelligence of the people. I do not believe that the intelligence of the Congress of the United States is much greater than the intelligence of the communities of the people of the United States. We only represent the general average of intelligence.

Mr. GORE. Everybody knows more than any one body.

Mr. REED. As the Senator from Oklahoma says, "Everybody knows more than any one body." I hope we can remember that.

So, Mr. President, we may be elected to these offices and may do our best, and we may by study and constant effort be able to know a little bit more about questions than the men at home, yet if you go home and call together the intellectual men of your community you will find that their views are probably just as wise and as worthy of consideration as are ours. What is true of the Congress of the United States is true of the executive department of the United States.

Make no mistake. If in this emergency you appoint a food dictator, as it is called, you will have appointed but an ordinary man. He may be a smart man, but there are thousands of smart men. He may be a good man, but there are thousands of good men. He may be an energetic man, but there are thousands of energetic men. He may do as well as any one man can do, but this is the thing that I assert: No man ever has done or ever will attend to the business of the 104,000,000 people of the United States as well as they can attend to that business themselves. No man can do it.

If we will but meet this case upon the simple ground of preventing forestalling the market, if we will put our finger upon the criminal who has been guilty of those practices which have always been condemned; if you will do something to get transportation restored, you will have met the great and the crying needs of the hour.

Mr. President, I said the other day and I repeat it now, the man who goes about the United States of America preaching that we are on the verge of bankruptcy or starvation is a false prophet—is the man who does not speak the truth. Why, sir, as you go over this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, what do you behold? Ten thousand, 100,000, plowshares are turning over the soil, and the man back of the plow knows how to cultivate that piece of ground. He knows what to plant it with. He knows how to get the best results. Go a little farther and you will observe the cattle upon the hills. They have not fallen off in their numbers. Starvation and gaunt want has not yet thrust its ugly countenance into the faces of the American people.

Go on farther and farther and you will come to the vast plains of the West, where the cattle and the sheep graze by the thousands and tens of thousands. Look wherever you will and you will find that in this mighty domain of ours everybody is at work. The smoke is rolling from countless chimneys. The whir of the wheels of industry is making the sweet music of production. Everywhere men are employed. Everywhere men are in their shirt sleeves. Everywhere the tireless muscles of the American workingman are being employed. All you need to do is to leave to the stout citizenry of the land the problems of production and they will keep the United States of America from starving this year at least. But interfere with them and you may work irreparable injury.

I appeal to the Senate that nothing be done to interfere with that vast machine known as America. Its elements are made up of the richest soil there is on earth, of the finest climate there is beneath the sky, of the greatest mines there are anywhere, of mighty powers of water and of steam; and it is financed by more powerful agencies than have ever been gathered in any nation of the world. Above everything else, and as its chief and highest attribute, is the indomitable energy, the tireless arm, the skillful brain of the greatest people God has ever created and gathered under one government.

We need nothing, Mr. President, but confidence, and the people will solve these problems. Confidence with the aid of Government in so far as to prevent an interference with production, as to prevent any blocking of the avenues of commerce, as to prevent any combination or any conspiracy stopping the vast machine. That is all we need, and the people of the United States will attend to that if the Government will attend to the business of government.

I desire to put into the RECORD, as illustrative of my remarks, a table which I have prepared, showing a comparison of production, exportation, consumption, and price in relation to certain staple articles for a number of years.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, permission to do so will be granted.

The table referred to is as follows:

Product.	1912	1913	1914	1915	1916
WHEAT.
Total production	730,267,000	763,380,000	891,017,000	1,025,891,000	639,886,000
Amount exported	79,689,000	142,879,000	145,590,000	332,464,000	154,049,686
Consumed here	650,578,000	620,501,000	745,427,000	693,337,000	485,836,314
Average price	$0.92	$0.79	$0.84	$1.31	$1.25
CORN.
Total production	3,124,746,000	2,446,000,000	2,672,000,000	2,994,000,000	2,582,000,000
Amount exported	41,797,000	50,000,000	10,000,000	50,000,000	53,543,227
Consumed here	3,082,949,000	2,396,000,000	2,662,000,000	2,944,000,000	2,529,456,773
Average price	$0.71	$0.53	$0.77	$0.75	$0.79

Product.	1912	1913	1914	1915	1916
OATS.
Total production	1,418,337,000	1,121,768,000	1,141,060,000	1,540,362,000	1,251,902,000
Amount exported
Consumed here
Average price	$0.52	$0.33	$0.39	$0.53	$0.42
HAY.
Total production	72,691,000	64,116,000	70,071,000	85,225,000	89,991,000
Amount exported	59,000	60,000	50,000	105,000	136,157
Consumed here	72,632,000	64,056,000	70,021,000	85,120,000	89,854,843
Average price	$11.79	$11.15	$12.20	$11.64	$11.78
COTTON (BALES).
Total production	13,488,539	13,982,000	15,905,000	11,191,820	11,511,000
Amount exported	9,199,093	9,256,000	8,931,000	8,358,992	7,007,795
Consumed here	4,249,446	4,726,000	6,974,000	2,732,828	4,503,205
Average price	$0.10	$0.11	$0.11	$0.10	$0.19
POTATOES.
Total production	420,647,000	331,527,000	405,921,000	359,103,000	285,437,000
Amount exported	1,237,000	2,028,000	1,794,000	3,135,000	3,229,646
Consumed here	419,410,000	329,499,000	404,127,000	355,968,000	282,207,354
Average price	$1.17	$0.50	$0.70	$0.47	$0.97
COAL.
Production	534,466,580	569,960,219	513,525,477	531,619,487	597,474,000
Exported	20,326,619	24,798,080	19,747,945	22,741,895	26,007,262
Consumption	514,139,961	545,162,139	493,777,532	508,877,392	571,466,738
Average price per ton	$1.30	$1.33	$1.33	$1.29

Mr. UNDERWOOD and Mr. SIMMONS addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will ask the Senator from Alabama if he will yield to me?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I understand the matter before the Senate at this time is the motion to recommit the bill?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. SIMMONS. To recommit the bill together with certain amendments which have been offered this morning. Among those amendments are quite a number which refer to the prohibition and regulation of the use of grain in the manufacture of intoxicating drinks. One of those amendments has been referred to the Committee on Finance; the others, I think, have been referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The Finance Committee think that all of these amendments ought to be referred to it, because they relate not only to the question of conservation and prohibition, but they relate, in a very important way, to the question of revenue. The Finance Committee is going to consider at once the amendment which has been referred to it. Inasmuch as we can not make up the bill now under consideration in committee until we know exactly what our resources are going to be—and the tax upon intoxicating spirits, it is well understood, is one of the chief resources of the Government for revenue—I wish that all of these amendments might be referred to the Finance Committee. I understand, however, that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr GORE], in charge of the bill, is not willing for that course to be taken. But I wish now to give notice if the bill is recommitted that when it comes out of committee if any of these amendments are offered to it I shall then move and insist that they be referred to the Committee on Finance before action is taken upon them.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I do not intend to detain the Senate late this evening, but before the motion is put to recommit this bill to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry I feel that there are a few words that should go into the RECORD in reference to the attitude of the Government and the attitude of certain great interests in this country toward the question of the food supply.

I am sure that it can not be controverted that the greatest problem that confronts this Nation or any other nation is always to see that the people of the Nation are supplied with an adequate quantity of wholesome food. There is no golden rule that can solve this problem. There is no patent right that you can take out to increase the food supply. The world has been studying the question of food and its supply to the people for thousands of years. There is not a schoolboy in his teens who does not know that the one governing cause in determining the result is the question of whether the supply is adequate to the demand.

It is true that the supply can be made adequate to meet the demand; and sometimes a very small supply will meet the artificial demand when by order of government the people of a country are told that they must go on half rations in order to make the supply meet the demand. But is there a man who holds a seat on the floor of the Senate to-day who is prepared by his vote to tell the people of America—the best food producer of the world—that the conditions of the world and of the country are such to-day that by arbitrary enactment of law they must be half fed because we have become involved in war? If you are not prepared to say it yourselves, as a matter of affirmative action, are you prepared to say that you will delegate the power of government, that the people of this country have placed in your hands, to some one else to say when your people shall eat? If you are not, then the time has come when the Senate of the United States should give deliberate consideration to the bill that is now before it, which has been presented by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. There is one sure way to secure cheaper food and more food for the masses of the American people, and that is to produce cheaper food and more food for the people of the country and the people of the world. It is the only way, if you want your people fed, and fed adequately.

I recognize the fact that there may be some shortage in food supply, not by reason of the lack of production of crops in this country, not by reason of a falling off in production, but by reason of the fact that some of the lands of the world that have been competitors in the markets of the world in supplying food products are cut off by reason of war conditions. Does any man here believe that a bushel of wheat would be selling to-day for what it is selling for in the markets of the United States and the markets of London if the Dardanelles were open and the wheat supply of Russia were available to the world? Everybody knows that it would not be. We might have high-priced wheat, as compared to the average for 10 years past, but we would not have the pyramiding prices of to-day. When this war is over and the markets of the world are opened to the food production of the world there will be a great reduction in prices; but even then, Mr. President, the prices of food will not go down to a point where there will be an adequate supply of food for the toiling masses of the people of the world. There is only one way by which you can get an adequate supply of food for the growing demands of the industrial classes, and that is by producing more food.

There was a time in the history of the past when new fields and virgin soil of new countries were open to the production of a greater supply of foodstuffs. The new fields of tropical countries will not produce the foodstuffs that the people of the northern latitudes demand; and when it comes to the latitudes in which corn and cotton and wheat and cattle can be produced there are comparatively no new countries left and no new fields to plow.

Reading the history of the world, we know that 500 years before Christ the people of the Grecian Archipelago nearly reached the point of starvation, and that many of them became serfs because the worn-out fields were unable to produce the food supply which had fed those people a few hundred years before. The greatest boon that ever came to man was the discovery of the fact that the grasses that grew in the meadows could be transplanted to the higher fields and produce hay and fodder for cattle, so that the cattle ranges might develop and be carried to the high lands as well as to the low lands.

Mr. President, a half century ago the Empire of Germany could not adequately feed her own people. When this war was declared—I do not mean by the United States but when the European war was declared in August, 1914—the German Empire, with poor land, rock-ribbed hills, was producing within 10 per cent of an adequate food supply to liberally feed the people of that country. What is the story that is told to-day? That empire, without rich land, an empire to a large extent of barren soil, surrounded by a rim of bayonets, cut off from the world to a large extent for its food supply, has been able to maintain its armies and its people, if not with an adequate food supply, yet with sufficient food to maintain them on the battle fields for nearly three years. You do not have to go far afield to find out how the result has been accomplished. Any man who will look conditions in the face will read it in the recent history of the past.

Fifty years ago Germany inaugurated a system of intense fertilization of her land. When this war came on she was importing more fertilizer in proportion to her population than was any other country in the world; she was using more fertilizer on her fields than was any other country in the world; and in her production of crops of wheat, of barley, and of potatoes and other food products she was producing more per acre than the great continent of America, with its fertile fields and productive soil. That is the way we must furnish an adequate supply of food to our people.

There is in the far West to-day some soil that as yet is not worn out; the soils in the arid regions of the Rockies may possibly last for centuries to come; the plains of Nebraska, of Iowa, and the Dakotas may last for decades yet to come before intense fertilization is needed; but every man who is familiar with the conditions in the New England States, in the Southern States, and even to-day in the Middle Western States, recognizes the fact that the cultivation of food products can not continue long, to be profitable to the farmer unless he is given fertilizer to renew worn-out soil so as to enable him to double and treble his crop production, as he can do with adequate fertilization.

More than a year ago a bill was pending on the floor of the Senate, which the Senate passed after much debate—and I said then much of what I am saying to-day—providing an appropriation of $20,000,000—for what purpose? To supply this country with fertilizer in time of peace and powder in time of war. War is here, and it is said that we must appoint a general manager of our food supplies in order to keep this country from want. Yet no action has so far been taken to supply the nitrogen necessary to provide an adequate supply of powder in time of war and fertilizers in time of peace.

I do not wish to say anything that is unjust or unfair in this matter. The President of the United States, in whose hands this great power was intrusted, of course, has not the opportunity nor the time to exercise the power himself, and nobody expected him to do so. He delegated it to a committee of his Cabinet officers, who, after some deliberation, went to work to solve the problem. In the midst of their attempt to solve the problem the burdens and the cares of this war were cast upon their shoulders, and they have delegated the labor to a committee of chemists to find out whether the farmer needs the fertilizer and whether the Government needs the powder and what is the best method by which they can be produced.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, if the Senator has the names of the chemists to whom he refers, I wish he would read them to the Senate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have not at hand the list of that particular board of chemists, but I have a list of a board appointed some days ago by the Council of National Defense to consider questions related to the one we have under consideration. I will say, however, that the board of chemists that have been appointed are able, distinguished men in their line of science, but I also want to say that they are about as far removed from the farmers of this country as the North Pole is from the Equator.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon an interruption, I find some consolation in the Senator's illustration, for if it takes a food dictator as long to get into action as it has taken the other department to establish the proposed nitrate plant, then the war will be over and most of us will be gathered to our fathers before there is any attempt made to fix the price of anything.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think the Senator is right. I listened with great interest to his able address this afternoon, and I am in accord with most of the things he said. The time has come for some action in this matter. The responsibility is here. We have handed on our responsibilities to other people long enough, and they have not acted. The responsibility rests with the Committee on Agriculture. We have delegated our power; we have delegated to some one else the opportunity to act, but no action has been obtained.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, does the Senator mean that the responsibility for the failure to build the nitrate plant rests on the Committee on Agriculture?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No, sir.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. We recommended that bill and cordially supported it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No, sir; I did not say that at all. The Committee on Agriculture did its part, and for the failure to secure any definite results up to this date they are no more responsible than are other Members of the Senate; but when you trust a man once and he fails you, it is his fault; if you trust him the second time and he fails you, it is your fault. If the Committee on Agriculture proposes now to merely delegate power without providing effective legislation, it will be their fault and no one else's when the failure comes.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I desire to ask the Senator if anything in the bill reported from the committee carries the suggestion of a food dictator?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; but I say the time has come for Congress to do something affirmatively. If the Government wants powder, we can say, "Go and produce that powder," and those charged with responsibility will have to produce it. If we believe that a nitrogen supply in this country is needed, we can stop leaving it to the discretion of somebody else, and say that action must be taken; provide the money and specify how it shall be used to produce the desired result. Then we will have a determination of the question.

I regret that it is left for me to make this speech this afternoon. I think I have as much patience as any other man; I have been patient for an entire year, but I know that if an enemy of this country was able to drive us off the seas, we could not fight a battle with a first-class power for six months for the lack of an adequate nitrate supply, and I know that if we want the people of this country to have cheaper food, we must give our farmers an opportunity to raise cheaper food, so they can sell cheaper food, and sell it profitably.

There is but one way out, and you can read it in the history of the world. The essential thing for producing cheap food is rich land, and when rich land has been depleted and worn out that which takes the place of rich land is fertilizer; but other Senators know, as I know, that when we had a bill here a year ago to provide a fertilizer supply in this country some of the great interests placed themselves, like lions, across the path, and they are still there. It is not to their interest that present supplies should be increased or that new methods should be made use of to bring about cheaper fertilization.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I wish to say that I cordially agree with the Senator. We really had a right to have the nitrogen plant erected long before this time, and if anybody has been a "slacker" it is not Congress; but the Senator suggests that the Committee on Agriculture can remedy the difficulty in some way. I want to say as one member of that committee that I have suggested to the authorized agency created by us months ago that we were entitled to action, and I complained at the delay. As the Senator seems to think the committee has some way to press the matter, I should be glad to have him suggest the way, because I, individually, as one member of that committee, have been urging action and have felt that there was cause for serious grievance that nothing had been done.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will be delighted to suggest a way. I do not think there is any difficulty in suggesting a way. I think if this bill is recommitted and the committee will send for the men who have been put in charge of this matter and ask them what they are doing and whether they are going to do anything, and if they have not done anything and do not intend to do so, then for the committee to write in the law a definite plan of procedure, what shall be done, we will obtain results. If they will make up their minds as to the process which should be adopted to furnish this country with cheap fertilizer and the nitrogen that it needs and when and where that process should be installed, we will soon start a great reform in our agricultural development. There are Members on the floor of the Senate who will sustain the committee when they bring in a report of that kind.

Now, this is no new story.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If my memory serves me right, the Senator from Alabama presented about a year ago a communication from private parties agreeing to develop a nitrate plant in this country if they were given an opportunity.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Surely.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And the only reason why it was not done, if I am correctly informed, is because of the fear that it might be a monopoly. Now, I want to ask the Senator from Alabama if it is not true that in the present international emergency these same people are furnishing to the Government powder for the Government's use at a less cost by considerable than they have ever furnished it to anyone else, and at a less cost than it is now being produced through Government agencies?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator is talking on one subject and I am talking on another.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am talking about nitrates and their relation to the powder situation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator is talking about a powder situation. I am talking about a fertilizer situation that could be used to supply powder in war times.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Exactly.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think, so far as I am informed, that the Du Pont Powder Co. has acted very properly, very fairly, and very justly with the Government in the present emergency. I am not criticizing them.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; I did not understand that the Senator criticized them. What I was speaking of was the independence of our country in the matter of powder making. We are not independent. We are dependent upon the nitrates of a foreign country in order to make powder.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. To be sure. The Du Pont Powder Co. could not make a pound of powder if you cut off from them the supply of Chilean saltpeter.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It could not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And the Government of the United States, by its authorized officers, has stated before a committee of the other House within the last week that we could not afford to send ships to Chile to bring nitrogen here for fertilizer purposes, and yet a year ago a great organization that was driven out of this country, that produces nitrates just as they are being produced in Germany to-day, stated before the Agricultural Committee of the Senate that if the Government would give them an opportunity to use cheap water power they would be willing to guarantee that the cost of fertilizer to the farmers in this country would be reduced one-half. Now, that is in the record. Go and examine the record of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. REED. What was that company?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That was the American Cyanamid Co., an American company that has been compelled to do business on the other side of Niagara Falls by the laws of our own Government, and the refusal of our own Government to give them an opportunity to do business on American soil.

Why, suppose that Mr. Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel Co., had come down here when you wanted to build armor plate and had said, "Gentlemen, if you will let me dam one of your rivers and get cheaper electricity, I will agree to furnish your armor plate at one-half the sum you are paying for it to-day," would you have ignored that proposition and not considered it at all? Suppose, now that we are building ships, that the great United States Steel Corporation were to come before this body and say, "If you will give us an opportunity to get cheaper electrical power with which to operate our machinery, we will build these ships for you at one-half the price they are going to cost you to-day," would you ignore that proposition? No. But because this merely relates to farmers and fertilizers you say that it is socialistic for any man to say that the Government of the United States should give a company an opportunity to furnish the farmers of this country with cheaper fertilizer.

Mr. HUSTING. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator for a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. HUSTING. I ask the Senator whether this Cyanamid Co. does not buy its power from the Province of Ontario?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think it does, but I am not sure.

Mr. HUSTING. And does not the Senator know that those desiring to get power at Niagara Falls refused to accept a permit or franchise upon the same terms that the manufacturers of power on the Canadian side are willing to pay?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why, as I understand—I do not exactly understand the Senator's question—my information is that the men who are getting power on the Canadian side are getting it cheaper than those who are getting it on the American side.

Mr. HUSTING. I just want to suggest to the Senator that the Cyanamid Co. are purchasing power under the terms of the Ontario act when they were unwilling, or those who have applied for permits on the American side are unwilling, to accept as favorable terms here as they are willing to pay on the other side of the river.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not know where the Senator got his information, and I am sure he got it from somebody or he would not have made the statement; but I can say there is not any truth in what the Senator says on that subject, because I know. I know that this company came before the Congress of the United States and asked for an opportunity to buy power in this country and develop power, and I know that the Congress, after a long fight, passed a bill to give them the power, and they were prepared to spend in this country the money that they spent in Canada when a President of the United States vetoed that bill.

Mr. HUSTING. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama further yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. HUSTING. I do not know anything about what the Cyanamid Co. are willing to do. I only want to say to the Senator that those enjoying a permit under the Province of Ontario are getting their power by paying to the Province of Ontario about 75 cents for every horsepower that they have developed and used; and not only that, but they have undertaken to sell to the extent of, I think, 100,000 horsepower to the Province of Ontario, the power at the rate of $9 a horsepower.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly they are getting it cheaper on that side. In other words, the Canadian Government is taking better care of its people than our Government is in this regard. That is true.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I supplement the remarks of the Senator from Wisconsin by saying that, as contrasted with the 75 cents per horsepower paid by the companies on the Canadian side, the total of the taxes levied against the companies on the American side amounts to about $2.50 a horsepower—almost three times as much.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Surely; and yet this Government not only refuses to allow this development but has stopped the development anywhere in this country on navigable streams of an opportunity for individual capital to utilize our water power and to develop a supply of nitrogen that might supply our farmers with fertilizers.

Now, I know that the great steel corporations of this country that are making by-product coke say that you can get your fertilizer by taking ammonia from by-product coke. As I stated here once before, I know that that does not help the farmer, and it does not help supply the demand, and you never can supply the demand in that way. I just wanted to call your attention and the attention of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to these things, because they bear the responsibility until they put it on us, and I hope at no distant day they will put the responsibility on the Senate instead of bearing it themselves.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. KELLOGG. Will the Senator please tell us why this plant which Congress authorized has not been built?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why I do not know. The money is appropriated. Board after board has been investigating, but the investigation does not stop. What I want is to have something done.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. If the Senator will yield. I desire to disclaim again for the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry responsibility for this delay, and I decline to accept the entire senatorial responsibility as resting upon the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. If any Senator had desired to raise the question, he might have done so by resolution, calling on us to make an examination; and it rests on all the Senate as well as on the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. But I wish to thank the Senator from Alabama for having relieved himself of his part of the responsibility by his splendid contribution this afternoon to the discussion of that subject.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I thank the Senator; and what I am doing, instead of introducing a resolution, is introducing a speech that I hope will have some weight with him.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. KENYON. I am a humble member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and accept with grace the castigation of the Senator. The Senator, I suppose, is familiar with the fact that the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry reported out here a bill appropriating $10,000,000, I think it was——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Twenty million dollars.

Mr. KENYON. No; the ten millions was for nitrate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, yes; yes.

Mr. KENYON. And also twenty millions for the factory.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Surely.

Mr. KENYON. Now, has the Senator introduced any further bill for the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to consider? And does the Senator feel that because some commission has not acted promptly the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry is to blame?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I am not blaming the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. KENYON. One further question. I understood the Senator was placing the responsibility on the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I do say the responsibility lies there, but you hold the keys to the door. Any resolution going into your committee can not get out as long as you lock it up.

Mr. KENYON. It certainly can not get out if it never gets there.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Now, I am not saying that any resolution has gone in, but I say the time has come when it is up to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to inquire why something has not been done and to do something.

Mr. KENYON. May I ask the Senator one more question? He is generally fair. Is it not a fact that this nitrate plant has not been located because of the active competition of various parts of the country as to its location? And if that is true, then is not the responsibility upon those various people who can not get together and unite on some place for the location of this plant, and is not that the reason why the plant has not been located?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I think not. I think it is very proper and very right that a number of places should apply, and very proper and very right that the board should take time to consider them; but a similar board, with less time to work in, selected a site for an armor-plate factory. They have located a number of other plants; and I think there has been ample time for them to find out where they can produce a certain amount of horsepower out of the navigable rivers of this country.

Mr. KENYON. I agree with the Senator; but I believe that the delay has been caused, as nearly as I understand, by the strife between different parts of the country for the location of the plant.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not criticizing the committee now. I want to disclaim any criticism of the Agricultural Committee.

Mr. KENYON. I am glad of that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. But I want just as distinctly to call to the attention of the committee the condition that exists, and insist that the responsibility rests with them.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. If the Senator will allow me, as I understand his position it is this: We passed the bill making the appropriation and putting the responsibility of the construction upon the other end of the Avenue, and as they have neglected to do their duty there it is the duty of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to inquire into the causes of the delay and prod them up.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Not only that, but if action is not obtained, and the right kind of action, determine on the location yourselves and use that money in the interest of the American farmer. You can determine it as well as anybody else, if you will do it.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. REED. Just to refresh my recollection, in whose care and keeping was this great work of construction placed?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It was primarily placed in the hands of the President of the United States; but, as I stated a few moments ago, nobody expected him as an individual to exercise it. He passed it on to his Cabinet officers, and they were at work on it when this war condition came on.

Mr. REED. Which Cabinet officers?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of the Interior. Now we have got it down to a subordinate board of chemists that do not seem to be doing anything.

Mr. REED. That brings up the question I wanted to ask a little while ago. Is that board of chemists engaged now in the work of finding a location, or is it engaged in determining whether or not nitrogen can be produced in the manner contemplated by the bill?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As far as I can tell, that board is trying to find some new process to make nitrogen instead of adopting well-known processes that are producing results in other countries to-day.

Mr. REED. Then it is a board to review the action of Congress?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, it may construe itself to be such a board.

Mr. REED. But I am in earnest about this. Does it not amount to this: Congress appropriated $20,000,000 to build a nitrate plant. Congress provided that a location should be found, and at that location a plant should be built; and that plant was to extract nitrogen from the air.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Surely.

Mr. REED. Now, am I to understand that this board of chemists are now going to investigate the question whether that is the proper way to make nitrogen?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator that when this resolution was passed in the Senate last year there were two well-known methods of extracting nitrogen from the air in a commercial way. Of course there were some old processes by which nitrogen had been taken from the air, 80 or 100 years old, that were never a commercial success and could not be made so; but there was what was known as the arc process, that was being used in Norway and some other countries with a marked degree of success, and there was the cyanamid process, that pretty nearly every civilized country in the world except this one was using.

When the nitrogen bill was passed, instead of carrying out the intention of Congress to make nitrogen, and make it now, and leave for the future the development of the science, they have stopped to develop the science, while the farmer is needing the nitrogen. That is all there is to it. These processes are known. They have been a commercial success. They have made the nitrogen. Fertilizer has been made out of the nitrogen they make, but that was not good enough for the eminent scientist to rest upon.

Now, I understand that among others there is what is known as the Haber process that the German Government uses. The Haber process uses a smaller amount of electricity and a larger amount of chemicals. The Haber process is a German patent. Although this board of chemists, I understand, are experimenting with a plant and trying to make nitrogen by the Haber process, I have serious doubts to whether there is a man in America that can properly draw the specifications for the Haber process to make nitrogen, and I am confident that the method pursued is far more expensive than known methods in use before this experimentation with Government money was inaugurated. The Haber process evidently is not very much better than the other processes that we know of, because practically half of the nitrogen that is being made in Germany to-day is made by the cyanamid process. There is a known road, and an easy road, ahead. Why not follow it?

But let me call your attention to the things that have caused me to get up on my feet and speak this afternoon. In a hearing before the Agricultural Committee, I think it was, on the production and conservation of food supplies, Mr. John A. McSparron, of Furnace, Pa., master of the Pennsylvania State Grange and secretary of the legislative committee of the National Grange, made this statement:

> Well, it has always been the custom, we have noticed, for many years in this Government, when they appoint a board that has to do with farming that they never put any farmers on the board. It is the popular thing to appoint these men from the hearts of the big cities.

That is item of evidence No. 1.

I hold in my hand what is called the Official Bulletin, edited by Mr. George Creel, chairman, and bearing date Washington,

Monday, May 14, 1917. I suppose that the statements in this Official Bulletin are authentic. I find in it this statement——

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator, if he pleases, if it be not a secret, where he obtained that document?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is distributed in our offices. I have no doubt the Senator will find his there, if he will hunt for it.

Mr. STONE. I have not hunted for it, and I have not seen it. The junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] has just made of me substantially the inquiry I have made of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Why, it comes to everybody; but I can give the Senator the place where it is published.

Mr. STONE. Is it a public document?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is a Government publication.

Mr. HARDWICK. It is a Government newspaper.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is a Government newspaper, published at No. 10 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. HARDWICK. That is a Government newspaper, is it not?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. To be sure; at least, I understand it to be such.

Mr. HARDWICK. I mean by that it is paid for by the Government—printed and issued by the Government?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not able to answer that question, but it comes with the authority of the Government.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that there is no question that the Government pays for it, and it is the administration paper.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I think——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask the Senator not to get me away from the point that I want to make about this paper. The paper itself is not so important.

Mr. STONE. No; it is not. I do not want to divert the Senator.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to his colleague?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I want to say for the information of my colleague that this publication is printed at the Government Printing Office here in the city of Washington.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The reason why I say that is because an employee of the office gave me one the other day, and said they were issuing them in great numbers.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There is no doubt about the authenticity of the statement. I have read to the Senate what Mr. McSparron has said in reference to the appointment of committees. Now, I want to read this:

> The Council of National Defense announces the appointment of a subcommittee on chemicals to serve under the committee on raw materials of the advisory commission, of which Bernard M. Baruch is chairman, Dr. William H. Nichols, of the General Chemical Co., of New York, is chairman of the new subdivision.
>
> Besides Dr. Nichols the subcommittee is composed as follows:
>
> Acids: E. R. Grasselli, of the Grasselli Chemical Co., Cleveland; Henry Howard, Merrimac Chemical Co., Boston.
>
> Fertilizers: Horace Bowker, New York; Charles E. McDowell, president Armour Fertilizer Co., Chicago.
>
> Alkalis: J. D. Pennock, Solvay Process Co., Syracuse.
>
> Miscellaneous chemicals: Edward Mallinckrodt, jr., St. Louis.

Now, I know those gentlemen, a number of them. They are able eminent men in their profession. They are men who represent some of the greatest business interests of this country. They are selling fertilizers to the farmers. That is part of their business. Do you suppose that they can approach this question of the farmer getting fertilizers from some other standpoint without some bias of judgment in the matter?

One or two of these men are friends of mine, and I would not have anybody say that I had said anything here to criticize them or their attitude; but if I were in the fertilizer business and all my fortune were involved in the fertilizer business, as it is constituted to-day, I would not appoint myself on the board to determine whether a newer and a better process could be had to furnish the farmers of this country with fertilizer.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I should like to inquire of the Senator if Congress has ever passed a bill providing a means for the manufacture of nitrates to be used primarily as fertilizer?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; not exactly that way; but last year Congress passed a bill appropriating $20,000,000 for the erection of a plant to make nitrogen, and providing that that nitrogen should be used by the Government for powder in times of war and for fertilizers in times of peace; and it is to that bill that I am addressing my remarks. The bill is here; it has been passed; the money is in the Treasury, but there is no movement seen anywhere on the landscape.

I hold in my hand a letter that I have received from Mr. R. F. Bower. Mr. Bower is a member of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America. He is their special legislative agent in Washington, appointed by the Farmers' Union of America to come here last year and aid in securing the passage of a bill to aid in the production of nitrogen. In other words, he represented the Farmers' Union of America in his support of the nitrogen bill we passed last year, appropriating $20,000,000; and I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Bower in reference to the situation on this subject, which I think should go in the RECORD. I send it to the desk and ask to have it read. When it has been read I will ask to have it returned to me.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

FARMERS' EDUCATIONAL AND COOPERATIVE UNION OF AMERICA,
NATIONAL UNION,
Washington, D. C., May 21, 1917.

Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Will you let me, please, have enough of your time in the interest of the farmers I represent to call your attention to page 3 of the inclosed copy of May 14 issue of Official Bulletin, where you will find that the Council of National Defense announces a committee on fertilizers, to serve under the committee on raw materials, of which Mr. Bernard M. Baruch is chairman?

You will note with interest, perhaps—and certainly we farmers are noticing with interest—that this fertilizer committee is composed of a representative of the Armour Fertilizer Co., of Chicago., and Mr. Horace Bowker, of New York, who is the president of the National Fertilizer Association. In this connection I attach an extract from a hearing before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, in which extract you will find a statement made by Mr. McSparron, who is master of the Pennsylvania State Grange and secretary of the legislative committee of the National Grange. The committee on fertilizers above referred to is just another example of what Mr. McSparron called attention to.

One thing is clear again, and it has been mighty clear all the time, that the Fertilizer Trust is looking after its own, and I hope you will not think we farmers are unfair when we compare the people on this committee with the failure of the President to even answer Mr. Barrett's letter asking that we be granted representation on the nitrate supply committee.

Dr. W. R. Whitney, of the General Electric Co., who was a member of the nitric acid committee from the Academy of Sciences, and who also is a member of the new nitrate supply committee, in the Manufacturers' Record of September 14, 1916, wrote in part as follows:

"It is common to assume that the production of any nitrogen fertilizer product in addition to that now produced would so reduce the price as to injure the interests of those who, for example, are now actively engaged in recovering ammonia from gas liquors and coke ovens. There is probably no advantage in robbing Peter to pay Paul, and unless the new fertilizer processes could exist and compete without abnormal support there are economical hindrances as determining as the laws of survival in case of living organisms. This makes it seem desirable that attention be continually attracted to the possibilities of fertilizer production in the South and to the factors determining the value of different processes, in the hope that southern capital may itself develop the industry. Water-power rights or power supply permitted equally freely to all industries under conditions that would insure the utilization of an appreciable fraction of the power available seems a step in the right direction."

I quote this to point out with what strange uniformity we find that nearly everyone charged with the responsibility of selecting a process constantly expresses the fear that some private interest will be hurt, and nobody seems to care at all whether the farmers' interests are helped with this legislation, which the farmers got passed, or not.

Who is the "Peter," anyway, that Dr. Whitney refers to in the above quotation? He is the same "Peter" that we have been contending against in connection with this nitrate legislation and in connection with the selection of a process for over a year. "Peter" is the great iron and steel companies, the fertilizer-manufacturing companies, the Chilean nitrate monopoly, and the power companies, every one of whom have fought us, and still are.

Now, who is "Paul"? "Paul" is the farmers, the public that buys food and clothing. And if a process is selected that merely increases the ammonia supply of the country from a Government nitrate plant in times of peace, then "Peter," the fertilizer manufacturers, profits and "Paul" will "get it in the neck."

Now, what the farmers want to know is, Are the administration and Congress going to be for "Paul," or going to stand for "Peter"?

Again, we find in the New York Times magazine of May 13 that Dr. Whitney is credited and quoted with the following statement:

"The Department of Agriculture is interested in any form of fixed nitrogen and is carrying on experiments for itself. The Army and Navy want only nitric acid or something from which it can be made. The Department of the Interior is interested in it as a mineral proposition, and is doubtless drilling for it. Several industries are trying to produce nitrates or ammonia, and many industries would use the product."

Now, this quotation closely expresses a situation that we fear is going to swamp the farmer. All of these nitrogen doctors have different views, and they constantly are discovering new processes, etc., all the time forgetting that there is to be found in the hearings before the committees of Congress the undisputed statement by the representative of the company that has successfully established for the first time the nitrogen industry in North America, and the statement is that if a cooperative plan can be adopted by the Government, then the farmers will get their fertilizers at one-half the cost they were paying for them previous to the beginning of the European war.

Now, we farmers honestly think that the administration and Congress ought not to surrender us and the legislation we got Congress to pass to the Fertilizer Trust in the face of a statement that deserves, if not confidence, at least investigation, that the farmers of this country can receive their fertilizers at one-half the cost that the Fertilizer Trust has been furnishing fertilizers for.

If the Army and Navy experts and other Government bureau experts have found a process that will furnish nitric acid for explosives cheaper than any process that will at the same time furnish fertilizers for one-half what the farmers now pay for them, the farmers ask the question, How much cheaper is this nitric-acid process that will furnish nitric acid for cheaper explosives than some process that will furnish nitric acid at a higher cost but very cheap fertilizers? Suppose it is found that some nitric-acid process will save the Government $300,000 a year in peace times, as against a nitric-acid process giving cheap fertilizers, is it possible that, as the Government nitrate plant will be operated 95 per cent of the time in the future, primarily for fertilizers, that the cost of food should yield to the cost of explosives?

The Government appropriates $11,000,000 to free itself from the Armor Plate Trust and more than a million dollars to free the Navy from the projectile combine, and over $100,000,000 to help crop production in the arid States of the West, then why can not the farmers east of the Mississippi River fairly demand that, in the Government's selection of a nitrogen process the purely military and naval needs of the Government for nitric acid and the cost of the same yield to the necessity of an increase in crop production and a decrease in the cost of food; and, more than this, if, as has been complained by some, the $20,000,000 appropriated by Congress for the Government nitrate plant is not enough money to provide the necessary nitric-acid establishments for the Government, then, with the present cost of food and crop conditions in this country, would you hesitate to support an additional appropriation that would permit the selection of a process that would give the farmers of this country fertilizers at one-half the price they have been paying in the past?

The fertilizer bill of the farmers of this country for 1914 amounted to a total of $185,000,000. Of this total, $86,395,000 was for nitrogen and $69,005,000 for phosphoric acid and $29,600,000 for potash. Suppose that the farmers of this country, as was suggested last spring before the Military and Agricultural Committees of the House and Senate that it would be possible in connection with the building of a Government nitrate plant to establish fertilizer factories that would give a fertilizer compounded of ammonia from air nitrogen and phosphoric acid from phosphate rock at one-half the cost per unit of plant food that the farmers have been paying for fertilizers—suppose such a fertilizer available to the farmers, and that in one year they could get and use a universal fertilizer composed of phosphoric acid and nitrogen to the extent of a year's bill for this kind of fertilizer of $155,400,000—and this amount was paid for nitrogen and phosphoric acid in the fertilizers purchased in 1914—the saving would be in one year $77,700,000. Now, can this administration, can Members of Congress, ever explain to the farmers of this country and excuse the adoption of a process that will simply increase the ammonia supply of the country for the benefit of the Fertilizer Trust, when there is an opportunity and a possibility of saving to the farmers of this country $77,700,000 per year in the mere cost of fertilizers purchased, not to speak of other great savings made in the way of labor efficiencies, etc.? If such a mistake is made it never can be explained to the farmers, and we will again and again and forever ask for the explanation.

Yours, truly,

R. F. BOWER.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I have put in the RECORD from the Official Bulletin the statement that Mr. Bower referred to. I have put in the RECORD the official statement of the representative of a very large majority of the farmers of the country on this question. You can not deny it; you know it is a fact, that there is a large interest in this country that would like to have you make all the ammonia that you can for them to buy and make fertilizer out of it. But where do you get? You do not get anywhere. You merely saturate the market with ammonia, and you allow the combinations to continue to put up the price to the farmers.

This Government was offered a proposition to reduce the price of fertilizers. There was nothing in the bill limiting it to that proposal, but the Congress was so impressed by the offer that it appropriated $20,000 000. That was before this war, when $20,000,000 was a big sum of money.

The committee has brought in a bill here to create an artificial condition, not a natural condition. I do not mean to say that food prices have not pyramided, and it may be that they need some artificial regulation to stop the pyramiding. I think if the men on the floor of the Senate would stop advertising to the world that they think there is going to be scarcity of food supply, if the newspapers of the United States would not advertise to the people of America every day that there is going to be scarcity of food supply, and there is not so far as our country is concerned, the man in the city would not have to pay twice as much for his food as he did last year.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Will the Senator pardon me a moment?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Surely.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The measure brought in by the committee aims solely at preventing the manipulation of foodstuffs after they passed from the hands of the farmers. The committee declined to consider the numerous provisions along other lines which were submitted to it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not objecting to that proposition. I say that you probably need some regulation of artificial conditions. What I am talking about is trying to relieve this situation not only for our own people and our own country but for the world by artificial legislation, by endeavoring to lessen consumption, and therefore making the supply more adequate, which is an artificial way to handle the proposition; shall we not go back to the natural way of raising more food and cheaper food, and let the people have all the food they want at a cheaper price, and enable the farmer to raise it profitably by allowing him to raise 40 bushels of corn on 1 acre of ground instead of 15. That is the problem which confronted Congress; that is the problem which confronted the world. There is nothing new in it. As I said awhile ago, the German Empire solved the problem of feeding its own people by giving them more fertilization and by more intensive farming. It is the problem here to-day. It will enable the farmer to prosper and enable the man in the city to have cheaper food, and it is the only way that you can accomplish the problem and get results at the same time.

I am not going to weary the Senate with longer discussion of this question. I have kept my mouth shut for a year about it. I am not criticizing the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry; but I do say the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has a great function to perform for the benefit of the people of America; that it holds the key to the door. You are entitled to great credit in reporting the bill originally. You are entitled to credit for your efforts in the recent past to try to solve the situation in a natural way. But I say to the committee, and the entire purpose of my speech is to say to the committee, when you have under consideration the bill you have brought before us, I think you should consider the natural way to control this question. Send for these men to come before your committee. I would say, take this bill back to your committee, because you have not solved the whole problem. You have only brought one side of it to us. You have not brought the bigger side, the better side of the problem to the Senate. Take your bill back to your committee. Send for these gentlemen in whose hands this $20,000,000 rests and ask them if they are going to do anything, and where they are going to do it; and if they do not give you a satisfactory answer, then I beg of you for the people of the United States, the man who labors in the factory in the city, the man who stands behind the plow in the country, give him an opportunity, and if they will not act, determine yourselves what you think is the best process, and determine yourselves where is the best location for the plant, and then when you bring that bill before the Senate of the United States I think I can safely predict that you will get action, and the American people will get something out of this legislation.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, in justice to myself and in justice to the farmers of the country I am going to make a statement. I on my own initiative called on one of those who had charge of this end of departmental work, or who was appointed by the three departments that have charge of this proposition, to know what progress was being made and what they proposed to do. I was informed that they were studying the processes and that they were charged with the duty of getting as cheap a process as possible in order to conserve the money the Government had appropriated for this purpose.

I called attention to the fact, which seems not to be generally known in the Senate, that in a large portion of our country the ingredient is now an absolutely prime essential in the production of anything like an adequate crop, and was rapidly becoming a necessity throughout the whole United States, for it is a mathematical proposition as easy of demonstration as that subtracting 2 from 4 leaves 2 that you can not take off the great western plains millions of bushels of wheat, the essential element of which is another form of nitrogen, and leave the soil as rich as it was before the crop was taken off.

It was testified before our committee by the experts of the Government that nitrogen, produced either from the air or taken from the nitrate beds of Chile, when placed on land would increase the yield from 50 to 100 and even 200 per cent, according to the lack of fertility in the soil and the judicious manner in which it was applied. I asked what length of time would be necessary, perhaps, to get the Government plant running or to get the process in operation by which we could extract nitrogen from air and make it available to increase the yield. The reply was from 12 to 14 months after they had determined upon the process.

So far as I am concerned, I had discharged my duty in calling attention to the fact that the country was crying for it and needed it; but listen: At a time when the Government is calling upon the farmers to increase their yield and is proposing to fix minimum prices, which might be above the market price and involve millions upon millions of taxation to the consumer, I asked an appropriation of $10,000,000 for the purpose of enabling Government vessels to go to Chile and obtain nitrates to be sold to the farmers of this country. According to the figures given by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] the cost of the nitrates was only $47 a ton at the beds, or at the ship's side, and in addition there would be the freight charge from there here. It is a foreign article; it would come in competition with no domestic manufacturer. I asked that vessels be sent to a foreign country, get this all-important ingredient, and bring it to this country for sale at cost to the farmers for cash in advance; but the Secretary of Agriculture goes over to the other end of the building, after the bill had passed this body by a vote of 7 to 1, and indicates that the price is too high and that Government vessels were too scarce. In the name of the living God, while we are striving by the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars to get vessels to carry food to the allies, why should we refuse to grant a loan of $10,000,000 to the producers of the foodstuffs that we want to carry to the allies—not to give it to the farmers, but to lend it to them?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Merely to bring nitrates here so that they might buy them.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. To bring them here so that the farmers might buy them. I was informed that the Secretary of Agriculture went over and said that, according to his information, so far as he had investigated the matter, the application of nitrate had only increased the yield of crops 10 per cent, when on my own farm I have seen it increase the yield from 50 to 200 per cent. I challenge any man's statement to that effect and ask him to call any farmer on the Atlantic seaboard and ask him what will be the effect of the proper use of this element on the grain production on the Atlantic seaboard or on the western plains. What hope have we of this legislation being put into operation when the head of one of the three departments charged to look after the establishment of the nitrate plant says when the price reaches about $60 or $70 a ton that he does not know that it would be profitable for the farmers to use it?

Reference has been made to the Agricultural Committee. The Agricultural Committee reported the nitrate plant bill. I had the honor to introduce it, and I had the honor to fight it through the Senate, by and with the aid of those who understood it. Then it went to the other House, was there passed, and finally became a law. It was then under the administrative direction of three departments, and the head of one of those departments in this acute emergency now says that we can not afford to have Government vessels go to Chile and get this commodity, and to send private vessels to get it would cost too high.

The question was raised as to whether or not we, being a belligerent, could go to a neutral port to get this fertilizing ingredient. I want to submit to the Senate this proposition: The basis of all of our explosives is nitrogen. If American vessels can not go to Chile to get this supply, in view of the fact that the nitrogen plant here has not been built, what are we going to fight with? If we are cut off in those directions, then we have got to depend upon private vessels to go and get the ingredient upon which the Government is dependent to fight this war.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to interrupt him?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I yield.

Mr. STONE. It certainly can not be contended, and certainly has not been contended, by anyone who has given thought to the subject that a belligerent country could not go to the port of a neutral country and purchase any war material it pleased and take the chance of getting it through.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I do not ask the Senator from Missouri to take my word for it, but will refer him to the hearings before the Committee on Appropriations. There he will find it in black and white. If I am mistaken, the reading of the hearings will correct me. The question was asked me, "Have you investigated our status since we have declared war; and do you think we can send a vessel there and take the time to load this material and bring it here?" That question was asked by members of the committee and is incorporated in the hearings.

Mr. STONE. The only point I meant to make—I only wish to make it because I do not think it well to have a contrary impression go out to the Senate or to the country, not that I wish to antagonize what the Senator is saying——

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I know the Senator is not doing that.

Mr. STONE. Quite the contrary. But the only point I had in mind was that there can be no question, as I think, of the right of a belligerent country under international law to go to a neutral country and buy war material without the neutral country violating its neutrality by selling it.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Precisely. I am glad the Senator has made that statement, because I want that statement in the RECORD; but the fact is—and this is the point that I make—that because it was proposed to get this commodity for the farmers of this country that absurd question was raised, for everyone knows that we shall get all the ingredients that we want for munitions purposes.

Some one has said—and it was received with great joy in high places—that we need biscuits as badly as we need bullets. It takes nitrogen to make biscuits as well as to project the bullets. We will buy all of this material we want for bullets, but the man who makes the biscuits will have to do the best he can. That is a plain statement of the proposition. We have appropriated $20,000,000 for the purpose of constructing a plant to extract free nitrogen from the air and selling it to the farmers; and we passed another bill in the Senate appropriating $10,000,000 to send Government vessels to a foreign country to secure an ingredient that will enable the farmers to quadruple their crops; but the Secretary of Agriculture says that he does not believe it will pay to get it at the prevailing price and that he does not believe there are available Government vessels.

I tell you here and now it is more important to this Government to see that Government vessels are put on the sea and sent to Chile to bring this ingredient here than it is to double our means of sending to the allies what we have already produced. What we ought to do is, first, to provide for an adequate crop for ourselves, and then out of our abundance to send abroad. Charity begins at home; and the wise statesman is the man who will see to it that along right and legitimate lines his own will be protected, and then through their splendid equipment let them help those who need their help.

I want to clear myself of any dereliction of duty. I understand just as acutely as other Senators, perhaps more so, the need for this wonderful ingredient, but what chance have we if committees that are not informed as we are informed are to be told by the department that it would not be profitable to buy it at present prices, and, further, on account of our status as a belligerent and the status of Chile as a neutral nation American vessels could not go there and bring this material to this country.

I am going to give the Senate an opportunity to adopt my joint resolution as an amendment to the food-control bill, so that it will at least again have a hearing on the floor of the Senate and not be choked to death in committee, and so that the other House may discuss it, as the Senate did a few weeks ago, and register what it has to say about this matter. We registered our approval of it seven to one.

I have between five hundred and a thousand letters from the men who produce crops saying that the application of this ingredient will increase the yield from 50 to 100 per cent. I invite the Senate to read the testimony of Dr. Norton before the Agricultural Committee when we were discussing the establishment of the nitrate plant as to his opinion of what the effect would be upon the production of this country if we have an adequate supply.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SHEPPARD in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I do.

Mr. NORRIS. Did I understand the Senator to say that he was going to offer as an amendment to this bill the joint resolution which was adopted by the Senate some weeks ago appropriating $10,000,000 for the purchase of nitrates for the benefit of the farmers?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I am.

Mr. NORRIS. That proposition passed the House, did it not?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. No; I think I stated the facts in connection with that matter. I am informed that the joint resolution is not likely to be reported out.

Mr. NORRIS. I misunderstood the Senator. I understood the Senator to say that the joint resolution had passed the House.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. No; I said it had passed the Senate, but remained unacted upon in the committee of the House.

Mr. NORRIS. I will have to accept the Senator's correction, of course; but I think he will find that in substance he said that it had passed the House, but had not yet become a law.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If I said that, I will ask the Reporter to make the correction.

Mr. NORRIS. How did it happen to be killed in the House?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It was referred to a committee of that body, as I have stated, and the Secretary of Agriculture appeared before that committee and in his testimony practically said that we could not get Government vessels—I am informed that he said so; I have not read his testimony—that on account of the status of Chile as a neutral nation it was doubtful if we could use Government vessels to transport the commodity, and, in the next place, its cost was too high to be profitable to the farmer.

Mr. NORRIS. Then, as I understand the situation, it was killed in the House committee by the Secretary of Agriculture?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Well, so far it is moribund.

Mr. NORRIS. Does the Senator know whether or not the House committee has decided to make a report on it?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I understand on inquiry that it is not likely to be reported out on account of the testimony of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. NORRIS. Then, it reduces itself to this proposition, that the Secretary of Agriculture has succeeded in defeating it in the House.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes; it reduces itself to that. Now, I am going to ask the Senate, Who is a better judge of what is needed on the farms than the man who himself is a farmer? We have the testimony of from 500 to 1,000 such men, as honest as any set of men in this country, that the application of nitrates will increase the yield of the farms by from 30 to 100 per cent. That is backed up by the testimony of Clemson Agriculture College, of my State, and by every practical farmer who knows enough about farming to know the difference between the jimson weed and the cotton plant.

I did not come here with a proposition that was fantastical or theoretical. I have doubled the yield of my wheat and doubled the yield of my oats by the application of this material. It has redeemed the corn crop of the South, quadrupled the truck growing of the entire country, and yet it is said that Government vessels can not go to Chile and bring this foreign article here to be sold to the farmers at cost, although we can spend hundreds of millions of dollars for building ships to carry food from this country to the allies. I am perfectly willing to vote for that; I am perfectly willing to lend the allies everything that we can possibly spare; but I do say that it is a commentary on our own patriotism and our relation to our own that we will not requisition every vessel that is necessary and send it to Chile to give those who make bricks the straw with which to make them.

Now, Mr. President, I have placed these facts before the Senate for them to take such action as they may see fit. I am not advised as to what process will be adopted for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. I do know that they have not done anything practical so far as relieving the farmer is concerned up to date. I know that the possibility of getting relief, so far as the $10,000,000 appropriation is concerned, is practically null unless it is attached to this bill and the House is given an opportunity to express itself on the floor of that body. I believe when that opportunity is given they will record for it as big a majority as it received when it passed the Senate, and I propose to give them that opportunity.

I am glad of the opportunity afforded me of having said what I have, so as to enable me to set my record straight and to let my colleagues on the floor know that these practical questions must be settled by those of us who have an intimate knowledge of these questions and not by department heads who theorize through specialists.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, before the Senator surrenders the floor I should like to ask him another question, if he will yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes; I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. When that $10,000,000 proposition was before the Senate, did the Senator know then that the Agricultural Department was opposed to it?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I did not. I want to make this explanation. I had discussed it with different officials who I thought would have in charge the execution or administration of the law, if we passed it. Incidentally some one asked me if the Secretary of Agriculture was in favor of it, and I was so thoroughly convinced that every man who knew anything at all about the use of fertilizer in relation to agriculture would agree that we ought to make the effort that I said "yes." I had not advised with him, however.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator was laboring at that time under the impression that the Secretary of Agriculture was favorable to it?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I was laboring under the impression that, as the proposition had been so favorably received and was only a question of appropriating money and of getting the ships, that the Secretary was in favor of it. That, however, was merely an impression, and I should have corrected it then. I take the opportunity now to correct it in the RECORD. I do the Secretary of Agriculture the justice to say that I discussed it with him only incidentally and not in minute detail, because I believed then, and I believe now, that we are the proper ones to legislate and not the department.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, in connection with the discussion that has just been listened to by the Senate, I wish to express the hope that the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry may be acquitted of any responsibility and may be acquitted of any culpability, if there be any, in connection with the delayed construction of the nitrogen plant authorized by law during the last Congress. The Committee on Agriculture and Forestry reported that measure to the Senate without delay. The Committee on Agriculture and Forestry supported that bill in the Senate during its passage through this body. At the present session the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has reported a measure empowering the President to take steps to secure nitrates from South America to be used as fertilizers in connection with the present crop. The Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has been in the active voice and not in the passive voice in connection with all legislation seeking to promote the welfare of the farmers of this country. It has not only felt but has exhibited the most earnest solicitude to promote and to dispatch all business having that end in view.

I wish to say further that I believe no committee of the Senate is more capable, more active, or more public-spirited than the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. In connection with both measures not only the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry but the Senate itself has discharged its full duty. The Committee on Agriculture and Forestry is merely an arm of the Senate. It has no executive powers. It has no inquisitorial powers. The Committee on Agriculture and Forestry can not constitute itself a grand inquest to review the activities of executive officers or branches of the Government.

I wish to say this in order that the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry may not have attached to it responsibilities which do not belong upon it, and before I sit down I ask unanimous consent to introduce a bill for reference to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. SMOOT. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah has demanded the regular order.

Mr. GORE. I hope the Senator will yield for that purpose.

Mr. SMOOT. As this is on the subject matter under consideration, Mr. President, I shall not object, but it does seem to me that we ought to have a vote upon the motion to recommit.

Mr. GORE. I hope to have that motion voted upon before we adjourn.

Mr. SMOOT. We ought to have it voted upon now; and after that vote is taken, then, of course, bills can be presented.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma introduces a bill the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 2344) to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. WALSH. Mr President, as the bill under consideration is likely to be recommitted, I want to detain the Senate for five minutes to submit a few observations with respect to it.

This measure has been popularly referred to as the food-control bill, but you will observe by section 1 of the bill that it purports to affect not only foods and feeds but fuel as well. Whatever powers are authorized by the bill are to be exercised by the Secretary of Agriculture. The incongruity of reposing in the Secretary of Agriculture powers over fuel supplies, such as coal, oil, natural gas, and so forth, need not be adverted to. It is perfectly obvious from the reading of the bill itself.

The provisions of the bill are altogether inapplicable to the subject of fuels. This is so obvious that in section 2 of the bill its provisions are expressly restricted to the subject of foods.

Sections 3 and 4 are very general in their character and in their terminology, and those are sufficiently comprehensive to embrace fuels; but it is only in those provisions of the bill that it in any wise affects the subject of fuels.

The Department of Agriculture is not equipped with any machinery for the purpose of securing any information concerning fuel supplies. Another department and branch of the Government is intrusted with work of that character and has done much and valuable work, and is at the present time possessed of information concerning the available supply of the different forms of fuel. That has no place in the bill at all.

There is another word I want to say. I feel entirely satisfied that all of section 2 of the bill which authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to call upon any person affected for his books, letters, papers, documents, or reports, and subjects one who refuses to a penalty for refusal to comply, flies in the very teeth of the constitutional provision with relation to searches and seizures; and I commend to the committee a careful study of the case of Boyd against United States, reported in One hundred and sixteenth United States, in which will be found a discussion which it seems to me should dispose of that feature.

I also want to submit to the committee that a very large portion of section 3 is already covered by the Sherman Act, and other portions of it are dealt with in a bill which is now on the calendar, reported from the Committee on the Judiciary—a bill introduced by the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER]. The bill was the subject of some careful study by a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee in connection with the Assistant Attorney General, who has charge and has had charge for a number of years of all prosecutions under the antitrust act. I think the Committee on Agriculture would do well to secure a copy of the bill introduced by the Senator from Washington, together with a copy of the substitute reported by the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, does the Senator think that in other respects the bill is all right? [Laughter.]

Mr. WALSH. I am not prepared to vote for it in the shape in which it is now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] to recommit the bill to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. NORRIS. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. NORRIS. Well, Mr. President, it does not seem to me that the bill ought to be recommitted in this way. If Senators do not want a yea-and-nay vote on it——

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, we thought there was practically no opposition to the recommittal of the bill, and a great many Senators have gone to their homes.

Mr. NORRIS. It can not be done by unanimous consent, Mr. President.

Mr. HARDWICK. Not if the Senator objects; certainly not. It is purely a matter of the personal convenience of Senators who have left.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not want to inconvenience them at all, but it does not seem to me that the motion ought to prevail.

Mr. HARDWICK. Oh, well, if the Senator is opposed to it, that is different.

Mr. NORRIS. I am opposed to it.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that a new bill has been introduced this afternoon by the Senator from Oklahoma, and the committee has been called to consider that bill.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I understand that another bill has been introduced, and the committee has been called.

Mr. KENYON. Does not the Senator feel that all of these bills ought to be before the committee if it is to consider the subject?

Mr. NORRIS. I have not read the new bill that has been introduced, although I have been informed that there will be a meeting of the committee to-morrow morning at 9.30 o'clock to consider it. I do not know whether that bill covers the same ground that is covered by this bill or not.

Mr. KENYON. I will say to the Senator that it does not go to the extent of this bill. It contains very few provisions. It relates only to the question of production. That bill can be reported back to the Senate and discussed and passed this week. There will be another bill, very broad in its terms, which will go to the question of the general regulation of the food question. That bill has not yet been introduced.

Mr. NORRIS. Is the Senator of the opinion that if this bill is recommitted, and the other bill is taken up and passed, no bill like this will be necessary?

Mr. KENYON. I am of the opinion that the bill the Senator from Oklahoma has introduced, dealing particularly with the question of production, can be brought back to-morrow from the committee, and can be passed this week. I do not believe it will arouse very great discussion. The other bill unquestionably will arouse a great deal of discussion, and will require very much time.

Mr. NORRIS. That is true of the bill now before the Senate.

Mr. KENYON. The provisions of this bill that may not be found in the bill of the Senator from Oklahoma will be covered in some form by the general regulatory bill.

Mr. NORRIS. What advantage is to be gained by delay, and are there not many disadvantages connected with it? If this matter has to be fought out at some time, why not do it now?

Mr. KENYON. That is the very point. This will expedite the matter. This other bill is more simple in form and does not carry some of these very complicated questions.

Mr. NORRIS. Well, these complicated questions have got to be met, have they not?

Mr. KENYON. They will be met in the general regulatory bill.

Mr. NORRIS. When is that coming in?

Mr. KENYON. That bill will be introduced into the House to-morrow, I think.

Mr. NORRIS. Then the idea is to have the Senate do nothing about it until the bill passes the House?

Mr. KENYON. It will be introduced in the Senate, too, as I understand.

Mr. NORRIS. Will not the same debate come up on that bill? If so, it will just make one debate instead of two.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor, and yielded to the Senator from Iowa. Now does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. NORRIS. I do.

Mr. GORE. I wish merely to reenforce what the Senator from Iowa is saying—that the bill which I have just introduced relates to the production part of this problem and ought to be passed without delay, because two or three more weeks lost in the present producing season is a year lost, and it is desirable to dispatch its consideration. The bill that will be introduced in the House to-morrow, as I understand, involves a number of points contained in the bill which we have been discussing to-day, and the entire problem will then be raised in the Senate; but it was undesirable to delay the measure relating to the production side of the matter until that measure comes up and is disposed of.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, of course, I am not informed now, and have not been in the past, and do not expect to be in the future, as to what the wishes of the administration may be; but I have known for a good while that it was generally believed by a great many people, including Senators and Members of the House, that some measure regulating the distribution of food products was necessary as a war measure. I believed that myself. I do yet. I knew, and I think it is generally conceded, that whatever legislation is had ought to be had immediately. I think it ought to have been had before this.

When this bill was reported, being, as I supposed, one of the administration measures on the subject, I was surprised that it should immediately be met, when it got on the floor, with a motion to recommit it. If those who are behind the legislation, the administration, or the deparment that I supposed had drawn these bills, or had the most to do with their drawing and their introduction, desire now to back up and commence over again, notwithstanding the delay which is going to be entailed, I do not suppose I ought to object, nor do I suppose that if I did object it would do any good; but it seems to me that this delay is dangerous. We never will get a bill here that will suit everybody, and we might as well fight it out at one time as another.

Mr. NELSON and Mr. GORE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield, and to whom?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield first to the Senator from Minnesota, who first addressed the Chair.

Mr. NELSON. The Senator from Nebraska is laboring under a misapprehension. I do not think this motion to recommit was inspired by the administration.

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, I did not say it was.

Mr. NELSON. I think the occasion for it was the fact that the chairman of the committee introduced a large number of amendments to the bill which were not incorporated in the print; and I think the feeling was that the committee had better consider all these amendments in connection with the bill, and that was the motive for making the motion.

Mr. NORRIS. The chairman of the committee has the same right to offer amendments to a bill that any other Member of the Senate has. If we are going to recommit a bill every time the chairman of the committee offers an amendment, we will be in that business continually, because we have found from experience that in the case of practically every bill the chairman of the committee offers more amendments than anybody else.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. GORE. I merely wish to say that the so-called Lever bill is now being revised. I am not advised myself as to what the now being revised. I am not advised myself as to what the changes are proposed to be; but, according to my information, they will make the measure conform more nearly to the desires of those who will be in charge of the administration of the law, and I really think we might save time by waiting until that bill comes over, or at least until we can ascertain what it contains. I am anxious myself to utilize the time and to avoid any unnecessary delay.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, it does not seem to me, under the existing circumstances, that the Senate ought to be doing business in this way. Those who have been talking about hurrying and speeding things up and who are anxious to get the country in a state so that it can defend itself or so that it can prosecute a war successfully realize that the food proposition is one of the important considerations. No two men will perhaps agree as to just what powers ought to be delegated and to whom they ought to be delegated. So far as I am concerned, in the control of food products, I am ready to delegate very great power to the President or to some other designated person; but every day we delay we are only making it worse. This bill has been the unfinished business on the calendar for several days.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It was made so Saturday night.

Mr. NORRIS. It was made so Saturday night, was it?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Well, it has been introduced and has been reported for several days at least. Now, it seems we are going to stop; we are going to go back; we are going to commence again; and it does not look to me as though that is the way to deal with the matter or to reach a final conclusion. Whatever bill comes here that will give any power will be subject to criticism, as it ought to be, of course. Men will honestly disagree. There will be some question about the constitutionality of the power involved. Some of the amendments which the chairman of the committee has introduced are very important. That will be true of any other bill that gets here very likely. But it seems in some unknown way some unseen power has pervaded the entire Senate and reached the consciousness of all Senators except mine that the bill must be recommitted and we must start anew again. We have devoted the entire legislative day to a discussion of a motion to recommit.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. No; I am not finding fault with that, but it seems when we get through with this day's work it has been understood all the time that the bill is going to be recommitted. Then why waste all this eloquence?

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HARDWICK. The Senator has not stated the whole truth. We debated everything else except the motion to recommit.

Mr. NORRIS. Technically we debated the motion to recommit, and some of the debate has borne on it and some of it has given to me a great deal of light on some other subjects. I think it was interesting; a great deal of it was instructive, but if we are going to recommit the bill, we ought to have done it on Saturday. If we only reached the conclusion or got instructions to reach a conclusion this morning, we ought to have done it immediately when the command was given, and it ought to have been recommitted at once. We have lost the whole day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Georgia to recommit the bill, with amendments, to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The motion was agreed to.

ADDRESS BY SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY M'ADOO (S. DOC. NO. 34).

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a public document an address delivered by Hon. W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, at a meeting in Chicago, Ill., May 17, 1917, of bankers and business men of the seventh Federal reserve district. The speech was very largely devoted to a discussion of the sale of the bonds which the Secretary is now in the West trying to promote. It is believed that the publication and extensive circulation of this document will help very materially in selling the bonds. I ask unanimous consent that it be made a public document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator called my attention to the speech delivered by the Secretary of the Treasury. It is upon a question that is being considered now by one of the committees of the Senate. It is for that reason, and that only, that I shall not insist that it be sent to the Committee on Printing. I have no objection to printing the address, because the committee desires to use it to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request is granted.

WAR-RISK INSURANCE.

Mr. SIMMONS. I move that the Senate proceed to consideration of the bill (S. 2133) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the establishment of a Bureau of War-Risk Insurance in the Treasury Department," approved September 2, 1914, and for other purposes.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator does not desire to proceed with the consideration of the bill to-night?

Mr. SIMMONS. I simply want to make it the unfinished business.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the bill is before the Senate as the unfinished business.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that it be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the bill will be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask the Senate to take up the bill (S. 1816) to amend the act to regulate commerce as amended, and for other purposes. It is the bill to increase the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission. I will state that it is really a war measure of the greatest importance. It is urged by the President and favorably reported by the Committee on Interstate Commerce. It provides for an increase in the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission and its work in divisions.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President——

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask whether there is any objection to taking it up?

Mr. SIMMONS. That can not be done without displacing the unfinished business.

Mr. NEWLANDS. That has been laid aside.

Mr. MARTIN. It was temporarily laid aside.

Mr. SMOOT. We can not consider the bill to-night.

Mr. SIMMONS. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. If we adjourn and the bill is before the Senate, would it not displace the unfinished business?

Mr. SMOOT. Of course it would.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would, if on motion it is taken up for consideration.

Mr. MARTIN. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, May 22, 1917, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, May 21, 1917.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

God of heaven and earth, life and liberty, truth and righteousness, justice and mercy, inspire us with the highest ideals and help us to consecrate our life to them; that in the great task laid upon us we may feel sure that we are doing Thy will; that we may put our souls into the work and be assured that our sacrifices will not be in vain, but for the good of generations yet unborn; that out of it shall come a purer, higher, nobler civilization which shall weld all mankind into a common brotherhood; and pæans of everlasting praise shall swell the angelic chorus, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, May 19, 1917, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 3971) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Military and Naval Establishments on account of war expenses for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes, had insisted upon its amendments, had requested a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. MARTIN, Mr. UNDERWOOD, and Mr. WARREN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. DANIEL W. COMSTOCK, late a Representative from the State of Indiana.

Resolved, That a committee of five Senators be appointed by the Chair to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased in Richmond, Ind.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

And that in compliance with the foregoing resolutions the Vice President had appointed as the committee on the part of the Senate Mr. NEW, Mr. WATSON, Mr. FERNALD, Mr. THOMAS, and Mr. HARDWICK.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a letter from Trooper MacMenigall, a resident of my district, who is serving with the British troops in France.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing the letter indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Following is the letter referred to:

LETTER FROM TROOPER W. MACMENIGALL, D SQUADRON, D. L. O. Y., THIRD CORPS CAVALRY, SERVING WITH BRITISH TROOPS IN FRANCE, SON OF MR. AND MRS. JOHN MACMENIGALL, OF 1 SONOMA PLACE, HOLYOKE, MASS.

B. E. F., April 6, 1917.

MY DEAR PARENTS: I have been been informed within the last hour that the "dear old U. S. A." has declared war. The reason why this information has been rather late in reaching me is because ever since this German retreat started I've been in action as cavalry scouting and pursuing. My job has been point man or first scout out. I've had to approach all villages under as much cover as possible for the purpose of finding out if it was held by the enemy and their strength. Our regiment has been very successful in these duties and in action. No doubt from the letter you will realize that my life has been rather adventurous recently. I have not time to write my own personal experiences here, but I have been near a goner on more than one occasion.

In one case my horse saved my life. The only damage I had personally was a rifle bullet off my water bottle and two through my cape. My horse had a slight wound in his foreleg. Of course some of my comrades have gone on to the "happy hunting grounds," also horses. But we have more than scored our losses in Huns.

We have made captures both of horses and men from the German cavalry. In our advance I've come across numerous civilians suffering semistarvation. They were mostly people of advanced age and very young children. All young women from the ages of 17 to 30 were forcibly sent to Germany or carried back with the German Army on its retreat, I can not determine which. I've met old people that were heartbroken because their daughters had been taken away, their homes destroyed by being blown up or burned. All villages are nothing but a heap of ruins. Orchards have also been destroyed by cutting down all the fruit trees. It is nothing but a destitute land, and will be for years. The civilians have been all sent to our rear, out of danger. Previous to going, many informed me that it was the American relief that supplied what food and comfort they did get while in German hands. When they told me this, I stated that I was an American, for I speak some French now. On finding out that my parents lived in the States they made me promise that in my next letter I would send their personal thanks, deep appreciation, and gratitude to all the American people for their kindness and thoughtful generosity to them during their misfortunes. * * *

* * * I wish that father would inform the war office that I have a keen desire to serve my own country, now that they have entered the war, not that I'm dissatisfied with the British authorities, officers or men, for I've found them excellent fellows. Ever since coming I have been very industrious in trying to learn as much as possible, feeling that my country would be forced to enter the war at some future period; and all of my notes, observations, experiences, etc., in the field would be of use to my own school pals should they soldier here at some time.

The following are the essential items to the soldier: Physical care of himself and horse, making himself comfortable in shelter with material at hand, whether a tree trunk or a barn; carrying only kit that is essential to himself; care of arms, ammunition, sword, rifle, bombs in all weather; making use of cover in an attack, digging oneself in, etc.; observing the enemy, endeavoring to find his next move, should you think it is contemplated, because of your own position being inferior; the latter in actual war and maneuvers aren't the same.

I have had courses and passed in the following as an efficient soldier: Machine gunner, bomber, sniper, trench observer. I have been from the extreme north to the south of the British line. Was through the whole battle of the Somme, noting at the time why they placed machine guns in certain positions, trenches, etc., to repel our advances, and endeavoring to learn why they did it. I am capable of instructing physical drill, rifle and exercises, bayonet fighting, sword drill and exercises, dismounted and mounted.

I have made it all a study for my own benefit, because only the fittest survive here, also thinking I might be of use at some time. My colonel would recommend me for a commission in the British Army if I so desired. I wish you to offer my services to our Government as commissioned officer or private, any way they may judge fit to use me. I feel assured they can arrange my transfer from British to American, for all the subjects of Britain were claimed from the French and Belgian Armies at the commencement of the war.

Hoping you will excuse paper—it is all I have—also mistakes, for I am writing behind a hedge, finding it quite difficult. Give all my best wishes to all the boys in their patriotic endeavors for the country. Tell them to learn as much as possible in their training; to become disciplined willingly for the benefit of the old United States and themselves. I want them to make a showing when they arrive, and feel assured they can do it.

* * * I have been out here almost two years now and am feeling fit.

* * * I can't place or reason that the German-Americans would do the same as the Germans have done here. It seems impossible.

* * * I have noticed in old newspapers that the United States will require 25,000 men of military experience to officer her new army.

* * *

Yours, BILLY.

(Trooper William MacMenigall, 4146, Duke of Lancaster's Own Yoe, Third Corps, Cavalry B. E. F., France.)

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a resolution passed by the State Senate of Texas, denying the authority of certain citizens of Texas lately appearing before the Committee on Agriculture to voice the sentiments of my State.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD as indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Following is the resolution referred to:

Whereas it is shown by the press that the Congress of the United States has at this tme under consideration the question of fixing the prices on all food products in America; and

Whereas we have faith in the patriotism of the men on the farms and ranches of our country who produce the food of our Nation, and do not believe them responsible for the present high prices of agricultural products, but do believe that middle men and speculators and others causes are responsible for such high prices; and

Whereas we do not believe that any men have the right to pretend to speak for the Texas farmer and to ask that the price of the products of Texas farms be fixed by law or official order, but do believe that if the said middle men and speculators who rob both consumer and producer and selfishly enrich themselves were eliminated that the products of the farms and ranches would bring larger legitimate prices to those who raise them at less cost to those who consume; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we condemn the action of those men who would seek to capitalize petty political positions as authority to speak for the great patriotic farmers and stock-raising interests of this State, and who appear to be asking that prices be fixed by Congress on agricultural proudcts, but we ask that governmental control and influence be confined to every possible effort to eliminate the middlemen and speculators aforesaid; and be it

Resolved further, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the Secretary of the senate, to the President of the United States, and to each Representative in Congress from the State.

May 16, 1917, the foregoing resolution was adopted by the Senate of Texas.

JOHN D. MCCALL,
Secretary of the Senate.

EMERGENCY DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 3971, the emergency deficiency appropriation bill, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked for.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 3971, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked for. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that with respect to an attempt to authorize an appropriation amounting to three-quarters of a billion in one item that body which is supposed to originate appropriation legislation ought to have a chance to consider it. I think it would be due respect to the House. I am surprised that the gentleman from New York should ask that authority be given to make an authorization of an appropriation of three-quarters of a billion without the House having any opportunity to express an opinion upon it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have not done that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MANN. Certainly the gentleman has.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman should not express surprise at anything I propose, but having unlimited confidence in myself I supposed there could be no doubt that this will be safe in my custody.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman's request is acceded to, the House can not have any opportunity. Therefore I shall have to object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the Speaker refer the bill under the rule.

The SPEAKER. It is referred under the rule.

DISPENSING WITH THE UNANIMOUS CONSENT CALENDAR.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business on the Unanimous Consent Calendar be dispensed with to-day, in order to continue with the war-revenue bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to dispense with the Unanimous Consent Calendar to-day. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

WAR REVENUE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4280, the war-revenue bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4280, the war-revenue bill. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio makes the point of no quorum, and evidently there is none.

CALL OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

Mr. GARNER. It is automatic.

Mr. FOSTER. It comes automatically in this case, does it not, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. Why so? The House was not voting on anything.

Mr. FOSTER. The Chair was putting a question.

Mr. MANN. There was no division.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina moves a call of the House. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Anthony	Eagan	Linthicum	Sanders, Ind.
Bacharach	Eagle	Lobeck	Scott, Pa.
Barnhart	Edmonds	McCulloch	Scully
Bland	Fairchild, G. W.	Maher	Sherley
Bowers	Flynn	Martin, Ill.	Siegel
Britten	Focht	Mays	Sims
Brodbeck	Francis	Moon	Sisson
Bruckner	Fuller, Mass.	Moores, Ind.	Smith, T. F.
Butler	Gallivan	Morin	Stafford
Byrnes, S. C.	Glass	Neely	Steele
Caldwell	Godwin, N. C.	Nelson	Stephens, Miss.
Candler, Miss.	Gray, N. J.	Nolan	Strong
Cantrill	Griest	Norton	Sullivan
Capstick	Griffin	Oliver, N. Y.	Swift
Carew	Hamill	Padgett	Talbott
Carlin	Hamilton, N. Y.	Park	Timberlake
Chandler, N. Y.	Haskell	Powers	Vare
Coady	Hawley	Pratt	Venable
Copley	Hayes	Price	Vestal
Costello	Heaton	Purnell	Voigt
Cox	Heintz	Ragsdale	Volstead
Dale, N. Y.	Hill	Ramsey	Walton
Davis	Hutchinson	Rankin	Watson, Pa.
Denison	Igoe	Riordan	Whaley
Dewalt	Kahn	Robbins	Williams
Dixon	Key, Ohio	Robinson	Wise
Dooling	Kiess, Pa.	Rose	Wood, Ind.
Drukker	Kraus	Rowe
Dyer	Kreider	Rowland

The SPEAKER. On this call 312 Members, a quorum, have answered to their names.

Mr. KITCHIN. I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina moves to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. WALTON] be excused indefinitely on account of illness.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. WALTON] be excused indefinitely on account of absence. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

WAR REVENUE.

On motion of Mr. KITCHIN, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes, with Mr. FOSTER in the chair.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania: Page 25, after line 18, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"TITLE VI.—WAR TAX ON COTTON.

"That there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid upon all unmanufactured cotton a tax of $2.50 a bale."

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire what the point of order is?

Mr. CRISP. The point of order is that under the rules of the House it is a new item, which does not relate to any item in the bill. It is not germane to anything in the bill, and therefore is obnoxious to clause 3, Rule XXI.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, this is a bill "to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes."

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, in order to give the gentleman from Pennsylvania the full benefit of the point of order, I will call his attention to clause 3 of Rule XXI, which provides that no amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter of the bill; nor shall any amendment to any item in such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

There is nothing in this bill relating to a tax on cotton.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is the gentleman aware that the amendment proposes a new title?

Mr. CRISP. Yes; I am aware of that; but that does not make any difference under the rules of the House. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ALEXANDER], when he was chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, delivered the first ruling under this rule, and these questions were all taken up, and there was an elaborate ruling, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ALEXANDER] sustained the point of order against an amendment proposing an additional item to a revenue bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. May I ask the gentleman if he is aware of the fact that cotton has been a subject of taxation for revenue purposes, and that acts of Congress were passed on several occasions providing for a tax on cotton as a means of raising revenue for the purposes of the Government?

Mr. CRISP. Be that as it may, there is nothing in this bill relating to it; and I would suggest to the gentleman that if we are going to levy a consumption tax, we might levy a tax on manufactured steel, on coal, on wheat, on corn, on barley, on meat, on cattle, and other things.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. In war time, why not?

Mr. CRISP. If we want to go into that we can raise billions of dollars by levying a consumption tax.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then I would have a tax on cotton, which would be as germane as any of the other propositions that the gentleman has mentioned.

Mr. CRISP. Does the gentleman favor a tax on coal?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It might be germane, when we are raising revenue for the purposes of the Government. We are taxing a variety of products in this bill.

Mr. HEFLIN. Would the gentleman favor a tax on wool?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Why, we already have a tax on all wool manufactured, and we have a tax on cotton manufactured.

Mr. HEFLIN. Not an excise tax on wool.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That, I regret to say, is the trouble with the gentleman, that he wants raw cotton to go free, although it now is one of the best profit makers in the country, but he wants everything that is produced from cotton to be taxed. Everyone who fabricates cotton, who toils over it and wears it, is to be taxed, but the man who produces it or who operates under the benign influence of a Providence that is good to him, is to go free?

Mr. CRISP. The gentleman certainly does not want a tax on cotton, with wheat at $3 a bushel and corn and flour and everything else at their present high prices untaxed. While people have to eat those things, they have to wear cotton. I think the gentleman's district manufactures and consumes about as much raw cotton as any district in the United States.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. We will cross that bridge when we come to it; but the proposition now is to tax cotton. If the gentleman thinks grain ought to be taxed, that might be an appropriate subject for taxation. If the gentleman thinks coal ought to be taxed, that would be an appropriate subject for taxation.

Mr. CRISP. The gentleman is not in favor of any consumption tax in this bill at present.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman may be obliged to vote for a tax upon the gas which lights the small homes of the land. He may be obliged to vote for a tax upon the electric light that is put to domestic use, and he may be obliged to vote for a tax upon the heat that comes from the coal that the gentleman thinks is not taxed. Why not tax cotton, if we are to tax all these necessaries of life?

Now, Mr. Chairman, as to the point of order I wish to say this: The gentleman makes the point that a tax upon cotton would not be germane to this bill. The gentleman has already proposed to introduce into this bill a tax upon cotton imports into the United States. That is provided for in the paragraph proposing a 10 per cent ad valorem tax upon all imports into the United States. The gentleman would tax cotton coming into the country but he would avoid putting an excise tax upon the cotton going out of the country—much of it for munitions.

Mr. CRISP. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If the gentleman rests upon the parliamentary suggestion that a tax upon cotton would not be germane, then he must strike out the tax that is already proposed upon cotton coming into the country.

Mr. HOWARD. Is the gentleman familiar with the decision in the Farris case, as to the constitutionality of the revenue tax on cotton during the War between the States?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No; I am not a lawyer, as the gentleman from Georgia is, but I have observed that every cotton-tax lawyer falls behind some decision of the Supreme Court when it is proposed to put a tax on cotton. What I propose now is, in this war extremity when everything else in the land is being taxed——

Mr. HOWARD. The Farris case was a war-extremity case, and the greatest judges we ever had on the bench of the United States were evenly divided.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes; and in 1864, June 30, Congress provided for a tax of 3 cents a pound on cotton.

Mr. HOWARD. In 1862 there was an act of Congress putting a cent a pound on raw cotton.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman knows that, notwithstanding the Supreme Court decision behind which he deftly falls, that particular act furnished a tax of 3 cents a pound.

Mr. HOWARD. Why did not the gentleman propose a tax on cotton in 1914?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Perhaps I did.

Mr. HEFLIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. HEFLIN. The gentleman proposes to put a tax of $2.50 on a bale of cotton.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. HEFLIN. The gentleman has cotton manufactories in his district?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Quite a number, all heavily taxed.

Mr. HEFLIN. If the gentleman's amendment should be held germane and adopted, what does he suppose would be the situation when the manufacturers of Philadelphia went to buy cotton to use in their mill? Would not the producer say to him "there has been a tax of $2.50 a bale put on this cotton"?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It might be that the producer would pass it along.

Mr. HEFLIN. The manufacturers might have to pay it, and does the gentleman want to put that tax on the manufacturers of Philadelphia?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If that is the gentleman's proposition, why is the gentleman from Alabama complaining?

Mr. LEVER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentlemen are not discussing the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania will proceed to discuss the point of order.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The point of order, Mr. Chairman, is that the amendment is not germane to the revenue bill. My answer is that the title to the bill is to provide revenue "to defray war expenses, and for other purposes," and that numerous sources of taxation are mentioned in connection with that revenue title; that on page 47 of the bill is a paragraph which says:

> That on and after the day following the passage of this act there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles when imported from any foreign country into the United States, * * * a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem in addition to the existing duty (whether ad valorem or specific); and if not now dutiable by law, a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem.

That would apply to imports of raw cotton, so that cotton is just as much a subject of taxation in this bill as any other commodity.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard for a moment on the point of order. The rule to which reference has already been made provides that no amendment shall be in order on any bill affecting revenue that is not germane to the subject matter in the bill. That is as much of the rule as would be applicable.

This rule was first adopted in the Sixty-second Congress when our Democratic friends, including my distinguished colleague, came into power in the House, after a long campaign designed to liberalize the rules of the House, so that the House itself might act upon matters, and not be confined wholly to the decree of the committee. There never had been such a rule in this or any other legislative body before that time.

Now, I will grant to the Chair that if the Chair sustains the point of order he will have plenty of precedents, precedents that have arisen since the adoption of the rule, to sustain it. What is the subject matter in this bill? It is a bill to provide revenue for war purposes. The subject matter in the bill is in relation to the raising of revenue covering a variety of subjects, covering excise taxes, tariff duties, income tax, and every other scheme which the committee could think of or somebody could dream about.

Now, this is a suggestion that the Chair must follow precedents and hold that in the great matter of raising enormous sums of money in the way of revenue for war purposes the House itself is powerless to act on them unless the Committee on Ways and Means has recommended to the House a certain item for taxation. This rule construed as the gentleman from Georgia asks the Chair to construe it, and for which there are precedents, relegates the House to a mere vetoing body. It can not originate legislation, it can only veto the Ways and Means Committee. And this great Democratic majority which came into power in the Sixty-second Congress, instead of liberalizing the rules of the House, made the rules more restrictive than any body in the history of the world has ever made rules before.

Now, I appeal to the Chair to overrule the precedents and decide according to the proper merits of the question, and to hold that the House of Representatives has the right to originate revenue legislation itself and not be confined to the sweet will of 23 Members who happen to be elected to the Ways and Means Committee. [Applause.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, this is a very important question. If this point of order be sustained, then the House is absolutely powerless to consider numerous amendments designed to correct glaring abuses which this bill will establish. Under the provisions of the bill, for instance, the beet-sugar interests of the country will get an additional tariff benefit that will result not in increasing the value of their product from three to five hundred per cent, as it has within the past three years, but to about a thousand per cent. This is a bill to provide revenue for the war, and it contains revenue measures of every conceivable character. It includes excise taxes, tariff taxes, direct taxes, and taxes upon postal matter, which do not belong in the bill.

Anything which proposes to raise revenue is germane to the subject matter of the bill, because the variety of matters is so great that it is impossible to conceive of any article subject to any form of taxation that is not germane.

I am somewhat familiar with the history of this particular rule which has been invoked. I drew it myself. I drew it at the request of the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. UNDERWOOD, and it was drawn for the specific purpose of carrying out what was then proposed to be the policy of the Democratic Party. The Democratic Party for years had been complaining of the abuse of enacting revenue legislation in omnibus tariff bills, and in the Sixty-second Congress that party proposed to undertake revenue legislation in bills dealing with single items of the tariff. The purpose of the rule was to make it impossible to complicate matters by offering amendments in the House dealing with other subjects to bills dealing with single items to be subject to customs duties.

For instance, we enacted the free-wool bill and a number of other bills which were sent to the Senate, confined to a single topic of the tariff law. This rule was to prevent those bills being encumbered by combinations such as had previously controlled the methods of enacting revenue legislation.

The pending amendment proposes an excise tax upon cotton. I am not discussing the merits of the amendment. I do not know whether there should be a tax upon cotton; but I know, if this bill goes through in its present form, that there should be levied a compensating tax on domestic sugars, and I propose to offer such an amendment, and ascertain whether the domestic sugar producers of the country can get away with what is proposed to be given to them under the provisions of this bill. The Chair will find in section 304, on page 12, an excise or direct tax levied upon all still wines, including vermuth, and upon all champagnes and other sparkling wines and liqueurs and cordials "hereafter produced in or imported into the United States." That is an excise tax upon food products produced in the United States. The Chair will find under Title VI a war tax on manufactures or commodities produced in the United States. He will find taxes on tobacco increased in this bill. Mention any subject or any article subject to taxation and it is affected by this bill, because of the provision later that increases by 10 per cent ad valorem the tax upon all articles imported into the United States, whether now upon the dutiable or upon the free list. If it be not possible to consider this amendment, then it is impossible to consider, if the committee desires, a proposal to put a tax on gasoline, a proposal to put a tax upon anything else unless a particular paragraph can be found specifically enumerating the subject matter proposed to be taxed. Whatever may have been the wisdom of the adoption of this rule, no one ever contemplated so preposterous a construction of it as would produce such a result. This is one of the most important questions submitted to the House. It vitally affects the power of the House to do business, and to consider legislation in any intelligent and proper manner. I do not propose to have the House crippled and curtailed by the interposition of a point of order upon such a question as this without at least voicing my protest. The rules of the House, Mr. Chairman, are designed to promote the business of the House by having it conducted in an orderly manner.

The rule of germaneness was adopted early in the history of the House so that matters that could not be reasonably anticipated in the consideration of a bill could not be precipitated upon the House for consideration without ample preparation. Does anyone imagine that any particular method or form or object of taxation can be suggested or proposed in connection with this bill which would bring surprise to anyone, excepting those who are resting in the hope that they are secure from assault by the taxing power? So far as the legislative mind is concerned, it is possible to consider in this bill any matter at all subject to taxation without surprise. It is not a tariff bill; it is not a bill to obtain money by internal taxation; it is not a bill to obtain revenue by some peculiar form of taxation. It is a bill to obtain money by every conceivable form or method known to the American legislator, and to say that a proposal to tax some particular commodity can not be considered in connection with such a bill is preposterous.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman's opinion, if I may, if the Chair should rule this amendment out of order, whether an amendment would be in order to adopt the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury to raise $75,000,000 by taxing the refining of petroleum, including lubricating oil, illuminating oil, and gasoline?

Mr. FITZGERALD. If this point of order should be sustained by the Chair, no proposed amendment would be in order unless the particular matters proposed to be taxed can be found enumerated in some particular paragraph in the bill.

Mr. MANN. Then, I take it, that it is the gentleman's opinion also that the House would not be able to consider over a point of order the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury that there be raised $2,500,000 by a tax upon wholesale dealers and jobbers in tobacco, or a tax of $4,800,000 on retail dealers in cigars, cigarettes, and so forth, or $5,000,000 by taxing denatured alcohol, or $92,000,000 excise tax on sugar, or $6,000,000 excise tax on glucose?

Mr. FITZGERALD. No; it would not even be in order to offer an amendment to obtain revenue by placing a tax upon the gross receipts of race tracks, which ought to be taxed in this bill if anything is to be taxed.

Mr. MANN. So that if this amendment is ruled out, the House is not even able to give consideration to a number of recommendations of the Treasury Department respecting methods of raising taxes?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to add that the purpose of this particular provision of the rule was to limit the amendments to the bill which dealt with a single object or method of taxation. It was never contemplated, it was never believed, that anyone would suggest that a bill of such an omnibus character, dealing with every conceivable subject and method of taxation, could not be amended by such an amendment as is proposed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to add one word. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] suggested to the Chair that he could find a number of precedents to sustain this point of order, since the Democratic Party has been in control. I do not believe that even that is quite correct. I do not think the Chair can find a single precedent, even under this drastic rule adopted by the Democrats since they came into power, to sustain this point of order, and I want to call the attention of the Chair to this distinction. In every case where this question has heretofore come up the bill as to which the ruling was applied, under its title related to some specific subject, and the ruling always was that any amendment must be germane to the subject matter of the bill. For instance, one of the most important rulings upon the question was a ruling with reference to a bill placing agricultural implements upon the free list, so declared by its title to be the purpose of that bill. An amendment was offered to add to the free list certain commodities not connected with agriculture or any of the things mentioned in the title, and the Chair very properly held that it was not germane, but in no case, Mr. Chairman, can you find, in my judgment, any precedent where the purpose of the bill is as broad as this bill is, "to provide revenue to defray expenses and for other purposes," where the Chair has sustained a point of order against an amendment that is germane to the general purposes of the bill. Now, there is only one bill I have any recollection of that was so general in its terms as this, and there the Chair ruled that an amendment was germane, and that was in the case of the Canadian reciprocity bill where Mr. SHERLEY, who was chairman, held that an amendment admitting other enumerated goods from Canada free from duty was germane. Now, Mr. Chairman, where will the House find itself if the Chair sustains this point of order? The House will be absolutely helpless. There will be no way by which the House can frame this revenue bill or express its will with reference to it. More than that, if this point of order is sustained the Committee on Ways and Means itself can not add one single item to this bill. Suppose $200,000,000 is stricken out of this bill as it is drawn, and the Committee on Ways and Means finds it necessary or desirable to supply that $200,000,000 in order to meet the needs of the Treasury. If this point of order is sustained, how will the committee go about it? There is no way that it can be done unless we recommit the bill and the committee brings an entirely new bill in if this point of order is sustained, because the Committee on Ways and Means has no greater privilege in the offering of amendments than any individual Member of this House. This matter is so important, Mr. Chairman, so necessary, if the House is to have its will or have anything except, as the gentleman from Illinois says, a veto power, that this point of order must be overruled.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, just a word. The question before the Chair is not as to the policy or the wisdom or the result of this rule. It may be a bad rule; it may be an unwise one; and it may result just as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] has just said, that the Committee on Ways and Means could not add any item to this bill, and that is true. That was the object of the rule when this rule was first enacted in the Sixty-second Congress. We all knew it was true, every man in the House knew it. Now, the only question here is, What is the rule? The rule is as plain as the English language can make it that such an amendment is not in order. The rule says:

> No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting legislation which is not germane to the subject matter of the bill, nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

That is just as plain as language can make it.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will.

Mr. LENROOT. This is not an amendment to any item of the bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. No. It is an amendment to the bill. The rule says:

> No amendment to the bill which is not germane to the subject matter; nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is germane, not to the subject, but to the subject matter. Now, let me give you a ruling. We had a free-list bill in the Sixty-second Congress putting many articles on the free list.

Now, Mr. MANN offered a dozen amendments to add not to one item, not affecting any item, but to add to the bill other items. We had up in that free-list bill extracts of tan bark, and so forth. We had up different items as we have had during the consideration of this bill. Mr. MANN offered an amendment to add not to any one item, but to add to the bill additional items just like this proposed amendment. He offered at least a dozen amendments. The point of order was made. The Chair in a long, elaborate ruling said that it was out of order and not in order under the rule. Other amendments were offered, dozens of them, adding other things, for instance, shoe laces, and each amendment was ruled out of order because it violated that plain, specific rule. Now, I will tell you the reason for the rule. If you did not have this rule, in the consideration of a tariff bill or a bill like this, one could offer 10,000 amendments, because you could think of 10,000 different articles you would or could add to it; you could add to it every conceivable article in the whole universe, and therefore you could keep on voting on amendments the whole session and never get through. That is one reason. Now, let me give you one ruling that came under my observation as late as March, 1916, just last session. We had before the House for consideration the bill repealing the free-sugar provision of the Underwood law. Mr. HOWARD, of Georgia, moved to recommit by adding silk, and putting an ad valorem duty on silk, and the Speaker held that it was out of order because there was no silk proposition in the bill, but it added another item that was not in the bill at all.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will.

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to ask, in the case the gentleman has just spoken of what was the subject matter of that bill?

Mr. KITCHIN. The subject matter of that bill was a tariff on sugar. There is a great deal of difference between the subject matter of a bill and the purpose of a bill. The purpose is to raise revenue. You get mixed up in the purpose and the subject matter.

Mr. LENROOT. The subject matter of this bill is to raise revenue.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is the purpose of it.

Mr. LENROOT. To raise revenue by the imposition of different kinds of taxes——

Mr. KITCHIN. On certain specific articles.

Mr. LENROOT (continuing). One of which is an excise tax. That is the subject matter of the bill, is it not?

Mr. KITCHIN. The subject matter of the bill, as distinguished from the purpose and method of the bill, is, for instance, as in Title VI, "War tax on manufacturers." That is the text of that title. Now, then, the subject matter of the title of this bill is a tax upon automobiles, automobile trucks, jewelry, and so forth, and the other specific articles mentioned therein.

Mr. LENROOT. I want to ask the gentleman one more question, and that is, if the construction he now puts upon this rule——

Mr. KITCHIN. I am putting the construction that the Chair puts upon that question.

Mr. LENROOT. Kindly let me finish my question. If that is correct, why was it necessary to incorporate the last part of the rule, to the effect that no amendment to any item should be in order, because, if the gentleman's construction is now correct, it was absolutely unnecessary to incorporate the last part of the rule as to any amendment?

Mr. KITCHIN. It was unnecessary, but it was put in to make it specific and clear; and the Chair, as I said, on the question of raw silk and sugar made it plain that you can not add an item.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, just a word on the point of order. I express no opinion as to the merits of the amendment; but even if the contention of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] was true, that you can not under any circumstances add a new object of taxation to a revenue bill, that does not hold good in this case. Cotton is taxed twice in this bill. It is taxed as a raw product on its importation; it is taxed as a manufactured product. This is merely another method of taxing the same thing.

Mr. HOWARD. I would like to call the Chair's attention to this fact, that as late as Saturday the Chair held on an amendment offered by me to the subject matter dealt with in this bill, to wit, the increased license upon liquor—and I introduced an amendment to increase the license from $75 on retail liquor dealers to $5,000—the Chair held in that instance that while the subject matter was all right, the question of dealers in liquor was not dealt with in this tax, and that therefore my amendment was subject to the point of order.

Mr. LENROOT. When the gentleman offered that amendment, did he think it was in order?

Mr. HOWARD. I certainly think now it is in order, if there is a semblance of order in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

Mr. LENROOT. My question was, if the gentleman thought it was in order when he offered it?

Mr. HOWARD. I agree with the Chair that he was right about it when he ruled it out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] offers an amendment, on page 25, after line 18, as a new paragraph, as follows:

TITLE VI.—WAR TAX ON COTTON.

That there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid upon all unmanufactured cotton a tax of $2.50 a bale.

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] makes the point of order that it is not in order under Rule XXI, paragraph 3, which provides:

No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill; nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

As stated, this rule was first adopted in the Sixty-second Congress, after which Congress had under consideration the bill known, as the Chair now remembers it, as the farmers' free-list bill.

An amendment was offered to that bill providing that glass should be placed upon the free list as one of the items. Judge ALEXANDER, of Missouri, who was then in the chair, for whose opinion the present occupant of the chair has great respect, delivered an elaborate decision upon this rule, stating that the amendment offered at that time was not germane to the item in the bill. It has been said here that precedents are not always the proper way by which to decide questions, and yet the Chair thinks, without exercising his arbitrary power, that the decision of former Speakers or Chairmen of Committees of the Whole should be taken into consideration. And there is upon that question in Hinds' Precedents, volume 2, page 873, matter in line with that:

On January 10, 1842, Chairman George W. Hopkins, of Virginia, in the course of a ruling made in the Committee of the Whole, said:

"A Chairman does not sit here to expound rules according to his own arbitrary views. A just deference for the opinions of his fellows should constrain him to give to precedent its proper influence; and until the House shall reverse them, to give them all the consideration which is due to cases heretofore settled by a solemn decision of the House.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the indulgence of the Chair to ask him a question on this ruling? [Cries of "Rule!" "Rule!"]

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. I gather that the Chair is basing his ruling on Judge ALEXANDER's decision. I merely desire to ask the Chair whether he has in mind the fact that in Judge ALEXANDER's decision the title of the bill related expressly to certain specific articles on the free list?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the Chair is not through with that matter yet.

Now, there was another decision, as stated here in 1916, by the Speaker of the House, when Mr. HOWARD, of Georgia, moved to recommit the bill H. R. 11471 to the Committee on Ways and Means, with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That on and after May 1, 1916, a duty of 35 per cent ad valorem be levied upon all importations of raw silk."

The point of order was made upon this amendment by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] and sustained by Mr. Speaker CLARK.

Judge ALEXANDER, the Chair thinks, took some time and some trouble to look up the decisions in reference to this matter, and came to the conclusion that the matter of placing another article on the free list of the bill was not germane to any item in the printed bill. So the point of order at that time was sustained.

A statement was made here on last Saturday, when the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HOWARD] offered an amendment to which a point of order was made, and the Chair sustained it, similar to the one now offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE]. The Chair is not here to say what the policy of a rule of this kind may be, and how it may affect the action of the House, but the Chair's business is to construe the rule as he thinks right and just. The statement referred to, made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD], was that he drew this rule, and, as the Chair understood, he drew it for this particular purpose, so that it might act in this way, so as to exclude a lot of these amendments that were not germane under this new rule.

Now, the Chair in this case thinks that, according to the decisions in the past in the Committee of the Whole, and what the Speaker of the House has decided, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] to place another title in the bill, to tax cotton $2.50 a bale, is not germane, and therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I think that we ought to set a new precedent, and I therefore respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. MANN. You can not lay the appeal on the table. If you knew anything about it, you would not undertake to do it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS] to take the chair.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, is the matter of the appeal subject to debate?

The CHAIRMAN. No.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I would like to make a statement, if I may.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman will be recognized.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the ruling of the Chair is correct. It is not only consistent with the precedents, but is in accord with the text and the spirit of the rule. I shall vote to sustain the action of the Chair.

In so doing, however, I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, that I do not agree with the policy of the rule itself. I myself am somewhat familiar with the history of the rule, and know something of how and why it originated and how and why it was adopted. I did not favor the policy that was involved in it when it was first adopted, because it tied the hands of the House and gave to a committee of the House a power that the House itself could not exercise. I protested against it at the time in the committee. My views upon it have not changed since, and in my judgment the policy that is involved in the rule is bad, and eventually it must be changed.

But, as I said, the ruling of the Chair is entirely logical and correct, and I shall vote to sustain the ruling of the Chair. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair appoints——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, just a word. I think the Chair was justified in making the ruling which he did. The Chair must necessarily be guided largely by the precedents.

I remember very distinctly when the original ruling was made on this rule. I offered amendments to various bills in every conceivable form. The Chair ruled them out. But, having ruled as he does under the precedents, it is no reflection upon the Chair or the Committee of the Whole to change the precedents, and if the committee which constitutes the membership of the House desires to have its hands free in making up a revenue bill it will reverse the decision of the Chair. The exigency of our Democratic friends in the Sixty-second Congress, when they were trying to pass the revenue bills by schedules, is not the exigency now before us, and we ought to have the right and the license to consider all propositions of raising revenue without hindrance. I hope the House will give a new precedent, which will not be any reflection on the Chair.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Regular order!

Mr. ADAMSON. I was asking the gentleman from Illinois to yield to me to ask a question.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, am I recognized?

Mr. MANN. I yielded the floor to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. POU. Mr. Chairman, the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is on the appeal.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I demand the regular order.

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Chairman, may I have one minute?

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois had the floor, and he is willing to answer. After I rose the gentleman yielded the floor.

Mr. MANN. I have yielded the floor.

Mr. ADAMSON. I would like to ask him a question.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, this is all out of order.

Mr. HAMLIN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ADAMSON. If the gentleman is afraid to answer the question, all right. I addressed the Chair long before he yielded the floor.

Mr. HAMLIN. If this is all proceeding by unanimous consent, then I object.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HAMLIN. Have I the right to object?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks so.

Mr. HAMLIN. Then I object.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. I have not submitted any proposition yet, and therefore no objection can be made in advance of the proposition. I want to submit a proposition——

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, several gentlemen, including the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], have submitted remarks relating to this subject matter, which is certainly one of exceeding importance. The line of argument of the gentleman from Illinois was that he suggested that, while the Chair is technically right, this body, which is to sit as a court of appeal on the matter of whether it is or is not technically right, shall admit him to be technically right and yet decide the other way.

Mr. POU. And so change the rules.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Because that will be the effect of their action.

Mr. POU. I should like to ask the gentleman if it is not a proposition to change the rules?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. That is the very proposition I am trying to present to this body.

Mr. POU. And to change them in an irregular way?

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Chairman, if the Chair is right, then he is right, and it is a cowardly thing to try to overrule a righteous decision without changing the rule itself.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. ADAMSON. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, in order that I may proceed briefly, I ask unanimous consent to speak for three minutes on this subject matter.

Mr. BENJAMIN L. FAIRCHILD. I object.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. ADAMSON. A parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order. It is impossible to transact business with every Member on his feet. The gentleman from Georgia wishes to submit a parliamentary inquiry. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ADAMSON. In voting upon the appeal from the decision of the Chair, is not the committee individually as much bound by the precedents as is the Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not ready to decide that.

Mr. MANN. Nobody would think that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the decision of the committee?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers on the vote.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed Mr. MANN and Mr. CRISP.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 136, noes 117.

Accordingly the decision of the Chair was sustained.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. In view of this ruling of the Chair, and the action of the committee upon it, I want to suggest that the Committee on Rules ought to convene immediately and amend this rule. [Applause.] I want to take a moment to give my reasons for it. We are now placed in the position that, however unjust some of the items in this bill are, the chairman of the committee can arise in his seat on the floor and say, "The Treasury Department must have this money. If you strike out this item, there is no way to get that money." No new amendments can be proposed, even by the committee itself, to supply revenues in place of any items that the House in its wisdom may seek to strike out. For instance, it has been suggested that a little further on in the bill there ought to be a tax upon the three million and more automobiles in this country. The House is helpless now to propose any such thing. Is the House of Representatives in this, the greatest crisis that our country has ever known, going to permit itself to be helpless to legislate and powerful only to veto? [Applause.] Does the chairman of the committee think that any such thing should be done, that the Committee on Ways and Means should be greater than the House of Representatives itself? Gentlemen, if in the wisdom of the House some item of this bill should be stricken out, and then the House, in striking it out, should say, "We do not desire to embarrass the Treasury, and in its place we will propose something else;" under the situation as it now exists there is only one way in which this can be remedied, and that is for the Committee on Rules to meet immediately and propose an amendment to this rule. And I want to remind gentlemen upon that side of the aisle that this rule is a Democratic piece of handiwork. The situation never could have arisen when the Republicans were in power. And now, when it is working such a great injustice, is it too much to ask of you Democrats in this exigency to amend this rule so that the House will be permitted to exercise its will?

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask unanimous consent to have just three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent for three minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may have five minutes following the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, the House is not in any such situation as the excitement of the gentleman from Wisconsin would have you believe. Why, you can raise $100,000,000 or $200,000,000 more right in this bill. The gentleman had the privilege of offering an amendment to increase the tax on whisky and on tobacco. He did increase the tax on incomes $60,000,000. He could have made it $100,000,000 more. He could have offered an amendment to raise the tax on excess profits $200,000,000. He did not do it. All these items, and hundreds of items in this bill, are open to amendment. He can move to increase them. The entire tariff provision is subject to increase. He can move to increase any one item in the tariff bill. Why, there is no such situation as he suggests——

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, when we reach the stamp tax, under the decision which the Chairman has just made, have I the right to offer an amendment to put a stamp tax on bank checks?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; you would not have under this ruling. The gentleman from Wisconsin says that the rule is the handiwork of the Democratic Party in the Sixty-second Congress. I wish to remind the gentleman that President Taft himself, when he was President of the United States, in a letter written to Mr. MCKINLEY, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, suggested a rule like this. He said in that campaign he wanted to revise the tariff, but could not do it. He said:

> Of course, that will be impracticable unless Congress itself shall adopt the parliamentary rule, as I hope it will, that a bill to amend one schedule of the tariff can not be subject to amendment by adding changes in any other schedule.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

The gentleman from Wisconsin did not oppose this rule, nor did a single gentleman on that side of the House. That rule was voted on without a protest from any man in the House.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman will do me the honor to say that he is mistaken about that; many of us opposed it.

Mr. KITCHIN. A majority did not oppose it. Not enough opposed it to call the yeas and nays on it.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is again mistaken.

Mr. KITCHIN. I challenge you to look at the RECORD and show that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] or the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] opposed that rule, because it was following the suggestion of their President. I thought that I ought to say that much. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Pennsylvania may proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. HARDY. Reserving the right to object, I want two minutes myself. We have heard from that side——

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will not do that. The gentleman from Pennsylvania started to do the same thing and withdrew it. It is not the practice of the House to make trades.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I am not concerned so much as to the operation of this rule at the present time as I am in raising revenue equal to eighteen hundred million dollars, as requested by the Secretary of the Treasury to carry on the war in Europe. I am interested in making that great burden of taxation as equitable as possible. I reserved the right in the Committee on Ways and Means to offer an amendment to this bill to tax cotton. I kept the faith this morning by offering an amendment, and the result is well known to you. It was not intended in the preparation of this measure that cotton should be taxed. Everything manufactured from cotton is taxed, and is to be taxed more in this bill, but unmanufactured cotton, a wealth producer to the extent in 1916 of $1,500,000,000, does not pay one cent of tax. I might be charged with sectionalism if I said more on this line at this time.

I do not now intend to make the argument I had it in mind to make on the merits of the amendment, but I do intend to read a few hurriedly prepared lines instead. It is all I can do in five minutes, and will help, I hope, to a better understanding of the effect of the recent ruling of the Chair as it relates to cotton. [Applause.]

COTTON IS FREE.

In fixing your taxes to pay for the war,
A trifle of billions, unheard of before,
Be sure to distribute the burden around
And catch every fellow who ought to be bound—
The rich man, the poor man, your good self, and me—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

Double up all the taxes on incomes and such,
And take all the profits from industry's clutch;
Insurance and business, tax higher and higher,
Till each corporation shall gasp and expire;
But ever and always remember to be
A friend of King Cotton,
For cotton is free.

Put taxes on whisky, wines, soda, and beer;
Let "Old Prohibition" resume his good cheer;
Cigars and tobacco—but never the leaf—
Let them pay for war and our common relief;
The cigarette smoker—he'll gladly agree—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

Let shippers pay tax for the goods they transport;
Let passengers pay, or to walking resort;
Add taxes to those who must message by wire;
Tax automobiles from the top to the tire;
Tax talking machines till they yell like high C—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

The "movies," the ball fans, the boys in the club,
Are taxable stuff and can stand for a rub;
Like perfumes and powders and troches and pills,
They are all patriotic and like to pay bills.
So let them contribute, for happy they'll be—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

Another suggestion: Stamp taxes on deeds,
That ought to help make up the Government needs;
And 8 cents a pack on your cards, which the same
Will help if you let Uncle Sam in the game;
Take these and life's earnings, whatever they may be—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

Tax people who write for the use of the mails;
Let rates go up higher—who writes never quails;
All parties, all nations, are now in accord
In praising the pen as more fierce than the sword,
So pile on these taxes where welcome they'll be—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

And here's a suggestion: Just call it "our bit";
Tax all manufactures, so we don't get hit;
Lay on, old Macduff, when it comes to the mill
On that proposition vote "aye" with a will;
Tax high the whole workshop from Alpha to Z—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

We've had a good season, our crop has not failed;
We've put by some profits, and have some more baled;
We've had a few censuses—Congress is kind,
And "field demonstrations" have not gone behind;
The war-risk insurance has helped on the sea—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

So pile on the taxes and pile them up high;
Tax everything found 'twixt the earth and the sky;
Raise money for Balfour and sturdy old Joffre,
They're right on the job, and you've no time to loaf;
"Special privilege to none" our great war cry shall be—
But don't you tax cotton,
For cotton is free.

[Laughter and applause.]

Mr. HARDY. I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas that he proceed for three minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, there are some narrow minds that fail while they talk about equal rights and all that to realize the first element of it. I am in favor of the rule as it stands on the statute book, notwithstanding the furor and frenzy of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] for its repeal. This very amendment illustrates its wisdom, for I had an amendment to the amendment to offer which would equalize the burden, if the raw product of the farmer of the South was to be taxed, by putting a tax on corn, wheat, potatoes, the products of the farmers of the great West, and coal, the product from the gentleman's own country, and then, of course, it would be defeated, as it ought to be. But for the rule which the Chairman has just enforced we could clutter up this bill by a thousand proposed amendments, gotten up here on the floor, that would keep us discussing them for days and weeks, and small minds would vent their sectional spleen ad nauseam.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] speaks of the inequality of not taxing cotton, because we tax cloth made of cotton. He knows that the taxes on the manufactures of cotton are in the main to the detriment of the cotton producer. We groan under the fact that we raise cotton and must sell it in the open markets of the world and that we must buy our own cotton products when they come back to us as clothing in the closed markets of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, yet he pretends that he does not see that. I am sorry that this question came up in a form that made it a sectional one. It is strange and sad to me that all of the favor the gentleman's resolution finds is from a section that does not raise cotton. If the proposition was to tax wheat, the line-up would be different, but why should the wheat farmer not be taxed as well as the cotton farmer? Both wheat and cotton are necessities of life. Cotton is a great food product as well as a clothing product. Why should you go to the farmer who buys his stuff in the closed market and put a direct tax on his product, whether it be wheat or cotton, while you put a tax on competing articles to raise the manufacturers' prices? The truth is that all of the western men in the House are interested with the southern men in letting the farm products, the raw materials of the country, be free of any direct taxation, even though they can not be protected by a special benefaction. You can not protect your wheat, you can not protect our cotton, you can not raise the price of either by a tariff on the same products. But this gentleman, in the height of his folly, wants not only to protect his own industries, but to impose a special burden of a special tax on our industry. It seems to me that we have had enough of this sectional pettifogging. I think the gentleman only meant buncombe. He was not in earnest. He knew that the cotton farmer and the wheat farmer and the corn farmer and the potato farmer all stand alike, furnishing the necessary production of farm products, but he did not dare include wheat and corn because he did not dare face the indignation of the West, and of course he did not include coal because that comes from his own district. Of course his coal can be taxed just as much as the cotton, but that is another matter. Oh, no; he does not want to raise any revenue in that way, anxious as he is to raise revenue, which is the poor hypocritical reason he gives for his proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 600. That there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid—

(a) Upon all automobiles, automobile trucks, automobile wagons, and motorcycles, and automobile, motorcycle, or bicycle tires (including inner tubes) sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold: Provided, That from the tax which otherwise would be imposed upon a manufacturer, producer, or importer of automobiles, automobile trucks, automobile wagons, or motorcycles there shall be deducted the amount of any tax paid under this subdivision upon the tires thereon at the time of sale.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the section.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, before that amendment is put I have a committee amendment to make it clear that they will have the deduction of 5 per cent upon tires.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 26, lines 5 and 6, by striking out the words "the amount of any tax paid under this subdivision upon the tires thereon at the time of sale" and inserting "an amount equivalent to 5 per cent of the amount paid for the tires, including the inner tubes, on such vehicles by such manufacturer, producer, or importer."

Mr. KITCHIN. That makes it clear that the man deduct his 5 per cent upon the tire.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pages 25 and 26, strike out paragraph (a) of section 600.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this paragraph and amendments thereto close in one hour.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I suggest that the demand for time upon this side will be one hour.

Mr. KITCHIN. Then I ask unanimous consent that the debate upon this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in two hours, one half of that time to be controlled by myself and the other half by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto shall close in two hours, one-half of the time to be controlled by himself and one-half by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be recognized for 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, the motion which I have made is to strike out the paragraph which imposes a 5 per cent tax on the gross sales of automobiles and automobile trucks.

Before I enter into a discussion of the automobile industry and the effect of the proposed tax upon it, I want the House to have clearly in mind just what the proposal is. In the first place, under this bill an automobile company is required to pay the corporation tax of 4 per cent and the excess-profits tax of 16 per cent just the same as other corporations. In addition to the corporation tax and the excess-profits tax, this bill proposes to levy a gross-sales tax of 5 per cent on the selling price of every automobile and truck. It is estimated that this proposed 5 per cent tax on automobiles, trucks, and tires will produce approximately $80,000,000 in revenue.

To show the full extent of the discrimination against the automobile industry, let us take two corporations, one engaged in making automobiles and the other in making some article of commerce not included in Title VI of this bill. Let us assume that each corporation has an actual investment of $1,000,000, gross sales of $2,000,000, and a profit of $200,000 before deducting any taxes levied under this bill. The automobile company would pay a tax of $105,760 under this bill, while a corporation engaged in another line of business, with the same capital, the same gross sales, and the same profits, would pay $35,120. In the example which I have given the burden falling upon the automobile company would be practically three times as great as that falling upon the other company, although the actual capital and profits of both are the same. It is to the wisdom and justice of this proposal that I desire to direct the attention of the House.

It is said that this bill comes before the House with the indorsement of the full committee. Under ordinary legislative conditions a unanimous report from any of the leading committees of the House in favor of the passage of a bill would carry great weight with the Members of this body. This is particularly true of bills reported from the Committee on Ways and Means, a committee which takes high rank in the House, and whose members are held in the very highest esteem. The House naturally attaches great weight to the action of such a committee, because it is presumed that the committee has thoroughly investigated the subject of the proposed legislation and that the action recommended is based upon well-digested and thoroughly established facts. Unfortunately it seems to have been impossible for the committee to pursue the usual course in the preparation of this bill. It was first taken up by a subcommittee, which, according to the press, sat in secret, keeping all information as to their proceedings concealed even from other members of the committee. Later it was taken up by the full committee and shortly thereafter reported to the House. Although every vital interest of the country is affected by this bill, no hearings were held, no testimony was taken, and no investigation conducted.

With all proper respect for the members of the Committee on Ways and Means and with a full appreciation of their splendid abilities, I do not believe that it is within the capacity of any committee of Congress, no matter how able or distinguished, to legislate safely or wisely upon all the subjects carried in this bill without testimony, without inquiry, and without investigation. A bill so prepared must of necessity contain provisions based upon "first-blush" conclusions, springing in part from unsupported personal opinion or perhaps unsuspected prejudice, or at the best from views supported only by superficial and fragmentary information.

As might be expected under the circumstances many provisions of this bill furnish ample evidence of superficial consideration and hasty conclusions. Title VI of the bill undoubtedly furnishes the most brilliant example of this. An examination of this title shows that for purposes of taxation the bill groups together 9 or 10 classes of articles, which in the judgment of the committee apparently are so similar in character and service and perform so similar a function in the life of the Nation that they can be properly grouped together and taxed in the same manner. This list of articles should be carefully examined by the Members of the House. It is made up of automobiles and trucks, musical instruments, moving-picture films, jewelry, pleasure boats, sporting goods, patent medicines, perfumery, cosmetics, and chewing gum. It will be seen that under the provisions of the bill automobiles and trucks are classified with the piano player, motor boats not used in trade, the phonograph, moving-picture films, tennis racquets, golf balls, golf sticks, baseball bats, footballs, fishing rods, checkerboards, pool tables, playing cards, hair oils, talcum powder, and chewing gum.

Those who have built up the great automobile industry of the country until it ranks in importance and in value of product next to the steel industry in manufactures will undoubtedly be highly gratified to know that upon the authority of a great committee of Congress the automobile is at least equally important and vital to our national life as chewing gum, talcum powder, and hair oil.

The fact is that the Committee on Ways and Means has done itself a great injustice in taking the automobile industry out of the list of great industries, where it of right belongs, and putting it in a group of manufactures of a wholly different character. The automobile is not a plaything like a phonograph or a fishing rod or a tennis racquet. It is a great independent, individual agent of transportation and trade. The average price of an automobile is $605. This is but little more than the price of a first-class team of horses and equipment at the present time. The cheaper grades of automobiles like the Ford are scarcely more expensive or more of a luxury than a good horse and equipment.

Mr. HULBERT. Will the gentleman yield at that point for a very brief interruption?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I will.

Mr. HULBERT. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that on page 27 of this item an exemption is made in the case of motor boats or other vessels not used or intended to be used for trade, and I want to ask why this exemption is made for motor boats when they do not make any such exemption for automobile trucks and automobile wagons used for trade?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. What the gentleman from New York says is absolutely true. They have included in this list with perfumery and chewing gum the automobile truck, one of the great agencies of transportation and trade in every State in the Union, and the point I want to make right here is that this classification, upon its face, shows that the distinguished Committee on Ways and Means gave little or no consideration to this great industry which they have picked out for this unusual and extraordinary burden. I do not know how they arrived at the conclusion that automobile trucks, talcum powder, and chewing gum should be classed together for purposes of taxation.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I will.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Does the gentleman think that automobile trucks are as necessary as silk stockings?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Well, that depends upon conditions a great deal. [Laughter.] Sometimes one would be more necessary than the other. But, gentlemen, the point I want to make is simply this, and I want the members of the committee to be in a most serious frame of mind while I am discussing it, because it is a serious proposition not only for those engaged in the business but for the country as a whole——

Mr. ANDERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Not now.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan declines to yield.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. The automobile is not an instrument of amusement like the piano player. It is a great agency of transportation.

There are in existence in this country more than 3,500,000 automobiles and trucks carrying State licenses, or on the average one car for every 29 persons—men, women, and children. In the great agricultural States of Iowa and Nebraska there is one automobile for every 13 persons. The farmers of the great Middle West apparently do not consider the automobile in the same class with golf balls, tennis racquets, and chewing gum. They consider it a great economic agency of transportation for themselves, their families, and their products. [Applause.] Nobody knows the value of an automobile better than the men who live in the country. It is actually transforming country life by destroying the isolation of it. Within the next 10 years the automobile, the telephone, the rural carrier, and good roads will stem the tide of population which has been steadily flowing during the past few years from the country to the city. The automobile adds to the comfort, the prosperity, and the contentment of rural life. It is solving the question of the rural church and the rural school. It takes city people to the country and country people to the city, thus making country and city one. Yet this bill, drawn in a hurry, puts this great agency of commerce and trade and social advantage in the amusement class with golf and tennis. On one of the public buildings in the city of Washington, just which building I do not now recall, there is carved in stone a statement which I commend to the consideration of the Committee on Ways and Means. It reads in substance: "Of all the inventions that have ever sprung from the brain of man, those which have abridged distance and destroyed space have conferred the greatest blessings on the human race." This is a conception which I am sure was not taken into account by the framers of this bill.

From whatever point of view the automobile industry is considered it can not be regarded otherwise than as a great national industry closely interlaced with our whole industrial, social, and economic life. It has brought into being in the last 15 years the greatest army of skilled mechanics that the Nation has ever known, and these skilled men draw the best wages paid anywhere on the face of the earth. They in themselves are a great national asset at a time like this, when the battles of the world depend upon the genius and skill of industry even more than on the valor of men.

The volume of business done by the automobile industry is so great and affects the life of the country in so many ways that it is most difficult to comprehend and measure it. In 1916 there were manufactured 1,525,578 cars, valued at $921,378,000, or an average price per car of $605. During the same period there were manufactured 92,130 motor trucks, valued at $166,650,273, or an average price of $1,809 per truck. This makes a total output of automobiles and trucks in 1916 of 1,617,708, valued at $1,088,028,273. There are in the United States 25,924 dealers, 23,686 garages, 12,171 automobile machine shops, 5,675 companies having automobile supply departments, 2,503 companies handling automobile supplies exclusively, 231 companies manufacturing automobiles, 364 companies manufacturing trucks, and more than 800 companies manufacturing automobile parts. The following tables will show the distribution of dealers, garages, and manufacturers by States:

Distribution of car, truck, and engine manufacturers in the United States.

State.	Automobiles.	Commercial vehicles.	Engines.	Total.
California	4	14		18
Colorado	1			1
Connecticut	4	3	2	8
Delaware
District of Columbia		1		1
Georgia		2		2
Illinois	23	43	4	62
Indiana	26	12	5	39
Iowa	1	11		11
Kansas	1	1		2
Kentucky	2	3		4
Louisiana	1	1		2
Maine		1		1
Maryland	2	2		2
Massachusetts	7	14		17
Michigan	47	43	14	99
Minnesota	3	36		37
Missouri	5	9		13
Nebraska	1	2		3
New Hampshire		1		1
New Jersey	3	7		10
New York	22	43	6	65
North Carolina		1		5
Ohio	34	48	5	75
Oregon	1			1
Pennsylvania	13	27	7	42
Rhode Island		1		1
Texas	1	1		2
Virginia	1	1		2
Washington	2	5		5
West Virginia	1	2		3
Wisconsin	6	14	7	25
Canada	19	15	1	27
Total	231	364	51	575

Dealers, garages, machine shops, and supply houses in the United States.

State.	Dealers.	Garages.	Machine shops.	Companies having supply department.	Supplies exclusively.	Total.
Alabama	172	109	74	37	35	278
Arizona	86	82	51	24	12	152
Arkansas	174	96	59	29	18	245
California	1,096	1,211	739	200	151	2,032
Colorado	346	312	177	80	22	520
Connecticut	394	431	211	50	70	715
Delaware	65	62	27	11	5	90
District of Columbia	57	56	36	8	24	140
Florida	246	272	163	64	45	464
Georgia	315	266	123	33	46	549
Idaho	151	100	53	23	10	297
Illinois	1,857	1,645	968	390	131	5,889
Indiana	984	795	409	247	65	1,467
Iowa	1,619	1,322	681	360	64	2,106
Kansas	986	774	380	266	33	1,445
Kentucky	291	230	82	62	24	413
Louisiana	120	67	45	31	18	170
Maine	279	262	124	80	19	459
Maryland	222	242	125	75	36	402
Massachusetts	771	828	421	180	141	1,520
Michigan	985	822	349	132	88	1,535
Minnesota	1,155	833	458	271	29	1,551
Mississippi	133	84	50	40	13	193
Missouri	810	639	413	222	81	1,310
Montana	240	205	117	60	14	345
Nebraska	810	647	285	218	20	1,031
Nevada	57	52	28	19	4	84
New Hampshire	192	214	107	59	10	319
New Mexico	102	73	42	33	28	223
New Jersey	621	844	411	192	6	1,170
New York	2,003	2,217	1,172	456	321	3,735
North Carolina	306	233	111	85	21	421
North Dakota	537	339	198	119	9	703
Ohio	931	1,347	542	425	172	2,589
Oklahoma	286	311	125	136	27	581
Oregon	205	231	130	49	30	315
Pennsylvania	1,677	1,682	776	452	113	2,673
Rhode Island	85	141	91	16	19	262
South Carolina	156	113	58	48	19	248

Dealers, garages, machine shops, and supply houses in the United States—Continued.

State.	Dealers.	Garages.	Machine shops.	Companies having supply department.	Supplies exclusively.	Total.
South Dakota	442	308	155	35	7	584
Tennessee	188	136	75	20	40	285
Texas	626	488	267	47	87	1,059
Utah	88	62	33	15	15	143
Vermont	187	156	83	33	11	286
Virginia	230	158	111	41	41	391
Washington	356	318	168	25	54	599
West Virginia	199	143	52	24	13	246
Wisconsin	1,016	874	410	135	47	182
Wyoming	76	56	37	13	2	103
Hawaii	6	7	3		1	9
West Indies	25	20	5	1	1	32
Canada	854	760	358	3	95	1,262
Mexico	8	11	3	1	2	15
Total	25,924	23,686	12,171	5,675	2,503	40,912

Some people who have given the automobile industry only a superficial consideration seem to have an idea that it is located out in the region of the Great Lakes and that whatever benefits flow from it are confined to that region. Those who have such an idea have no comprehension of the automobile business. In the first place, the building of an automobile is the most complex of all industrial processes. More operations are required in the building of an automobile than any other product of industry. This fact has led to specializing in the manufacture of parts. The automobile manufacturer, at the present time, does but little more than assemble the parts which have been manufactured by others. By highly specializing the manufacture of parts is done at a much lower unit cost than could be done if every automobile manufacturer attempted to supply himself with all the parts entering into the manufacture of an automobile. The wheels, the engines, the tires, the springs, the bodies, the tops, the electrical equipment, the lamps, the windshields, and scores of other parts are, as a rule, no longer made by the manufacturer of automobiles, but by parts manufacturers. Some of these corporations manufacturing parts are as large and have as much capital invested as the automobile manufacturer himself. I have in mind one engine factory which makes all the engines for 27 different automobile companies. The manufacture of parts is not centralized like the manufacture of automobiles, but, on the contrary, is carried on in almost every section of the country. The fact is that there is no industry in America that scatters its benefits into every section of the country to a greater degree than the automobile industry. I suppose that if the Committee on Ways and Means sought to pick out an industry which dovetails into the greatest number of other industries, and which, if anything happened to it, would carry down with it more classes of business than any other industry in America, they could not have hit upon a better industry for that purpose than the automobile industry.

The quantity of material used annually in the automobile business is a matter of constant amazement to those who have examined the figures. In 1916 the automobile industry used $20,000,000 of brass, purchased mainly in Kentucky, New England, New York, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin. More than $32,000,000 of copper was purchased in New England, Michigan, Wisconsin, Montana, and other Western States; $25,000,000 of cotton fabric from the cotton mills of New England and the South; $22,000,000 of coal and coke from Pennsylvania and West Virginia; $5,000,000 of glass from Pennsylvania, Ohio, and West Virginia; $26,000,000 of tin from Pennsylvania, Ohio, and West Virginia; $7,500,000 of zinc from Missouri, Colorado, and Nevada; $16,500,000 of lead from Colorado and Missouri; $10,000,000 of hardware from New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and New England; $16,800,000 of oil from Oklahoma, Texas, and Ohio; $9,000,000 of mohair from Texas and Oregon; $24,000,000 of hides and hair from Illinois, Nebraska, and Missouri; $42,600,000 of electrical equipment from New York, New England, and Pennsylvania; $150,000,000 of lumber from Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Georgia, and other Southern and Western States; and $250,000,000 of iron and steel from Alabama, Minnesota, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland. It is believed by many that not less than 2,000,000 men are employed in factory, mill, and mine, directly and indirectly, as a result of the development of the automobile industry. Of course, it is not possible to secure accurate data on this point. In view of the magnitude of the figures just given, Congress should give most careful consideration to any proposal affecting this great industry adversely.

But it is said that the automobile business is in a very prosperous condition; that the profits are very large; and that a 5 per cent tax on gross sales could be paid out of the profits without in any way injuring the business. It is true that certain corporations have made great profits in the automobile business. The Ford Co. is one of the leading corporations of the world. The story of the development of the Ford plant reads like a dream or a fairy tale. The success of the Ford business is so well known that most people think of the Ford when discussing the question of automobile profits. It must be remembered, however, that while Mr. Ford has made a magnificent success through a rare combination of mechanical, scientific, and organizing genius, thousands of others have sunk fortunes in the business. Seven hundred and eighteen companies have failed or gone out of business during the last five years. One hundred and thirty-three of these companies have failed or gone out of business in the last two years.

MOTOR VEHICLES MANUFACTURING COMPANIES THAT HAVE FAILED OR RETIRED FROM THE BUSINESS SINCE 1912.

Automobile Co. of California, San Francisco, Cal.; Abbott Motor Co., Detroit, Mich (succeeded by Consolidated Car Co.); Abell Automobile Truck & Manufacturing Co., Newark, N. J.; Abendroth & Root Manufacturing Co., Newburgh, N. Y.; Abresch & Co., Milwaukee, Wis. (retired from automobile business); Acme Motor Car Co., Reading, Pa.; Acorn Motor Car Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Adams Bros. Co. (The), Findlay, Ohio (reorganized as Adams Truck, Foundry & Machine Co.); Adams Co. (The), Dubuque, Iowa; Acrocar Co., Detroit, Mich.; Akron Motor Car & Truck Co., Akron, Ohio; Allen Kingston Motor Car Co., New York, N. Y.; Alpena Motor Car Co., Alpena, Mich.; Amalgamated Motor Corporation, Alhambra, Cal.; American Cycle Car Co., Bridgeport, Conn. (succeeded by Trumbrill Motor Car Co.); American Commercial Truck (Inc.), Kingston, N. Y.; American Eagle Motor Car Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.; American Locomotive Co., New York, N. Y. (retired); American Manufacturing Co., Chicago, Ill. (succeeded by Partin Manufacturing Co.); American Motor Co., Brockton, Mass.; American Motor Truck Co., Detroit, Mich.; American Motor Truck Manufacturing Co., San Francisco, Cal.; American Motors Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; American Steam Truck Co., Saginaw, Mich.; American Voiturette Co., Detroit, Mich.; Amplex Motor Car Co., Mishawaka, Ind. (reorganized as Amplex Manufacturing Co.); Angus Automobile Co., Nelson, Nebr.; Anhut Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Argo Electric Vehicle Co., Saginaw, Mich. (succeeded by American Electric Car Co.); Armore Motor Car Corporation, New York, N. Y.; Atlantic Vehicle Co., Newark, N. J.; Atlas Motor Car Co., Springfield, Mass.; Automatic Registering Machine Co., Jamestown, N. Y.; Auto-cart Co., Hallowell, Mo.; Auto Motor Co., Columbus, Ohio; Automobile Cycle Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Automobile Manufacturing & Engineering Co., Traverse City, Mich. (succeeded by Evans Motor Car Co., Nashville, Tenn., also failed); Auto Tri Manufacturing Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; and Avery Co., Peoria, Ill. (business continued).

H. H. Babcock Co. (Inc.), Watertown, N. Y.; Badger Motor Car Co., Columbus, Ohio; Baker-Bell Motor Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Bantam Motor Co., Boston, Mass.; W. M. Bean, Malden, Mass.; Behlen Sons & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Bell Locomotive Works, Yonkers, N. Y. (retired from the business); Bell & Waring Steam Vehicle Co., New York, N. Y.; Bellamore Armored Car & Equipment Co., New York, N. Y.; Belmont Motor Vehicle Co., Castleton, N. Y.; Bonham Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich.; Benton Motor Car Co., Benton, Ill.; L. J. Bergdoll Motor Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Berkshire Motors Co., Pittsfield, Mass.; Bertviet Motor Car Co., Reading, Pa.; Beat Manufacturing Co., San Leandro, Cal.; Beyster-Detroit Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Bingham Manufacturing Co., West Park, Ohio; Joan H. Blacker & Co., Chillicothe, Ohio; B. F. Board Motor Truck Co., Alexandria, Va.; Bond Tri-Car Co., Los Angeles, Cal.; Borland-Grannis Co., Chicago, Ill. (succeeded by American Electric Car Co.); Briggs-Detroiter Co., Detroit, Mich.; Brightwood Motor Manufacturing Co., Springfield, Mass.; Bree Electric Vehicle Co., Cleveland, Ohio (succeeded by American Electric Car Co.); Bronx Electric Vehicle Co., New York, N. Y.; Brooks Manufacturing Co., Saginaw, Mich. (succeeded by Duryea Manufacturing Co., also out of business); Brooks Motor Car Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Brown Commercial Car Co., Peru, Ind.; Brown-Sautter Motor Truck Co., Newark, N. J.; Brunn's Carriage Manufacturing Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Buckeye Wagon & Motor Car Co., Dayton, Ohio; H. H. Bucklen, jr., Motor Truck Co., Elkhart, Ind.; Buffalo Electric Vehicle Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Burg Carriage Co., Dallas City, Ill.; Burns Bros., Hagerstown, Md.; G. W. Bushnell Press Co., Thompsonville, Conn.; and Byron Motor Co., Pueblo, Colo.

C de L. Engineering Works, Nutley, N. J.; Cady Co., Canastota, N. Y.; California Automobile Co., Los Angeles, Cal.; California Motor Car Co., Oakland, Cal. (succeeded by Cole California Car Co., also failed); Cameron Manufacturing Co. Beverly, Mass. (succeeded by Cameron Manufacturing Co., West Haven, Conn.); Canton Buggy Co., Canton, Ohio; Carhartt Automobile Corporation, Detroit, Mich.; Carrier Car Co., Dayton, Ohio; Carroll Motor Car Co., Strasburg, Pa.; Case Motor Car Co., New Bremon, Ohio; Cass Motor Truck Co., Port Huron, Mich. (succeeded by Independent Motors Co.); Catasauqua Motor Car Works, Catasauqua, Pa.; Central Car Co., Connersville, Ind.; Century Electric Car Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Century Manufacturing Co.); Chalfant's Sons, John H., Lenover, Pa.; Champion Motor Car Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Champion Wagon Works, Owego, N. Y.; Chautauqua Motor Co., Dunkirk, N. Y.; Chelsea Maunfacturing Co., Newark, N. J.; Chester County Motor Co., Coatesville, Pa.; Church-Field Motor Car Co., Sibley, Mich.; Church Motor Car Co., Chicago, Ill.; Chicago Business Car Co., Chicago, Ill.; Chicago Coach & Carriage Co., Chicago, Ill.; Chicago Commercial Car Co., Chicago, Ill.; Chicago Electric Motor Car Co., Chicago, Ill. (succeeded by Walker Vehicle Co.); Chicago Motor Wagon Co., Chicago, Ill.; Cine Motor Car Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Clark-Carter Co., Jackson, Mich. (succeeded by Cutting Motor Car Co., also out of business); Clark Motor Car Co., Shelbyville, Ind.; Clark Motor Co., Buffalo, N. Y. (succeeded by Buffalo Electric Vehicle Co., also failed); Clark Power Wagon Co., Lansing, Mich.; Cleburne Motor Car Manufacturing Co., Cleburne, Tex.; Cleveland Auto Sales & Manufacturing Co., Columbus, Ohio; Cleveland-Gallon Truck Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Cleveland Motor Truck Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Club Car Co. of America, New York, N. Y.; Coates Commercial Car Co., Goshen, N. Y.; Cosy-Mitchell Automobile Co., Chicago, Ill. (succeeded by Motor Co.); Cohoes Automobile Co., Cohoes, N. Y.; Colburn Automobile Co., Denver, Colo.; Colby Motor Co., Mason City, Iowa (succeeded by Standard Motor Co., Minneapolis); Coleridge Commercial Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Colonial Electric Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Columbia Electric Co., The, Knightstown, Ind.; Columbia Motor Car Co., Hartford, Conn.; Columbia Vehicle Co., Washington, D. C.; Columbus Buggy Co., Columbus, Ohio (succeeded by New Columbus Buggy Co.); Colvia, L. H., Muncie, Ind.; Comet Cycle Car Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; Commercial Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Commercial Motor Car Co., Sam Houston, Tex.; Commercial Motor Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Commercial Motor Truck Construction Co., Newark, N. J.; Commercial Motors Co., Chicago, Ill.; Consolidated Motor Car Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Consolidated Motor Car Co., Atlanta, Ga.; Continental Engineering Co., Chicago, Ill.; Continental Motors Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y.; Cooper Machine Works, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Corbin Motor Vehicle Co., New Britain, Conn.; Cortland Motor Wagon Co., Pittsfield, Mass.; Covel Manufacturing Co., Boston Harbor, Mich.; Cowles-MacDovell Pneumobile Co., Chicago, Ill. (succeeded by Pneumobile Motor Car Co., Anderson, Ind., also failed); Crane Motor Car Co., Bayonne, N. J. (succeeded by Simplex Auto Co., New Brunswick); Crary Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Crescent Motor Car Co., Carthage, Mo.; Crescent Motor Co., The, Cincinnati, Ohio; Cricket Cycle Car Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Motor Products Co.); Criterion Motor Car Co., Kent, Ohio; Crown Commercial Car Co., Louisville, Ky. (succeeded by Hecules Motor Car Co.); Crown Motor Car Co., Louisville, Ky.; Croxton Motor Car Co., Washington, Pa.; Croxton Motor Co., Cleveland, Ohio; and Cutting Motor Car Co., Jackson, Mich.

Dain Manufacturing Co., Ottumwa, Iowa; Daniels Motor Car Co., East St. Louis, Ill.; Dauch Manufacturing Co., Sandusky, Ohio; Davis Flyer Co. (not Inc.), Milwaukee, Wis.; Davis Motor Co., Anderson, Ind.; Day Auto Co., Detroit, Mich.; Dayton Auto Truck Co., Dayton, Ohio (succeeded by Durable Dayton Truck Co.); Dayton Cycle Car Co., Joliet, Ill. (succeeded by Crusader Motor Car Co.); Dayton Electric Car Co., Dayton, Ohio; Dayton Motor Car Co., Dayton, Ohio (bought by Maxwell Motor Co.); Deal Motor Vehicle Co., Jonesville, Mich.; Decatur Motor Car Co., Decatur, Ind. (succeeded by Grand Rapids Motor Truck Co.); De Cross Cy Car Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; De Loach Manufacturing Co., Atlanta, Ga.; De Luxe Motor Car Co., Detroit Mich.; Denniston Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; De Temble Motors Co., Anderson, Ind.; Detroit Cyclecar Co., Detroit, Mich.; Detroit River Boat & Car Co., Wyandotte, Mich.; Diamond Motor Car Co., Chicago, Ill.; Dixie Motor Car Co., Frederick, Okla.; Doyle's Sons, Austin, Chicago, Ill.; Dragon Automobile Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Dunlap Manufacturing Co., Columbus, Ohio; Duplex Motor Truck Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Duquesne Motor Car Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Durocar Manufacturing Co., Alhambra, Cal. (succeeded by Amalgamated Motor Corporation, also failed); Duryea Motor Co., Saginaw, Mich.; and Dusseau Fore & Rear Drive Auto Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Eastern Power Truck Co., Providence, R. I.; Eastern Machine Co., South Boston, Mass.; Eclipse Truck Co., Franklin, Pa.; Economy Car Co., Indianapolis, Ind (succeeded by International Cycle Car Co., New York City, also failed); Economy Motor Car Co., Joliet, Ill.; Edgemont Machine Co., Dayton, Ohio; Edison Electric Vehicle Co., Lawrence, Mass.; Edwards Motor Car Co., Long Island City, N. Y.; Electric Omnibus Co., Troy, N. Y.; Electric Vehicle Co., Louisville, Ky. (bought by Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Co.); Elgin Light Car Co., Fenton, Mich.; Elk Motor Truck Co., Charleston, W. Va.; Elkhart Motor Car Co., Elkhart, Ind.; Elmer Auto Corporation, Elkhart, Ind.; Elmore Manufacturing Co., Clyde, Ohio (bought by General Motors Co. and discontinued); Emerson Contracting Co., New Brunswick, N. J.; Enterprise Machine Co., Chicago, Ill.; Epperson Commercial Truck Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Erwin Motor & Machine Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Euclid Motor Car Co., New York City, N. Y.; Evans Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Evarts Machine Co., Hartford, Conn.; Evansville Automobile Co., Evansville, Ind.; Everitt-Metzger-Flanders Co., Detroit, Mich.; Erbank Electric Transportation Co., Portland, Oreg.; and Ex-Cel Motor Truck Co., Jamesburg, N. J.

F. A. L. Auto Co., Chicago, Ill.; F. S. Motors Co., West Allis, Milwaukee, Wis.; Falcon Cyclecar Co., Staunton, Va.; J. D. Fato Co., Plymouth, Mich.; W. H. Fauber, New York City, N. Y.; Fewick Motor Car Co., Sioux Falls, S. Dak.; Fenton Cyclecar Co., Fenton, Mich. (succeeded by Koppin Motor Car Co., Detroit, also failed); Findlay Carriage Co., Findlay, Ohio (succeeded by Grant Motor Co.); Findlay Motor Co., Findlay, Ohio; C. J. Fischer Co., Detroit, Mich.; Flagler Cyclecar Co., Chicago, Ill. (in receiver's hands); Flanders Electric (Inc.), Pontiac, Mich.; Flanders Manufacturing Co., Chelsea, Mich.; Flanders Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Flyer Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Fort Wayne Auto Manufacturing Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.; Franklin Boiler Works, Troy, N. Y.; and Fuller Power Truck Co., Delphos, Ohio.

G. J. G. Motor Car Co., White Plains, N. Y.; Gage Manufacturing Co., Los Angeles, Cal. (succeeded by Union Car Co.); Gaylord Motor Car Co., Gaylord, Mich.; General Industrial & Manufacturing Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; Geneva Auto Co., Geneva, N. Y.; Grabowsky Power Wagon Co., Detroit, Mich.; Grand Rapids Motor Truck Co., Grand Rapids, Mich. (succeeded by Parcel Post Equipment Co.); Grant-Lees Machine Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Great Southern Auto Co., Birmingham, Ala.; Greyhound Auto Co., Orange, Mass.; Greyhound Cycle Car Co., Toledo, Ohio (succeeded by States Motor Car Co., also out of business); and Grant Automobile Co., Orange, Mass.

Haborer & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; James T. Halsey, Philadelphia, Pa.; B. E. Harris, Chicago, Ill.; Hart-Kraft Motor Co., York, Pa.; Hatfield Auto Truck Co., Elmira, N. Y.; Hauber Wagon & Auto Works, St. Marys, Iowa; Havers Motor Car Co., Port Huron, Mich.; Hawkins Cycle Car Co., Xonia, Ohio; Hayward Wagon Co., Newark, N. J.; Heine-Velez Agency, San Francisco, Cal.; Henderson Motor Car Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; Henry Motor Car Co., Muskegon, Mich; Hercules Motor Truck Co., Boston, Mass.; Hercules Motor Truck Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Alma Motor Truck Co.); Hercules Motor Truck Co., Grove City, Pa.; Herman Bros., Chicago, Ill. (succeeded by Tulsa Automobile Manufacturing Co.); Hermes Motor Car Co., Cincinnati, Ohio (succeeded by De Grose Cycle Car Co., also failed); Herreshoff Light Car Co., Troy, N. Y.; Herreschoff Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Hester Motor Truck Co., New York, N. Y. (succeded by Roland Gas Electric Co., also failed); Hoff Motor Car Co., La Crosse, Wis.; Holly Motor Co. Mount Holly, N. J.; Norner Handy Wagon Co., Detroit, Mich.; Howard Motor Car Co., Connersville, Ind.; Howe Engine Co., Indianapolis, Ind. (business continued); and Haseiton Motor Car Co., Butler, Pa.

Ideal Motor Car Co., Indianapolis, Ind. (succeeded by Stutz); Imperial Automobile Co., Jackson, Mich. (succeeded by Mutual Motors Co.); Imperial Electric Motor Co., Philadelphia Pa.; Independence Motor Co., Hyattsville, Md.; Independent Harvester Co., Plano, Ill.; Indiana Motor & Manufacturing Co., Franklin, Ind. (succeeded by Martindale & Milliken); International Cycle Car Co., New York City, N. Y.; Inter-State Automobile Co., Muncie, Ind. (still in business); and Ivey Motor Truck Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

J. & M. Motor Car Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Jarvis-Huntington Automobile Co., Huntington, W. Va.; Jefferson Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Jenkins Motor Car Co., Rochester, N. Y.; Jewell Carriage Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Joeras-Thies Motor Car Co., St. Paul, Minn.; Johnson Service Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Joliet Automobile Truck Co., Joliet, Ill. (succeeded by Dayton Cycle Car Co.); and Jones Cycle Car Co., Maloon, Detroit, Mich.

K-D Motor Co., Boston, Mass.; KaDix Motor Truck Co., Newark, N. J.; Kalamazoo Motor Vehicle Co., Kalamazoo, Mich. (succeeded by Columbia Motor Truck & Trailer Co., Pontiac, Mich.); Kanawha Automobile Truck Co., Charlestown, W. Va. (succeeded by Elk Motor Truck Co., also failed); Kansas City Vehicle Co., Kansas City, Mo.; Kaufman Buggy Co., Miamisburg, Ohio; Kecten Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Koenen Manufacturing Co., Long Beach, Cal. (formerly Koenen Motor Truck Co., also failed); Kendle Motor Car Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Kenmore Manufacturing Co., Chicago, Ill.; Kimball & Co., Chicago, Ill. (retired); Kinnear Manufacturing Co., Columbus, Ohio; Kirby Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Kline Motor Car Corporation, Richmond, Va., and York, Pa. (resumed); Knickerbocker Motor Truck Co., New York City, N. Y.; Knox Automobile Co., Springfield, Mass. (succeeded by Knox Motors Co.); Kopp Motor Truck Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Koppin Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Kratzer Automobile Co., Allentown, Pa.; O. F. Kress & Son, Lawrence, Mass.; Krickworth Motor Truck Co., Chicago, Ill. (succeeded by the Krick Co.); and Krit Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.

L. A. W. Motor Truck Co., Findlay, Ohio; L-P-C Motor Co., Racine Wis. (receiver); Lagerquist Carriage & Automobile Co., Des Moines, Iowa; Lane Motor Vehicle Co., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Lanpher Carriage & Automobile Co., Carthage, Mo.; Lansden Co., Newark, N. J.; La Vigne Cycle Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Lewis Motor Truck Co., Oakland, Cal.; Lexington Motor Car Co., Connersville, Ind. (succeeded by Lexington-Howard Co.); Light Commercial Car Co., Marietta, Iowa; Light Motor Truck Co., Detroit Mich.; Linfrank Motor Manufacturing Works, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Little Motor Car Co., Flint, Mich. (succeeded by Republic Motor Co.); Lincoln Motor Car Co., Lincoln, Ill.; Lincoln Motor Car Works, Chicago, Ill.; Lincoln Motor Truck Co., Sacramento, Cal.; Lion Motor Car Co., Adrian, Mich.; Longest Bros. Co., Louisville, Ky.; Los Angeles Cyclecar Co., Los Angeles, Cal.; and Los Angeles Motor Truck Manufacturing Co., Los Angeles, Cal.

M. & P. Electric Vehicle Co., Detroit, Mich.; McCord Auto Co., Chicago, Ill.; McIntyre Co., W. H., Auburn, Ind.; MacInnie Bros., Toledo, Ohio; Manistee Motor Car Co., Manistee, Mich.; Marathon Motor Works Co., Nashville, Tenn.; Marinette Motor Car Co., Marinette, Wis.; Marion Motor Car Co., Indianapolis, Ind. (succeeded by Mutual Motors Co.); Marquette Motor Vehicle Co., Chicago, Ill.; Martin-Coulter Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mason Motor Co., Waterloo, Iowa; Matheson Auto Co., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Maxim Tri-Car Manufacturing Co., Port Jefferson, N. Y.; Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; Megow, C. F., Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Mechanics Machine Co., Rockford, Ill.; Merchants Automobile Co., Chicago, Ill.; Mercury Cyclecar Co., Detroit, Mich.; Mercury Motor Co., Long Island City, N. Y.; Meteor Motor Car Co., Battendorf, Iowa; Meteor Automobile Co., Mount Vernon, N. Y.; Metropole Motors Corporation, Port Jefferson, N. Y.; Metropolitan Automobile Co., Chicago, Ill.; Michaelson Motor Truck Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Michigan Auto Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; Michigan Buggy Co., Jackson, Mich.; Michigan Motor Car Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; Michigan Steam Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Middleboro Automobile Exchange, Middleboro, Mass.; Middleby Automobile Co., Reading, Pa.; Midland Motor Car Co., Moline, Ill.; Mier Carriage & Buggy Co., Ligonier, Ind.; Miller Car Co., Detroit, Mich. (now Kosmeth Co.); Miller Machine Co., Defiance, Ohio; Milwaukee Auto Truck Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Milwaukee Cycle Car Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Missouri Motor Car Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Modern Motor Truck Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Monarch Motor Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Monarch Motor Car Co.); Moore Motor Truck Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Moore Motor Truck Co., The, Toledo, Ohio; (removed to Waterville, Ohio; out of business); Moore Motor Truck Co., F. L., Los Angeles, Cal. (succeeded by Pacific Metal Products Co.); Mora Power Wagon Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Morgan Motor Truck Co., Worcester, Mass.; Morse Motor Car Co., Brookline, Mass.; Motokart Co., Tarrytown, N. Y. (reorganized as Motokart Manufacturing Co., New York); Motor Car Manufacturing Co., Indianapolis, Ind. (succeeded by Pathfinder Co.); Motor Conveyance Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Motor Truck Co., St. Paul, Minn.; Motor Vehicle & Marine Construction Co., Sewaren, N. J.; Motor Wagon Co. of Detroit, Detroit, Mich.; Muelhauser Machine Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Multiplex Manufacturing Co., Berwick, Pa.; and Muncie Motor Truck Co., Muncie, Ind.

Naumar Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Nelson-Brennan-Peterson, Detroit, Mich.; New Columbus Buggy Co., Columbus, Ohio; New Departure Manufacturing Co., Bristol, Conn.; New Primo Motor Works, Atlanta, Ga.; New York Motor Wagon Works Co., Avondale, N. J.; Newark Automobile Manufacturing Co., Newark, N. J.; Nonpareil Motor Truck Co., Newark, N. J.; Norwalk Motor Car Co., Martinsburg, W. Va.; and Nyberg Automobile Works, Anderson, Ind.

O. K. Motor Truck Co., Detroit, Mich.; Ohio Falls Motor Co., New Albany, Ind.; Ohio Motor Car Co., Cincinnati, Ohio (succeeded by Crescent Motor Co., also failed); Oklahoma Motor Truck Co., Tulsa, Okla.; Oliver Motor Truck Co., Detroit, Mich.; Omaha Motor Car Co., Omaha, Nebr.; Omaha Tractor & Engine Co., Omaha, Nebr.; Only Car Co., New York, N. Y.; Orson Automobile Co., New York City, N. Y.; Otto-Mobile Co., Mount Holly, N. J.; S. Overholt Co., Galesburg, Ill.; Owego Car Co. (Inc.), Owego, N. Y.; and Owosso Motor Co., Owosso, Mich.

P. H. P. Motor Truck Co., Westfield, Mass.; Packers Motor Truck Co., Wheeling, W. Va.; Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich. (resumed); Palmer & Singer Manufacturing Co., Long Island City, N. Y.; George W. Parsons Co., Newton, Iowa; Partin-Palmer Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Peninsula Motor Co., Saginaw, Mich. (bought by General Motors Co. and discontinued); Penn Auto Co. (not incorporated), Philadelphia, Pa.; Penn Motor Car Co., Newcastle, Pa.; Penn-Unit Car Co., Allentown, Pa.; Pennsylvania Auto Motor Co., Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Perfix Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Petrol Motor Car Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Philadelphia Truck Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Phipps Electric Vehicle Co., Detroit, Mich; Phoenix Auto Works, Phoenixville, Pa.; Pickard Bros. Motor Car Co., Brockton, Mass.; Piggins Motor Truck Co., Racine, Wis. (succeeded by Piggins Bros. Motor Truck Co.); Pitt Motor Truck Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pneucar Co., Washington, D. C.; Pope Manufacturing Co., Hartford, Conn.; Poss Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Powell Engine Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Powercar Automobile Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Power Vehicle Co., Milwaukee, Wis.;

Pratt, Carter, Sighee & Co., Detroit, Mich.; Pratt Manufacturing Co., Joliet, Ill.; Premier Motor Manufacturing Co., Indianapolis, Ind. (in receiver's hands); Primo Motor Co., Atlanta, Ga.; Prince Motor Car Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Princess Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Pullman Motor Car Co., York, Pa. (resumed); and Pungs Finch Auto & Gas Engine Co., Detroit, Mich.

Quakertown Auto Co., Quakertown, Pa.

R. C. H. Corporation, Detroit, Mich.; R. & S. Manufacturing Co., Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Rainier Motor Co., New York, N. Y.; Randall Manufacturing Co., Baltimore, Md.; Randolph Motor Truck Co., Flint, Mich.; Ranger Automobile Co., Chicago, Ill.; Rassel Motor Car Co., Toledo, Ohio (succeeded by Toledo Motor Truck Co., also out of business); Read Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Rector Engineering Co., New York, N. Y.; Red Arrow Auto Co., Orange, Mass.; Red Shield Rustler Power Car Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Auburn Motor Chassis Co.); Remington Standard Motor Car Co., New York City, N. Y.; Richard Auto Manufacturing Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Richmond Cycle Car Co., Richmond, Va.; Rider-Lewis Automobile Co., Anderson, Ind.; Ritz Cycle Car Co., Sharon, Pa.; Robson Manufacturing Co., Galsburg, Ill.; Rockford Motor Truck Co., Rockford, Ill.; Rodefeld Manufacturing Co., Richmond, Ind.; Rogers Motor Car Co., Richmond, Ind.; Rogers Motor Car Co., Omaha, Nebr.; Roland Gas-Electric Co., New York, N. Y.; and Royal Tourish Car Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

S. G. V. Co., Reading, Pa.; S. M. Motor Co. (Inc.), Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Benham Manufacturing Co.); Sandusky Auto Parts and Truck Co., Sandusky, Ohio; Savage Factories, M. W., Minneapolis, Minn.; Savage Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Sebring Motor Car Co., Sebring, Ohio; Seitz Auto and Transmission Co., Wyandotte, Mich.; Sellers Motor Car Co., Hutchinson, Kans.; Senator Motor Car Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Schacht Motor Car Co., Cincinnati, Ohio (succeeded by Schacht Motor Truck Co.); Schmidt Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill.; Schubert Wagon Co., August, Oneida, N. Y.; Schumier Motor Car Co., St. Paul, Minn.; Scioto Auto Car Co., Chillicothe, Ohio; Sharp Arrow Auto Co., Trenton, N. J.; Sibley Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Simplex Auto Co., New York City, N. Y.; Smith Auto Co., Topeka, Kans.; Smith Co., A. O., Milwaukee, Wis. (retired); Somers Motor Truck Co., Boston, Mass.; Sommer Motor Co., Bucyrus, Ohio; Southern Automobile Co., Fort Worth, Tex.; Southern Auto & Equipment Co., Atlanta, Ga.; Speedwell Motor Car Co., Jackson, Mich.; Spoerer's Sons Co., Carl, Baltimore, Md.; St. Louis Car Co., St. Louis, Mo. (retired); Standard Electric Car Co., Jackson, Mich.; Standard Gas-Electric Power Co., Philadelphia, Pa. (succeeded by Vulcan Motor Devices Co.); Standard Motor Truck Co., Warren, Ohio; Stanley Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Star Motor Car Co., Ann Arbor, Mich.; Star Motor Car Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; Star Tribune Motor Sales Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by O. K. Motor Truck Co.); Starbuck Auto Co., Philadelphia, Pa. (resumed); Staver Carriage Co., Chicago, Ill.; Steel Swallom Auto Co., Jackson, Mich.; Stephenson Motor Truck Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Sterling Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Stevens-Duryea Co., Chicopee Falls, Mass. (retired); Stickney Co., Chas. A., St. Paul, Minn.; Storage Power Battery Co., San Francisco, Cal.; Streator Motor Car Co., Streator, Ill. (succeeded by Barley Manufacturing Co.); Suburban Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Palmer Motor Car Co.); Sultan Motor Car Co., Springfield, Mass., Swanson Motor Car Co., Chicago, Ill.; Symonds Auto Truck Co., Chicago, Ill.; and Symonds Motor Wagon Works, Hyde Park, Mass.

Tate Gas-Electric M. V. Co., Jersey City, N. J.; Tegetmeier & Riepo Co., New York City, N. Y.; Tell Manufacturing Co., Medford, Mass.; Terre Haute Motor Co., Terre Haute, Ind.; Thomas Elevator Co., Chicago, Ill.; E. R. Thomas Motor Car Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Toledo Carriage Woodstock Co., Toledo, Ohio; Toledo Cycle Car Co., Toledo, Ohio; Toledo Electric Vehicle Co., Toledo, Ohio; Toledo Motor Truck Co. Toledo, Ohio; Tone Car Corporation, Indianapolis, Ind.; Frank Toomey & Co., Newark, N. Y.; Tractor Engine Co., Trenton, N. J.; Traveler Auto Co., Evansville, Ind.; Traveler Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Tribune Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Triumph Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich.; Tuller Manufacturing Co., Kansas City, Mo.; Tulsa Auto & Manufacturing Co., Tulsa, Okla.; Twin City Motor Car Co., St. Paul, Minn.; and Twombley Car Corporation, New York, N. Y.

Union Motor Truck Co., San Francisco, Cal.; Universal Machinery Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Universal Motor Co., Denver, Colo.; Universal Motor Co., Washington, Pa.; Universal Motor Truck Co., Detroit, Mich. (succeeded by Universal Service Co.) and United States Motor Constituent Co.'s (reorganized as Maxwell Motor Co.); Alden-Sampson Manufacturing Co., Detroit, Mich.; Brush Runabout Co., Detroit, Mich.; Columbia Motor Car Co., Hartford, Conn.; Courier Car Co., Dayton, Ohio.; Dayton Motor Car Co., Dayton, Ohio; Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co., Newcastle, Ind.; Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co., Providence, R. I.; and Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.

V-C Motor Truck Co., Lynn, Mass.; Van Anken Electric Car Co., Chicago, Ill.; Van I. Commercial Car Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; Van Motor Car Co., Grand Haven, Mich.; Van Motor Wagon Co., Elgin, Ill.; Vandewater & Co., Elizabeth, N. J.; Vaughn Motor Car Co., Kingston, N. Y.; Victor Automobile Co., Ridgeville, Ind.; Victor Motor Truck Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Victor Motor Car Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Victory Motor Car Co., San Jose, Cal.; Vulcan Manufacturing Co., Painesville, Ohio; and Vulcan Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.

W. F. S. Motor Car Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Wade Commercial Car Co., Holly, Mich.; Wagenhale Motor Co., Detroit, Mich.; Wahl Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Wallof Motor Truck Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Ware Motor Vehicle Co. (not inc.), St. Paul, Minn. (succeeded by Twin City Four-Wheel Drive Co.); Warwick Motors Co., Newark, N. J.; Warren Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich.; Wasatch Motor Manufacturing Co., Salt Lake City, Utah; Washington Motor Vehicle Co., Washington, D. C. (succeeded by Columbia Vehicle Co., also failed); Waterville Tractor Co., Waterville, Ohio; Wayne Light Commercial Car Co., New York, N. Y.; the Webb Co., Allentown, Pa.; Webb Motor Fire Apparatus Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Weber Auto Truck Manufacturing Co., Louisville, Ky.; Weber Motor Vehicle Co., Louisville, Ky.; Welch Motor Car Co., Pontiac, Mich. (bought by General Motor Co. and discontinued); Wenonah Motor Car Co., Bay City, Mich.; Westfield Motor Truck Co., Westfield, Mass.; Westman Motor Track Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Westone Cycle Car Co., Los Angeles, Cal (succeeded by Homer Laughlin Engine Corporation); White Star Motor & Engine Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Whiteside Commercial Car Co., Newcastle, Ind.; Whitmore & Co., Dayton, Ohio; the Whitwood Corporation, Weedsport, N. Y.; Whyland-Nelson Motor Car Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Willet Engine & Truck Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; Winkler Bros. Manufacturing Co., South Bend, Ind.; Woodburn Automobile Co., Woodburn, Ind.; Woodworth Motor Truck Co., Providence, R. I.; Woolston Auto Transfer Co., Riverton, N. J., and Wyckoff, Church & Partridge, Kingston, N. Y. (succeeded by Vaughn Car Co., also failed).

It must not be forgotten that there are at the present time 438 manufacturers of automobiles and automobile trucks in the United States. Of this number 12 corporations manufacture 80 per cent of the entire output. Had the Committee on Ways and Means made an investigation of the situation they would have found that a large number of automobile companies have not earned during the past year net profits sufficient to pay a 5 per cent tax on gross sales. In the automobile business in prosperous times the gross sales are about double the capital invested in the business. In order therefore to pay a gross sales tax of 5 per cent the company would have to make at least a net profit of 10 per cent on the actual capital invested. Many automobile manufacturers have never done this. The Committee on Ways and Means have made no investigation of the matter and have no facts which they can give the House, except in the case of a few large companies, respecting the ability of automobile manufacturers to pay a tax of 5 per cent on gross sales.

But it is said that the automobile manufacturers will add the 5 per cent gross-sales tax to the selling tax of the car and thereby pass the tax on to the consumer. This is very much more easily said, however, than done. No doubt the automobile manufacturer in most cases will add the tax to the selling price of the car if he can do so. General conditions of business, however, will determine very largely the advisability of attempting to increase the price of the car by the amount of the tax. The automobile business is apparently the first industry in the country to feel the effects of a general policy of curtailment and caution pervading the business world since our entry into the European war. A large percentage of the purchasers of automobiles of a grade ranging from $750 and upward are car owners already. Had there been no agitation in the country for curtailing expenses, there would probably have been the usual activity in the automobile market. Dealers throughout the country, however, are now reporting that many customers who had planned on buying new cars have decided to use the old cars another year. At any rate, dealers report that there has been a tremendous falling off in sales during the past few weeks. Obviously, under such conditions, it would not be an easy matter to further advance the price, as such action would undoubtedly result in further discouraging sales. From present indications there is bound to be a serious falling off in the volume of business until war conditions become settled and until many of the business uncertainties occasioned by our entrance into the war have cleared away. If this falling off of business becomes too serious, embarrassment is likely to overtake many of the smaller automobile companies, as well as the manufacturers of parts who supply the material. The automobile manufacturer has placed his orders for parts based upon a certain estimated production. The parts manufacturer has placed his order for materials based upon orders received or expected from the automobile manufacturer. The material is made up according to special design, and in most cases is useless except for the company which placed the order. Ordinary business intelligence is all that is needed to comprehend the fact that if you seriously interfere with production at the top you will set in motion a chain of disaster reaching back to the manufacturer of parts, to the jobber of material, to the mill producing the material, to the banker furnishing the credit, and on to the forest and the mine.

This is a rather serious time for the automobile industry. It is serious with or without the proposed tax on gross sales. The anxiety among the manufacturers is sincere and should not be lightly passed over by Congress. It is possible that a great manufacturer like Mr. Ford could absorb this tax. Mr. Ford indeed might consider it to be his patriotic duty to do so. His great corporation buys in large quantities and is efficiently organized in every branch of his business. He makes great savings in freight by scattering assembling plants throughout the country. He buys his material under the most favorable conditions, and as a rule discounts his bills for cash. He might be able and willing to absorb this tax. But the smaller manufacturer, operating in a much more expensive way, with a vastly increased overhead expense per car, might find himself in a position where he could not absorb the tax without bankrupting his business. On the other hand, if he adds the tax to the selling price of his car, his competitor, who has not increased the price of cars, may take away his customers and thus destroy his business. If the Committee on Ways and Means had deliberately set out to ruin the small automobile companies and throw their business to a few great concerns, they could not have selected a better instrument to accomplish that purpose than this bill. If this bill becomes a law, it will give an impetus to a movement to consolidate and monopolize a great industry, which is now one of the most highly competitive industries in America. No such action as this should be taken by Congress. Or if it is to be taken, it should be only after careful investigation and thorough inquiry into all the conditions surrounding this great industry.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I will take five minutes more.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. My time is so short I am sorry that I can not. I know my friend from North Dakota will excuse me.

I want to remind the Democratic side of the House that they have always professed to be enemies of monopoly. The way you vote on this proposition will be a test of your sincerity. A large number of automobile companies have never been able to make a net profit of 5 per cent upon their gross sales. Such companies will be driven out of business under the provisions of this bill. The automobile business is practically the only great industry that is not to-day in the hands of a monopoly. The men in the automobile business have themselves set their faces against monopoly. If the smaller concerns are forced out of business by excessive taxation, there will be nothing left for them to do except to knock at the door of the big corporations and say, "Take us in in order that we may avoid financial ruin." No such situation should at least be created by operation of law. The Democratic side of this House ought not to permit this legislation to go through.

And as for the Republican side of the House, I should like to inquire when we started in destroying American business and American enterprise without investigation and without inquiry? When did it become the policy of the Republican Party to pass legislation, the effect of which we know nothing? It has been our boast all the years that we were in power that we were the friends of labor and capital and that we wanted industry to flourish in the country. I see before me the distinguished ex-Speaker of the House [Mr. CANNON]. In all the 40 years that he has been a Member of this body I do not believe that he has ever before seen Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee subscribe to a bill aimed at a great industry employing hundreds of thousands of men and having an annual output of more than a billion dollars, without taking one line of testimony or without being able to give the House any facts which can justify the proposed action. We Republicans at least ought to stand by our historic policy of supporting and protecting American industry. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Just for a minute. When the Republican Party came into control in this country we were a purely agricultural people, but under our policies the country has grown and prospered until it is the greatest manufacturing, the greatest mining, and the greatest agricultural country in the world. Under our policies of protecting, building up, and fostering industry in America this country has come up from the lowlands until it now occupies a commanding place among the nations of the world. [Applause.] As Republicans let us stick to our historic policy of taking care of the Nation's industries and guarding the welfare of the millions of men in their employ. [Applause.]

What, then, should be done in the matter? What am I asking the House to do at this time? Simply to treat the automobile industry just like every other great industry of the Nation. The automobile companies ask no special favors. They are entirely willing to do their full share in providing funds for carrying on the war. They ask nothing further than that they may be permitted to contribute on the same bases as the United States Steel Corporation, the Bethlehem Corporation, the sugar-refining corporations, the great packing houses of Chicago and Omaha, the Standard Oil Co., the International Harvester Co., and other great industrial institutions. There is no reason why any of these great corporations should be given more favorable consideration than the automobile industry.

In conclusion I desire to remind the House that we are just starting in upon a great war, and it is important that we shall conserve and hold together all the industries of the Nation. While individuals and corporations must contribute generously toward the expenses of the war, the utmost care should be exercised to collect the necessary revenue with the least possible disturbance to business. Let the Government take this year such part of the profits of industry as may be needed. Next year it may be necessary to take a larger part than this year. Before the war is over it may be necessary to take all the profits of industry or even to take capital itself. But at the very beginning of the war let us see to it that no great industry is destroyed, but that all are conserved and built up in order that all present and future demands for funds to prosecute the war may be quickly and easily supplied. [Applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have 5 or 10 minutes, if there is any time left.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, when I was a boy, I can remember very well that every street leading out of the center of the city of Chicago was lined with beautiful shops, in which were employed the boys and the girls of the neighborhood. Each shop dealt in a different sort of commodity. We had the harness shop, the dry-goods shop, the shoe shop, the gent's furnishing goods, the hat store, and so on. All the property on the streets where these shops were located had good value. It was a good tax-paying property. The customers of the shops which lined these streets were the people who lived in the neighborhood. Each shop employed anywhere from 5 to 10 or more young men and young women. Their trade and their success depended in a large measure upon their habits and upon the friendly interest which the people of the neighborhoods took in them.

Later on the great department stores began to be established, and very soon after that began to be the case first one and then another of these little-shop keepers was obliged to abandon his business. He was compelled to apply to a department store for a position as manager of a department. The boys and girls whose morals had been looked after by the people of the neighborhood in which they lived and in which they were employed found themselves compelled to go and take employment in those department stores. When they found employment in those establishments they found themselves compelled to take half the compensation which they had formerly received. They were checked into the store every morning like pieces of baggage and checked out of the store every night in the same way. Nobody knew them. They were known only by a number. Their moral welfare was not looked after. They were allowed to run at large to find the means by which they could support themselves in addition to the meager sums which they received for their work.

The tax that is now proposed to be imposed upon the automobile industry of the United States will produce exactly the same sort of a condition that was produced by the change which I have described. You are going to center the automobile business, which is now scattered all over the United States, and transfer it from the hands of individual owners into the control of two or three or four or five great capitalists, and the men and women who are employed by the individual owners to-day will find themselves compelled to walk the streets looking for employment. You are going to create a monopoly in this line of industry such as we have not seen before in this country in a given line; and yet you claim you are in favor of doing away with monopoly, granting special privileges to no person and to no corporation. Still you are driving every independent operator who employs his capital and labor throughout the country in this great industry out of the business in which he is engaged.

You are imposing a gross-sales tax upon this great industry, and by the terms of the bill through which you impose it you compel the man who pays the tax to pay it without any opportunity whatever of charging it against his business. If he builds an automobile that costs him $900, and he sells it for $1,000 and is compelled to pay a tax of $150, he is not permitted to charge this $150 as a part of his expenses, and so he loses $50 between the making of the automobile and its sale, and you have put him out of business, and you have destroyed the opportunity of the Government of the United States to collect the tax on the excess profits which he otherwise would have made. You have destroyed the man, destroyed his opportunity for success, you have destroyed the opportunity of the men and the women employed by him to make a livelihood, you have destroyed the chance of the Government of the United States to collect the money necessary to finance the war. This is an unjust and unjustifiable tax and ought by every sense of justice to be stricken from the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, this item in this bill yields the enormous sum of $68,000,000.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I should like to know on what basis the gentleman figures that $68,000,000. The whole gross automobile sales were $1,000,000,000.

Mr. DOREMUS. Eight hundred and forty million.

Mr. KITCHIN. If the increase continues this year as it did last year, and as it has from January 1 to April 16 of this year, it will exceed that sum.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Does not the gentleman have to assume that the automobile business will increase this year as it did last year in order to obtain that sum.

Mr. RAINEY. I will explain that. In 1914, when the unit value of automobiles was about the same as it is now, the output of automobiles from 338 establishments in the United States—and that was the number of them in that year—was 573,114. We have reliable statistics of the output for 1909, and it was 127,287 automobiles. In 1909 there were 315 establishments. In other words, in the five years from 1909 to 1914 there was an increase in the number of establishments engaged in the automobile industry of 23, and there was an increase in their output of nearly 400 per cent. In 1916 we had 454 establishments engaged in the manufacture of automobiles, and their output was 1,303,400 automobiles, an increase in output in seven years of over 1,000 per cent.

The statement has been made on the floor that in the last five years a number of establishments engaged in the manufacture of automobiles have gone out of business, but the fact remains that from 1909 to 1916 there has been an increase in the number of establishments of from 315 in 1909 to 454 in 1916.

The value of the automobiles manufactured in 1909 was $165,099,400. In five years the value of the output was increased until the aggregate value amounted to $465,042,000. But in 1916 this industry, which they say is in danger if we place this tax upon it, manufactured and placed on the market automobiles to the value of $1,000,069,000. If the ratio of increase in the output of automobiles continues in the future as in the past few years, we will get much more than the experts estimate we will be able to get out of this industry.

Stand on any one of the magnificent boulevards of this city and count the automobiles as they pass. Yesterday I was on Sixteenth Street in this Capital City, and going in each direction there was a continual procession of automobiles for hours during the pleasant sunshine of yesterday afternoon, thousands and thousands of them passing, and not one in one hundred engaged in commercial business. Practically every one of them was out for pleasure riding. Now, of course, that was Sunday, but you can go out this afternoon and you will find the same number of automobiles driving up and down any one of these boulevards here in this Capital City, and if you pick them out as you pass you will find that on week days not ten out of every one hundred will be engaged in trips for anything except pleasure. Men living in the suburbs of this city along street car lines are driving to their business every day in automobiles, consuming in gasoline and lubricating oils alone for each trip more than their street car fare would amount to if they came in on a street car. Automobiles are still to a very large degree luxuries, and this industry, so well able to stand it, ought not to escape this tax.

Mr. DOREMUS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; I yield to my friend.

Mr. DOREMUS. Of all the automobiles that the gentleman saw upon the boulevard yesterday, was there one of them that is subjected to a dollar of taxation under this bill?

Mr. RAINEY. I am calling attention to the fact that the American people are tremendous consumers of automobiles, and they do not care particularly how much those machines cost. Expenses in connection with the purchase of automobiles and their operation do not deter the American people in these prosperous times, destined to become still more prosperous as we expend these billions of money——

Mr. HULBERT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; for a question.

Mr. HULBERT. I probably owned one of the automobiles that the gentleman saw on Sixteenth Street yesterday. I pay a tax on that automobile to the State of New York of $15 per year. As far as I can see, I will not pay any tax under this bill. I would be very glad if my automobile and all other automobiles in use now were taxed for horsepower. [Applause.] But what I would like to know is this: I would like to know upon what theory the committee framed this bill and provided for a tax of 5 per cent upon motor trucks and automobile wagons used for commercial pursuits, not of the character that the gentleman saw on Sixteenth Street yesterday, and at the same time exempted motor boats used for commercial purposes from the payment of any tax?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. To relieve the mind of my friend from New York, I will say that he will find that under the provisions of this bill he will be taxed on his automobile.

Mr. HULBERT. I should like to have the gentleman indicate the section which imposes the tax.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. He will have to pay about $10 each year on tires.

Mr. HULBERT. On tires?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HULBERT. But you have not got any provision in the bill taxing the automobile for horsepower, and I should like to see a provision of that character.

Mr. RAINEY. I will say to the gentleman that his automobile will probably wear out in a year or two, and he will then have an opportunity to buy another.

Mr. HULBERT. I have not got that kind of a car.

Mr. RAINEY. And when he buys another car he will have an opportunity to pay this tax that he so patriotically expresses himself as willing to pay. And so every man in this country who expends from $360 up to thousands of dollars for an automobile will have the opportunity hereafter to pay this tax if the automobile owners refuse to pay it out of their profits and pass it on to him. We consumed in this country in 1916, 20,000,000 barrels of gasoline in the operation of automobiles alone, more than we consumed in any other year, and the cost of gasoline had gone up 70 per cent. It makes no difference to the owner of an automobile whether gasoline costs him 15 cents a gallon or 25 cents a gallon, he uses exactly as much and accomplishes just as much mileage.

Mr. HULBERT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. HULBERT. I propounded an inquiry to the gentleman in regard to the discrimination between the automobile trucks for commercial purposes, which are taxed, and motor boats used for commercial purposes, which are not taxed. I would like to know if the gentleman in this time has had an opportunity to consider and answer the question?

Mr. RAINEY. If I have the time I will discuss motor boats, but we are now discussing automobiles.

Mr. HULBERT. Why are the automobile trucks and wagons used for commercial purposes taxed?

Mr. RAINEY. Because they can stand this tax. A man who is willing and able to go to the more expensive and more convenient and more profitable way of carrying on his business is able to pay this increased cost made necessary by this bill.

Mr. HULBERT. One more brief question. Do you remit or omit the tax on motor boats used for commercial purposes because they can not stand the tax?

Mr. RAINEY. The gentleman, if he knows anything about motor boats, knows that the question of what a motor boat is is a pretty difficult proposition. When you put a motor in a boat it is a motor boat. The little fisherman who operates a boat that costs him $8 or $10 in a western river puts in a movable motor to operate his boat. Does the gentleman want to reach a little boat made out of planks operated by a fisherman engaged in catching the fish that makes living cheaper in the city of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HULBERT] in order to gratify any desire he may have for war revenue?

Mr. HULBERT. The gentleman does not make any distinction other than the fact that he is not able to define what a motor boat is, but I call his attention to the fact that where they are used for pleasure purposes——

Mr. RAINEY. It makes no difference, so far as my discussion is concerned, whether we reach down and get every kind of a motor boat or not. The fact remains that as to this industry it is demonstrated that it is able to stand it in this war period. We will probably collect a tax of over $68,000,000 on account of this item, and it will not injure the industry of manufacturing automobiles in this country in the least. Men will buy just as many cars as they ever did before, and they are willing to pay more.

Mr. MEEKER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MEEKER. The gentleman from Michigan said the other day that there has been no investigation on the part of your committee as to whether or not these men could stand this tax.

Mr. RAINEY. If the figures I have given do not convey to the minds of those present the idea that an industry which has increased its output from 1909 to 1916, 1,000 per cent—in seven years from one hundred and sixty-five millions to over a billion dollars—can stand this tax, then I am afraid I can not make it plain.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to my colleague [Mr. CRAMTON].

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I am not going to attempt to add anything in the way of information concerning the output of automobiles and the industry in general to what has been presented to you by my able colleagues, Mr. DOREMUS, Mr. NICHOLS of Michigan, and Mr. KELLEY of Michigan, for they come from districts where many of these factories are located and have well presented the facts. There is not a factory in my district, so that I can not be said to speak for constituents of mine engaged in the manufacture of automobiles, and I shall endeavor for a few minutes to call to your attention some considerations concerning the meaning of this to the automobile industry and to the Nation, and the welfare of the Nation we are all interested in.

The great principle upon which this bill has been framed is that "we need the money." I subscribe to that doctrine so far that I am going to vote for the bill, even though it contains things that I do not relish at all.

But there is another great principle that is paramount even to that, and that is the principle that a method of taxation should not be adopted that will defeat itself, that will ruin an industry, and that will cause disaster to the country when we need to have the country prosperous.

Now, what are the reasons advanced for this particular tax? One, offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN], urges that it is a tax upon a luxury or a semiluxury. The other has been urged in private conversation and alluded to on the floor by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] and others—that it is being levied because the automobile manufacturers are making a lot of money. These two reasons contradict one another, and the facts contradict both of them.

First, that the automobile is a luxury. Well, suppose it is a luxury, what is the theory upon which we put taxation upon luxuries? Is it to penalize the manufacturer or to penalize the consumer? Do we put the tax on the man who makes the article or the tax upon the man who uses it because he can afford to pay? We all know that the tax on a luxury should be upon the man who uses the article and can afford to pay. As a matter of fact an automobile is no more an article of luxury or an article of semiluxury than a cake of ice is. The cake of ice the poor man uses, and it is a necessity. The rich man can take it and pack it around his bottle of champagne and it is a luxury. It depends upon the use.

I wish my friend the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] who started out late Sunday afternoon and counted the automobiles—and counted mine four or five times as it went up and down Sixteenth Street—would get out in Detroit early in the morning—impossible, perhaps, at 4 o'clock—and see the men who raise the truck in the truck gardens around Detroit, who drive in 10 or 15 miles. They used to take a horse and start at 12 o'clock midnight and get in there at daylight. Now they leave at 3 o'clock in the morning and are home again at 9 o'clock and do a day's work. Talk about fish and the motor boat; these automobiles bring the garden truck a radius of 10 or 20 miles greater and help to reduce the high cost of living. [Applause.]

I say the automobile is not a luxury. You ask the creamery that collects its cream from the farmers throughout a certain section by automobile trucks instead of by the old team method, when, instead of using the creamery, the farmers' wives set up the pans of milk and skimmed the cream and churned it into butter or made their boys do it, as is my recollection. The automobile is not a luxury except in rare cases, and if you are taxing it as a luxury take the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HULBERT] and exempt those that are used for commercial purposes. Again, to speak of that stream going up and down Sixteenth Street yesterday, I was in it more or less, and I saw not only the automobiles of the rich, but I saw some little old "bugs" going up and down there, little old automobiles that go through 40 hands to the present purchaser, a laboring man probably, working for two or three dollars a day, who had his family out for an airing on Sunday, a thing just as necessary to him as anything else. In the bill, when you are treating of the necessities, in Title V you have an express provision that the tax upon them shall be passed on to the consumer. Railroad transportation, freight, electricity, gas, and all those things, must be passed on to the consumer. There is no such provision here; and while our friend from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] assumes that we will pass this on to the consumer, he does not tell us how it is going to be done. In fact, there is an implication in the bill against it, because it is provided that the manufacturer must himself pay it to the Government. And, furthermore, you exempt the Federal Government and the State and county governments from any charge for electricity or transportation made as against their agents under Title V. There is an appropriation of $75,000,000 in one of our appropriation bills here with which to buy automobiles for the Government for war purposes. If this tax is passed on to the consumer, in that one item you have a tax of 5 per cent on $75,000,000 that is going to be passed on to the Government, and no exemption is provided. Oh, no; they do not expect it to be passed on to the consumer. Furthermore, if it is passed to the consumer and collected by the manufacturer, a minor discrimination arises. The man who manufactures electricity and collects the bill from the customer, for no charge whatever, performs the function of collecting the tax for the Government.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, the man who collects the electric bill turns the tax upon it over to the Government, the 5 per cent, and he does it without charge to the Government for the services. The man who sells an automobile and collects the tax on it for the Government would pay for the privilege of collecting the tax for the Government. If it was a $1,000 automobile and he passes the tax to the consumer by charging the consumer $50 more than he would have had to pay ordinarily, then the manufacturer would have to pay a tax, not upon the $1,000 but upon $1,050, and instead of paying the Government the $50 which he collects from the customer, he would pay the Government $52.50. Oh, you do not intend the tax to be passed on, but it is to be paid by the manufacturer.

Second, they say this is to be a tax upon the profits of the manufacturer. The other day we were talking about electricity and about passing on that charge to the consumer or having it paid by the manufacturer. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] I think represented the sentiment of the committee perhaps when he said that the reason they did not provide for payment of the tax by the electric or gas company is that a lot of these corporations can not afford to pay it, their charges being fixed. But we know that a lot of those corporations that manufacture electricity and gas are unquestionably monopolies, and some of them have accumulated vast profits by reason of extortionate rates. But notwithstanding that, we say that because some of them are properly regulated and can not afford to pay the 5 per cent, so, in order to protect those who could not afford to absorb the tax, we exempt all of them, the unconscionable monopolies and all. Here is a case where there is no monopoly, where they are not so protected. They are engaged in competition, and still you are not going to protect the little fellow in the automobile industry. You force him to pay a 5 per cent tax on his gross sales.

Further, it has been pointed out how we tax all these automobile manufacturers otherwise in this bill upon their profits. We tax them upon their net income and upon their excess profits, and then we go to the stockholder and we tax him upon his income derived from dividends. But that is not enough in the case of the automobile manufacturer. You are going to tax him 5 per cent on every dollar that he takes in. This is rank discrimination. Why is it, that if I make a million dollars out of a stock-exchange gambling proposition you only tax me on my net income, but if I am engaged in a legitimate industry, the manufacturer of automobiles and automobile trucks, you charge me not only that same tax upon profits and incomes, but you tax me on the money taken in? It is unjust. It is not a question of choice as to which method of taxation you follow as to the automobile concern, because you tax him both ways, both upon his gross business and upon his profits. It penalizes the manufacturer who, by low prices based on small margin of profit, seeks to make his profits large by volume of business.

Furthermore, it is disastrous, because it must decrease the production, and it must tend to further accentuate the business apprehension in this country at this time, and that means financial disaster, and we can not afford that now.

It is not necessary. The committee can meet again, and they can bring in a tax suggested by my colleague, Mr. FORDNEY, a stamp tax on bank checks, which at least will bring in two or three times as much as the automobile tax. Then there is the candy industry. Talk about increases! The growth of the candy industry has been phenomenal. In 1909 the candy industry amounted to $60,000,000 and in 1914 it had gone up to over $170,000,000. A thriving industry, a luxury, a curb upon its production would serve to conserve our supply of sugar, an important food product, but it is not touched.

I want to urge this upon the Members of this House. You may not come from a State where they make automobiles. My district does not, but whatever district you come from, there are probably manufacturing concerns in it. If you adopt this policy of taxing the manufacturer upon his gross receipts, before this war gets far, as you get in new taxes, we may tax the manufacturer of furniture, we may tax the manufacturer of farm wagons, the manufacturer of clothing, and of any article which is no more a necessity than the automobile.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has again expired.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN].

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, it is easy to vote for an appropriation, it is often easy to vote for bonds, but it is hard often to vote for taxes to pay appropriations. In some instances it is hard to pay the taxes, and I sympathize with some of the complaints that have been made by parties upon whom the taxes which are proposed by this bill will bear hardly. But in this particular instance we have complaints from parties who will not pay the tax and who are simply afraid that they may pay the tax. Now, let me say at the outset, with reference to this kind of a tax, that a tax upon gross receipts, in my judgment, should never be laid in any case except where it will ultimately be borne by the consumer; and for the same reason it follows, in my judgment, that taxes upon gross receipts should not be levied upon necessities unless that tax is levied by reason of extremities in which the Nation finds itself and the absolute necessity for further taxes as a last resort. Now, let us see what the situation is with reference to the automobile industry. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] several days ago addressed the House with almost sepulchral mien and gave a tale of the woes of the automobile companies which cast a gloom over the House which has scarcely been dispelled yet. Now, to-day comes my friend, the other gentleman from Michigan, the genial, delightful Mr. KELLEY, who has so often interested and instructed the House and even charmed us by his eloquence, and he, too, objects to this provision in the bill. So far as Mr. KELLEY is concerned, I think his argument is legitimate, and I shall undertake to answer it. So far as the argument made by Mr. DOREMUS is concerned, I shall not answer it myself, but shall simply quote to you some figures. My friend Mr. KELLEY, I think, has an automobile factory in his district, and I am not finding any fault with either of those gentlemen for coming here and presenting the case of the automobile manufacturer. I realize perfectly well that the pressure upon them would be such that it could not be very well avoided, and, indeed, I would be very glad if I could myself join in with them. It is no pleasure to vote for taxes, but let me call attention——

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I will.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I wish to say to the gentleman, as far as my district is concerned, if there are any automobile companies of the United States that could stand and absorb a tax of this kind I presume they might do so, because they are like the Ford, the General Motor, the leading automobile companies of the country, but there are scattered all over the United States small companies——

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I will answer the gentleman on that, if he will permit me. I prefer to do it rather than for him to do so in my time. I find that the Reo Motor Co. is located in the district of the gentleman. I made an investigation not only on the returns of this company but also of a large number of automobile companies, and I will read some of the results, so that the House should have a knowledge of the terrible situation in which these automobile companies have found themselves. If you have tears, prepared to shed them now. Here is the record of the Reo Motor Co.: Dividends, 1906, 35 per cent; 1907, only 80 per cent; 1909, ran down to 60 per cent; 1910, down to 30 per cent; 1913—we will have to have an explanation of this—10 per cent; 1914, 37½ per cent; 1915, 35 per cent; 1916, 10 per cent to July 1. But that is not half the story. In 1906 they paid a 50 per cent stock dividend; in 1908—the figures are blurred, but I think it is 1908—33⅓ per cent stock dividend; in 1909, 100 per cent stock dividend; in 1914, a 50 per cent stock dividend; in 1916, 100 per cent on January 10, and I do not know how much more since. Now, some new companies have been started up in the automobile industry under great difficulty, as my friend tells us—very hard to get into this business. One of the new companies is the Paige Automobile Co. That was organized in 1910. In addition to the other dividends, they paid 230 per cent in stock dividends. Now they want to sell more stock, and they announce in their advertisements that if you had invested $1,000 in Paige stock in 1914 it would have been worth—how much? About a thousand—five thousand? Guess again. Ten thousand? Too low. Twenty thousand? Oh, not near enough. If you had bought a thousand dollars of stock, it would have been worth now $36,988. Then there is the Willys-Overland Co., which has been spoken of. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] intimated that was in rather bad circumstances. This was one of the most prosperous companies, next to the Ford, but the dividends and profits made out of it are not published as by the Ford company. Next to the Ford, more millionaires have been made through the Willys-Overland Co. than through any other company. The stock of this company issued April 1, 1916, was $15,000,000 preferred, $22,500,000 common—mostly water, as usual with common stock. On June 14, 1916, the stock was increased to $75,000,000 of which $25,000,000 was preferred stock and $50,000,000 common stock. For the four years ending December 31, 1915, the net profits of that company were over $25,000,000, and they made about $11,000,000 last year——

Mr. DOREMUS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I will.

Mr. DOREMUS. Why does not the gentleman tax those immense profits?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. We are taxing them.

Mr. DOREMUS. You are not taxing them; you are taxing the gross sales.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. They will have to pay on the excess profits, although there was an amendment offered by my colleague [Mr. GOOD] the other day that would have exempted them to a large extent.

The Saxon Motor Co. is one of those that makes a car somewhat cheap in price.

Mr. HARDY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HARDY. Is the gentleman now basing the right to levy this tax solely upon the immense profits earned? If so, why did not the gentleman base it upon some other industries?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. No; I am not. I am placing it on a logical basis, as I will explain to the gentleman.

Mr. CRAMTON. The gentleman admits that is not a logical basis?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I am sorry the gentleman is not able to see it at this time, but I hope he will be able to do so before we get through.

Mr. MEEKER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. MEEKER. Will the gentleman explain to the committee why on everything which comes under this title the committee switched from the perfectly legitimate excess-profits tax and went to the gross-sales tax on this commodity? Why adopt a policy which at other times would be indefensible? Simply because we need the money or because it is a sound policy?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Not at all. And the committee did not switch. These companies will pay the excess-profits tax.

Mr. MEEKER. That is all right, but why this gross-sales tax? That is what we are trying to find out. Why switch to the gross-sales tax?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Automobiles, if not an article of luxury pure and simple, are not a necessity. And because the nature of the trade is such and, as I have shown, produces such enormous profits, the charges will be passed on to the consumer and will not cost the companies 1 cent. That is why we levy this tax. These enormous profits show that even the small companies must make a good profit.

Mr. MEEKER. Does the gentleman insist that on these gross-sales taxes they will get to the consumer?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. There is no question about it in the world; none whatever.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. If that is the policy of the committee, that this should be paid by the consumer, why did not the committee include the 3,500,000 automobiles that are already in existence?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The committee does tax the automobiles that are already in existence.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. How?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. By a tax on tires, one of the fairest kind of taxes that will be levied upon them. It will cost every man that owns an automobile from $2 to $10, according to the extent he uses his automobile. If he is a rich man, and goes driving over the country for 20,000 or 50,000 miles, he will have to pay more. If he has only a Ford, and uses it only a little, he will pay but a little.

Mr. DOREMUS. Will the gentleman yield for a brief question?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. DOREMUS. Why is it that you tax the automobile to be hereafter purchased, not only upon the automobile and the tires, while as to the automobiles now in use you tax only the tires?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Because that is an annual tax, and the other is a tax that is all paid at once. I am sorry the gentleman can not see it.

Mr. DOREMUS. Would not the tax on the automobile also be an annual tax?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It would not.

Mr. DOREMUS. Does the gentleman mean to tell us that they will pay this year and then cense paying? On the automobile already in us, if you levy a license tax upon it, it would only pay for one year?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The tax on the tire is an annual tax, and on the automobile, when the manufacturer sells it, is payable once and for all. I want to say, as I understand it—and gentlemen halve talked about a tax on the automobiles themselves, a tax that can never be levied with any approach to equity or fairness, because there is no way to do it—that we have a tax here on tires that is absolutely equitable and just, or as near to it as it can possibly be made.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield for a very brief question on that particular point? The gentleman spoke of taxing cars now in use by the tax on the tires. Milady's limousine is only used by her a little bit in the afternoon while she is calling, and will not pay much tax; but the little old delivery wagon that runs all day and is a necessity will pay the heaviest tax.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman can always find one rare exception, one case out of a thousand, just as I can say as to the real-estate tax in my own State. If I had given a mortgage on a piece of land, I would have to pay as much on it as I did if I did not have any mortgage.

Mr. CRAMTON. Would that not happen more than once in a thousand?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Not more than once in a thousand with reference to the limousine.

Now, let me come to the situation here. Why will the automobile manufacturers not have to pay this tax? In the first place, because the tax on gross receipts is almost invariably paid by the consumer. Secondly, because the demand for the automobiles is so great and the profits are so great that the manufacturer can easily put the price on the consumer, and when they can, everybody knows that they will.

Gentlemen, do not worry about the automobile trade dwindling or falling off. There is nothing that people are so unwilling to do without as an automobile. There is nothing that they want so much. Men will mortgage their houses, borrow money, say that they can not send their daughter or their boy to college, but will have an automobile. They will quit buying everything else. It is well known that all lines of trade—and one of them is a line that is taxed also in this bill, that of jewelry—have suffered by reason of the extraordinary expenditures that have been going into the automobiles.

Now, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS], in speaking of the tax that is imposed by this bill, said that it was "unprecedented, unheard of." That may not be his exact language, but that was the substance of it.

Mr. DOREMUS. I did not say that.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. You did not say that?

Mr. DOREMUS. Not those words. But I could very properly have done so.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Let us see if you could very properly have done so. If the gentleman had investigated the taxes that were levied during the Civil War he would find that he could not say with propriety any such thing. The 5 per cent tax on gross sales was imposed on numerous articles at the time of the Civil War. A large number of industries were taxed then at the rate of 5 per cent, and the gross sales were taxed in the Civil War in such form that the tax was a great deal harder to bear than this. The tax was imposed not only on what the dealer sold but also on what he had.

Mr. DOREMUS. In the Civil War, in addition to those taxes, did they also impose an excess-profits tax and a gross-sales tax?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes. There was a dollar a barrel on crude oil, which, I think, was about what it was worth at that time, and there was a tax of 20 cents a gallon on refined oil, which was worth about $1 a gallon at that time. In addition to that, there was a tax of 2½ per cent on gross sales of refineries. Gentlemen talk as though we were imposing some unheard-of scheme of taxation. The real fact is that, so far as the taxes contained in this bill are concerned, compared with those levied in the time of the Civil War, the Government is not laying even its little finger on the taxable resources of this country as compared with the way it reached out with both arms and both hands into the pockets of the people at that time. People nowadays do not know anything about the taxation of that time, and they will not know it by this bill. They will not know it unless they look back and study the actual taxes that were imposed on the people at the time of the Civil War. Now, those taxes did not ruin the manufacturers in the time of the Civil War; on the contrary, they prospered exceedingly.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Now, I want to call the attention of the committee to another statement that has been repeatedly made on the floor, although it has nothing to do with the question immediately before the House. It was stated, with reference to what has been called the retroactive income feature that is contained in this bill. It is said that that kind of a tax had never been heard of before. But the committee in levying the taxes imposed by this bill had abundant examples and precedents before them, and they learned something from the experience that was gained at the time of the Civil War. Exactly that same kind of an income tax was levied in 1864, when an additional income tax over and above the income tax that had previously been levied was imposed on July 4, 1864, upon the incomes of 1863.

Now, gentlemen of the House, this tax can be stricken out; but what is proposed in lieu of it? What is it that the gentlemen offer? They say they would put another tax still on automobiles, a tax that would impose the same amount to be paid upon the old rattletrap as upon the fine new machine, and they think that would be more fair and more just. I do not think so. I think that this tax should be levied just as it is, where it will fall upon the man who wants a new car.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there for a question?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. What would the gentleman say to allowing an exemption of 8 per cent profits before this tax is levied?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Oh, I think that would be perfectly proper if I thought the manufacturer would have to pay the tax; but believing as I do that in any event he will not pay the tax, but pass it on to the consumer——

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Would not that be fair to lay it on another producer?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. He will not have to pay the tax.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. That is your side of it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Why, gentlemen, last year a large share of the automobile makers added $100, which is about twice the tax to be imposed in this bill, to the price of their automobiles, and the people fell over themselves in their haste to get automobiles, notwithstanding the increase in price; and, notwithstanding the raising of the price, the number of automobiles purchased in 1916 was double that of 1915.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Well, having advanced the price once, does the gentleman think they can advance it again?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I think the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] can give us an instance of that.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I would be glad to give the gentleman this advertisement if he can make any proper use of it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. This is an advertisement of the Chandler Automobile Co. It says the price "must advance $200 by June 30" and advises everybody to get in before the price is advanced. [Laughter.]

Now, gentlemen say that this tax is going to hart the companies and that they will not be able to do as good a business as they have done before. Let me read to you an extract from the Wall Street Journal of May 17.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I would like to have about two minutes more.

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield to the gentleman five minutes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for five minutes more.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. This article is headed in this manner:

Automobile makers not worried over 5 per cent tax. H. H. Franklin says that there will be a corresponding increase in prices, which buyers can stand, and sales of cars wld not be hurt.

It says further on that the "Franklin business for the six months ended May 1, 1917, showed an increase of 1.43 per cent over that of the preceding six months." I read further:

"Even if the proposed 5 per cent tax is put on, and even if it is higher than on other articles," said Mr. Franklin, "it will not be the tax that will hurt the sale of motor cars. The thing that will hurt the sale of automobiles will be the general situation." A 5 per cent tax, according to Mr. Franklin, will merely mean a corresponding increase in automobile prices, which he says the buyers can well stand.

Mr. WASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. WASON. Does the gentleman know the reason why the president of the company made that statement?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. No. I am not particularly interested in his reason, except that he says that he is already going to contract for a great many more cars than he made last year.

Mr. WASON. Does the gentleman know that the Franklin people are making a great point on the mileage they get on their cars, and that is the cause of the great increase in the demand for that car over others?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Oh, yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. As the gentleman read it, it said that the sales of the last six months were greater than for the preceding six months, not for the corresponding six months of a year ago.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I may have stated it incorrectly.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That would make a very great difference.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It is correctly stated in the extract which I read.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. No; I can not yield, for I have not time. I want to finish this. Here is an article from the Washington Post of May 13:

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS IN WASHINGTON OPTIMISTIC OVER BUSINESS OUTLOOK—CAR SALES FOR SPRING 1917 BEAT ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS, ACCORDING TO REPORTS OF LOCAL DEALERS—NO DEPRESSION DUE TO "WAR SCARE."

What is behind the assertions of the automobile manufacturers and dealers advertising that they are now enjoying the greatest business in their history? Is it a sort of optimism prompted by the idea that if they do not keep smiling and telling themselves that business is good the pessimism of panic and the hysteria of hard times will catch them napping? Or is there sufficient behind these assertions to make them worthy of investigation in an effort to find out just what condition this big business is as a result of the declaration of war by the United States?

"Business as usual," the slogan of Great Britain, hardly fits. Business is decidedly unusual, so far as the motor car is concerned. Dealers are not only unloading and selling cars as fast as they arrive, but they are writing and wiring their factories asking if it is not possible to secure additional cars.

It would not be correct to say that the war has had no effect on the industry, at least so far as sales in Washington are concerned.

Dealers admit that when the declaration of war was first made there was some slackening in buying. Prospective purchasers who were about to sign the dotted line on the order blank hesitated about committing the overt act.

Fortunately this condition did not last for long. Within 10 days the public began buying again with the same zest that they had displayed previous to any announcement of hostilities. March and April have been banner months in the business here. Every company reports an increase in business. Dealers who in previous years have during the late winter and early spring months been able to stock a few cars in anticipation of the late spring and early summer business have this year been unable to keep up with the demand.

The automobile industry is not worrying. Where Great Britain industries satisfied themselves with the slogan, "business as usual," one American business, the automobile, finds its business greater than ever.

There are some other trades and businesses that are subject to this same tax. Among others is the jewelry business. According to the statement made by an association to me, the jewelers of this country are not complaining of this tax. They had to pay 10 per cent on their stocks on hand at the time of the Civil War. They do say, however, that if the automobile tax is stricken from this section of the bill, the tax on the jewelry business and all the others ought to go out too, and I entirely agree with them. They say that their profits are nothing like what the automobile manufactures make, that the demand for their goods is nothing like, and that the extent of the industry is nothing like that of the automobile business. They admit that they are manufacturing a luxury to a certain extent, and they say that the price can be passed on to the consumer just as it always has been with taxes of this kind. I insist that this provision ought to stay in the bill; that with the exception of some of the so-called war babies engaged in the manufacture of munitions there is not a business in the country that is so well able to meet the conditions imposed by the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, if this automobile tax goes out of the bill, the tax on everything in this section ought to go out of the bill, and taxes in other sections to the amount of perhaps over $100,000,000 ought to go out of the bill; because outside of this section we collect much over $100,000,000 of taxes from other articles that are taxed more than 5 per cent ad valorem, some as high as an equivalent of 33⅓ per cent ad valorem, some over 100 per cent ad valorem. Take tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, smoking tobacco—they pay over 33⅓ per cent, but everybody knows that the increase in the tobacco tax and the increase in the whisky tax are going to be put on the consumer. The tobacco manufacturer and the distiller are going to add the price to the wholesaler, the wholesaler to the retailer, and the retailer to the consumer. Take carbonic-acid gas. We are placing a specific tax which amounts practically to 200 per cent, or twice as much as its present selling value, yet the carbonic-acid-gas manufacturers are making little complaint about the size of the tax, because they know they are going to add it to the price to the soda-water man and the bottling establishments throughout the country, and they, in turn, are going to add the price to the retailer, and he in turn in some way to the consumer.

Mr. LONGWORTH. If the gentleman would like to have the exact figures of these various titles, I can give them.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Under Title III, the war tax on beverages, $220,000,000.

Title IV, war tax on cigars, tobacco and manufactures thereof, $70,000,000.

Title VI, war tax on manufactures, which is the section under consideration, $118,000,000.

Mr. KITCHIN. Every one of those taxes ought to go out if this tax goes out.

The jewelry manufacturer is taxed just like the automobile manufacturer—the same 5 per cent ad valorem. The man who manufactures baseballs and baseball bats is taxed the same as the automobile man. The man who manufactures tennis rackets is taxed the same as the automobile man. The man who manufactures graphophones and talking machines and phonographs, or billiard tables, or pianos or victrolas, is taxed just the same as the automobile man. They have protested, but they have not brought a lobby here to swarm this Capitol, as the automobile manufacturers have. You have to elbow your way through them when you walk through the corridors of the Capitol. Why have they such a powerful influence here? No man is thinking about striking out the jewelry provision or the other provisions of this section. There has not been a suggestion of that kind in this debate; but the automobile manufacturers are strong enough to bring together here an influence to impose their desires and their will upon this body, not in behalf of the Government, but in behalf of their own selfish interests. Why? Because the automobile industry is larger than all the other industries that I have mentioned here combined. They have been able to gather, among the membership of this House, every district that had a little automobile industry, every district that had a little industry that made parts of automobiles and band them together in an assault upon this provision of the bill. They have appealed to the interests of those districts, not to the sense of right or the justice of the individual Members of this House. They told us, as the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] told us, that if you put this tax upon automobiles the industry is ruined. Why, he pictured here the depressed condition that pervaded the whole automobile industry. He showed us how the Overland people were going to cut down their output, and the Hudson people were going to cut down their output, and the Packard people were going to cut down their output, and he showed to this House a picture not only of depression and stagnation, but of bankruptcy of the automobile industry.

Mr. DOREMUS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. KITCHEN. Give me that Overland advertisement there [indicating].

Mr. DOREMUS. Does the gentleman deny that the Packard and the Hudson and the other companies to which I referred have, as a matter of fact, already reduced their output?

Mr. KITCHIN. Gentleman, they have imposed on the credulity and intelligence of the gentleman from Michigan. He tells you that the Packard is going to cut down their output of touring cars. Yes; because they have a tremendously big contract with the Government and can not make them. Is the Hudson Co. going to cut down? No. On May 12, in its statement in the Literary Digest, it says that it is making a special car now, a 1918 model, for $1,750—$100 advance—but is unable to turn out many of them this year because the exacting demand of the public for their other cars will require the full capacity of their plant. Now, the gentleman from Michigan does not know any better. He has not investigated it like we have, but he takes their word for it.

Mr. DOREMUS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. My time is about up and I want to refer to other facts relative to the automobile industry.

Mr. DOREMUS. We will give you all the time you want.

Mr. KITCHIN. Then I will teach the gentleman something about automobiles and give him some statistics of which he seems ignorant. [Laughter.]

Mr. DOREMUS. Oh, I do not think the gentleman from North Carolina can tell the difference between a mud pan and a carbureter. [Laughter.]

Mr. KITCHIN. Now, let me read the gentleman what the Willys-Overland Co. says and compare it with what the gentleman says. He declares they have been compelled to cut down their output and this bill will put them in bankruptcy. I have here a double-page advertisement in the Literary Digest of April 14, 1917, in which they say that in 1914 they made 48,473 cars; in 1915 they made 93,724 cars, nearly 100 per cent increase; in 1916 they made 142,807; and at the rate they have been producing from January 1, 1917, to April 14, 1917, they say they will make 200,000 cars this year, an increase over last year of 67,000 cars. And an increase over 1915—in two years—of more than 106,000 cars—more than 100 per cent! This is what they said on April 14, 1917, when they wanted you and me to buy one of their cars. Did they tell the truth then, or have they imposed upon the gentleman's credulity?

Mr. DOREMUS. I will answer the gentleman——

Mr. KITCHIN. I will yield to the gentleman for a question, but not for a speech.

Mr. DOREMUS. I will answer the gentleman in my own time.

Mr. KITCHIN. I think the Willys-Overland Co. told the truth then. Now, the Franklin Car Co.—what do they say? The president of that company just a few days ago in the Journal of Commerce stated that this 5 per cent was not going to hurt the automobile industry; that it would not prevent the sale of a single car; and he said that they could stand it, because they could and would put it on the purchaser.

Now, let us see about the Hudson and the Packard, to which the gentleman referred as ruined and bankrupted victims of this bill if it passes. A Hudson car, with the manufacturer's profit added, leaves the factory at the price of around $1,250. Before it reaches you or me it goes up to $1,650. Does anybody suppose that this little $62.50 tax on a $1,250 automobile, with the manufacturer's profit added, with a margin of $400 between that and the purchaser's buying price, is going to prevent the sale of the automobile or going to bankrupt the company even if it pays the whole tax without passing it on to the dealer or purchaser? But you and I know it will add that tax to the price.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

M. GREEN of Iowa. The stock of this concern was originally $100,000, increased first to $1,000,000 by $900,000 stock dividend. On November 10 and August 13 it was increased by another million-dollar stock dividend.

Mr. KITCHIN. And the gentleman from Michigan, even with such facts, has been imposed on to such an extent that he honestly believes this small tax will ruin them. Let me tell you something more about this automobile industry. In 1914, 573,000 cars were made in this country; in 1915, 703,000 cars; in 1916, 1,303,000 cars, or nearly 100 per cent increase in the last year, and yet they would have us believe that the automobile industry is in a depressed condition and can not stand this tax.

What about the value? In 1914 the value was $465,000,000; in 1915, $625,000,000; and in 1916, $1,069,000,000! And still they would have this House believe that the industry is in a depressed condition and can not stand this tax.

Let me return to the Packard Co. Their regular touring car sells for $3,150. That car will have to pay a tax of $132.50. The car when it leaves the factory with the manufacturer's profit added is sold to dealers or selling agent for about $2,650. The margin between the manufacturer's price, with the profit added, and the paying price by the consumer is about $500. Do you not know, gentlemen, that if one wants to buy a $1,650 car that $62.50—the 5 per cent on the manufacturer's price—if put on one is not going to stand in his way? He is going to buy it in spite of the tax even if added to the price of the car. If one is going to give $3,150 for a Packard, the tax of $132.50, if added to the price, is not going to stand in his way, and if it did, let the Packard Co. take off some of that $500 profit between them and the consumer. Let the Hudson people take off some of the $400 profit between the manufacturer's price and the ultimate purchaser. Why, gentlemen, there is not a tax in this bill more just and fair and less burdensome and more easy to pass on to the purchaser than this tax on the automobile.

As I said the other day, in the Civil War there were men down here and men in Congress protesting and using just the same arguments that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] are using to-day. Congress put a tax of 5 per cent ad valorem on paint, a tax of 5 per cent ad valorem on umbrellas, a tax of 3 per cent on cotton goods and on woolen goods and boots and shoes. These interests flocked down here and made the same arguments and made the same prophecies of ruin and disaster to the industries as we hear to-day. But the patriotism and statesmanship of the Members of Congress stood firm against the appeals of the special interests and the tax was put on.

I do not criticize the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] or Mr. CRAMTON or Mr. KELLEY for standing up in the House for the industries in their districts and performing a duty which in their judgment they owe them. Their loyalty to these industries should not perhaps be condemned.

But, my friends, I hope there are men enough here who believe in their hearts that in this hour of the Nation's danger their first duty is to their country, their best loyalty is to their Government, rather than to any industry in their district. [Applause.] The gentleman from Michigan the other day upon this floor announced the doctrine that we would better abandon this war than to tax the automobile industry.

Mr. DOREMUS. O, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman does not want to make a misstatement of what I said.

Mr. KITCHIN. I am not. The gentleman did not put it in that stark-naked language, but here is what he said, which means the same thing: He said that rather than do an acknowledged wrong by this bill to an American industry we had better abandon this war. He had been attempting to prove in over a half an hour's speech that it was not only wrong to put this tax on the automobile industry but almost a criminal, sinful outrage to do it. What did he mean by that language? I translate it into the pure, simple English meaning—the only meaning it could have.

Mr. Chairman, if it be the sentiment of this Congress that we should not tax a big, powerful industry in our district and State, because perhaps it is going to hurt that industry, because possibly it is going to prevent that industry from making as much profit as it wants, then we had as well do what the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] advises us to do—abandon this war. We had as well take off the statute books the war resolution and authorize the President to surrender to Germany and the central powers at once. We can not prosecute the war without money. We can not get the money without taxation.

Mr. DOREMUS and Mr. KELLEY of Michigan have no more right to ask this House to take a tax off an industry in their districts than I have to come to you and ask you to take the additional tax of 100 per cent, 33⅓ per cent of its real value, off tobacco made in my district. I would be ashamed and I would hate to have my children in after years read in this RECORD that their father, when their country's life was at stake, fought here on this floor against a tax to help support his Government in her momentous struggle because it was going to hurt an industry in his district. [Applause.]

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote upon my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan to strike out the paragraph.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KELLEY of Michigan) there were—ayes 48, noes 85.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOREMUS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. DOREMUS: Strike out the word "and," in line 6, on page 26, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Provided, That the tax of 5 per cent shall not be collected until the manufacturers of the articles herein enumerated shall have earned a profit of 8 per cent upon the actual capital invested. For the purpose of this paragraph actual capital invested means, first, actual cash paid in; second, the actual cash value at the time of payment of assets other than cash paid in; and third, paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS].

Mr. DOREMUS. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] made a very eloquent speech, and yet in the entire course of his remarks he did not deny a single statement contained in my speech the other day. I expressly stated at that time that I was not appealing for the industries that could pay this tax and live. I was appealing for the industries that could not do it and would die. The Packard Co. can stand the tax, the Franklin Co. can stand the tax, and the Hudson possibly can stand the tax, but the gentleman ought to know, if he has made any investigation of this question whatever, that 80 per cent of the automobiles in this country to-day are made by 12 companies, and that 20 per cent of the output is supplied by 438 companies. Take the Hupmobile for example. Last year it made 1.1 per cent upon its entire gross sales.

The president of that company is a former member of this House. He has enlisted in the marines as a private. His patriotism is as great as that of the gentleman from North Carolina. While he has enlisted in the cause of his country the gentleman from North Carolina would crucify the business in which he is engaged. I am willing to put my patriotism or the patriotism of the automobile manufacturers in my district alongside the patriotism of the gentleman from North Carolina. How does he expect that this company, with a gross output of $10,000,000 last year can pay this tax of 5 per cent upon its output when it earns only 1.1 per cent upon that output? Take the Chalmers Co. Upon its gross output it made a little over 2 per cent last year. You propose to take 5 per cent and leave it to them to pass this tax on to the consumer.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOREMUS. I have not time. The reason why I offer this amendment is this: If these manufacturers can not earn 8 per cent upon their capital, surplus, and undivided profits, this tax ought not to be imposed, and there is not a man in this House who will deny it. You will have an opportunity in voting for this amendment to say whether you are willing that this industry shall live. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman yields back two minutes. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DOREMUS) there were—ayes 66, noes 92.

Mr. DOREMUS. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

The committee again divided; and the tellers (Mr. KELLEY of Michigan and Mr. CRISP) reported that there were—ayes 94, noes 92.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment I desire to offer. I move, in line 23, page 25, to strike out the words "and motorcycles."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. GILLETTS Page 25, line 23, strike out the words "and motorcycles."

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. I yield the gentleman from Massachusetts five minutes.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate after the interest and disturbance excited by the last vote to come to so small an amendment as I have offered does not attract the attention of the House, but it seems to me this amendment to strike out motorcycles is justified by the very arguments that the Ways and Means Committee have made in favor of this section. Their argument for taxing automobiles is based upon two propositions: One is that they are luxuries, and the other is that they are a prosperous and expanding business that can endure the tax. Now, neither of those propositions applies to motorcycles. The motorcycle is not a luxury. It is not used merely as an instrument of pleasure, but most of the motorcycles are used by workmen to carry them to and from their work. The gentleman talked about seeing the parade of automobiles on Sixteenth Street. He did not see any motorcycles in that parade of luxury unless it was a policeman's motorcycle who was watching the expensive automobiles. The motorcycle is an implement of business. When you argue about the expanding and prosperous business of automobiles, that does not apply to motorcycles. In 1913 there were made in this country 75,000 motorcycles. This year there are only made 52,000 motorcycles. They have decreased in production 33 per cent in four years, and, moreover, in 1913 only 5 per cent were exported, while this last year 25 per cent were exported. So the domestic production of motorcycles has gone down 45 per cent in four years. In other words, it is a falling business, not a prosperous and expanding business like the automobile. I suppose the reason is that the automobile with its enormous output can make machines cheap, and so is gradually being built to compete with the motorcycle and is entering its field and is driving it out of business, but the very argument made for taxing automobiles shows that it ought not to be applied to motorcycles because the motorcycle in the first place is the workman's instrument of transportation, and in the next place the makers of motorcycles are manufacturing on a constantly falling market and they are in competition against this enormous development of the automobile which by its very size is able to reduce expenses. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me this amendment to strike out the taxation on motorcycles in this section ought to be adopted.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how much time we have now?

The CHAIRMAN. Twelve minutes, the Chair is advised.

Mr. BATHRICK. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the time is apportioned.

Mr. BATHRICK. I want to speak in favor of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can not get it from the Chair, but must get it from the gentlemen who control the time.

Mr. GILLETT. I will yield the gentleman the two minutes I have remaining.

Mr. BATHRICK. Mr. Chairman, I am in hearty agreement with the gentlemen with respect——

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I thought debate was exhausted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman obtained two minutes from the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. BATHRICK. Mr. Chairman, I am in hearty agreement with the amendment to exempt motorcycles from this 5 per cent taxation, if you are going to exempt automobiles. If there is a man on the floor of this House who has voted to exempt a Packard from the 5 per cent tax, he certainly is willing to exempt the motorcycle, so that the young man who has not money enough to buy a Packard can take a girl on the back seat of that motorcycle and have a good time. I would like to look him in the face if he is not willing. I have ridden down the street in an automobile with four wheels, and it has been a pleasure and a delight to me to see these young men who could not afford to buy automobiles riding on these motorcycles and having some kind of an outing. I will tell you it is not fair to exempt the high-priced automobile from this tax if you are not going to exempt the motorcycle. [Applause.]

I do not think a tax on gross receipts is sound. There is no way of fixing its proper relation to net profit, and therefore it may tax those who have little more than those who have much.

I was glad, then, to see the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan win, but if you will not tax a limousine why tax a motorcycle. The man in a Packard will be able to stand a tax passed down to him by the manufacturer better than the workman whom we meet with the little car on the side of his motorcycle, carrying his wife and baby.

If this gross tax stays in this bill, there must be a business readjustment all down the line. It will hurt until this readjustment takes place, but eventually the consumer must pay. By that fact you may tax the poor man more in proportion than you tax the rich, and I hope this amendment will pass. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced the noes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. GILLETT) there were—ayes 49, noes 89.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY].

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Chairman, I voted for the resolution of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] and for the resolution of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS]. I want to say why. Almost the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] made me for a moment see black as white, but I want to make the warning to our people from the South, who from the nature of things represent a special industry that is in a minority in this country, and we saw an illustration of that in the effort to tax that industry because we were in the minority. If we vote for unfair and unjust taxes to-day, some day the chickens will come home to roost when our cotton is attempted to be taxed unjustly and unfairly by Representatives from other sections who are in a large majority in this House. I noted that to-day the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] and Mr. DOREMUS and Mr. CRAMTON, all from districts where automobiles are being built, alone bore the brunt of the discussion here in trying to give their industries simple equality and justice.

We from the South can not afford to vote for anything except a just and fair tax, one that bears equally upon our industry and all others. And it does seem to me that unless you can call the automobile industry one of producing luxuries, or unless it is a monopoly——

Mr. BLACK. Is it not a fact that we have some large automobile factories in Texas?

Mr. HARDY. I think there is one. I think I have heard——

Mr. BLACK. There is a very large one at Wichita Falls.

Mr. HARDY. That may be, but it is not in my district. [Laughter.] It is not my intention to do any wrong, but we see things according to our interests, and every man from the districts where automobiles are manufactured sees this as a foul injustice to his industry, and some day we will appeal for justice. When that time comes I do not want my mouth to be closed, my plea to be answered, by the reply that "You voted for an unjust tax upon an industry that was not in your district." And that is what this vote is. I want to tell you a tax upon gross sales is nearly always unjust. It is unjust unless the article is a luxury or its producer has a monopoly. No man can justify the imposition of a 5 per cent tax upon gross sales, which represents three times the amount of the capital invested, or 15 per cent of direct taxes upon the capital invested in the business. The output of many plants per annum is many times greater than the capital. We higgle or haggle about an income tax. I would rather bear an excess profits tax of 90 per cent than to bear a 3 per cent tax on the property I own, and yet this is 15 per cent tax upon the capital of many of these concerns. Some automobiles are a luxury. If you frame this bill to make it apply to only the automobiles that are luxuries, I will vote for it, but not for the autotruck and autowagon, and the common automobile that the common man uses. Even in war we ought to preserve the principle of equality of taxation as to all legitimate, useful, and necessary industries.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] I wish to yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. HULBERT. Will you let my amendment be read for information?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HULBERT: Page 25, lines 22 and 23, and page 26, lines 4 and 5, after the word "automobiles," strike out "automobile trucks, automobile wagons."

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SMITH of Michigan: Page 26, after the word "and," at the end of line 6, add the following:

"Provided further, That no sale tax shall apply to any business, or be imposed thereon, when the business to be so taxed shall not have shown any net profit or earning during the preceding year or period for which such business is to be taxed."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, what is that amendment?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Read it again.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment again.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. KITCHIN. I would like to ask how much time is left. I thought it was exhausted long ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] has five minutes, according to the figures at the desk.

Mr. KITCHIN. All right.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I would not vote for a tax on the automobile industry that I would not vote for on any other legitimate industry. It is not fair to impose a tax upon that business of 5 per cent and leave out the locomotives, or the passenger cars, or any other prosperous industry. If you imposed that tax simply because the industry was prosperous, I would ask you to look over the Standard Oil Co., and to look over the mail-order houses, and the International Harvester Co. I want to ask you, as a business proposition, whether or not you are in favor, or any reasonable man would be in favor, of imposing a tax upon a business that did not earn any profit? And that is all there is to the amendment I present. We have heard the automobile business compared here with the musical industries, and with the cigar industries, and with the jewelry industries. We have heard the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] say that the automobile was not a necessity. If he had gone out in the country and observed the various uses to which they are put, or if he were engaged in business of any kind requiring transportation, or if he would even go down here to the end of Pennsylvania Avenue, in this city of Washington, he would see great trucks there, each one doing the business of three or four teams of horses drawing dirt out of a cellar. Would he think that automobile truck or motor car was a luxury and to be compared with the jewelry business or the cigar business or with a Victrola? That is not all the kind of uses to which it is put. And I am willing to present this amendment and vote for it and have it apply to any other business that does not make a profit, because I am for the business of the United States and I am in favor of the manufacturing industry. I want the manufacturers to prosper, as I do every other business in this country. I want every business to make a profit, and if it does not make any profit it ought not to pay a tax on its gross sales, because then you drive it out of business and you disturb and destroy the business. If a man is going to be taxed and can not make anything in that business, he will take his money out of it and put it into some securities or investments or into some other place where his profit, interest, or investment will be certain. You are asking him to go into some uncertain business. It is a tax on the business. Then, why not be fair and tax all business alike? There are over 400 of these concerns in the United States that have not made any profit, and they have sold their next year's output without regard to this 5 per cent tax. This 5 per cent tax is more than they can stand, and is more than they have made. You brought in this bill without any hearings by the committee or proper consideration. At first I thought that course was justifiable on account of immediate urgency to get needed money to prepare for the prosecution of the war. We are floating $2,000,000,000 bonds now, and we have plenty of money. We get paid for our time here and we ought to stay and submit a fair bill, one that will tax industry when it will stand it, if that be deemed necessary, and do justice to all our people. That is the way to do it. That would not do injury to any man or any business. We can afford to be fair. We can never afford to be unfair. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. HULBERT].

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will again be reported.

The amendment was again read.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

(b) Upon all musical instruments sold——

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the balance of the title be read, and that all debate on the title and amendments thereto be closed in 30 minutes after it is read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that debate on paragraph (b) and all amendments thereto shall terminate at the end of 30 minutes.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I think more time than that should be granted.

Mr. KITCHIN. I said the balance of the title.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was misinformed. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the balance of this section shall be read, and that the debate——

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I understood that the gentleman from North Carolina asked that the whole title be read. The Chairman said "section."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is just getting the facts in relation to that in order to put a correct statement of the request. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the reading of the balance of this title, to carry you down to Title VII, at the bottom of page 29, all debate on this title and the amendments thereto close in 30 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the balance of this section be read.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. How far?

Mr. KITCHIN. Down to section 601, page 28. We are reading this bill by sections.

The CHAIRMAN. Down to section 601. Is there any request in connection with that?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; just reading the section.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. MEEKER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, can amendments be offered?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, the items in this section are entirely separate from each other. Would it not be better to allow amendments to be offered to the paragraphs?

Mr. KITCHIN. As each amendment is offered, we will dispose of that before we go to other amendments.

Mr. MANN. Then you would jump from one paragraph to another.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the request.

The CHAIRMAN. The request is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

(b) Upon all musical instruments sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer for more than $10 each, and upon piano players, graphophones, phonographs, talking machines, and records used in connection with any musical instrument, piano player, graphophone, phonograph, or talking machine, sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold; and

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MEEKER: Strike out the word "and," in line 14, page 26, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Provided, That the tax of 5 per cent shall not be collected until the manufacturers of the articles herein enumerated shall have earned a profit of 8 per cent upon the actual capital invested. For the purpose of this paragraph 'actual capital invested' means (1) actual cash paid in, (2) the actual cash value at the time of the payment of assets other than cash paid in, and (3) paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in their business."

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, the same principle applies in this case as to the other, this amendment being the same as the one offered by the gentleman from Michigan, and which was accepted. The same principle should apply to all these lines of industry on which this extra tax has been paid. When the committee switches from the tax on excess profits to a tax on gross sales they have adopted a policy which, if permitted to go without restriction, may mean, and probably will mean, the absolute wiping out of many of the industries so taxed.

This amendment which is offered here should, I believe, be offered to every paragraph that will be read here if this is adopted. Then the House can say to these men on whom this third tax is to be levied that they shall have at least a fighting chance of 8 per cent profit before this additional tax is placed upon them.

I do not think we need take very much time in the discussion of the amendment, because we are discussing a principle instead of a specific case. If this policy can be put into effect I think the men who have rightfully protested against this gross-sales tax which has been placed upon them, or which would be placed upon them under this title, can feel that at least it will be possible for them to continue in business before they are called upon to pay this tax which the other industries will not pay.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEEKER. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I have been wondering whether the adoption of this amendment will mean that designing corporations or designing business men might not be able to avoid the tax by increasing salaries or increasing expenses?

Mr. MEEKER. If I thought that that safeguard were not provided I would not have offered the amendment.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Would it be possible by advancing salaries or by juggling accounts to deprive the Government of revenue under this amendment?

Mr. MEEKER. I will ask the gentleman if that would not apply to the amendment already adopted in regard to automobiles?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I put the question because the gentleman and others have inveighed against the tax on gross sales. Some people are of the opinion that a tax on gross sales would be a very equitable tax if carried out everywhere in good faith and in proportion. To make exceptions in a tax bill of this kind such as the gentleman proposes in his amendment, and such as the Doremus amendment provides in the case of automobiles, might not be so fair a system.

Mr. MEEKER. I am against taxing gross sales, regardless——

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I hope the gentleman does not think I am in favor of any of these taxes. I simply realize that we have got to make up a budget of $1,800,000,000.

Mr. MEEKER. We have been told that thousands of times—I might almost say one billion eight hundred million times. We are not objecting to raising the tax, but the how of the thing is what we are discussing. But when you propose to raise a tax on a man's gross sales, if the 5 per cent tax on his gross sales is going to abolish his profits, you have abolished the man so far as that industry is concerned, and that is what we are talking about. We know we have got to have that $1,800,000,000. We have been warned about that and have been assured that we must be patriots, but that does not abolish the thing that we are now contending for, namely, a system of taxation that will not destroy a man's business. If you will put this 5 per cent gross tax on some of these lines of business we know that some of these men will be wiped out of business, for already they are not making any profit, but are struggling for their lives; and the significant thing about the speech of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] was that he only selected a few automobile companies that we know to be prosperous and that would live even under this tax, but he failed to say anything about the 400 automobile manufacturers who would be wiped off the earth. Now, the same thing is true with reference to the jewelry business. A jewelry man came here the other day protesting against this great tax. He said, "I can live. It will mean a burden to me, but it will wipe out my competitors." It is for that reason that this amendment should be adopted throughout.

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. DILL. Reserving the right to object, I have an amendment.

Mr. HULBERT. Reserving the right to object, I have two amendments. May I have seven minutes?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will endeavor to accommodate the gentlemen.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DILL: Page 26, strike out lines 7 and 8.

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, the other day I was termed anarchistic because I proposed an amendment by which the incomes of men which will be taxed would be made public the same as their investments now are. To-day, at the risk of being called impractical and sentimental, I dare to speak against taxing those instruments which, as somebody has so beautifully said, "make the common air blossom with melody." I have offered an amendment by which I distinguish between musical instruments by which the hand, the brain, and the skill of an individual produce music and musical instruments by which machines produce music. The two lines which I have moved to strike out refer to musical instruments that are manipulated by the hand and brain of an individual. The amount of revenue which that tax will produce is so small in comparison with the injury it will do that I think the amendment should be adopted.

Badly as this Government needs money with which to finance the war, I think it is a mistake to raise it by taxing the instruments which produce music. Such a tax will bring but a small return in comparison with the injury it will do. I am not a musician. I know little, if anything, about its technique or composition, but I do know something of its power in the hearts and lives of men. There never was a time when the American people needed the inspiriting influence of music more than they do now. Why tax the source and thereby discourage its production?

One of the great newspapers of New York, the Evening Mail, has recently called attention to the fact that before the French Revolution the French Government laid a tax on windows, and that one of the marked results was to discourage windows which let the light of day into the homes of the people. It points out further that music is one of the windows of the soul. Shall we discourage the opening of those windows which let such wondrous light into the souls of men and women?

When the infant child first breathes the breath of life its soul is in a crystal case darkened by the blinds of unconsciousness pulled low on every side. The mother by her caresses, her lullabies, and her thousands of indescribable attentions first slightly lifts the shades to let in the light of consciousness and love. Then the father helps to lift them a little more. Then relatives and friends lift them still higher. Then the teacher plays her part and helps let the light of knowledge in, but ever and again music comes to clarify and cheer the life, first of the little child, then of the youth, the man and maid, their home, their family. Then on the way down the other side of the hill of life it gives its solace and its joy and beautifies old age as nothing else can do. To every normal human being of every age and of every condition music expresses thoughts and feelings that neither language, painting, nor sculpture can. I am opposed to doing anything to hinder the production of music. [Applause.]

In the words of the editorial to which I have referred, "America needs music more now than it ever did before in its history.

Music can be made a great unifying, rousing, and inspiring force in the great crisis in which we are living. It can be made to promote patriotism, to stimulate the devotion, to focus the spirit of the Nation."

I want to express the hope that one of the benefits and rewards which will come out of this war, and I fear these benefits will be all too few, will be a new national tune—a tune to which all Americans will respond. Every people have their favorite songs and tunes, songs and tunes which are expressive of and harmonize with their tendencies and their temperament. Governmental rulers and musical leaders sometimes select anthems and songs which they think appropriate, but which too often do not touch the hearts and souls of the common folks. But no folk song ever fails to touch the heartstrings of all. The Irish, the Scotch, the Welsh, the French—in fact, the people of every nationality, including our own Americans—love and sing their folk songs regardless of musical critics or governmental sanction. It seems that it is in war times that this tendency flowers in its fullest form.

Our Yankee Doodle, like Topsy, just grew into the hearts of our Revolutionary patriots after some English troops had played it in derision of the Colonials in 1755. Dixie was written and first sung and placed by Uncle Dan Emmet, a northern man of Ohio, whom I knew personally when I was a boy. It took such a hold on the South that even to this day it is as dear to the soul of every southerner as anything he knows. In 1898, for want of something better, our soldier boys took up the rollicking tune of There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town To-night, and it became a real part of that war. In the beginning of this world war we are told that English soldiers seized upon Tipperary, an Irish tune, and made it their very own. I do not know what tune will be adopted or is yet to be created which will cheer our boys as they march away to this war, but I am sure there will be some tune which will seem to spring from their very hearts and to give expression to their purposes, and I predict it will not be taken from any opera or cantata, but will be the product of the brain of some one who feels and knows their natures in an intimate way. With such history behind us and such hopes ahead, I protest most earnestly against the imposition of this tax.

I am opposed to laying any tax that will tend to discourage the production of music by the human mind and the human hand, and it seems to me that if we must have this tax on musical instruments we can well afford to distinguish between the instruments that make music by means of machines and the instruments that make music by means of the human hand and the human brain. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HULBERT: Page 26, line 13, after the word "two," strike out "five" and insert "two and one-half."

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, the illogical and indiscriminate theory upon which certain portions of this bill was framed has been heretofore presented by various Members, of unclouded vision, discerning thought, and intelligible argument, whose careful analysis and forceful and scholarly presentation of the facts refute the charge made by at least one member of the committee, that those who had the temerity to protest against the destruction of legitimate business by ruthless legislation were unpatriotic ignoramuses.

A few moments ago I pointed out that, while the committee makes no distinction between the purposes for which automobiles, motor trucks, and motor vehicles may be employed, motor boats and other vessels used or intended to be used for trade are expressly exempt; yet the House refused to recognize the inconsistency of the application of this principle and voted down my amendment to except automobile trucks and automobile wagons used or intended to be used for trade.

So the proposed tax on all musical instruments sold for more than $10 each, and upon piano players, graphophones, phonographs, talking machines, and so forth, is but another evidence of the fact that the committee has simply adopted as its policy the slogan, "The need of revenue justifies any means for raising it."

The war in Europe is ending its third year, but only beginning so far as our active participation is concerned. We live to learn, and yet we have not sufficiently profited by our experiences to have learned to let the industries which are the lifeblood of our Nation exist.

My understanding is that France, England, and Canada all in turn imposed a tax upon the manufacture and sale of musical instruments, only to find by the wisdom of experience the folly of their action, and repealed the tax.

Education is the impregnable bulwark upon which the security of a republic's happiness and prosperity is founded. At a time when American genius has dedicated its time and talent to the noble principle of placing American music upon the lofty plane established by Beethoven, Goethe, Schiller, Von Wagner, and Strauss, one would expect the great American Congress to recognize the distinction between educational opportunities and the commercial advantages connected with the sale of musical instruments.

Fifty-six thousand pianos are used in music schools and colleges and by music teachers. Shall their replacement or the extension of our musical educational system be penalized by a 5 per cent tax?

Moreover, 85 per cent of all the pianos sold are purchased by people of moderate means, upon whom this tax will fall heaviest.

Again, the cost of metals necessary to the production of musical instruments has increased nearly 300 per cent, and with the increased cost of labor, now leaves a very small margin of profit. Pianos are sold under such conditions that the tax can not in a great many cases be passed onto the purchaser; an enormous number of pianos are sold on the installment plan, which imposes another excessive penalty upon the piano manufacturer who must carry paper for a long term and is actually compelled to pay over his first payment or perhaps advance the amount of the tax to the Government, and should the customer fail to make his payments, necessitating the resale of the instrument, as I read the language used, it does not except the imposition and collection of the payment of another tax upon such resale.

Talking machines have now come to be recognized as the most successful method of learning foreign languages, and their inclusion also places a 5 per cent penalty upon everyone seeking that method of instruction.

Prior to the war approximately 75 per cent of all of the brass instruments used in America were imported from France. The conditions created by the war stimulated American manufacturers to virtually build up a new industry. One concern which I have in mind has contracted to supply the Government with the instruments to equip the bands which will be sent to the trenches with the Army raised by the selective-draft law. This contract was taken upon a 10 per cent basis with no guaranty by the Government upon the wage question, increase of material, and so forth, which have already made a serious inroad upon the expected profit. The imposition of a 5 per cent tax makes the performance of the contract at any profit extremely hazardous.

There are dozens of similar illustrations, but one which I particularly wish to bring to the attention of the committee is the situation which this provision creates with respect to the exportation of musical instruments. There has been introduced, and will be presently considered, the Webb export bill, designed in its purpose to aid American manufacturers to secure a strong hold in the Central, South American, and West Indian countries. France, for instance, has suffered no diminution in the output of musical instruments; but this bill places a handicap tax of 5 per cent upon the American manufacturer competing in the export trade in what is a new field of commercial activity.

I contemplate the provisions of this section with a great deal of uneasiness for the commercial prosperity of a considerable portion of the district which I have the honor to represent. Nearly one-third of all the pianos manufactured in the United States are made in the twenty-first congressional district of New York. They are largely the cheaper grades, where the margin of profit is smallest. And these manufacturers may be made the victims of a species of competition, aided by this 5 per cent tax provision, which the larger manufacturers can, perhaps, assume to pay; so that in the end, by driving out the small manufacturer, a substantial monopoly will be created that will thwart the musical ambitions of those who in the future are unable to regard the purchase of a musical instrument as anything but a luxury.

Hence I have offered two amendments which I hope will appeal to the sense of justice of a substantial majority of the membership of this House, and I trust you will vote for their adoption and avert the disaster with which this great educational industry is threatened. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. HULBERT].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. HULBERT: Page 26, line 12, after the word "articles," insert:

"Provided, however, That no tax shall be levied and collected upon any articles herein enumerated in subdivision (b) of section 600 intended for and actually exported beyond the limits of the United States during the pendency of this act."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, I ask now that the amendment I have offered be read and a vote taken upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. MEEKER: Strike out the word "and," in line 14 of page 26, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Provided, That the tax of 5 per cent shall not be collected until the manufacturers of the articles herein enumerated shall have earned a profit of 8 per cent upon the actual capital invested.

"For the purpose of this paragraph actual capital invested means (1) actual cash paid in; (2) the actual cash value at the time of payment of assets other than cash paid in; and (3) paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MEEKER) there were 35 ayes and 58 noes.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

(d) Upon all positive moving-picture films (containing a picture ready for projection) sold or leased by the manufacturer, producer, or importer a tax equivalent to 1 cent per linear foot; and.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. BORLAND: Page 26, line 21, after the word "foot," insert:

"Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to films used solely for advertising purposes."

Mr BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I want to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to this amendment, for I have an idea that he will accept it. The purpose of this paragraph is to impose a tax on picture films that contain pictures. My idea is that such films as are used for advertising solely are intended to come under the paragraph that levies a tax on advertising other than newspapers and periodicals. In fact, they will come under it. All moving-picture-advertising films will be taxed as advertisements, as billboards, and other things are taxed. It is not intended, I take it, to tax them as they do a picture ready for projection.

Mr. KITCHIN. The purpose of the committee is to tax films, whether they are used for advertising or not. We can not distinguish and ought not to do it. A man that sells or leases a film might say that he was doing it for advertising purposes. I think they ought to be taxed.

Mr. BORLAND. Then that is double taxation, if it is intended that they shall pay a tax once as a film and then once as an advertisement.

Mr. KITCHIN. If that is true, if we can argue it is double taxation because it is taxed in that way, there is not an item in this bill that is not doubly taxed, because there is a tariff upon every single article in the bill.

Mr. BORLAND. There is tariff upon this, and that would be treble of taxation.

Mr. KITCHIN. Some of them are taxed so that it is quadruple taxation.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, these films are not designed to be exhibited to attract people to pay an admission fee, but they are paid for by the advertiser. Nobody pays to go to see them. The advertiser pays for their being displayed, just the same as he does in a billboard or a circular.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I am not sure that I catch the meaning of this, but would the film manufactured for educational purposes for a display of something in an educational institution fall under this tax?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; it would. I will state that this covers every film that has a picture on it, whether displayed for profit or free. My amendment simply excludes those that are displayed as advertisements and that are taxed as advertisements.

Mr. FESS. The Agricultural Department has an immense amount of work in that way. Would this take that in?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; this would apply to that kind of film. What I am discussing in my amendment is that these particular films manufactured for advertising purposes are all taxed in that clause.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Could the gentleman give an estimate as to the average length of those advertisements?

Mr. BORLAND. No.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. A cent per linear foot, if it is 5,000 feet, would be a considerable tax.

Mr. BORLAND. As a matter of fact, the space occupied by one particular advertisement might not be very much, but the man who is manufacturing the film and getting the business of advertising for that particular film would use up the entire film. He would use up a great many thousand feet. It is exactly the same to him whether he uses 5 feet for a customer or 50 feet.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

(e) Upon any article commonly or commercially known as jewelry, whether real or imitation, sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer thereof, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold; and.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LONGWORTH: Page 26, line 25, after the word "and," insert: "Upon platinum used in whole or in part in the manufacture of jewelry sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer thereof, a tax equivalent to 250 per cent of the price for which so sold; and."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order upon that. I would like to ask whether or not the gentleman from North Carolina intends to make the point of order?

Mr. KITCHIN. I shall not make the point of order upon that if the gentleman does not want me to. I would like to hear the matter discussed.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I think no point of order will be made after discussion, if it be subject to a point of order.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I reserve a point of order.

Mr. KITCHIN. As I understand it, the gentleman asks this upon the theory that it is a war measure, pure and simple.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I do.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, reserving the point of order, awhile ago a question was raised as to the propriety of introducing an amendment to tax cotton. The question of germaneness was raised and the Chair held that the amendment was not germane, as no new item could be added to this tax bill. This amendment proposes to add a new item and is not germane under the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman will postpone his point of order. I might debate the point of order if it were made, but I do not think any gentleman, in view of the fact that this is offered purely as a war measure, will make the point of order.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Of course, I would much prefer to reserve the point of order in order that the gentleman may make his statement, because his statement will be equally as important as mine was respecting cotton. I reserve a point of order.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, this may seem to be a rather unusual, even extraordinary, amendment to offer to a bill to raise revenue, for it is offered frankly and purely for the purpose of destroying any revenue that may be raised upon platinum used in jewelry. This bill is introduced for the purpose of providing for the national defense, however, and it seems to me that this amendment is entirely in line with objects of the bill, because platinum is a necessary part of the national defense. Platinum to-day is an absolute necessity in the production of high explosives. Platinum is a necessity for making concentrated sulphuric acid, which is thereafter made into nitric acid. It is also an essential for the oxidation of ammonia to nitric acid, the method that is now being pursued in all the European countries in the manufacture of nitrates. Platinum in 1900 sold at about $10 an ounce. It was less than half the value of gold. To-day platinum sells at $100 an ounce and more. It has increased in value ten times. To-day it is worth six or seven times the value of gold, and why? Because platinum to-day is used in jewelry for setting precious stones and for other purposes. The platinum supply in this country is almost nothing. We produce no platinum here. We have to import it, and almost all of it comes from Russia. A very small portion comes from Colombia, but only an insignificant amount. The situation to-day in this country is that it is almost impossible to get platinum, because the entire output is used in the manufacture of jewelry. My amendment is to put a prohibitive tax on the use of platinum in jewelry. Our chemical laboratories throughout the country are having difficulty in getting any platinum. Our Government research bureaus are almost entirely without platinum, and the situation may soon arise, unless we pass a measure of this sort, where we will be in this country without an absolute and prime necessity for the manufacture of high explosives. Does it not seem a shame, gentlemen of the committee, that a fashionable fad, purely a fashionable fad, should bring this country to-day in a state where it may be without an absolute prime necessity for the national defense? A number of people have realized this situation—patriotic people. The Daughters of the American Revolution the other day in convention passed a resolution in which they said, after the wherases, showing the necessity for platinum in this country—

Resolved, That we, the delegates of the Daughters of the American Revolution, appeal to women and the men of America, and we pledge ourselves, to refuse to purchase or accept as gifts for the duration of the war jewelry and other articles made in whole or in part of platinum, so that all the available supplies of this precious metal shall be available for employment where they can do the greatest good in the service of our country.

And I have several other resolutions here from chemical societies, from the National Academy of Sciences, and others. Now, that is all very well as far as it goes, but it is not going to stop the insensate desire of some fashionable women of this country to buy platinum jewelry. Why, to-day the situation in Europe with regard to platinum is such that men and women are taking the platinum fillings out of their teeth and turning them over to the Government for the use of the Government in the national defense. I sincerely hope that I may have the cooperation of my colleague, the lady from Montana, in spreading this doctrine throughout the land. It seems to be plain, gentlemen, engaged as we are in raising revenue to supply provisions for the national defense, that in a matter of this concern it is not our highest duty to see to it that the use of platinum hereafter in jewelry shall be stopped.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I ask unanimous consent to insert these various resolutions in my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolutions are as follows:

Resolution passed by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Whereas the metal platinum is of the greatest importance for scientific and industrial work necessary for the constructive, productive, and defensive work of the country; and

Whereas there is a great shortage in the supplies of platinum available for those purposes, in a very great measure as a result of the extensive use of platinum for jewelry and for other articles of luxury: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates of the Daughters of the American Revolution, appeal to the women and the men of America, and we pledge ourselves, to refuse to purchase or accept as gifts for the duration of the war jewelry and other articles made in whole or in part of platinum, so that all the available supplies of this precious metal shall be available for employment where they can do the greatest good in the service of our country.

—

Resolution passed by the American Chemical Society.

That the attention of the National Council of Defense be called to the scarcity of platinum under existing conditions, and to the great need of the metal, more particularly in the prosecution of the war. We hold that the use of platinum at this time in the production of articles of ornament is contrary to public welfare. Therefore we recommend that an appeal be made to the women of the United States to discourage the use of platinum in jewelry, and that all citizens be urged to avoid its use for jewelry, for photographic paper, and for any purpose whatever, save in scientific research and in the making of articles for industrial need.

—

Resolutions passed by the platinum committee of the jewelers' vigilance committee.

Whereas the Secretary of Commerce has requested the platinum committee of the jewelers' vigilance committee to bring to the attention of the jewelry trade of the United States the advisability of conserving platinum, in order that our Government may have larger supplies to draw upon for war purposes; and

Whereas the jewelry trade has already clearly expressed its desire and determination to assist our Government to the extent of its ability in bringing the war to a successful termination: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to discontinue and strongly recommend to all manufacturing and retail jewelers of the United States that they in a truly patriotic spirit discourage the manufacture, sale, and use of platinum in all bulky and heavy pieces of jewelry; and be it further

Resolved, That during the period of the war or until the present supplies of platinum shall be materially augmented, we pledge ourselves to discontinue and recommend that the jewelry trade discourage the use of all nonessential platinum findings or parts of jewelry, such as scarfpin stems, pin tongues, joints, catches, swivels, spring rings, ear backs, etc., where gold would satisfactorily serve; and be it further

Resolved, That the jewelry trade encourage by all means in their power the use of gold in combination with platinum wherever proper artistic results may be obtained; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be handed to the Secretary of Commerce, to the trade press, and be sent to all our trade organizations and to the daily press, in order that they may have the widest possible dissemination.

—

Resolution passed by the National Academy of Sciences.

Whereas there is a great shortage in the supplies of platinum available for scientific and industrial purposes; and

Whereas the shortage is in very great measure due to the extensive use of platinum for jewelry and other articles of luxury: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the National Academy of Sciences in this critical situation, where all the resources of the Nation should be put to the use of those immediately active in the constructive, productive, and defensive work of the country, appeal to the women and the men of America to refuse to purchase or accept as gifts jewelry and other articles made in whole or in part of platinum, and thus to allow all the available supplies of the metal to be used where they can do the greatest good.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I reserved the point of order on this amendment because it seemed that it is a case on all fours with that of cotton, also a munition of war equally important to platinum. The Chair ruled the cotton amendment was not germane. While I believed it was germane and that it should have remained in the bill as a source of taxation, I shall not insist upon the point of order in regard to platinum, which I believe is necessary as a war measure.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order so as to have the ruling of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to discuss the point of order?

Mr. MANN. Well, I know if the Chair had examined the matter he would rule properly on it. If he had not——

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman withhold the point of order or make it?

Mr. MANN. Oh, I make it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] proposes to tax platinum in any of the forms in which it is introduced into the country at the amount indicated by the amendment——

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I submit this is not on all fours exactly with the cotton proposition ruled out of order this morning. It is an item which puts a tax of 5 per cent on the sale of articles commonly known as jewelry. My amendment puts an additional tax on the sale of a certain one of those articles manufactured into jewelry, to wit, platinum. It seems to me it is germane under the ruling of the Chair this morning, entirely germane to the paragraph, because platinum is an article of jewelry, and this is simply an addition to the tax imposed by this bill upon it. I regret that any gentleman should raise a point of order on this proposition, even as a test of the ruling of the Chair on cotton, because this is an absolute necessity, gentlemen. I am informed by the responsible officials of this Government that we are at straits to get any platinum in this country to-day.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. May I ask the gentleman from Ohio if platinum bears a duty of 5 per cent as——

Mr. LONGWORTH. I am glad the gentleman suggested that. In addition, we have imposed on all articles now on the free list, including platinum, a tax of 10 per cent. Therefore we will put an additional duty of 10 per cent on platinum. Platinum sells at $125 an ounce, which is the cheapest price for which it can be procured to-day.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, my friend from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] regrets that anyone should make a point of order upon the amendment. I regret that anyone should seek to use this measure, which is a revenue measure, in order to put any certain kind of business out of business. I quite agree with the gentleman from Ohio about the need of platinum, but there are a great many things connected with the war which we will have to correct by legislation, and I doubt very much the propriety of inserting in a revenue bill, supposed to be actually and purely for the purpose of raising revenue, a provision intended to stop business of any particular kind. There are a good many places where possibly it ought to be done, and I expect we will have some legislation which will cover this identical matter before we are through, giving the President rather complete power over such matters.

Mr. LONGWORTH. If the gentleman will yield there, I think the Government already has that power. The President has authority now to conscript such articles as this, but that will be only so far as our Government is concerned.

That would not help the situation with regard to the platinum now used by the manufacturers of sulphuric acid and other chemicals for which platinum is necessary.

Mr. MANN. I agree with the gentleman. I think the ladies ought to be encouraged. I hope the gentleman from Ohio, who is a substantial character in every respect and a great pet of the ladies, will suggest they turn over their platinum jewelry to the Government.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will agree to give no platinum jewelry to any of them.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. There is so much involved in this ruling that if the Chair has not already determined on the ruling I would like to make this comment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. As the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] has already suggested, we have in this bill a duty on platinum jewelry. This bill refers only to platinum that is used in jewelry. By this amendment the rate we have in the bill is raised. If we can not make an amendment of this kind, this bill would practically have to go through the House without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t."

Mr. MADDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman if there is not a tax on cotton products in this bill?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. There is the tariff rate.

Mr. MADDEN. And the same thing that is true with respect to cotton prevails as to this.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Will the gentleman permit me to ask the gentleman from Illinois, Did you propose to amend the tax this morning on cotton?

Mr. MADDEN. Just exactly as we propose to amend this particular tax.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The amendment offered this morning, I will say to the gentleman, was an amendment dealing with facilities furnished by public utilities, advertising, and insurance. There was not anything in the section or the following section relating to cotton.

Mr. LENROOT. It was a new title.

Mr. MONTAGUE. It was technically a new section, a new number, but it was a substantial attempt to amend a section which dealt with a wholly different topic. It is parliamentary legerdemain to call it a new section, for, to repeat, the amendment neither related to the preceding nor succeeding section.

Mr. MADDEN. Is not the same question involved in this?

Mr. MONTAGUE. Here you deal with the question of jewelry, and a substantial element of jewelry is platinum. If you had been dealing this morning with an agricultural schedule, you might have dealt with cotton as being clearly embraced in such a schedule. But you were not doing that, and I do not think there is any analogy between the two amendments.

I beg the gentleman's pardon for taking his time.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I agree with my friend from Virginia [Mr. MONTAGUE]. The cases are not parallel at all. Here is an amendment to a specific paragraph relating to the rates obtaining therein. In the other case there was a new title offered in reference to an item, which, if taxed at all, is taxed in the bill in altogether a different manner and on a different principle, and there may be a question whether the tariff tax was any tax whatever. As I said before, unless we can make an amendment of this kind we can make no amendments whatever to the bill.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield? The subsection he refers to is jewelry?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Which is a manufactured article?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Will it cover any subject of raw material out of which jewelry is made?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I should think so—jewelry proper. Does the gentleman mean if it would cover the raw material separately?

Mr. FESS. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman's amendment does not cover the raw material separately. It applies to platinum alone.

Mr. FESS. It applies to platinum that is not now jewelry.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I ask that my amendment may be again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to call the Chair's attention to this fact, that there is no mention of a new item or object of taxation. There is no change of method by which jewelry is taxed as such and platinum along with other jewelry. It is simply adding a higher tax on platinum than any other article of jewelry.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will.

Mr. FESS. I am not clear. With platinum used in the manufacture of jewelry, is not platinum the raw material?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Just as a diamond is. Jewelry usually means a precious stone of some sort set in some durable material, which in this case is platinum.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It applies to jewelry made up.

Mr. FESS. Is platinum raw material or jewelry?

Mr. GOOD. If it is used as a munition, it is jewelry.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. That is a very sensible answer.

Mr. TILSON. Suppose that there was very little platinum, say a dollar's worth, used in setting a very valuable piece of jewelry.

Mr. LONGWORTH. As platinum is worth $175 an ounce, the gentleman's supposition is impossible. A watch chain—and there are a number of watch chains that I have seen made entirely of platinum—is an article of jewelry. It may be made of platinum, and in that way the tax under my amendment is a higher tax than it would be if it was a gold chain.

Mr. TILSON. Are there not instances, though, where a very little platinum is used in the setting of a very valuable piece of jewelry? Would the entire piece of jewelry be taxed, although it contained an infinitesimal part of platinum? Would it all be taxed?

Mr. LONGWORTH. No; not the diamond, but the result of the prohibitory tax would be to prevent the platinum from being used for that purpose. That is all I desire to do. I do not want to make it possible to set diamonds or scarfpins in platinum.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will yield——

Mr. LONGWORTH. Yes——

Mr. MANN. Platinum is not sold as jewelry by itself. It is sold when it is used for setting precious stones. I say it is not sold for jewelry, but it may be in the case of watch chains. Platinum has taken the place in jewelry for gold in the setting of precious stones. Now there would be no tax at all on the platinum unless we taxed the whole thing. I am not sure that there would be any tax upon it.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Well, if it were sold for the purpose of making jewelry, bought by a jeweler, he would have to pay 250 per cent additional, which would drive it out. It would make the cost of the jewelry so high that it would not be used.

Mr. MANN. No. The gentleman's amendment provides that the manufacturer shall pay the tax. It may be manufacturer, producer, or importer. Now, then, the wholesale dealer who sold the platinum to the jewelry manufacturing concern is not the manufacturer of the platinum, or the importer of the platinum, or the producer of the platinum. When he sells it there is no tax on it.

Mr. LONGWORTH. You mean where the importer——

Mr. MANN. Of course, the gentleman followed the language in the bill?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Yes.

Mr. MANN. That is designed to put the tax on the manufacturer of jewelry when he sells the jewelry. The gentleman's design was to put the tax on the man who sells the platinum to the jewelry concern, not the jewelry concern that sells it to the retailer. But I do not think the gentleman's language will do it.

Mr. LONGWORTH. My design was to make the price of platinum so high to the jeweler that he would not buy it for that purpose.

Mr. MANN. That is the manufacturing jeweler?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The man who sells it is not the manufacturer or the producer of the platinum, and perchance he is not the importer of the platinum.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I would not be sure as to just what agencies the jeweler buys the platinum from. I presume the large manufacturing jeweler imports it.

Mr. MANN. Where does he import it from?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will say to the gentleman that negotiations are now going on, as I understand, on the part of the Jewelers' Association of New York to import the platinum that is now in France and pay something like $150 an ounce for it.

Mr. MANN. If they are taking the platinum out of the teeth of their wives and daughters I do not suppose they would be able to do it.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Those who take it out of their teeth do not do it for profit, but only to help the Government.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I would like to ask the gentleman from Ohio one question. Platinum is used, is it not, in surgical and optical and scientific instruments?

Mr. LONGWORTH. To some extent.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Then this taxation would not necessarily relate directly to the item which concerns only jewelry?

Mr. LONGWORTH. No. The gentleman misapprehends exactly what I am driving at. The reason why platinum is so high is on account of its use as jewelry, and the ladies who desire to have a large diamond tiara are not content now with one set in gold. That is too cheap. They want it to be as expensive as possible, and now that platinum has gone up to five or six times the value of gold, it becomes more desirable for that purpose, and that is the reason why it is difficult to get it for articles of necessity.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, on the point of order I call the attention of the Chair and the attention of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] to the last part of paragraph 3 of Rule XXI:

Nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly—

Not indirectly, but—directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

Now, this item of the bill relates exclusively to jewelry. Jewelry is a manufactured article, an article used for personal adornment. This amendment relates exclusively to platinum. Platinum is a raw material used in the manufacture of surgical instruments, optical instruments, and other scientific apparatus and also in the manufacture of jewelry. But it is not itself jewelry. This item, as I have said, relates exclusively to manufactured articles called "jewelry." These articles may contain gold or silver or platinum or they may contain neither. Platinum does not necessarily relate directly to the subject matter of this item of the bill. It can be used for other purposes than the manufacture of jewelry. It is a raw material.

Mr. MANN. I did not know; but is the gentleman familiar with the amendment, and does he know that it applies only to platinum used in the manufacture of jewelry?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes; but it is platinum, a raw material. It is not jewelry; and the item relates only to "jewelry," a manufactured article.

Mr. MANN. That is true, and the amendment relates only to the platinum used in the manufacture of jewelry and not to other things.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia). The Chair is very glad to have had the benefit of this discussion on the point of order. The present occupant of the chair has no desire to make any hair-splitting distinctions, but desires to base his ruling on the solid grounds of reason, and sufficient precedent.

This paragraph relates entirely to jewelry. Jewelry may be made from a number of things, gold, silver, precious stones, and other articles. Many of these articles may enter at the same time into the composition of some particular article of jewelry. The amendment of the gentleman from Ohio relates exclusively to the raw material, in this case platinum, and proposes a tax upon that raw material, not upon platinum jewelry. The Chair does not understand that it would be out of order to offer an amendment relating to platinum jewelry, but this amendment relates to the article platinum which is a raw product that is a possible component of jewelry. This section deals exclusively with jewelry. By way of illustration this bill might impose a tax upon ready-made clothes. Wool is a possible element of clothes, but it would hardly be argued, it seems to me, that it would be in order in connection with a tax on ready-made clothes to offer an amendment relating to the imposition of a tariff on imported wool. Yet, as the Chair understands this situation after such attention as he has been able to give it, such an amendment in the case suggested would be in order, provided the point of order to the pending amendment is overruled. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I offer a new amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment pending.

The CHAIRMAN. Does that amendment relate to this amendment?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. No; not to this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LONGWORTH: Page 26, line 25, after the word "and," insert: "Upon jewelry composed in whole or in part of platinum, sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer thereof, a tax equivalent to 250 per cent of the price for which so sold; and."

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will not press that amendment. I fully agree with the gentleman about the use of platinum. I think we ought to conserve it, but there are a great many articles of jewelry made up in retailers' hands in which there is a very small amount of platinum used, with very expensive precious stones. It is putting a rather hard burden upon those jewelers, many of whom can not reset the stones themselves, to have to return them to a manufacturer to take the stone out of the setting, because they can not even resell them back to the manufacturer.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Will the gentleman permit an interruption? Is it not true that the national-defense act empowers the Secretary of War to commandeer?

Mr. MANN. I do not know.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. I will say to the gentleman that it does.

Mr. MANN. I am willing to take the gentleman's word. I know the national-defense act gives a great deal of power, but I did not know about this. But the retail dealer who has a $500 diamond or a $50 diamond—I do not think they set many $50 diamonds alone in platinum—who has that stone and setting can not sell it back to the manufacturer. He can not dispose of it in any way whatever except by himself, perhaps awkwardly, taking the stone out of the setting.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. Is it not often a fact that they use very little platinum on the gold, just enough to give it the color of platinum?

Mr. MANN. No; I do not think so. I do not know. Of course, a few years ago gold was used almost exclusively for the setting of precious stones. The fad grew up to use platinum. As soon as platinum became more expensive than gold everybody wanted jewelry set in platinum. We ourselves in the House here bought some when we made presents to some of these nice young ladies who were getting married; but I do not think we ought to endeavor, by crude legislation, perhaps absolutely to ruin retail dealers in jewelry without gaining anything by it.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Ordinarily I would defer to the opinion of the gentleman from Illinois, but in a case like this it seems to me that the urgency of the situation rises very far above the convenience of manufacturing jewelers.

Mr. MANN. This does not relate to manufacturing jewelers.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Or retail jewelers, for that matter. They can very easily unset those precious stones which are set in platinum and substitute gold or some alloy for that purpose. I am informed that new alloys have been invented which are just as beautiful, just as imperishable, and look exactly like platinum. Under ordinary circumstances I would agree that such an amendment as this ought not to go into a revenue bill; but as this revenue bill is designed for the national defense, and platinum is absolutely necessary as a means of national defense, which we are practically without to-day except in our jewelry stores, they can afford to stand the loss, if there be a loss, in the interest of all the people of America.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that all debate on this amendment of the gentleman from Ohio close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, this amendment applies to platinum jewelry, and it reaches jewelry in the hands of the manufacturer or producer or wholesaler. Every government engaged in this great war, except the United States, has taken steps to conserve the supply of platinum. It is an absolute necessity in the manufacture of explosives. You can not make any explosives without it, and you can not fight this war without explosives. At the present time there is only one agency in the United States endeavoring to restrict the use of platinum in jewelry, and that is the jewelers themselves who have passed a resolution agreeing that during the period of this war, or until the present supply of platinum is materially augmented, they are going to pledge themselves to discourage the use of the nonessential platinum findings or parts of jewelry. I will put the resolutions in the RECORD.

This is the only attempt in the United States to conserve the platinum here now, and an inventory is now being taken all over the United States in an attempt to locate the supplies of platinum and ascertain how much there is in the United States at this time.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. LEHLBACH. I have a letter here written by the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Redfield. Will the gentleman read it, as I will not have the time.

Mr. RAINEY. I have a letter from Mr. Redfield myself. I know the attitude of Mr. Redfield. The Department of Commerce says that this is an industry, and it is the business of the department to encourage all industries. Therefore, inasmuch as there appears to be no need for a larger supply of platinum at the present time than that on hand, this department of the Government takes the position that it ought to continue to encourage this industry as it encourages all other industries. The position taken by the Department of Commerce, however, cuts no figure in my judgment at the present time. The only platinum source of supply we have is Russia, and we do not know how much they have there. We do know that during the progress of the war they have prohibited the export of platinum to any part of the world, even to the United States. Now that we are at war, fighting with Russia as an ally, it is expected that the embargo on platinum will be raised so as to permit it to come from Russia to the United States. But that is no reason why in the interest of those who want to buy expensive jewelry we should not adopt this amendment. Nobody wanted platinum jewelry until it became more expensive than gold. To-day an ounce of platinum is worth five or six times as much as an ounce of gold, and so the very rich who can afford to buy the most expensive jewelry are demanding platinum. If they still demand platinum and this amendment passes they will pay 250 per cent more than they are paying for it now, and that will go into this war fund which we are establishing by this bill. It may not entirely cut off the supply of platinum in the jewelry industry, because the very rich may still insist upon it; but if they do, they are paying part of the great war fund we are creating by this bill.

The mere fact that the jewelers in this country want to continue this particularly profitable business during this war and that the very rich want to continue buying it is no reason why we should not conserve it, and I hope the amendment will be adopted. [Applause.]

Under the permission to extend my remarks I herewith print the resolutions adopted by the jewelers and the comments of the Secretary of Commerce thereon. I print it for the purpose of showing upon what a slender thread hangs this important product in this hour of national peril:

JEWELERS TO SAVE PLATINUM.

Having in mind the present needs of American industries, educational institutions, and sciences for platinum and the possible future requirements of the Government, the jewelers' vigilance committee, after giving the subject careful thought, at the request of the Secretary of Commerce, has adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas the Secretary of Commerce has requested the platinum committee of the jewelers' vigilance committee to bring to the attention of the jewelry trade of the United States the advisability of conserving platinum in order that our Government may have larger supplies to draw upon for war purposes; and

"Whereas the jewelry trade has already clearly expressed its desire and determination to assist our Government to the extent of its ability in bringing the war to a successful termination: Be it

"Resolved, That we pledge curselves to discontinue and strongly recommend to all manufacturing and retail jewelers of the United States that they in a truly patriotic spirit discourage the manufacture, sale, and use of platinum in all bulky and heavy pieces of jewelry. Be it further

"Resolved, That during the period of the war, or until the present supplies of platinum shall be materially augmented, we pledge ourselves to discontinue and recommend that the jewelry trade discourage the use of all nonessential platinum findings or parts of jewelry, such as scarfpin stems, pin tongues, joints, catches, swivels, spring rings, ear backs, etc., where gold would satisfactorily serve. Be it further

"Resolved, That the jewelry trade encourage by all means in their power the use of gold in combination with platinum wherever proper artistic results may be obtained. Be it further.

"Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be handed to the Secretary of Commerce, to the trade press, and be sent to all our trade organizations and to the daily press, in order that they may have the widest possible dissemination."

In commenting upon these resolutions Secretary Redfield made the following statement:

"This is wise, patriotic, and unselfish action, for which the merchants and manufacturers are highly to be commended. It will take time to work out fully its beneficial effects to the country. It will disarm adverse criticism of the jewelry trade in this respect and lead to general cooperation with them. Such is the earnest desire of the department. The jewelry business is a part, and an important part, of our commerce. It has acted fairly; its normal needs should be considered fairly. Platinum is required for many uses. Every such use has its just claim. None may urge an exclusive demand. All have a part in our common country, and the Government of that country seeks through the Department of Commerce to secure for all a due and proper share. To this end the considerate course taken by the jewelers will directly contribute."

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes in order to have read a letter from the Secretary of Commerce.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, May 21, 1917.

Mr. MEYER D. ROTHSCHILD,
Chairman Platinum Committee,
Jewelers' Vigilance Committee, New York, N. Y.

MY DEAR SIR: In response to your inquiry let me say that a supply of platinum is available to the Government from several sources: First, from domestic stocks, of which a census is now being made and which it is known can be increased if need be; second, from stock now held by the Government which is available for sale to Government laboratories needing it for Government uses and to outside laboratories at the market price with the understanding that it is to be used for the purposes of the Government; third, from stocks existing abroad known to be available.

No campaign said to be based upon the alleged present needs of the Government can therefore now be properly made looking to the restriction of the use of platinum in jewelry further than the jewelry trade have already voluntarily gone, as expressed in the resolutions adopted by them and which this department has published with its approval.

Yours, very truly,

WILLIAM C. REDFIELD,
Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KITCHIN) there were—ayes 42, noes 54.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 36, line 25, after the word "sold," insert a colon and add the following:

"Provided, That from the tax which would be imposed upon the manufacturer, producer, or importer of jewelry, whether real or imitation, there shall be deducted the amount of tax paid under this subdivision upon any part or parts of such jewelry."

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this is no amendment to escape any tax. It is no amendment to rid an industry of its share of taxation or the burden of this war. An examination of the bill reveals the fact that tires of automobiles are taxed separately, so that when the manufacturer receives the tire he no longer pays the tax. He pays a tax on the automobile. So double taxation for the automobile manufacturer is not in evidence in this bill.

I do not think it ought to be in evidence for any manufacturer in any industry. But this amendment offered by me is designed to relieve the manufacturer of jewelry of double taxation. I have illustrated it in this way: When a manufacturer makes a pendant he pays the tax. He sells it to another manufacturer, who in turn puts some work in it, perhaps adds a chain, and when he comes to sell it he pays a tax of 5 per cent on the selling price. That is double taxation, and I submit to the fair minds of this committee that it is not just.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman give a case in point, like the repairing of the watch, for instance? I think I see the gentleman's point.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I illustrate it by the manufacture of the pendant. I sell it to you and you put a chain on it. I pay the tax and you pay the tax, and so it is taxed twice. I sell you a ring, which is taxed, and you put a diamond into it; the diamond is taxed and the ring is again taxed—double taxation.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it taxed until it is sold?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. It is taxed at the time it is sold, which is double taxation.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is there any tax on the repairs of jewelry?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. No; it is in the case of the manufacturer. If the principle adopted in the matter of the tire and the automobile industry is to be followed, I think this is a fair case, worthy of consideration.

Mr. MANN. What the gentleman wants to cover is a case where the manufacturer produces, say, gold rings without the setting.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. That is it.

Mr. MANN. And he sells them to some jeweler who puts in the setting.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Yes. There are many, many manufacturers——

Mr. MANN. Undoubtedly there are lots in that business. Is there any way of keeping these differentiated so as to know when the tax is paid?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. It is provided for in the administrative part of the law by monthly returns to the collector of internal revenue.

Mr. WALSH. Do I understand that the gentleman desires to avoid double taxation?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Exactly.

Mr. WALSH. Does the gentleman think this is the only place in the bill where double taxation is imposed?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Not at all.

Mr. WALSH. Does the gentleman not think that this is rather a poor place to try it out to avoid double taxation—on jewelry and matters of that kind?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I have offered my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Rhode Island.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this amendment, and I think it ought to be adopted. It is the only method by which you can prevent double taxation in this industry, which would be very much injured if the bill remains as it is now written. During the Civil War, I am informed by my colleague on my right, it was the custom to provide just such an amendment as this is, covering a similar case. I think the amendment ought to be adopted, and I should have offered the amendment if the gentleman who is a member of the committee had not offered it.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I hope that this amendment will not be adopted. It is entirely different from the automobile case in several particulars, especially in the administrative features. In the case of the automobile tire there can be but one tire and you can keep a check on such sales and administer such a provision, while in the jewelry business there are hundreds of different kinds of operations. Each one is sold separately. The gentleman from Rhode Island illustrated a case of a pendant that is sold. If it is sold to a jeweler by a manufacturer, he puts on that price, and then another man would sell him the chain. It pays the 5 per cent tax. If the jeweler can sell each one separately, as very frequently he does, most frequently, of course, he adds it on to the price that the purchaser has to pay, and if he sells the pendant and the chain both together, he will add on the 5 per cent for the pendant and the 5 per cent for the chain.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Would the sale of precious stones be covered by this?

Mr. KITCHIN. Separately, no. I should not think it would.

Mr. MANN. Suppose a wholesale jeweler sells some diamonds, will that sale be covered by this paragraph?

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not so understand.

Mr. MANN. Suppose the wholesaler sells some diamonds.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Uncut?

Mr. MANN. No; cut.

Mr. KITCHIN. I am not clear about that, whether the diamond itself, without being set, would be covered by this or not.

Mr. MANN. Suppose he sells a setting for a necklace without the stones being sold?

Mr. KITCHIN. I think, then, whoever puts that necklace together would be the manufacturer of that jewelry. It says the manufacturer or importer.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman from North Carolina think, then, that the jewelry to come under the terms of this paragraph must be completed jewelry, ready to go into the hands of the final purchaser?

Mr. KITCHIN. I am not clear about that.

Mr. MANN. I have had some little experience in purchasing jewelry, partly for this House. Here is the situation: Every retail jeweler in a large city with much of an establishment buys settings. He buys the stones. He takes the stones out of one setting, which he may have purchased, and puts them in other settings to suit the purchaser. Now, plainly, if the jeweler has had to pay the 5 per cent tax on his setting and the 5 per cent tax on his stones, when he sells the completed article he ought not to have to pay the 5 per cent tax again. That seems to me perfectly patent. Therefore I do not see how the amendment of the gentleman from Rhode Island can do any damage. If they do not pay the 5 per cent tax when they purchase the precious stones to begin with and the setting to begin with, then this does not affect them.

Mr. KITCHIN. Here is what would be the effect of this amendment: As I understand the amendment from the gentleman's discussion of it, here is a chain which is a finished product and here is a pendant. The jeweler buys the pendant from one man and the chain from another. A person comes and wants to buy it from the retailer. The retailer puts both together, and it is said that he had to pay a double tax because the pendant has been taxed and the chain has been taxed, but those are two separate pieces of jewelry.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. They are separate, but they are ready for the jeweler to put together; neither one can be used without the other.

Mr. KITCHIN. And the jeweler, if he sells to the purchaser, would recoup himself by putting it on the price.

Mr. MANN. That is another question. If the intention is to tax 5 per cent on the chain you can go in any of the jewelry stores and they will show you a pendant with a chain perhaps, and they will tell you they will put any kind of pendant on the chain that you want and that they will take the chain off and put any kind of a chain on the pendant that you want. If they have paid the tax on both, why should they pay it again because they happen to put them together?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will say to the gentleman——

Mr. MANN. I really think the gentleman ought to take time to consider this before we pass it.

Mr. KITCHIN. I believe if they were unfinished they would not pay the tax. They make a distinction in the tariff law about stones.

Mr. MANN. Here is a pendant that is completed.

Mr. KITCHIN. And here is a chain complete.

Mr. MANN. Even with the loop to be fastened to a chain. Here is a chain that is complete, even to the clasp with which to clasp the pendant.

Mr. KITCHIN. On the pendant if it is sold to a jeweler it is 5 per cent and on the chain if it is sold to a jeweler it is 5 per cent—that is, when it is sold separately—and it is 5 per cent on the completed product. If you put them together it is 5 per cent on the pendant and 5 per cent on the chain.

Mr. MANN. That is a 10 per cent tax.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is what the committee intended and that is what the language means.

Mr. MANN. I am afraid the committee had not investigated the jewelry subject or they would not propose it.

Mr. REED. I understand a diamond, if in a setting, would bear a tax. A ring with a setting in it would be a finished piece. Suppose you should go to one jeweler and buy an unfinished ring upon which there would be no tax. Suppose you would go to another and buy the stone and suppose you should go to the third and say that you had a little repair job and he puts them together?

Mr. KITCHIN. I would not be surprised if it escaped taxation.

Mr. LENROOT. The retailer, the large jeweler, has been suggested. He does not come under the definition of this act as being a manufacturer, producer, or importer, does he?

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. No; I am speaking about this: Say, there is an assembler of parts made by another manufacturer. The first manufacturer paid the tax and he sends those parts just as he would in any other industry to another manufacturer who puts them together and he pays a tax.

Mr. KITCHIN. He pays the taxes whether he pays them separately or whether he pays by putting them together.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Then the objection I think is this: That we are imposing here a tax of 10 per cent upon this industry, and on other industries a tax of 5 per cent, and I submit to the conscience of the committee that they ought to vote for my amendment.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I would like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] a question.

Mr. KITCHIN. If a man sells an automobile and an automobile blanket, you are not taxing the automobile and the automobile blanket twice if you sell them together, or the tire on the automobile.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. The tire has been taxed, and the manufacturer has been relieved of the payment of the tax on the tire.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I would like to ask a question of the gentleman from North Carolina, if during all the consideration of this bill I have been to him, asking him to make any changes in it, or whether any manufacturers of jewelry in the State of Massachusetts or in the State of Rhode Island have been to him and asked him to make any changes?

Mr. KITCHIN. The only thing I understood the gentleman to object to was a provision in the bill which appeared to make them pay a tax on the stock they had on hand.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. The jewelry dealers, the retailers, pay the 10 per cent tax that way, and they do not think they ought to pay it. But the manufacturers have not been to you, nor have I.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is true.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I have a number of manufacturers in my district, and we ask you not to put in this bill a case of double tax, but you insist on putting it in.

Mr. KITCHIN. This is not a double tax.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. It is nothing else. I hope the House will have the sense to vote down the proposition of the gentleman.

Mr. KITCHIN. The only objection I have heard from the jewelers was the section in the bill that proposed a tax upon their stock.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. That was proper. That was what was done during the Civil War—just this same amendment—and if you had held hearings they would have gotten it as a matter of justice. You passed it all over without any hearings at all.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. O'SHAUNESSY].

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Just a word, without regard to the merits of the amendment. I want to pay a compliment to the manufacturers or jewelers. They have come in here and said as patriotic citizens they were ready to pay any duty imposed upon them. They, of course, did not want these charges, but they have not objected to the levy of this tax, notwithstanding it is a 5 per cent tax on the gross receipts, and their profits are not considered very extensive.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. O'SHAUNESSY].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the Chair was in doubt.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 30, noes 59.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN] is recognized.

Mr. SLOAN. I move to strike out the last word, and desire to call the attention of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN], the chairman of the committee, to page 26, line 22, which says:

Upon any article commonly or commercially known as jewelry, whether real or imitation, sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer thereof.

As I understand the intention of that it was to include not only jewelry in the common acceptation of that term, but also jewels. I have been looking up the matter of the definition of the term "jewelry," and I think it would only, as defined here, include that which had been manufactured and made up in combination from metals and precious stones, and so on, but would not include simply diamonds or rubies, or——

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman is correct. As I expressed my opinion awhile ago, I am rather inclined to the view that it was the finished product. Since then I have sat down and read the description in the tariff act, and it makes that distinction—finished or unfinished, set or unset.

Mr. SLOAN. Is it the intention to tax the finished jewel?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; I do not think we intended that. I think it had better stay just as it is.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

(f) Upon all yachts, pleasure boats, motor boats, or other vessels not used or intended to be used for trade, sold by the manufacturer, builder, or importer, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold; and.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HICKS: Strike out the word "and," in line 4, page 27, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Provided, That the tax of 5 per cent shall not be collected until the manufacturers or builders of the articles herein enumerated shall have earned a profit of 8 per cent upon the actual capital invested. For the purpose of this paragraph the actual capital invested means (1) actual cash paid in, (2) the actual cash value at the time of payment of assets other than cash paid in, and (3) paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business."

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is similar to the one offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DOREMUS] a short time ago and accepted by the committee. A few moments ago I conferred with the genial chairman, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN], and I was informed privately, and I suppose confidentially, that he did not believe he could favor this amendment, despite the fact that the committee had already passed a similar one in regard to automobiles.

Mr. KITCHIN. I will say to the gentleman that the House has just voted down the proposition of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER] on the subject of pianos and graphophones.

Mr. MEEKER. That was a different tune played by the musical instruments. [Laughter.]

Mr. HICKS. There is a marked difference, Mr. Chairman, between the proposition offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER] and this one. While pleasure boats may be considered a luxury, they can and frequently are converted into aids of defense, and become necessities. We speak of yachts and motor boats; the idea generally being that we are talking about large yachts and pleasure craft of men of means, whereas, as a matter of fact, the yards all over the maritime districts of this country, where they build one yacht 150 feet in length, will make 100 medium-sized motor boats and a thousand small craft like rowboats and small sailing vessels.

It has been the hope and aim of this country to develop our shipbuilding yards all over the Nation. To-day the shipyards in my own district for the most part small concerns, are suffering for lack of business. It is almost impossible for them to make a meager living by manufacturing motor boats or rowboats; and, gentlemen of this House, the motor boats to-day that are 35 or 40 feet in length and upward are being used throughout the length and breadth of our Atlantic coast for the purpose of patroling and scouting in conjunction with the Navy, and it seems to me we should encourage the building of motor boats which may be used for war purposes as well as for other purposes, and should therefore relieve the builders of this tax.

Mr. KITCHIN. They are exempted under this act.

Mr. HICKS. I hope the committee will accept this amendment.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I do not suppose that the provision in the bill would apply to a case where somebody turns his boat over to the Government.

There was a little dispatch in the papers the other day, under date of May 17, a portion of which I wish to read as bearing on this subject. I read:

Capt. Isaac E. Emerson, who was the first commander of the Maryland Naval Reserve, has presented to the United States Government Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's former yacht, the Adriat, which is said to be worth $500,000, with the stipulation that it shall be used to patrol only Maryland waters during the present war with Germany.

That is a safe place, by the way. I read further:

Capt. Emerson has also used his influence in having a number of Maryland men appointed officers on the boat. The yacht is now at one of the navy yards being fitted out with the most improved guns in use in the Navy, and when ready for duty will be sent to some station where it can patrol the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries.

In the center of the war activities! In the Chesapeake Bay! This fine gentleman, to whom credit is due, offering his boat to the Government to get it behind where an enemy's fleet can not possibly reach it and have it in safety during the war.

Mr. MADDEN. At the expense of the Government.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. No; I do not yield. Of course the Government pays the expenses of the Government officers on the boat. I do not believe the statement contained in this article to be true. The article says the boat is to be commanded by the son of one of the Cabinet officers, who, if that be the case, instead of being drafted into the service of the Government of the United States, will be paid to keep out of danger. [Applause.] Because there is no danger in a yacht in the Chesapeake Bay, unless it gets out in the water somewhere [laughter], and the danger will not be from the enemy, but from a lack of nautical ability.

Some one is due to deny the statement in this paper. It has gone all over the United States that men and women's children, their sons, are to be drafted into the Army as private soldiers, but that the sons of Cabinet officers are to be given fat jobs out of danger. [Applause.]

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make the comment that this is not an argument either for or against my amendment. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. HICKS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HULBERT: Page 27, line 2, after the word "vessels," strike out "not used or intended to be used for trade."

Mr. HULBERT. Mr. Chairman, I desire merely to call the attention of the House to the fact that when that provision was under consideration which provides for a tax on automobiles, the House declined to strike out the words "except automobile trucks or automobile wagons which are intended to be used for the purposes of trade," and that in order to be entirely consistent it seems to me that the House must now strike out the provision which would exempt motor boats not used or intended to be used for trade.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. HULBERT].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

(g) Upon all tennis rackets, golf clubs, baseball bats, lacrosse sticks, balls of all kinds, including baseballs, footballs, tennis, golf, lacrosse, billiard and pool balls, fishing rods, reels and lines, billiard and pool tables, chess and checker boards and pieces, dice, games and parts of games, except playing cards, sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to suggest an amendment. Page 27, line 5, after the word "baseball," add the words "and congressional."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MADDEN: Page 27, line 5, after the word "baseball," insert the words "and congressional," so that it will read "upon all tennis rackets, golf clubs, baseball and congressional bats."

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CONNALLY of Texas: Page 27, line 8, after the word "lines," insert "sporting rifles, revolvers, pistols, and shotguns, and ammunition therefor."

Mr. KITCHIN. I make a point of order against that, and I will state to the gentleman who introduced it that we have now an extra 12½ per cent on all incomes and profits of manufacturers of rifles, shotguns, and so forth.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NORTON. On what ground was the point of order sustained?

The CHAIRMAN. On the ground that the amendment was not germane to the subject matter or the item.

Mr. NORTON. To the subject matter or the item?

The CHAIRMAN. On the ground that it was germane to neither.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I should like to call the attention of the gentleman from North Carolina to the fact that, as I understand it, there are some committee amendments to this paragraph.

Mr. KITCHIN. In view of the ruling of the Chairman to-day they might go out on a point of order, and I thought it better not to offer them.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Nobody might offer a point of order. I think it would be better to offer one of these amendments, to see whether the committee have the power to get them adopted.

Mr. KITCHIN. I will say to the gentleman from Ohio that I am mightily afraid somebody will make a point of order.

Mr. LONGWORTH. They are good amendments, and I agree with the gentleman from North Carolina that they ought to be adopted. Now, let us see whether we have the power to get them adopted.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 27, line 5, after the word "all," insert the following: "cameras, kodaks," and a comma.

Mr. MADDEN. I make the point of order against that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

(h) Upon all perfumes, essences, extracts, toilet waters, cosmetics, vaselines, petrolatums, hair oils, pomades, hair dressings, hair restoratives, hair dyes, tooth and mouth washes, dentifrices, toqth pastes, aromatic cachous, toilet soaps and powders, or any similar substance, article, or preparation by whatsoever name known or distinguished, used or applied for toilet purposes, and which are sold by the manufacturer, importer, or producer, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold; and.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 27, line 21, strike out the word "and" and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Provided, That the tax of 5 per cent shall not be collected until the manufacturers of the articles enumerated shall have earned a profit of 8 per cent upon the actual capital invested. For the purposes of this paragraph actual capital invested means (1) actual cash paid in, (2) the actual cash value at the time of the payment of assets other than cash paid in, (3) paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment believing that it would appeal to the sense of justice of the House and knowing that it ought to. It is the same amendment which was adopted to the automobile paragraph. There are many reasons why this provision ought to apply to the section to which I have offered it as an amendment which are more potent and which have in them more justice than those which were urged for the amendment as a limitation upon the automobile item.

I understand that it is the theory of this title that it is a tax upon luxuries. I doubt if my persuasive friend from North Carolina will assert that an automobile used for an occasional joy ride is a necessity, while toilet soap and tooth paste and articles of that kind are luxuries. Soap may be a luxury in the State of North Carolina, but it certainly is not in the State of Minnesota. I doubt if my eloquent friend from Michigan will claim that an automobile is a necessity, while the extracts used in every home in this country every day in the year are luxuries.

But I want to come particularly now to the reasons for the statement that there is more justice in applying this limitation to the section to which I have offered it than to the automobile item. The concerns engaged in the business of manufacturing articles included in this item are for the most part not very large and they do business on a comparatively small capital, their greatest asset being business ingenuity and acumen. They are hit by every title in this bill with the exception of two. They pay an income tax; they pay an excess profits tax; they use enormous amounts of alcohol in the product of the extracts and articles of that character. Upon alcohol the tax has been doubled. A great many of the drugs, vanilla beans, and articles of that character that go into the production of this class of articles are subject to a duty of 10 per cent under this bill. The duty in many instances is 75 or 100 per cent higher than the duty now carried in the tariff law.

I submit that when all these different taxes are applied to a business it is not fair, it is not just, that in addition to these taxes so imposed a 5 per cent tax on gross sales should be added. Most of these concerns have attempted to increase their prices, very largely without success, because most of these articles are sold at a fixed price that can not be easily increased. Much of this business is done directly from the manufacturer to the consumer, and because the trade is accustomed to a fixed price for an article it can not be sold at an increased price. Consequently, the manufacturer, in addition to the income tax, the excess profits tax, the corporation tax, and the alcohol tax, and in addition to the tax under every title of this bill with the exception of two, will be obliged to pay this tax on the gross sales.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, it seems practically useless to insist upon these amendments as we go along, and I am wondering what has become of the bunch of automobile patriots that were here a few hours ago. [Laughter.] That was a proposition on wheels that seems to have left us following the vote.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. May I suggest to the gentleman that they may have gone off in some of them?

Mr. MEEKER. Now, the result of this thing as it now is—whether it shall apply to a dealer in musical instruments or other articles mentioned—is going to positively work against the small producer and in favor of the big manufacturer. You can not make anything else out of it. The only trouble is that these small concerns have not got the fellows to talk for them and get up the publicity that the big concerns have. No man comes and talks for the small manufacturers in these lines, and many of the articles mentioned are as necessary as are automobiles.

We can not consistently go through here laughingly voting down amendment after amendment and justify that after we have voted to sustain the amendments in regard to automobiles. You take thousands of little concerns over this country engaged in the manufacture of commodities that are named in this section or paragraph, that have simply been holding on for the past year or more under the terrific increase in the cost of materials which go into their products, and this tax will not leave them any competition with the great concerns that are capitalized for millions. I can not understand how any man, whether he be from an automobile district or not, could vote for the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Michigan, and rightfully so, and refuse to put these little concerns in and permit them to make 8 per cent on their capital when everything they are interested in, every material that enters into their article, is taxed.

It is an easy thing to sit here and smile at one another as we vote down these amendments, and joke about it, but I want to say to you gentlemen that there is no section of the bill that is striking at the little manufacturers and the men in the small business for the benefit of the big man in the game so much as this one does.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Is it not true that in all of these contracts that we are now letting on the part of the Government we are allowing the shipbuilders and others a profit of 10 per cent?

Mr. MEEKER. Sure we are, and we are saying to them, you charge all of the expense that you incur in labor and everything else, and add 10 per cent to the gross for your profit, and yet we come along here on these little concerns, many of them with only a few hundred dollars or a few thousand dollars of capital, representing the savings of a lifetime, and because they have not been able to organize and come in here and make a noise as loud as an automobile horn we are setting aside this amendment as though it meant nothing. I tell you gentlemen who for the last 10 days have been talking on this floor about the little man and about the small producer and the poor man, you have not voted on any section or title, the paragraphs of which, if carried through as provided in this bill—unless this amendment is agreed to—will put so many little fellows out of business in wholesale job lots as will this provision. I hope the time has come in this committee when we who talk about the automobile industry will show to the man who manufactures musical instruments and these people named in this paragraph that we are just as much interested in the principles of justice and right as they concern the little manufacturer, as when we talk about the hundreds of millions of dollars involved in the automobile industry. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I am glad that I have found out why the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER] voted to relieve the automobile manufacturers of this tax. While he has no automobile manufacturers in the city of St. Louis, he has a great many manufacturers, perhaps more, who manufacture in the city of St. Louis articles specified under this paragraph (h) than there are in any other city in the United States or perhaps in the world. I do not blame him for complaining that the automobile patriots are not present to help him, because he helped them. As his speech indicated, it was a question of you tickle me and I'll tickle you. I will tell the gentleman what Messrs. DOREMUS and KELLEY of Michigan would say in explanation of the difference between the automobile proposition and this proposition. It will be something like this, and I believe this would appeal to the reason of the gentleman. When you pay your 5 per cent on one of these $1,000 or $2,000 machines, it means $50 or a hundred dollars. That is a pretty hard thing, they say, to be passed on to the customer, and perhaps the automobile man would have to lose the $50 or the hundred dollars, while when you buy a little hair restorative—is that really the gentleman's reason for opposing this? [Laughter.]

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to say to the gentleman that when I begin to vote on the proposition of you scratch my back and I will scratch yours, I hope that they will kick me out of this House.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, I hope that the gentleman will not be kicked out. When the gentleman began he will recollect that he asked where all these automobile patriots had gone; but let me proceed with the reason that Messrs. DOREMUS and KELLEY of Michigan will give you. This $100 or $200 proposition, you know, is a big tax on just one automobile, but when you come to the question of a hair restorative—it is just 1 cent more—they can pass it on very well to the customer. You buy the bottle and you will only have to pay 1 cent more, and of course it is easy to see that nobody will lose very much.

Mr. MEEKER. I will suggest that whoever buys hair restoratives usually loses his hair.

Mr. KITCHIN. It means just a couple of cents more, and that can be passed along. It does not hurt. It is easy for the manufacturer to do that. Then there is the question of perfumery. Say there is a bottle of violet water. You pay just a cent more. It does not break anybody. A fellow is willing to contribute his little cent and willing for the manufacturer to pass it on to the retailer and the retailer to the consumer. That is the reason they are going to give to you.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and (on a division demanded by Mr. MEEKER) there were—ayes 21, noes 64.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

(i) Upon all pills, tablets, powders, tinctures, troches, or lozenges, sirups, medicinal cordials or bitters, anodynes, tonics, plasters, liniments, salves, ointments, pastes, drops, waters (except those taxed under section 308 of this act), essences, spirits, oils, and all medicinal preparations, compounds, or compositions whatsoever, the manufacturer or producer of which claims to have any private formula, secret, or occult art for making or preparing the same, or has or claims to have any exclusive right or title to the making or preparing the same, or which are prepared, uttered, vended, or exposed for sale under any letters patent, or trade-mark, or which, if prepared by any formula, published or unpublished, are held out or recommended to the public by the makers, venders, or proprietors thereof as proprietary medicines or medicinal proprietary medicinal articles or preparations, or as remedies or specifics for any disease, diseases, or affection whatever affecting the human or animal body, and which are sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold; and.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

By Mr. SMITH of Michigan: Amend: On page 28, at the end of line 16, add the following:

"Provided further, That such 5 per cent sale tax shall not apply or be collected in cases where the business of such manufacturer, producer, or importer (of medicines) has not produced or earned a net profit during the preceding year or period for which the tax is to be paid of 5 per cent; and."

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I wish to have read a telegram in my time in reference to this. This is one of the concerns that has no representatives or lobby, and, while it is not in my district, I would like to have a telegram sent to me presented to the House for your information.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

DETROIT, MICH., May 17, 1917.

JOHN M. C. SMITH,
Washington, D. C.:

We are in favor of a tax on our postage, we are in favor of a tax on our freight, we are in favor of a tax on our advertising, we are in favor of a tax on railroad tickets, and we are in favor of a tax on our profits, but we are absolutely opposed to a tax on gross sales of medicinal products, because our business can not stand it. Such a tax is discriminatory, unjust, confiscatory, and therefore destructive.

NYAL CO.,
GEO. WILLOUGHBY, Treasurer.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. This telegram contains the true patriotic spirit. They do not ask to be relieved from just taxation. It was not sent for that purpose. They do not want to be driven out of business. It is not right to ruin anyone or any industry. Their product goes into every sick room in our land. Certainly we should exempt the sick. I hope the amendment will prevail. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 28, line 1, after the word "medicinal proprietary," strike out "medicinal."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, we accept that amendment. I am glad to have had our attention called to it.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

(j) Upon all chewing gum or substitute therefor sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA: Page 28, line 19, after the word "sold," add the following:

"Upon all candies, chocolates, sweets, or confectionery sold by the box or container a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which so sold: Provided, That no tax shall be imposed in the case of such candies, chocolates, sweets, or confectionery sold in boxes or containers for 30 cents or less."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the amendment that it is not germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DILLON: After line 19, on page 28, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"(k) Upon the sales of any person, partnership, association, or corporation engaged in selling merchandise the major portion of whose business is solicited by mail and whose deliveries are made by mail, express, or freight, and who issues catalogues of retail prices and known as a catalogue house, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which such merchandise is sold."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order the amendment is not germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to ask the gentleman from North Carolina a question. I hear it suggested about this chamber and elsewhere that likely there will be an effort to put 1½ per cent upon all gross sales of all manufactures outside of food products.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not know; I have not heard the suggestion, except some gentlemen have asked——

Mr. FESS. I have heard it.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not think it will be in order——

Mr. FESS. I was wondering whether any consideration had been given.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; but when you begin to look it over you will find it will be very unjust to some and a very big thing for others.

Mr. FESS. It would doubtless raise an immense amount of money.

Mr. KITCHIN. There is no doubt about that. For instance, the sum of 1 per cent would be 25 per cent of the net income of one manufacturer, while 1 per cent would be 5 per cent of others. We selected taxes that could be most easily passed on to the consumer without any injury to any manufacturer, and we differentiate between necessities. If you put this 1 per cent on gross sales of all you take—for instance, clothes—1 per cent upon clothes, meat, flour, everything of that kind. That is the reason we did not do it——

Mr. FESS. What I had in mind was we had 5 per cent here, and with 1 per cent or 1½ per cent——

Mr. KITCHIN. We did not want to tax manufacturers and producers of food products, wearing apparel, and articles that we considered necessities of life.

Mr. FESS. The committee had really taken that up, then?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes, sir. And we thought that the articles specified in this title of the bill were in the nature of luxuries and that they could be easily passed on by the manufacturer to the consumer.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words just to make a few remarks.

I listened to the statement of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER] and it struck me with some force, but I think he is unduly alarmed.

During the Spanish-American War, it might be of interest to some of the Members of this House to know, a great many manufacturers of articles referred to by him in his remarks and in his amendment, and also manufacturers of medicines, not only charged the tax that was levied against them because of war conditions but charged the retail druggist 100 per cent profit on said tax. During the recent stamp-tax law, while the same was in force, I had occasion to look into this matter, and a great many manufacturers of toilet articles, face powder, and so forth, where the stamp tax was 20 cents, charged the retail druggist a tax of 40 cents, making a profit of 100 per cent because of the conditions which forced that stamp tax. I would like to see this tax taken out of the bill, if it was possible to secure it, but I realize that it is hopeless. I want to say here and now that I trust the retail druggist, wherever a manufacturer charges him a profit because of this tax made necessary because of the war we are now in, will not deal with that manufacturer. I do not believe any person should make out of another what is really, as a matter of fact, blood money, which it would be in this case as I see it.

My father was in the drug business during the Spanish-American War, and I know whereof I speak, and I also know the tax is so small the retailer can not pass the tax on to the consumer. The stamp tax on a dollar bottle of medicine was so small it was impossible to pass it on, but the manufacturer would charge us 100 per cent profit; and when we would write to inquire about the increased cost, he would answer it was because of the tax the Government was making him pay. I sincerely trust, and I believe, the wholesalers and manufacturers will not do that in this case.

Two years ago when the stamp tax was in force quite a number of manufacturers of toilet articles, and perhaps they were from the city which the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER] represents, did not advance the price at all, but stood the burden. I wish I had the names of those manufacturers in order that I might place them in the RECORD; but a larger part of them did charge from 40 to 100 per cent profit because of the tax imposed by the Government.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SEARS. I will.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman has possibly made a thorough investigation into this stamp tax, and I intended to do so, but did not. Is not this tax lower in the percentage than the stamp tax in the Spanish-American War on similar articles?

Mr. SEARS. As I recall, it is considerably less.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 601. That each manufacturer, producer, or importer of any of the articles enumerated in section 600 shall make monthly returns under oath in duplicate and pay the taxes imposed on such articles by this title to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which is located the principal place of business. Such return shall contain such information and be made at such times and in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may by regulations prescribe.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 28, line 20, before the word "or," insert the word "builder" and a comma.

Mr. MANN. What is that?

Mr. KITCHIN. They omitted the word "builder."

Mr. MANN. Where is that used in the section otherwise?

Mr. KITCHIN. Page 27, paragraph (f), line 3.

Mr. MANN. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] whether it is his interpretation of this language that the tax is to be paid monthly?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. It says returns shall be made monthly and the tax paid to the collector.

Mr. KITCHIN. To be paid monthly.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. The language does not quite state that.

Mr. KITCHIN. We have another section in here that covers all that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Cerk read as follows:

SEC. 602. That upon all articles enumerated in subdivisions (a), (b), (e), and (f) of section 600 which are on the day this act is passed held by other than the manufacturer, producer, or importer, and intended for sale, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price for which sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer. This tax shall be paid by the person, corporation, partnership, or association so holding such articles.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Chairman, I think there is a committee amendment to section 606.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to read the following section, too, because I have an amendment to strike out both sections.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] asks unanimous consent to read sections 602 and 603 together. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 603. That upon all articles enumerated in subdivisions (g), (h), (i), and (j) of section 600 which are not in the possession of a retailer on the 1st day of May, 1917, and which, on the day this act is passed, are held and intended for sale, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the wholesale price paid therefor. This tax shall be paid by the person, corporation, partnership, or association so holding such articles.

With a committee amendment, as follows:

On page 29, strike out lines 4 to 21, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 602. That upon all articles enumerated in subdivisions (a), (b), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), or (j) of section 600, which on the day this act is passed are held and intended for sale by any person, corporation, partnership, or association, other than a retailer who is not also a wholesaler, and upon all such articles which between April 6, 1917, and the day this act is passed, both inclusive, have been sold to, and on the day this act is passed are held and intended for sale by, a retailer who is not also a wholesaler, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price paid therefor. This tax shall be paid by the person, corporation, partnership, or association so holding such articles. No tax shall be imposed under section 600 upon any article upon which a tax is imposed under this section.

"The taxes imposed by this section shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner as provided in section 1102 in the case of additional taxes upon articles upon which the tax imposed by existing law has been paid."

Mr. KITCHIN. Now, Mr. Chairman, I will say to the House that gentlemen will notice that section 602 of the printed bill provides that upon all articles enumerated in subdivisions (a), (b), (e), and (f) of section 600, which covers, respectively, automobiles, musical instruments, jewelry, and yachts, the tax is to apply to all the stock on hand in the hands of retailers; and in section 603, embracing all articles enumerated in subdivision (g), (h), (i), and (j), which cover sporting goods, cosmetics, patent medicines, and chewing gum, the tax is to apply to all stock on hand except that which was not in the possession of the retailer on the 1st day of May, 1917.

Now, this amendment changes these provisions so that all the articles specified in sections 602 and 603 in the hands of a retailer, who is not a wholesaler, shall be taxed only upon the amount purchased since the day of the declaration of war, April 6, 1917, and on hand on the day the act passed. For instance, take jewelry. This amendment applies to jewelry and all other articles in the same category that were purchased by a retailer, who is not a wholesaler, since the declaration of war on April 6, 1917, and on hand and intended for sale by such retailer at the time this act passes. It does not apply to any retail stock on hand prior to April 6 or any part of the stock bought or already sold since April 6.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The purpose evidently is to relieve the retailers from the payment of the tax on stock on hand and not disposed of?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; the dealers in musical instruments and the dealers in automobiles.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Does it tax the wholesaler?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. He will have to pay the tax upon the articles that he has in his possession on the day this act is passed.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is to relieve the retailer in the case of goods out of date?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. He may have had certain articles on hand for 10 years.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. This responds to a great many complaints that have come in as to the old and outworn stock?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. KITCHIN. Certainly.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I understand now that this tax extends only to the merchandise in jewelry which may have been acquired since the 6th day of April, 1917?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; and what is on hand. For example, suppose a man bought a thousand dollars' worth of jewelry since April 6, and has sold $500 of it since then.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I said since the 6th day of April.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; since the 6th day of April, and all these other articles in the same way.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I do not think I quite caught the gentleman's explanation. I have had some telegrams about that.

Mr. KITCHIN. This amendment that I am asking the committee to adopt only taxes the merchandise that was purchased by a retailer—who is not a wholesaler—since April 6, 1917, the day we declared war, and which he has on hand at the date of the passage of the act. For instance, as I just stated to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MONTAGUE], if a jeweler or a musical-instrument dealer has bought a thousand dollars' worth since April 6 and has on hand of that $1,000 worth when the act passes $500 worth, he is only taxed in the $500 worth.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Suppose he has on hand a part of his stock that was acquired previously?

Mr. KITCHIN. That is exempted.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I have just read over that amendment, and that applies only when the man is a retailer and not a wholesaler.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. The wholesaler is going to be protected in selling to the retailer.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. There are many dealers who are both wholesalers and retailers, and in such cases the tax would apply to the whole stock in their possession. Take the case of Tiffany's, for instance, and others, who sell both wholesale and retail. You tax their entire stock by the first three lines.

Mr. KITCHIN. No; we have an amendment to extend the time of payment until November 1, 1917.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. But if you will read the first three lines, upon all stock in hand held by a man who is not a retailer——

Mr. KITCHIN. I will say to the gentleman that the committee prepared the provision in that way in order to prevent a wholesaler from stocking up. The little retailer can not stock up. There is not much profit to the retailer to stock up in anticipation of the passage of this act; but the wholesaler would stock up to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars in order to escape this tax; but now he will not do it.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. He can not do it if you make it apply to purchases since April 6.

Mr. KITCHIN. It applies to all the stocks which the wholesaler has on hand.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. All the stocks which the wholesaler has on hand, no matter if he bought then 10 years ago.

Mr. KITCHIN. By a subsequent amendment we are going to give them until November 1 to pay the tax.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. It seems to me it would be better and easier to make the same principle apply to everybody and to make all old stocks free.

Mr. KITCHIN. The wholesaler will pass the tax on to the retailer. The wholesaler does not keep his stock on hand long, but the retailer may have to keep his stock on hand for years.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. We only exempt a retailer who is not also a wholesaler.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. And the result will be that if a man is a wholesaler and a retailer his retail stock will be taxed.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is correct.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. There are men in New York and other large cities who are wholesale and retail dealers, and who have on hand thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of jewelry which they bought years and years ago. Take, for instance, such a stock as Tiffany's, in New York.

Mr. KITCHIN. I believe the wholesalers' tax is just if we give them until November 1 to pay it.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I think not. Can we not make it applicable to everybody? I am going to offer an amendment to strike out a part of this.

Mr. KITCHIN. Let me put this proposition to the gentleman: The wholesaler is not going to lose anything by this tax, because as soon as it is put on his whole stock is going to increase in value by 5 per cent, because all of his competitors will raise their prices 5 per cent. Now, as to the stock which he has bought since the passage of the act, or since April 6, his whole stock will increase in value 5 per cent, and he is going to get every bit of it back. It is necessary to protect the Government in this way.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I move to strike out the words—

Which on the day this act is passed are held and intended for sale by any person, corporation, partnership, or association, other than a retailer who is not also a wholesaler, and upon all such articles.

I also move to strike out the words further along—

By a retailer who is not also a wholesaler—

and to insert "any person," so that it will read:

That upon all articles enumerated in subdivisions (a), (b), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), or (j) of section 600, which, between April 6, 1917, and the day this act is passed, both inclusive, have been sold to, and on the day this act is passed are held and intended for sale by any person, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price paid therefor.

That is so as to get rid of that distinction between a wholesaler and a retailer, even if a man is both.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from New Jersey indicate to the Clerk just the words which he wishes to strike out?

Mr. LOBECK. While the gentleman is getting his amendment into shape I would like to ask what about mail-order houses which sell jewerly at retail?

Mr. KITCHIN. They are exempted like any other retailers.

Mr. LOBECK. There are large firms that do an exclusively retail jewelry business, and they do it by catalogue, all over the country, such firms as Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co. They do that kind of business, and they are retailers.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey moves to amend the committee amendment by striking out the words "which on the day this act is passed are held and intended for sale by any person, corporation, partnership, or association, other than a retailer who is not also a wholesaler, and upon all such articles"; and by further striking out the language "by a retailer who is not also a wholesaler," and insert in lieu thereof the words "by any person," so that as amended the committee amendment will read:

"SEC. 602. That upon all articles enumerated in subdivisions (a), (b), (c), (f), (g), (h), (i), or (j) of section 600 which between April 6, 1917, and the day this act is passed, both inclusive, have been sold to and on the day this act is passed are held and intended for sale by any person there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 5 per cent of the price paid therefor," etc.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. LOBECK. Mr. Chairman, I want to offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LOBECK: Amend the amendment by inserting, after the word "association," the words "or mail-order house."

The CHAIRMAN. The first question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PARKER] to the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PARKER of New Jersey) there were—ayes 10, noes 36.

So the amendment to the amendment was lost.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. LOBECK].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to section 308, to offer an amendment.

Mr. KITCHIN. I thought the gentleman only wanted unanimous consent for five minutes on that question; but if he will defer, I will ask unanimous consent to return to it before the bill is finally passed.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

TITLE VII.—WAR TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES.

SEC. 700. That from and after the 1st day of June, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place, to be paid by the person admitted, and a tax of 5 cents for each admission of each person (except in the case of a bona fide employee and children under 12 years of age), admitted free to any place for admission to which a charge is made, to be paid by the person so admitted: Provided, That the tax on admission of children under 12 years of age, where an admission charge is made shall in every case be 1 cent. These taxes shall not be imposed in the case of a place the maximum charge for admission to which is 5 cents.

No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to any admissions all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious or charitable institutions, societies, or organizations, or admissions to agricultural fairs all the proceeds of which inure exclusively for agricultural ourposes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This exemption in the case of admission where the charge is not more than 5 cents has raised some criticism, on the ground that in many places where a larger charge is now being made they might reduce the admission.

Mr. KITCHIN. Some gentlemen have talked to me about this, and thought that some of these places would reduce the admission from 10 cents to 5 cents in order to escape the tax. I can not conceive of anybody doing that; but if so, it would be a good thing for certain suburbs of cities to get a 10-cent show for 5 cents.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I merely raised the question to know whether the gentleman would accept any amendment.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not think we ought to accept any amendment.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA: On page 30, line 2, after the word "admission," insert the word "subscription," and after the word "admitted," on line 6, insert the following: "In the case of persons having the permanent use of boxes or seats in an opera house or any place of amusement or a lease for the use of such box or seat in such opera house or place of amusement there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the amount for which a similar box or seat is sold for performance or exhibition at which the box or seat is used or reserved by or for the lessee or holder."

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, it looks to me as if the committee had overlooked something to tax in New York. The Metropolitan Opera House, in New York City, and opera houses in some of the other large cities in the United States have an annual subscription list for boxes, and the sale of those subscriptions run for years while some of the boxes are held outright. These boxes have a value, sometimes $100 or $200 for a performance, and unless you amend this section there will be no tax for the admission of those people, while the people in the gallery and in the house at large will have to pay the 10 per cent.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KITCHEN) there were 32 ayes and 18 noes.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 30, strike out all of lines 3, 4, 5, and 6.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, just a word in connection with that. I am moving to strike out the provision for a tax upon free admissions by reason of the complications that may arise in the enforcement of it. This exempts only bona fide employees and children under 12 years of age. It will charge a tax upon free admission of a policeman or a fireman who, under the municipal ordinance, may be required to be stationed in the theater; likewise reporters and critics for the newspapers.

Mr. KITCHIN. Policemen and firemen perhaps ought to be exempt, but surely not newspaper men.

Mr. CRAMTON. Certainly as to policemen and firemen.

Mr. KITCHIN. I would be willing to accept an amendment in the case of bona fide employees and children under 12 years of age and officers of the law who are attending upon official business.

Mr. CRAMTON. I am just calling it to the gentleman's attention.

Mr. KITCHIN. I believe that is a good suggestion.

Mr. CRAMTON. It seems to me a little funny if they can not fill the theater at a charge, and they want to fill it free, that you should tax the free admissions.

Mr. KITCHIN. I suggest perhaps we should exempt those State or municipal officers who are attending upon official business.

Mr. CRAMTON. Let me call the gentleman's attention to this, as another possibility—and there may be many possibilities that we will not think of. In my home city there is a State institution for defective children. Oftentimes when some entertainment is given the management will admit the inmates of that institution free as an act of charity. This would place a tax upon each of those inmates.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, no; there is another provision which takes care of that:

No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to any admissions all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious or charitable institutions, societies, or organizations, or admissions to agricultural fairs all the proceeds of which inure exclusively for agricultural purposes.

Mr. CRAMTON. But this is not a case of that kind. It is where they admit two or three hundred inmates.

Mr. CRISP. They charge other people, but let them in free?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes.

Mr. KITCHIN. Do you mean that with respect to a regular traveling troupe?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes. For instance, we will say that Sousa's Band or something of that kind comes there. The management will permit these two or three hundred inmates to go in free and will charge everybody else.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not know how you would distinguish that from other people; if you would say admitted free for charitable purposes, then might not these newspaper men and Members of Congress get into baseball games as a piece of charity?

Mr. CRAMTON. I would solve it by not putting a tax upon free admissions.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, we want to catch these fellows with free tickets. I get a ticket to the baseball game down here, perhaps, because I am a Member of Congress.

Mr. CRISP. How does the gentleman get it? I have not got one.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, I have not got it really. I am using that as an illustration.

Mr. TAGUE. How is that going to affect such things as admittance during the day of the charitable institutions to the baseball games? In my city, for instance, the proprietors of the baseball clubs give the poor children free admission, perhaps a thousand of them.

Mr. KITCHIN. In Boston?

Mr. TAGUE. Yes. Two days a week are set aside for that.

Mr. KITCHIN. Then I suggest that somebody would help to raise a little penny for each one of the children to pay. I think the people would do that.

Mr. TAGUE. It is not that the people will not do it, but it is something that occurs there every year, something given to all of the institutions by these proprietors.

Mr. KITCHIN. I will say to the gentleman from Michigan that I believe that a law officer would not come in under this at all. He has a right to go, and it is not a question of a free admission.

Mr. CRAMTON. What would the gentleman say to this possibility? In the case where they admit free they may instead sell a ticket for 1 penny, and then it will be subject to no tax at all.

Mr. KITCHIN. What? Sell a Member of Congress a ticket for a penny?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes; to anybody they want to admit free; they can evade the law.

Mr. KITCHIN. How would they evade it? Would the gentleman charge a penny to a baseball game?

Mr. CRAMTON. Say, for instance, to a newspaper reporter.

Mr. KITCHIN. The man who would not comprehend the game might have a reduced price down to a penny; but I do not know.

Mr. CRAMTON. I just want to call it to the gentleman's attention.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Has the gentleman heard the news that, for instance, at Coney Island, it is reported by a distinguished Member of this House that they admit people free and charge them 10 cents before they permit them to leave?

Mr. KITCHIN. I saw that in the paper. Under this bill they would be caught. They are bound to enter to get out, and when they get in, if they have any accommodations at all, they are charged for admission, but there is another provision that covers that, anyway.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The fact that they are admitted and would pay for admission, a charge for the privilege, does not affect the bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. No; we will collect the tax.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I would like to ask how in the world the tax is going to be paid by the person admitted. The section says it is to be paid "by the person so admitted." You do not assess it upon the proprietor of the establishment.

Mr. KITCHIN. He collects it. He is to turn it over. Under the law the proprietor collects it and turns it over.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. But who is to pay it; it does not say the proprietor is to turn it over?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; we have another section that provides for that.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the person who has to pay that 5-cent tax pay it at the time he applies for the ticket?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; at the time he enters.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Of course I understand what it means; but the gentleman will observe the language "and a tax of 5 cents for each admission of each person admitted free to be paid by the person so admitted." He can not get in until he has paid the 5 cents, and yet it says "admitted free."

Mr. KITCHIN. He goes in free, but he pays the 5-cent tax to get in.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Exactly; but he is not "admitted free." That language ought to read "a tax of 5 cents"——

Mr. KITCHIN. That is the tax; he is admitted free.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I would ask to have my amendment voted on. My motion was to strike out. I think I will stand on that, and, if it is voted down, then the gentleman can offer his amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I send to the Clerk's desk an amendment out of an abundance of caution. I do not think it is necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 30, line 5, after the word "age," insert the words "and municipal officers on official business."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which is at the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CRAMTON offers the following amendment: Page 30 line 8, after the word "charge," insert "less than the charge for adults."

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, if I may have the attention of the chairman of the committee I will say this seems to me necessary to prevent difficulty in the enforcement of the act. In many cases there are no differences made in the price to a child or an adult. A theater sells a ticket, that is a seat. Now, if you are going to make a difference in the tax as to whether an adult or a child uses that seat, that is a matter that the theater will not know about perhaps, not even the buyer of the ticket might know when he buys it. Hence, I have limited the children's tax, so to speak, to apply only when the ticket is sold at a special price to a child.

In that case, of course, it should work out all right.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is exactly what we intended here. Wherever a child is admitted that is under 12 years of age, I do not care whether it pays the full price or any other price, it pays a penny more.

Mr. CRAMTON. If Keith's Theater sells me a ticket for my little girl, they require me to pay full price for her.

Mr. KITCHIN. Then you will pay a cent on that ticket if she is under 12 years of age.

Mr. CRAMTON. They have no way of knowing.

Mr. KITCHIN. They would see whether it was all right or not.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to any admissions all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious or charitable institutions, societies, or organizations, or admissions to agricultural fairs all the proceeds of which inure exclusively for agricultural purposes.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 30, line 14, after the word "organizations," insert "bona fide chautauquas or lyceum courses operated under a contract with local guarantors."

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, if I can have the attention of the chairman of the committee, I will say that I have offered this amendment to exempt the bona fide chautauquas that are operating under local guarantors. I do not mean by that to exempt any associations that are run primarily for profit, but I wondered whether these many lyceum courses that are run in connection with the Young Men's Christian Associations or with the various churches, or with numerous committees that are created in villages and towns or municipalities, which are really charitable in their character, would fall under the terminology of this paragraph. It says, "Religious or charitable institutions, societies, or organizations." There seems to be some confusion as to whether these lyceum courses would fall under this exemption. The language is not conclusive in its meaning.

I have had a good deal of experience, not in lecturing in chautauquas, for I might say to this committee that I have never been in the employment of any lecture bureau, nor have I ever filled an engagement that was dated by a lyceum bureau under contract. So I am not now speaking in the interest of anyone who might have a commercial interest in lyceum courses.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. I will.

Mr. FORDNEY. It was the purpose of the committee to tax where admissions were collected for profit, where those gatherings——

Mr. FESS. Let me ask my friend a question. Here is a school that runs an annual lecture course during the school year, and it is run to secure proceeds to be invested in a library, or in books, or in pictures for schoolroom decorations, or in a musical instrument, or the like of that, for use to the public in educational matters. Would such courses fall within the requirements of this tax?

Mr. FORDNEY. I would not think that would be profit.

Mr. FESS. It surely would. But the profits would be invested for the benefit of the town or school.

Mr. FORDNEY. If it is, it ought to pay, then; if it were profit for a library or school, or any other thing except charitable purposes.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman from Ohio forgets this is no tax upon the chautauquas, but upon the man who attends. It collects his little penny, or 5 cents, or, if it is a dollar, 10 cents. Suppose it is a school, why not collect a war tax?

Mr. FESS. For the last 10 years we have run a chautauqua in connection with Antioch College, but never for profit. It has been a distinctive educational value of vast importance to our entire community.

Mr. KITCHIN. You would pay something for a Chautauqua lecture?

Mr. FESS. We had Speaker CLARK, and Gov. Kelley and others two years ago.

Mr. KITCHIN. They were there for profit?

Mr. FESS. We also had Mr. MADDEN and Senator HARDING.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not think Mr. MADDEN would charge anything, nor in fact, would CLARK or HARDING——

Mr. FESS. Of course, men can not afford to give their time and talent; but in the main these did that for the sake of the college. Some of them gave their services entirely free, even paying their own expenses. It was purely a matter of personal contribution. If it had been necessary for me to have paid all of those men the usual lyceum price, that 1915 chautauqua would have cost me over $700 more than the receipts. My 10 years' experience proved that I could not run such an institution without gratuitous service.

Mr. KITCHIN. You would not have had to pay a cent of tax, because those attending would have paid this little toward the support of the Government.

Mr. FESS. I would have had to charge a sufficient additional amount for the tickets that it would have reduced the attendance way below what it really was. Every man of any experience knows you can not charge beyond a ruling price for either season tickets or single admission.

Mr. KITCHIN. Did you charge anything for the admission?

Mr. FESS. We charged $2.50 for the 10 days, including afternoon and evening programs. Now, I would have had to add——

Mr. KITCHIN. Twenty-five cents.

Mr. FESS. I would have had to make it $2.75.

Mr. KITCHIN. Do you think you would have kept a single person out of there if you had added 25 cents, they knowing that it was for war tax to help on this war?

Mr. FESS. My dear friend, the very fact that the war is on will make the chautauqua less profitable. People will not be so free to indulge in these instructional courses.

Mr. KITCHIN. The fellow that is going to attend will be glad to pay it.

Mr. FESS. I appreciate the position of the chairman. He places the additional amount on a patriotic basis. My fear is that this very important popular educational institution which must depend upon patronage for its continuance will discontinue. I look upon their cessation as a distinct loss to our country. The Chautauqua platform is a great summer school attended by a very respectable proportion of our population, young and old. It is the platform upon which are freely discussed all questions of national import pro and con. It is an error to regard them as primarily commercial. Were they of that character I should not defend them. In that case they should be made to pay the tax. I fear the tax will discourage the people from attendance. They will not buy the tickets.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. FESS. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, for three minutes more.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, let us get on.

Mr. FESS. Will my friend from North Carolina accept the amendment?

Mr. KITCHIN. No.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest that you add Mr. KITCHEN to your list of orators next time. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. Yes. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him whether he is going to have the Swiss yodelers?

Mr. FESS. No. I am speaking of a system of public education that is pretty generally established throughout the country which I think will be very largely destroyed by this additional tax. It is not primarily entertainment. It is a public education, suggested by the character of the men that I mentioned a while ago. True we must vary our program so as to suit the community. We usually have musical numbers, some readings, and some entertainment in the evening. But our main program is educational, not entertainment.

Mr. CANNON. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. FESS. My friend who is interrupting me will likely remember that he had a letter from me inviting him to accept an invitation to come to our place to address our community from our Chautauqua platform.

Mr. CANNON. Yes. Let me ask the gentleman a question, and, if necessary, I will ask to have his time extended.

Mr. FESS. Very well.

Mr. CANNON. I understand that this is a business. The appointments are made in Cleveland, Chicago, and other places, and agreements are made with the people who attend the Chautauquas for so much. In order to get exactly what I mean I understand—and I think I am reliably informed—that some years ago a man who had temporary employment at Harvard—I do not know just how temporary—with a reputation at one time at Chicago, perhaps having some connection with the University of Chicago—a man went out to one point in Indiana and he proceeded to attack this political party and that political party and this individual and that individual, and when he got through he finished up his lecture by advocating the German policy that obtained in some portions of Germany of trial marriages, and if they did not like it it did not go for anything. Is that called "educational?" [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. CANNON. I ask that the gentleman from Ohio may have five minutes.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, let us get on with this.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin makes the point of no quorum. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Sixty-four gentlemen are present, not a quorum.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I move a call of the House.

Mr. MANN. Oh, do not punish all of us.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. It is now half past 6, and when gentlemen begin talking about Chautauquas and trial marriages I do not see any prospect of getting through to-night. [Laughter.]

Mr. KITCHIN. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his point.

The CHAIRMAN. It is too late to withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. CARLIN. Automatically the call takes place now.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I will state to the House right now that we will stay here to-morrow night and finish the bill, if possible, if we have to stay up all night. [Applause.] This thing of leaving the impression on the outside world that we are not in favor of taxing ourselves to carry on this war is very lamentable and must stop. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. I have been urging you for a week to stay here at night.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. If the committee will indulge the Chair for a moment, the Chair would like to say this, that the Chair was in error to-day when he made a ruling on the subject of debating an appeal. It is debatable. The Chair wants to correct that.

Mr. MANN. I knew the Chairman was wrong.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina moves——

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is too late. The gentleman from North Carolina moves that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. FOSTER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW—11.30 A. M.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. MANN. I ask that the gentleman make it 11.30. We have a conference to-morrow morning.

Mr. KITCHIN. Very well.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11.30 to-morrow morning. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bill:

H. R. 3330. An act to temporarily increase the commissioned and warrant and enlisted strength of the Navy and Marine Corps, and for other purposes.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject I was speaking on when interrupted by the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has the right to do that under the general order.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned, pursuant to the order just made, until to-morrow, Tuesday, May 22, 1917, at 11.30 a. m.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. RAYBURN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4467) to amend the act to regulate commerce, as amended, and for other purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 58), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. COADY, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4503) to fix the status and rights of officers of the Public Health Service when serving with the Coast Guard, the Army, or the Navy, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 59), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: A bill (H. R. 4614) providing a graduated rate for payment of second-class postage on newspapers, magazines, and periodicals according to rate of subscription price and number of copies circulated through the mails; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. AUSTIN: A bill (H. R. 4615) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to acquire possession of a piece of land in Hudson River, State of New York, county of Rockland, known as Round Island; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KALANIANAOLE: A bill (H. R. 4616) to ratify, approve, and confirm an act duly enacted by the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, creating a commission to increase, conserve, regulate, and control the food supplies of the Territory of Hawaii, and defining its powers and duties and making an appropriation for the purposes thereof; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. FERRIS: A bill (H. R. 4617) to authorize absence by homestead settlers and entrymen, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. HULBERT: A bill (H. R. 4618) to increase the salaries of the United States district attorney and United States marshal for the southern district of New York, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: A bill (H. R. 4625) to incorporate the American Academy of Engineers; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. EMERSON: Resolution (H. Res. 84) to investigate the cause of the high price of coal; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. LENROOT: Resolution (H. Res. 85) repealing paragraph 3 of section 21 of the Rules of the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. KALANIANAOLE: Memorial from the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, for the enactment of a law that will permit the people of Hawaii to elect their governor and the secretary of the Territory; to the Committee on Territories.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, asking Congress to provide ways and means for the improvement of Honolulu Harbor to meet the ever-increasing requirements of shipping; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. CURRY of California: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, relating to needy Indians within the State of California; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, relative to devoting revenues from national forests to the construction of works for flood control; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, relative to the construction and maintenance of a military highway along the Pacific coast from the Canadian to the Mexican border; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KALANIANAOLE: Memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, asking Congress to pass the Kalanianaole bill to give to the Hawaii Legislature the right to put to the vote of the people the question of woman suffrage; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. COOPER of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 4619) granting a pension to Mrs. Lucinda Hollabaugh; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAMLIN: A bill (H. R. 4620) granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Craig; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEY of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 4621) granting an increase of pension to Ambrose Wells; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORIN: A bill (H. R. 4622) for the relief of Brig. Gen. Chambers McKibbin, United States Army, retired; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Miss RANKIN: A bill (H. R. 4623) granting a pension to Claude Johnson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ROBERTS: A bill (H. R. 4624) for the relief of Charles M. Way; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of the Southern Baptist Convention, New Orleans, La., signed by J. B. Gamrell, president, and C. M. Moore, secretary, protesting against increase of tax on intoxicating liquors for revenue, and urging prohibition at least during the war; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of Manufacturer's Association, St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the prohibition of the use of grain in the manufacture of beer, liquors, and beverages; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CAREW: Petition of Central Labor Union and labor organizations, protesting against prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of American Institute of Mining Engineers and the National Arts Club, favoring universal military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CARY: Telegram signed by Messrs. Alsted Kasten Co., Emil Bachman, O. H. Bingenheimer, A. Bloedel, Fred Buege, L. W. Bunde, George Durner, Federal Optical Co., E. L. Feiling, Fink Boszhardt Co., Alfred Fuchs, A. E. Gasch, O. L. Glahn, George Gretzer, H. Hammersmith, J. R. Hample, A. C. Hentschel, Ed. Jenesen, J. J. Krieger, Max Krieger, L. Kuesel, Edward Kupper, Anthony Keising, Theodore Leubusher, Lockin Billings Jewelry Co., Otto Logeman, Edward Mass, O. G. Meacha, Arthur B. Meyers, Milwaukee Optical Co., E. H. Motl, Thomas Platzer, T. F. Randloph, E. F. Rohn, E. J. Rohn, August Rack, J. Sauermann, Theodore Schelle, Al Schreiber, Schulenberg Bros., R. Seidel, M. Springer, Henry Stretcher, R. Staller, Stouthammer Bros., B. W. Thien, Fred J. Theleman, F. A. Thomas, Theodore J. Welmeyer, William Upmeyer, L. A. Vaness, E. W. Warnke, Joe Weilstein, F. P. Wilde, Henry Zwengel, George Wolfgram, and George H. Doherty, all of Milwaukee, Wis., urging consideration of the brief and suggested amendments to the revenue bill presented by the jewelry committee which appeared before the Senate Finance Committee May 12; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of John Pritzlaff Hardware Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against Hardwick amendment to Federal reserve act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, memorial of the Loan and Building Association League of Milwaukee, Wis., asking exemption of building and loan associations from war revenue tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the international executive board, United Mine Workers of America, and Titusville Forge Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., against zone system; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CRAGO: Memorial of Market Square Presbyterian Church, of Harrisburg; First Christian Church of Marianna; and Rotary Club of Pittsburgh, Pa., favoring prohibition as war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DALE of New York: Memorial of National Board of Fire Underwriters, favoring daylight-saving bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petitions of Wallace & Co. and the Crockery Board of Trade, of New York, against increase in letter postage; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, against prohibition legislation; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Merchants' Association of New York, against 10 per cent tax on express shipments; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of New York, opposing the zone system to second-class mail matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the American Bankers' Association, favoring the Hardwick amendment to the Federal reserve act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, memorial of New York Association for the Protection of Game, relative to treaty for protection of migratory birds; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DOOLING: Memorial of the Merchants' Association of New York, opposing increase of postal rates on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Alumnæ Association of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y., expressing loyalty and support to the Government; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ESCH: Memorial of farmers and farm owners of Melrose and La Crosse (Wis.) Retail Grocers' Association, relative to food control; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the New York Association for the Protection of Game, relative to treaty for protection of migratory birds; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FREEMAN: Petition of Edwin Lamphere and others, of Old Mystic, Conn., protesting against the use of grain in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Ernest Wilde and others, of Central Village, Conn., protesting against the use of grain in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of J. M. Potter and others, of Gales Ferry, Conn., against the use of grain in the manufacture of intoxicating liquor; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of J. Franklin Bailey and others, of Durham, Conn., favoring national prohibition during the war; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Mrs. Lucy Smith and others, of Eagleville, Conn., protesting against the use of grain for manufacture of intoxicating liquors; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Petitions of sundry publishers and citizens of New York, against the increase in postal rates on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Jewelers' Vigilance Committee, relative to the jewelry business in war-revenue bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the American Bankers' Association of New York, favoring Hardwick amendment to the Federal reserve act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of Patriotic Educational Guilds, relative to universal military training; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, against prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Mitchell Wagon Co., relative to method for controlling profits of manufacturers and suppliers on war goods; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North America and other allied theater interests, concerning suggestion for amendment of House bill 4280, relative to war tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Pathe Exchange, against tax in war-revenue bill and favoring Canadian system of taxation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOLLINGSWORTH: Memorial of United Presbyterian Church of Scraggsfield, Ohio, favoring national prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McFADDEN: Memorial of Universalist Churches of Hop Bottom and Nicholson, Pa., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MORIN: Petition of the international executive board of United Mine Workers of America, representing 500,000 mine workers, protesting against an increase of rates on second-class mail matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. NOLAN: Resolutions adopted by Local No. 164, International Molders' Union, San Francisco, Cal., and the Central Labor Council of Alameda County, Oakland Cal.; also protests of Stationary Engineers, Local No. 64, International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, and Local Union, No. 1689, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of San Francisco, Cal., protesting against any amendment to the Chinese-exclusion act which would permit the importation to this country of any Chinese for farm laborers; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. PLATT: Petition of members of the Tabernacle Baptist Church, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PRATT: Petition of Woman Suffrage Party of Schuyler County, N. Y., by Miss Jessie Norton, secretary, favoring the woman-suffrage amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROWE: Petition of Printed Bookbinders Local Union, No. 3, of New York, N. Y., protesting against increase of second-class postage rates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of A. Ryder, of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against exempting State, county, or municipal officers from payment of income tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of H. N. Thomas, of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against tax on carbonic acid; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SINNOTT: Petition of 700 citizens and residents of Mansfield, Oreg., favoring legislation against food speculation; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STINESS: Petitions of Massachusetts and Rhode Island Retail Jewelers' Association, E. F. Lilley, president, J. Arthur Clem, secretary; B. A. Ballou & Co. (Inc.); the Low, Taussig, Karpeles Co., Maurice J. Karpeles, president; Cohn, Rosenberger (Inc.); Gorham Manufacturing Co.; William C. Greene Co.; M. F. Williams Co.; Cutler Jewelry Co.; S. B. Champlin Co.; Ostby & Barton Co.; E. R. Barker; Wolcott Manufacturing Co.; Markham & Stone; the R. L. Griffith & Son Co.; New England Manufacturing Jewelers and Silversmiths' Association; the Albert Walker Co.; Oscar E. Place & Sons Co.; Thornton Bros. Co.; Wachenheimer Bros.; and Chapin & Hollister Co., all of Providence, in the State of Rhode Island; and Standard Button Co., Clarence L. Watson, president, Attleboro, Mass., favoring amendments to the revenue bill as set forth by the jewelry committee representing the interests of the entire jewelry industry in its brief presented to the Senate Finance Committee May 12, 1917; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VARE: Petition of the Farm Journal, relative to proposed zone postal rates; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Philadelphia and Rotary Club of Pittsburgh (Pa.), favoring prohibition as war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, May 22, 1917.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, who sittest upon Thy throne ruling aright, look with infinite compassion upon us. Bless our whole Nation. Fill the people with an ardent desire for the establishment of the liberty of the sons of God, for the welfare of all mankind, and for the coming of Thy kingdom. Guide in the councils of our Nation. Bless every anxious heart awaiting amid uncertainty, with ever-increasing faith in Thy providence, and with patience under trials. Grant to hasten the day when triumph of the right shall come, when all the people shall read in living lines the leadership of God in the midst of this Nation, dedicated to His service. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a petition of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, praying for the enactment of legislation for daylight saving, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a telegram in the nature of a petition from the Fruit Growers' Agency of Spokane, Wash., praying that fresh fruit be classified as food and for the exemption of farm laborers from conscription, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a telegram in the nature of a memorial from the Southern Baptist Convention, held at New Orleans, La., remonstrating against an increase of the tax on intoxicating liquor and praying for national prohibition, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Rochester, N. Y., praying for the repeal of the conscription law and remonstrating against sending troops to France, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented the petition of W. A. Claflin, of Montpelier, Vt., submitting a plan for solving the submarine menace, which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. KENDRICK. I have here a copy of a memorial from the market committee, representing the American National Live Stock Association, in which is reflected the sentiment of the stock growers of the Nation in regard to the pending food-control legislation. I ask that the memorial be read and published in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the memorial was read, as follows:

[Telegram.]

DENVER, COLO., May 15, 1917.

Hon. THOMAS P. GORE,
Chairman Committee on Agriculture;
Hon. DAVID F. HOUSTON,
Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.:

The American National Live Stock Association is in hearty accord with the policy of the Government to encourage food production and has tendered its active cooperation in determining and executing the most effective plans for the accomplishment of this purpose. To do this with respect to live stock it is most important that our available pasturage and feed supplies shall be utilized in the most highly efficient manner and that the number and character of animals fed and the distribution of these animals shall be properly related to the available pasturage and feed. We therefore respectfully suggest that legislative or administrative restrictions should not be imposed upon the shipment or slaughter of cows and calves until the precise character of such restrictions and their possible effect upon the very object we all have in mind has been given the most careful consideration in connection with such information and advice as can be obtained from experienced live-stock producers and feeders.

MARKET COMMITTEE AMERICAN NATIONAL LIVE STOCK ASSOCIATION,
H. A. JASTRO, Chairman.

Mr. NELSON presented petitions of sundry citizens of Minnesota, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the manufacture of foodstuffs into intoxicating liquor, which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented memorials of the Webb Publishing Co., of St. Paul, Minn., and the Agricultural Publishers' Association, of Chicago, Ill., remonstrating against an increase of postage rates on second-class mail matter, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a petition of the congregation of the First Congregational Church of Onekama, Mich., praying for national prohibition as a war measure, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Coleman, Mich., praying for the repeal of the conscription law, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sandusky, Mich., remonstrating against the use of grain for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented memorials of the Federation of Labor of Detroit, the Central Labor Council of Sault Ste. Marie; of Council No. 156, United Commercial Travelers of America, of Kalamazoo; and of Council No. 131, United Commercial Travelers of America, of Grand Rapids, all of Michigan, remonstrating against an increase in postal rates on second-class mail matter, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of Cigar Makers' Local Union of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., remonstrating against an increase in the tax on cigars, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of the Massachusetts State Committee on Public Safety, praying for the enactment of legislation for daylight saving, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. PAGE presented petitions of the Local Union, No. 683, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, of Burlington, Vt., praying for the enactment of legislation to raise the war expenses by increased income taxes, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland presented petitions of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church of Kensington and sundry citizens of Halethorpe and Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, praying for national prohibition as a war measure, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

BILLS AND A JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SHERMAN:

A bill (S. 2345) granting an increase of pension to Joshua A. Epperson; and

A bill (S. 2346) granting an increase of pension to William F. Hicks; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JONES of Washington:

A bill (S. 2347) granting an increase of pension to Josiah Wilson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CHAMBERLAIN:

A bill (S. 2348) granting a pension to Mark M. Coffman; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland:

A bill (S. 2349) for the relief of Jacob M. Middlekauff; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JONES of Washington:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 68) authorizing a survey of the canal between Port Townsend Bay and Oak Bay, in Jefferson County, Wash.; to the Committee on Commerce.

DEALINGS IN FUTURES.

Mr. NELSON. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense, to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels, and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes. I ask that it be read, printed, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The amendment was read, ordered to be printed, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, as follows:

SEC. —. Any building or room occupied or used by a board of trade, chamber of commerce, grain exchange, or otherwise, in which wheat or other food cereals are bought or sold for present or future delivery shall, for the purpose of this act, be known as a grain exchange.

All persons engaged in buying or selling, for present or future delivery, any wheat or other food cereal, in or about any such grain exchange, shall be known and designated as traders in grain.

All sales of wheat or other food cereals by such traders in such exchanges for future delivery, and not for present or immediate delivery, shall be known and designated as dealings in futures.

If at any time during the pendency of the existing war between the United States and the German Empire the President of the United States shall find that such dealings in futures, in or about any grain exchange, unduly, unreasonably, and in an unwarranted manner raise or enhance the price of wheat or other food cereals, to the injury of the people of the United States, he may at once request the traders in such exchange to discontinue for a time specified by him all dealings in futures, where there is no actual delivery of the product sold. In case such request of the President is not promptly complied with, then he is hereby empowered to order such dealings in futures, as last aforesaid, to be entirely suspended and discontinued for such limited time as he may direct, and if such order is not promptly complied with he is hereby empowered to close such grain exchange for the purpose of enforcing such order.

FOOD CONTROL.

Mr. NEWLANDS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2263) to provide further for the national security and defense, to conserve foods, feeds, and fuels, and to prevent monopolies, conspiracies, and other evil practices respecting the same, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

OREGON & CALIFORNIA RAILROAD CO.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I ask to have referred to the Committee on Printing a copy of the law and the decision of the Supreme Court in connection therewith relative to the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, to Portland, Oreg., with a view to having them printed as a public document.

Mr. SMOOT. May I ask the Senator what was the request?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I was asking to have referred to the Committee on Printing a copy of the law and decision of the court, which I desire to have printed as a public document. I wish the committee to examine it and report on it first.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The matter will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

CAR-SERVICE SHORTAGE.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. POMERENE. I ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 328) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," as amended, in respect of car service, and for other purposes, which was reported by me yesterday from the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Ohio?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate Commerce with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That an act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, be further amended and supplemented as follows:

The term "car service," as used in this act, shall include the movement, distribution, exchange, interchange, and return of cars used in the transportation of property by any carrier subject to the provisions of this act.

It shall be the duty of every such carrier to establish, observe, and enforce just and reasonable rules, regulations, and practices with respect to car service, and every unjust and unreasonable rule, regulation, and practice with respect to car service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby authorized by general or special orders to require all carriers subject to the provisions of the act, or any of them, to file with it from time to time their rules and regulations with respect to car service, and the commission may, in its discretion, direct that the said rules and regulations shall be incorporated in their schedules showing rates, fares, and charges for transportation and be subject to any or all of the provisions of the act relating thereto.

The commission shall, after hearing, on a complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, establish reasonable rules, regulations, and practices with respect to car service, including the classification of cars, compensation to be paid for the use of any car not owned by any such common carrier and the penalties or other sanctions for nonobservance of such rules.

Whenever the commission shall be of opinion that necessity exists for immediate action with respect to the supply or use of cars for transportation of property, the commission shall have, and it is hereby given, authority, either upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, at once, if it so orders, without answer or other formal pleading by the interested carrier or carriers, and with or without notice, hearing or the making or filing of a report, according as the commission may determine, to suspend the operation of any or all rules, regulations, or practices then established with respect to car service for such time as may be determined by the commission, and also authority to make such just and reasonable directions with respect to car service during such time as in its opinion will best promote car service in the interest of the public and the commerce of the people.

The directions of the commission as to car service may be made through and by such agents or agencies as the commission shall designate and appoint for that purpose.

In case of failure or refusal on the part of any carrier, receiver, or trustee to comply with any direction or order with respect to car service, such carrier, receiver, or trustee shall be liable to a penalty of not less than $100 nor more than $500 for each such offense and $50 for each and every day of the continuance of such offense, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. POMERENE. Yesterday I presented a report on the bill, and in order that the Senate may have access to the reasons which prompted the committee to adopt the amendment I ask that the report be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Senate Report No. 43, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session.]

Mr. POMERENE, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Interstate Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 328) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," as amended, in respect to car service, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report it back to the Senate with the recommendation to strike out all after the enacting clause and substitute therefor the following:

"That an act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, be further amended and supplemented as follows:

"'The term "car service" as used in this act shall include the movement, distribution, exchange, interchange, and return of cars used in the transportation of property by any carrier subject to the provisions of this act.

"'It shall be the duty of every such carrier to establish, observe, and enforce just and reasonable rules, regulations, and practices with respect to car service, and every unjust and unreasonable rule, regulation, and practice with respect to car service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful.

"'The Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby authorized by general or special orders to require all carriers subject to the provisions of the act, or any of them, to file with it from time to time their rules and regulations with respect to car service, and the commission may, in its discretion, direct that the said rules and regulations shall be incorporated in their schedules showing rates, fares, and charges for transportation and be subject to any or all of the provisions of the act relating thereto.

"'The commission shall, after hearing, on a complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, establish reasonable rules, regulations, and practices with respect to car service, including the classification of cars, compensation to be paid for the use of any car not owned by any such common carrier, and the penalties or other sanctions for nonobservance of such rules.

"'Whenever the commission shall be of opinion that necessity exists for immediate action with respect to the supply or use of cars for transportation of property, the commission shall have, and it is hereby given, authority, either upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, at once, if it so orders, without answer or other formal pleading by the interested carrier or carriers, and with or without notice, hearing, or the making or filing of a report, according as the commission may determine, to suspend the operation of any or all rules, regulations, or practices then established with respect to car service for such time as may be determined by the commission, and also authority to make such just and reasonable directions with respect to car service during such time as in its opinion will best promote car service in the interest of the public and the commerce of the people.

"'The directions of the commission as to car service may be made through and by such agents or agencies as the commission shall designate and appoint for that purpose.

"'In case of failure or refusal on the part of any carrier, receiver, or trustee to comply with any direction or order with respect to car service, such carrier, receiver, or trustee shall be liable to a penalty of not less than $100 nor more than $500 for each such offense and $50 for each and every day of the continuance of such offense, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States.'"

The first paragraph of the proposed amendment defines the term car service used in this bill as including "the movement, distribution, exchange, interchange, and return of cars" used in the transportation of property by any carrier subject to its provisions;

The second paragraph makes it the duty of the carriers to establish, observe, and enforce just and reasonable rules, regulations, and practices, with respect to car service and prohibits unjust and unreasonable rules, regulations, and practices;

The third paragraph authorizes the commission to require carriers to file with it from time to time the rules and regulations with respect to car service and the commission, in its discretion, may order them to be incorporated in their schedules of rates, fares, and charges for transportation;

The fourth paragraph provides that the commission, after hearing on a complaint, or upon its own initiative without complaint, shall establish reasonable rules, regulations, and practices with respect to car service, classification of cars, and the compensation to be paid for the use of any car not owned by any such common carrier and penalties or other sanctions for the observation of such rules;

The fifth paragraph authorizes the commission, when in its opinion necessity exists for immediate action with respect to the supply or use of cars for transportation of property, either upon complaint or upon its own initiative, without complaint, at once, and if it so orders, without answer or other formal pleading, and with or without notice, hearing, or report, to suspend the operation or any or all rules, regulations, or practices then established for such time as the commission may desire, and to make such just and reasonable directions with respect to car service during such time as in its opinion will best promote car service in the interest of the public and the commerce of the people;

The sixth paragraph permits the commission to exercise its authority through such agents or agencies as it may designate for that purpose; and

The seventh and last paragraph fixes the penalties.

The purpose of the proposed amendment or substitute is to give the commission plenary power over the "movement, distribution, exchange, interchange, and return of cars," to the end that the public may receive the best possible service in transportation.

The Interstate Commerce Commission decided January 18, 1917, by a vote of 4 to 3, in "No. 9284, Car Supply Investigation," that the Interstate Commerce Commission had the power to control the distribution of cars. Three of the commissioners, Messrs. Clark, Clements, and Hall, dissented from this view. Whether the majority or minority opinion is the correct view, it is sufficient to say that grave doubt exists when there should be none. A maximum of service can only be had out of present facilities by conferring upon the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to regulate car service.

Our transportation system for months has failed to meet the requirements of trade. Cars have not been equitably distributed. This may be due in part to lack of warehouse, elevator, and trackage facilities; in part to insufficient supply of cars; in part to failure of shippers and consignees to load and unload cars, but it certainly is in large part caused by lack of system in the movement, distribution, exchange, and interchange and return of cars. Inexcusable delays have been permitted in returning cars from points of destination to the roads owning them. There seems to be an utter lack of spirit of accommodation among the different railway systems in the return of cars to the owning companies, with the result that many cars have been lying idle when they should be moving. Thus the public has been compelled to suffer unnecessarily. Because of this condition producers of food, fuel, and merchandise have not been able to transport their products to the consumers, and the public has been made to suffer unnecessarily.

To illustrate conditions in grain-producing States, the testimony of Mr. O. P. B. Jacobson, railroad commissioner of Minnesota, is illuminating. In substance he told the Interstate Commerce Commission on May 3, 1917, that the State of Minnesota had 25,000,000 bushels of grain which should be removed at once. Twenty million bushels of it had been sold to millers and other grain men throughout the United States and the other 5,000,000 to the allies, and the railroads were without cars with which to move this great supply. At that time thousands and thousands of cars with grain were on the tracks of the Lehigh Valley and other roads for months, coming from the West. Thirty per cent of the cars of the Great Northern Railroad were in the East and the owning company could not get them back. The same condition was true with the Northern Pacific.

According to figures furnished the committee by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the railroads grouped in the States indicated, had, on April 15, 1917, box cars on their lines in excess of those owned by them, as follows:

In the New England States, 9,869 cars.

In New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and east Pennsylvania, 69,198 cars.

In Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, and west Pennsylvania, 12,060 cars.

In Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, 11,065 cars.

The railroads in the following groups of States on the same date owned box cars in excess of the number on their lines, as follows:

In Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida, 24,980 cars; Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, 30,211 cars; Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, and the Dakotas, 2,230 cars; Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Arkansas, 17,861 cars; Texas, Louisiana, and New Mexico, 4,617 cars; Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, California, Utah, and Arizona, 4,939 cars.

On the same date, the railroads grouped in the following States indicated had gondola coal and coke cars on their lines in excess of those owned by them, as follows:

In the New England States, 10,039; Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, and west Pennsylvania, 5,266; Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, 19,350; Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, and the Dakotas, 1,965; Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Arkansas, 2,923; Texas, Louisiana, and New Mexico, 170; Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, California, Utah, and Arizona, 6,003.

And the railroads in the following groups of States owned cars in excess of the number on their lines as follows:

In New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and east Pennsylvania, 47,646; Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, 31,249; and Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida, 15,723.

Car service rules relating to the return of cars to the owning roads have been prescribed by the American Railway Association, but many of the carriers have refused or neglected to comply with these regulations. Failure to return cars to the owning roads has become a common practice.

"The misuses of equipment resulted in depriving the owning lines of cars which they had provided for the transportation of coal, grain, perishable commodities, and other articles and diverted such cars from the normal channels to the transportation of other commodities in other territory and reducing in large measure the ability of certain carriers to serve the shippers and consignees of freight located on their lines or their connections, and in denying to many shippers and consignees such transportation facilities as were necessary to them, and such as they would have received if freight cars had been handled in accordance with car-service rules."

Your committee is driven to the conclusion that while additional equipment is perhaps needed to accommodate the extraordinary amount of traffic, they have not used their present equipment systematically and so as to get from it the amount of service of which it is capable.

The American Railway Association has adopted rules providing for the return of cars to the owning roads, but their rules, no doubt adopted in the best of faith, have not been observed by some of the carriers. Under the circumstances, your committee is of the opinion that the Interstate Commerce Commission should be clothed not only with authority to make the necessary rules, but also with the power to see that they are properly enforced.

We therefore recommend the adoption of the proposed substitute. Our reasons for preferring the substitute for the bill as it passed the House are in part as follows:

First. It is shorter in form and we believe more readily understood.

Second. Its definition of car service is broader and embraces "the movement and distribution" of cars as well as "the exchange, interchange, and return of cars."

Third. The commission is required to establish reasonable rules, regulations, and practices with respect to car service.

Fourth. We give to the commission fuller power over car service whenever the occasion requires its exercise.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I suggest to the Senator from Ohio that he ask for a conference with the House upon the bill and amendment.

Mr. POMERENE. The Senator can make that request.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House on the bill and amendment and that the conferees be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. NEWLANDS, Mr. POMERENE, and Mr. CUMMINS conferees on the part of the Senate.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 1816) to amend the act to regulate commerce, as amended, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 24 of an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, as amended, be further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 24. That the Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby enlarged so as to consist of nine members, with terms of seven years, and each shall receive $10,000 compensation annually. The qualifications of the members and the manner of the payment of their salaries shall be as already provided by law. Such enlargement of the commission shall be accomplished through appointment by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of two additional Interstate Commerce Commissioners, one for a term expiring December 31, 1921, and one for a term expiring December 31, 1922. The terms of the present commissioners, or of any successor appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the death or resignation of any of the present commissioners, shall expire as heretofore provided by law. Their successors and the successors of the additional commissioners herein provided for shall be appointed for the full term of seven years, except that any person appointed to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the commissioner whom he shall succeed. Not more than five commissioners shall be appointed from the same political party."

SEC. 2. That section 17 of said act, as amended, be further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 17. That the commission may conduct its proceedings in such manner as will best conduce to the proper dispatch of business and to the ends of justice. The commission shall have an official seal, which shall be judicially noticed. Any member of the commission may administer oaths and affirmations and sign subpœnas. A majority of the commission shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, except as may be otherwise herein provided, but no commissioner shall participate in any hearing or proceeding in which he has any pecuniary interest. The commission may, from time to time, make or amend such general rules or orders as may be requisite for the order and regulation of proceedings before it, or before any division of the commission, including forms of notices and the service thereof, which shall conform, as nearly as may be, to those in use in the courts of the United States. Any party may appear before the commission or any division thereof and be heard in person or by attorney. Every vote and official act of the commission, or of any division thereof, shall be entered of record, and its proceedings shall be public upon the request of any party interested.

"The commission is hereby authorized by its order to divide the members thereof into as many divisions as it may deem necessary, which may be changed from time to time. Such divisions shall be denominated, respectively, division 1, division 2, etc. Any commissioner may be assigned to and may serve upon such division or divisions as the commission may direct, and the senior in service of the commissioners constituting any of said divisions shall act as chairman thereof. In case of vacancy in any division, or of absence or inability to serve thereon of any commissioner thereto assigned, the chairman of the commission, or any commissioner designated by him for that purpose, may temporarily serve on said division until the commission shall otherwise order.

"The commission may by order direct that any of its work, business, or functions arising under this act, or under any act amendatory thereof, or supplemental thereto, or under any amendment which may be made to any of said acts, or under any other act or joint resolution which has been or may hereafter be approved, or in respect of any matter which has been or may be referred to the commission by Congress or by either branch thereof, be assigned or referred to any of said divisions for action thereon, and may by order at any time amend, modify, supplement, or rescind any such direction. All such orders shall take effect forthwith and remain in effect until otherwise ordered by the commission.

"In conformity with and subject to the order or orders of the commission in the premises, each division so constituted shall have power and authority by a majority thereof to hear and determine, order, certify, report, or otherwise act as to any of said work, business, or functions so assigned or referred to it for action by the commission, and in respect thereof the division shall have all the jurisdiction and powers now or then conferred by law upon the commission, and be subject to the same duties and obligations. Any order, decision, or report made or other action taken by any of said divisions in respect of any matters so assigned or referred to it shall have the same force and effect, and may be made, evidenced, and enforced in the same manner as if made or taken by the commission as a whole. The secretary and seal of the commission shall be the secretary and seal of each division thereof.

"In all proceedings relating to the reasonableness of rates or to alleged discriminations not less than three members shall sit in the hearing and participate in the decision; and in all hearings relating to the valuation of railway property under the act entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, by providing for a valuation of the several classes of property of carriers subject thereto and securing information concerning their stocks, bonds, and other securities,' approved March 1, 1913, not less than seven members shall sit in the hearing and participate in the decision.

"The salary of the secretary of the commission shall be $7,500 per annum.

"Nothing in this section contained, or done pursuant thereto, shall be deemed to divest the commission of any of its powers."

SEC. 3. So much of section 18 of the act to regulate commerce as fixes the salary of the secretary of the commission is hereby repealed.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I notice on page 5 of the bill, beginning in line 21, it is provided that—

The salary of the secretary of the commission shall be $7,500 per annum.

Mr. ROBINSON. It is.

Mr. SMOOT. As I remember, the present salary of the secretary is $5,000.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from Utah is correct.

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Senator from Arkansas state to the Senate why that increase is made?

Mr. ROBINSON. I shall be very glad to do so.

Mr. SMOOT. I shall be very glad to hear the Senator.

Mr. ROBINSON. This increase is very strongly urged and recommended by the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission who appeared before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. The facts, as disclosed upon the hearings on the bill and on similar bills, make it appear to the committee that the work of the secretary has been very greatly increased, that it is constantly increasing, and that the present salary is inadequate to compensate the secretary for the services which he actually performs. The committee thought the increase asked was but a fair one. That is the reason we made the increase from $5,000 to $7,500 per annum.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I will supplement what the Senator from Arkansas has said by stating that a similar bill passed the House at the last session. This matter was then fully considered by the committee of the House. The committee of the House also agreed that the important and onerous character of the duties of the practical administrator of the commission required this increase. This provision was in the bill as it came to us.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Nevada how long has the present secretary been in office?

Mr. NEWLANDS. He has been in office for a number of years; I think ever since the death of Mr. Moseley.

Mr. STONE. When did Mr. Moseley die?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Some six or seven years ago.

Mr. STONE. What did Mr. Moseley get?

Mr. NEWLANDS. He got $5,000 a year.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I should like to hear the proceedings of the Senate but I can not hear anything that is going on in the conversation or confidential communication between the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I was stating, in reply to the query of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE], that the present secretary, according to my recollection, succeeded Mr. Moseley. The Senator then asked me what Mr. Moseley's salary was, and I said it was $5,000.

Mr. STONE. Who is the present secretary?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. McGinty. Mr. McGinty is a very competent man. The duties of the commission have very largely increased and the duties of the secretary have very largely increased. The secretary is practically the administrative officer of the commission. That was fully considered by the Senate committee, as it had also been fully considered by the committee of the other House, and the bill which was passed by the other House at the last session provided for this increase of salary.

Mr. STONE. But what is the exact reason, as a business proposition, why Mr. McGinty's salary should now be raised one-half—I am not speaking of the per cent—one-half more than it now is? What is the exact reason for that?

Mr. NEWLANDS. The exact reason is that the duties of the office are very important and onerous and require a good administrator.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator from Nevada permit me to make a statement?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Certainly.

Mr. STONE. Just a moment. The duties of this officer are now the same as formerly?

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator permit me, in my own time, to make a statement? If objection is made by the Senator from Missouri and other Senators to this increase in the salary, I offer the following amendment: On page 5, line 22, to strike out "$7,500" and to insert "$5,000."

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, just a word. I am glad that the Senator from Arkansas has offered that amendment, and I sincerely hope that the Senate will adopt it. I want merely a moment to give my reasons for that.

When the legislative appropriation bill was passed and all other appropriation bills providing for the salaries of the employees of the Government it was tacitly agreed that, under present conditions, there should not be an increase of salary in any particular case. I have thought it was nothing more than right that that same understanding be followed out in a special bill increasing the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission. I do not care to say anything more in regard to the matter, because I think the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] is a just one and ought to be adopted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In view of the amendment which has just been made on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas, section 3, which relates to the same question, should be stricken out.

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 6 it is proposed to strike out section 3, as follows:

SEC. 3. So much of section 18 of the act to regulate commerce as fixes the salary of the secretary of the commission is hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, to be known as section 4.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Section 3 has now been stricken out.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Then, I move the amendment which I send to the desk as section 3.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Georgia will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill a new section, as follows:

SEC. 3. That section 15 of the act to regulate commerce as amended June 18, 1910, be further amended by striking from the second paragraph of said section the following words: "the commission shall have, and it is hereby given, authority, either upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, at once, and if it so orders, without answer or other formal pleading by the interested carrier or carriers, but upon reasonable notice, to enter upon a hearing concerning the propriety of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice; and pending such hearing and the decision thereon the commission upon filing with such schedule and delivering to the carrier or carriers affected thereby a statement in writing of its reasons for such suspension may suspend the operation of such schedule and defer the use of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice, but not for a longer period than 120 days beyond the time when such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice would otherwise go into effect; and after full hearing, whether completed before or after the rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice goes into effect, the commission may make such order in reference to such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice as would be proper in a proceeding initiated after the rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice had become effective: Provided, That if any such hearing can not be concluded within the period of suspension, as above stated, the Interstate Commerce Commission may, in its discretion, extend the time of suspension for a further period not exceeding 6 months"; and by inserting in lieu thereof the following: "the commission upon its own initiative may, and upon complaint or protest shall, at once, and if it so orders, without answer or other formal pleading by the interested carrier or carriers, but upon reasonable notice, enter upon a hearing concerning the reasonableness and propriety of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice; and pending such hearing and the decision thereon the operation of such schedule shall be suspended and the use of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice shall be deferred until after full hearing, and shall take effect only after the commission has found and declared the same to be just and reasonable, neither unjustly discriminatory nor unduly preferential or prejudicial nor otherwise in violation with the provision of this act, and after full hearing the commission may make such order in reference to said rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice as would be proper in a proceeding initiated after the rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice had become effective." So that said second paragraph of section 15 of the act as amended shall read as follows:

Whenever there shall be filed with the commission any schedule stating a new individual or joint rate, fare, or charge, or any new individual or joint classification, or any new individual or joint regulation or practice affecting any rate, fare, or charge, the commission upon its own initiative may, and upon complaint or protest shall, at once, and if it so orders, without answer or other formal pleading by the interested carrier or carriers, but upon reasonable notice, enter upon a hearing concerning the reasonableness and propriety of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice; and pending such hearing and the decision thereon the operation of such schedule shall be suspended and the use of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice shall be deferred until after full hearing, and shall take effect only after the commission has found and declared the same to be just and reasonable, neither unjustly discriminatory nor unduly preferential or prejudicial nor otherwise in violation with the provision of this act, and after full hearing the commission may make such order in reference to said rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice as would be proper in a proceeding initiated after the rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice had become effective. At any hearing involving a rate increased after January 1, 1910, or of a rate sought to be increased after the passage of this act, the burden of proof to show that the increased rate or proposed increased rate is just and reasonable shall be upon the common carrier, and the commission shall give to the hearing and decision of such questions preference over all other questions pending before it, and decide the same as speedily as possible.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, this is quite an important amendment, but I think that, so far as I am concerned, I am prepared to agree to it with a modification. On page 4, line 13, the amendment provides:

At any hearing involving a rate increased after January 1, 1910, or of a rate sought to be increased after the passage of this act, the burden of proof to show that the increased rate or proposed increased rate is just and reasonable shall be upon the common carrier—

And so forth.

I think that requires a modification. The use of the language "at any hearing involving a rate increased after January 1, 1910," might occasion a great deal of confusion and embarrassment to the commission in its proceedings. I believe that language ought to be stricken out and that the provision ought to read:

At any hearing involving a rate sought to be increased after the passage of this act.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I accept that modification.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. ROBINSON. I do.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will ask the Senator from Arkansas not to assent to this amendment, for the reason that it has not as yet received the consideration of the committee. It certainly proposes a very important change in the existing law. I have an entirely open mind regarding it; but at the last debate upon this subject in connection with the urgent deficiency bill it was arranged that the Senator from Georgia should present the amendment which he suggested to that bill to one of the bills pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission. My expectation was to have a hearing upon the subject; to have the commissioners and the representatives of the railroads cited to appear and present their views, and to submit the report of the committee after full consideration and reflection. I should very much deprecate action upon this important matter at this time without the consideration and report of the committee.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. KELLOGG. Before the amendment is agreed to by the Senator having the bill in charge I wish to object to that amendment being tacked on to this bill at this time; and after the Senator has completed his statement I desire to be heard.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. Before the change suggested by the Senator from Arkansas is agreed to, I think we ought to have a clear understanding of what its effect would be. The present law is that in any hearing upon a rate that is sought to be increased since January 1, 1910, the burden of proof shall be upon the railway companies, the carriers. If those words are stricken out in all the hearings that are now pending concerning rates now sought to be increased, in regard to which a decision has not yet been reached, the rule of proof will be abrogated and the burden of proof will be upon the shippers, those who assail the increased rates, instead of upon the railway companies.

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not think so, Mr. President. My understanding of the purpose of the amendment of the Senator from Georgia is to——

Mr. CUMMINS. Will the Senator allow me to read it?

Mr. ROBINSON. Just let me make this statement: My understanding of the purpose of the amendment of the Senator from Georgia is to prevent an increase in rates going into effect until after the commission has approved the increase. Under the practice that now exists the railroads file an application for an increase in rates, and, after a limited period, these rates go into effect and remain in effect until reversed by the commission.

The object of the amendment of the Senator from Georgia is to prevent the rates going into effect until the commission has passed upon the matter and approved the increased rates. With that purpose I am in sympathy. I had never read the amendment of the Senator from Georgia until it was presented here a moment ago, and during the course of the reading I was interrupted some four or five times by Senators about me who made suggestions outside of the record as to amendments that had already been agreed to in the bill, and I really have not had an opportunity to read the amendment or of considering its language. I ask the Senator from Georgia whether I have correctly stated the purpose of his amendment?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Yes; I think the Senator has.

Mr. ROBINSON. Now, Mr. President, I want to submit to the Senator from Georgia that his purpose can be accomplished in very much briefer and simpler language than that in which he has sought to express it in the amendment.

Mr. CUMMINS. But, Mr. President, the Senator from Arkansas, I think, does not get the point I made. I understand that what the Senator from Georgia desires to do is to require a hearing whenever an increase is proposed——

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes.

Mr. CUMMINS. And before the increase goes into effect. Now, that is the change he desires to make in the law.

Mr. ROBINSON. The language I have suggested——

Mr. CUMMINS. Just a moment. The Senator from Georgia does not desire to make any change in the law with regard to the burden of proof when a hearing is had, but if the change is made which has been suggested, the rule which has prevailed since 1910 with regard to the burden of proof will be abrogated so far as all of the increases which are now pending and have not been determined are concerned.

Mr. ROBINSON. If the Senator will permit me now, I agree, in part, with the statement the Senator has made, and if the language which I have suggested be stricken out is already in the act, I withdraw the suggestion, because I do not want to change the burden of proof. I think the burden of proof ought to be on the railroads, and I know that is the purpose of the amendment of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. CUMMINS. Precisely. That part of the law ought not to be changed at all.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understood, from a statement made to me outside of the record by the Senator from Georgia while the amendment was being read, that he agreed that that language should go out of the bill——

Mr. CUMMINS. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON. And that it was not calculated to carry out his purpose. That is the difficulty of considering an important amendment of this sort without its first having been passed upon by a committee of the Senate. I can not understand why a simple declaration that in all proceedings hereafter before the commission for an increase of rates no rate shall be increased until first approved by the commission would not accomplish the purpose of the Senator from Georgia and eliminate the remainder of his amendment. I ask the Senator from Georgia why that would not work his ends?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. In reply to the Senator, the confusing language is simply the language that the law now contains. The change of language is brief; but to make it perfectly clear, after making the change, I restated the entire provisions of the act.

Now, with reference to the controversy between the Senator from Iowa and the Senator from Arkansas——

Mr. ROBINSON. There is no controversy between us. I have withdrawn my suggestion.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I do not mean that it is a controversy in the sense——

Mr. ROBINSON. I have withdrawn my suggestion, and unless the Senator thinks my suggestion was correct in the first place he need not address himself to that. The Senator from Iowa has pointed out the fact that that language is already in the law. I do not think its elimination would of necessity put the burden on the shipper, but I do not want to take any chances of doing it, and therefore I withdraw the suggestion.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I had intended to suggest that we might also leave out the words "after the passage of this act," and let the language read:

At any hearing of a rate sought to be increased, the burden of proof to show that the increased rate—

And so forth. But the language contained in this amendment is substantially the language of the present law, with the modification requiring a hearing before the advance takes place, and a finding that the rate is reasonable and just.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, with reference to the suggestion of the chairman of the committee, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS], it is true that the matter has not been determined by the committee. The representatives of the railroads have asked for a hearing upon this question. I think I understand the subject matter of the amendment, and as far as I am concerned I am ready to vote upon it now. I think the principle of the amendment is correct, and I am willing to be bound by that declaration, though of course it may be readily conceded that I may be, as I frequently am, wrong.

I make this suggestion to the Senator from Georgia. The pending amendment has been before the Senate, or a similar measure, for a great many months. The necessity for an increase in the membership of the commission and for the authorization that the commission sectionalize or divide itself into divisions in order to facilitate its work is well known to the Senate. Now, I want to suggest to the Senator from Georgia that perhaps it would be well enough for him to present his amendment to the committee and let the committee have a hearing upon the matter and give us a chance to work out this subject without prolonging the debate on this bill. I fear that the bill may meet the same fate now that it has met on other occasions if we go into this broader and not intimately connected subject of preventing an increase in rates from going into effect until the increase has been approved by the commission. I submit that suggestion to the Senator from Georgia for his consideration.

The Senator understands that this subject has been pending here for a long time. In order to meet the objection of Senators to the bill made on a former hearing, I have incorporated in this bill an amendment of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] and a suggestion made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]. The Senator from Iowa has taken part in some informal conferences on the subject. That amendment is in the bill. It may be necessary to modify that feature in some particulars, but we have agreed that it may be most readily worked out in conference if any modification is necessary.

That amendment provides that in hearings on increases in rates not less than three members shall sit, and in hearings as to the physical valuation of property not less than seven members, if I remember correctly, are required to participate in the decision. Now, some members of the Interstate Commerce Commission think that this amendment, as they construe it, will very greatly embarrass them in speeding up their work; and the Senator from Iowa and I have agreed—and I think the Senator from Wisconsin concurs in that opinion, although I do not assert that I am authorized to bind him—that whatever changes are necessary in that amendment may be worked out in conference.

The amendment of the Senator from Georgia is a very important and far-reaching one. With the principle of that amendment I am in sympathy. I think I understand it, and for my part I am ready to diminish conversation on the floor of the Senate and let the vote come. If I could have any assurance that the amendment of the Senator from Georgia would not kill this bill, and thus prevent the commission from obtaining the relief to which everyone who has studied the subject knows they are entitled, I would be glad to see him press it. But I ask him again, in view of these circumstances, if he will not let this amendment be determined first by the Committee on Interstate Commerce? The committee will speedily pass upon the matter. There is no disposition on the part of the committee to delay action on his amendment.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I think it of the utmost importance that it be passed now, and I do not think it ought to substantially delay the bill. I am ready to vote with 15 minutes' discussion, so far as I am personally concerned.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at not later than 1.30 o'clock to-day the Senate proceed to vote on the pending bill and all amendments to its final passage.

Mr. GALLINGER. I object, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is no use in calling the roll, then.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President, I do not think this amendment should be placed on this bill at this time. I am entirely open minded as to the merits of the proposition, but the Senator having the bill in charge does not understand what the amendment does accomplish. The senior Senator from Iowa says that it changes the rule as to the burden of proof as to the reasonableness of the rate.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. KELLOGG. I do.

Mr. CUMMINS. The Senator from Minnesota is mistaken about that.

Mr. KELLOGG. I so understood the Senator.

Mr. CUMMINS. I said that the change that was proposed by the Senator from Arkansas to the Senator from Georgia would change the burden of proof; but the amendment itself, if adopted as presented by the Senator from Georgia, does not.

Mr. KELLOGG. I beg the Senator's pardon. I did not understand him.

The Senator in charge of the bill says that he has had no opportunity to read this amendment, but that he understands from the Senator from Georgia in a general way what it accomplishes. This amendment was introduced as a separate bill just the other day, sent to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and the committee has ordered a hearing on it. So far as I am concerned, I am willing to meet with the committee at any time, to-day or any other day, have that hearing, hear the Senator from Georgia, and hear the gentlemen in opposition to him.

The change which is proposed by this bill entirely changes the law as it now exists. The law as it now exists provides that when the railroads file a proposed rate they must give 30 days' notice. The commission may suspend that rate and have a hearing. The proposed change, in substance, as I understand it—although I have not had a chance to examine it—provides that the commission must have a hearing or suspend the rate in every case.

The bill increasing the Interstate Commerce Commission by two members has been under consideration, as I am told, for a long time. It has been deemed important that during the war, because of the increase of business before the Interstate Commerce Commission, owing to the disarrangement of transportation and the large increase of transportation in handling munitions and products for the war, that the commission should have two more members. The committee confined itself to that in its report. When this bill was reported the committee did not have before it the bill changing the rule as to suspension of rates and hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission. It does seem to me that an amendment of that importance should be considered by the committee, and not placed upon this bill in the hour of its final passage.

I am not prejudiced one way or the other as to the principle. I am entirely open minded. I desire to hear what is said on both sides of this question; but I do not think that a bill reversing the law as it has stood for many years and the practice now existing before the Interstate Commerce Commission should be adopted here without any hearing before the committee, or without the committee giving it any consideration whatever.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I regard this bill as a part of the emergency legislation required at this time. We all know that the Interstate Commerce Commission is an overburdened commission, that Congress has been for years increasing the range of its duties, and that it has been almost impossible for it to keep up with the requirements of its business and jurisdiction.

The committee thought it wise, in presenting a bill regarding the organization of the commission itself, to present it without any other changes in the general character of the interstate-commerce act. The hope was to present to Congress the single proposition as to the urgent necessity of an immediate increase in the commission and the urgent necessity of the power to divide the commission into divisions, each of which would have, to a greater or less degree, the jurisdiction of the entire commission, thus enabling the commission by this method of efficiency to double or treble its work.

The necessity of this bill was apparent before we entered into this war. Its necessity has been accentuated since. The war itself has thrown on the commission an increased burden. One of the members of the commission is a member of the Council of National Defense, cooperating with experienced administrators throughout the country in the great work of making the National Government efficient in its undertaking. The work of the commission will be increased.

The entire transportation system of the country is in this condition—that whereas the income of the railroads was abnormally low in 1914 and abnormally high in 1916, notwithstanding the large increase in revenue the expenses of the railroads have also largely increased, the cost of cars alone having been doubled within a period of three or four years, the average cost of a freight car increasing from $1,000 a car to $2,000 a car. We all know the increases in wages and in the cost of supplies that have been going on, so that the railroads themselves are confronted by difficulties, their rates being inelastic, and their expenses constantly increasing.

The question regarding these increases is now before the Interstate Commerce Commission as the instrumentality of Congress in the regulation of commerce; and in my judgment it should rest there, unaffected by any action of Congress, during the period of that consideration. But at all events, if we are to make any change in the existing law, it should be made upon consultation with the commission itself, whose experience, in my judgment, is the best guide regarding the legislation necessary to increase the efficiency of that body.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Certainly.

Mr. CUMMINS. Did not the Senator from Nevada vote for this precise proposition in 1910, when we had it debated here for days and days?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will state that with reference to almost all, and I think perhaps all, of the progressive legislation urged by the Senator from Iowa at that time, I was in complete harmony. I do not recall my vote upon this particular matter, nor do I know whether this precise question in this form was presented to the Senate.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offered this amendment in substance in 1910, and my recollection is that I had no more cordial supporter or effective advocate than the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will not be sure——

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. If the Senator will allow me to interrupt him for a moment, the language is the language of the provision that was before the Senate introduced by the Senator from Iowa and supported by the chairman of the committee when the bill was originally adopted.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I can not recollect as to the particular language of the provision at that time, nor do I recall my vote. All I know is that I was in general sympathy with the movement which was so skillfully directed at that time by the Senator from Iowa and other Senators with reference to liberalizing the interstate commerce law. But we were then proceeding upon questions which had been considered by the Interstate Commerce Committee, legislation that had been offered in the Interstate Commerce Committee and considered by it. Here we are proposing without consideration of the Interstate Commerce Committee to take up this matter simply upon the assumption that it is the same amendment that was offered by the Senator from Iowa five or six years ago.

I would like the present views of the Interstate Commerce Commission upon this subject before I act, even though I did vote for the same proposition five or six years ago. It seems to me that orderly procedure requires that we should have at least a hearing upon a subject of most animated debate five or six years ago, and in which the Senate itself took a position contrary to that contended for by the Senator from Georgia to-day.

There is other legislation pending before that committee, emergency legislation. There is a bill which we will report within a few days giving the President the right to fix priorities in transportation, a most important war measure. It was my purpose in connection with the consideration of that bill before the committee to bring up the important amendment presented by the Senator from Georgia for the first time, I believe, last Saturday upon the consideration of the urgent deficiency bill, and disposed of, I understand, with the assent of the Senator from Georgia that that amendment should go to the committee for consideration. That was the understanding of the Senate then. Why should it not be the understanding now?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. It is not the same amendment. This is an entirely different matter. The amendment which last Saturday I consented to have referred to the committee involved the purchase by the Government of freight cars and was entirely a novel proposition. Therefore I consented that it should go to the committee.

Mr. WATSON. But, Mr President, is not this the measure on which the Senator obtained a hearing?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. No.

Mr. WATSON. Was not a hearing granted on the very bill that the Senator is now offering as an amendment?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. No.

Mr. WATSON. That is my understanding.

Mr. NEWLANDS. May I ask the Senator from Georgia whether this particular amendment has gone to the Interstate Commerce Committee?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. An original bill was introduced by me which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. This is a copy of that bill, but it has not had a hearing before the Committee on Interstate Commerce. Really I stated before the committee I did not ask a hearing; all I asked was that they should report upon it so that we could have a chance to vote on it. Upon that bill I did not desire to be heard. It was a subject that had been fully heard and fully debated on the floor of the Senate and was in no sense a novel proposition.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Certainly.

Mr. KELLOGG. I should like to ask the Senator from Georgia if his amendment is not in substance the same as the bill which he introduced in the Senate last week?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I said it was exactly the same.

Mr. KELLOGG. And your bill, I understand——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair must either be addressed or be excused from presiding.

Mr. KELLOGG. The bill, I understand, Mr. President, was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and a hearing was granted.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, that bill was introduced on May 11. There has been since that time a meeting of the Interstate Commerce Committee. It was held last Friday, but the entire time of the committee was taken up in considering this war measure, the priorities bill. It was referred to a subcommittee for further consideration and report to the full committee. It is my intention to take up the bill which is presented by the Senator from Georgia for the orderly consideration of the Senate committee. The Senator says that he did not request a hearing; but a hearing certainly does not include simply the Senator from Georgia. It may be that he would not desire a hearing, but it is customary in all such cases to ask the views of the Interstate Commerce Commission with reference to a change in the organic act which it is administering, and it is also customary to give notice to the shippers so that they may express their views. It is the custom of the committee always to give full hearings upon this subject, and I see no reason why we should depart from that custom at this time.

Mr. President, I do not propose to enter into the merits of this question. It may be that I supported this amendment five or six years ago. Possibly my views will be the same to-day that they were then; but if there are any changed conditions I want to be informed of them, and if there is anything to be said by the Interstate Commerce Commission itself that will be a guide to us in this legislation I wish to hear the commission. Certainly the process of evolution in five or six years of administration may bring forth views worthy of consideration.

There has been a general understanding that so far as this session is concerned we should not enter upon general legislation, that we should enter simply upon emergency legislation, legislation absolutely demanded by war conditions. We have a joint committee of the Senate and House considering the questions of general legislation. Its deliberations have been interrupted by this session, but that joint committee will doubtless go on and after full hearings deliver its deliberate judgment to Congress upon many important changes in the organic act that are suggested and many changes that are suggested with reference to the organization of the commission itself.

I urge, Mr. President, upon the Senator from Georgia that he yield to these considerations and not press upon the consideration of the Senate his amendment at this time. I will give him the assurance that to-morrow I shall call the committee together. I will give him notice of the hour and request the Interstate Commerce Commission to be represented there by a committee. I will give such notice as can be given under the conditions to the shippers, and will expedite the hearing upon the bill, conducting it consecutively until the committee shall come to a conclusion.

I also assure him that there is another bill with reference to which this amendment can be urged and to which it will be germane that will be reported within a few days.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, this amendment, though a little long, is very simple. As the law now stands the railroad companies file their schedules of increases of rates and they go into effect without an investigation by the commission to determine whether the rates are reasonable and just. When the interstate-commerce act was before Congress, in the progress of its consideration before it was adopted the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] introduced an amendment providing that increases of rates should not go into effect until the commission had passed upon them and found they were reasonable and just. The Senator from Nevada was a warm supporter of that measure then.

It is not a new proposition at all. It does not require a hearing before the committee. It does not require days taken up by the counsel for railroads talking about immaterial matters. We know just what the issue is. It has been thrashed out day after day in debate upon the floor of the Senate.

The Senator from Nevada says it was understood that nothing was to be done at this session except necessary legislation. I think this is necessary and I think it is eminently important. I think we have a chance this morning, without burdening other legislation, to see how we stand upon it. Are we in favor of a hearing by the commission and the determination that increases of rates are reasonable and just before the increases take place, or are we willing to have the increases take place without a hearing? That is the whole issue.

I shall not detain the Senate. I can not withdraw the amendment. I think it is right and proper. I think it ought to become a part of the first bill applicable to the Interstate Commerce Commission that the Senate passes, and I am ready to vote.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I move that the amendment be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada has moved to refer the amendment to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. The question is on the motion. [Putting the question.] The noes seem to have it. The noes have it, and the motion is lost.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has ruled that the motion is lost. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion to agree to the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I asked for the yeas and nays on the motion to refer.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The qestion was put and the Chair ruled that the motion was lost. The question is now on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Georgia on which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCUMBER (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS]. He being absent, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I observe that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McLEAN], with whom I have a general pair, is absent. I transfer that pair to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] and vote "nay."

Mr. McKELLAR (when Mr. SHIELDS's name was called). The senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] is unavoidably absent from the Chamber on public business. I should like to have this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). Has the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. THOMAS. I withhold my vote, being paired with that Senator.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I wish to announce the absence of my colleague the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] on account of illness. He has a general pair with the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. THOMAS. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] to the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. HOLLIS] and vote "yea."

Mr. BRADY. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN]. He is absent from the Chamber, and I withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. HALE. I desire to announce the absence of my colleague [Mr. FERNALD] on official business.

Mr. GERRY. I desire to announce that the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. VARDAMAN] is detained from the Chamber on official business.

Mr. THOMPSON. I wish to announce that the senior Senator from California [Mr. PHELAN] is absent on official business of the Senate.

Mr. BANKHEAD. My colleague [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is detained on official business.

Mr. WEEKS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. JAMES]. I notice that he has not voted. I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON];

The Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD] with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON];

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN]; and

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING] with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD].

The result was announced—yeas 51, nays 23, as follows:

YEAS—51.

Ashurst	Hardwick	Owen	Smith, Mich.
Bankhead	Husting	Pittman	Smith, S. C.
Beckham	Johnson, Cal.	Poindexter	Smoot
Borah	Jones, N. Mex.	Pomerene	Sterling
Broussard	Kendrick	Ransdell	Stone
Chamberlain	Kenyon	Reed	Sutherland
Culberson	King	Robinson	Thomas
Cummins	Kirby	Saulsbury	Thompson
Curtis	La Follette	Shafroth	Townsend
Fall	McKellar	Sheppard	Trammell
Fletcher	Nelson	Simmons	Walsh
Gore	Norris	Smith, Ariz.	Wolcott
Gronna	Overman	Smith, Ga.

NAYS—23.

Calder	Hale	New	Wadsworth
Dillingham	Kellogg	Newlands	Warren
France	Knox	Page	Watson
Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Penrose	Weeks
Gallinger	Martin	Sherman	Williams
Gerry	Myers	Smith, Md.

NOT VOTING—22.

Brady	Hitchcock	Lane	Swanson
Brandegee	Hollis	Lewis	Tillman
Colt	Hughes	McCumber	Underwood
Fernald	James	McLean	Vardaman
Goff	Johnson, S. Dak.	Phelan
Harding	Jones, Wash.	Shields

So the amendment of Mr. SMITH of Georgia was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WAR-RISK INSURANCE.

Mr. SIMMONS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2133, which is known as the war-risk insurance bill and which is the unfinished business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from North Carolina.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2133) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the establishment of a Bureau of War-Risk Insurance in the Treasury Department," approved September 2, 1914, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I ask that the formal reading of the bill may be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUSTING in the chair). The Senator from North Carolina asks that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I think that by making a very brief statement as to the purpose and scope of this bill Senators will be able to understand it probably a little better than they would be from a reading of the bill. The bill is somewhat voluminous, and a casual glance at it will create the impression that it is a new scheme of legislation, whereas in fact it proposes only a few, though important, amendments to the war-risk act of September 2, 1914. This misleading result is produced by the method of amendment adopted by the bill, which is to reenact certain sections of the old law as they will read as amended. This method is followed throughout the bill.

The first section is almost identical in language with the present law, namely, the act of 1914. The only change made is with reference to the salary of the director of the bureau. The salary of that officer under the present law is $5,000, while the salary provided in the bill is $7,500. That is the only change made, although the whole section of the old law is brought forward in this bill.

This increase is suggested because of the great—I might say enormous—increase in the business of this bureau, resulting in augmented responsibilities and greatly increasing the scope of the bureau's activities and enlarging the duties and labor of the director.

I desire to say here, Mr. President, that the present head of the bureau has administered the affairs of his bureau with signal ability. He is admittedly an exceedingly competent and efficient man. He is a practical, trained insurance expert, and he has taken the new business and in a short time put it on an economical and business basis of administration.

Mr. GALLINGER. May I ask the Senator from North Carolina a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. SIMMONS. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to ask the Senator, who is now at the head of that bureau?

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. William C. De Lanoy.

Mr. GALLINGER. Is this quite a large bureau? Is there a large force connected with it?

Mr. SIMMONS. The force originally was very small; but it is now quite large, I think.

Mr. GALLINGER. That has been true of all bureaus.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think until recently this bureau had three clerks and one assistant. Now it has 20 clerks and 2 assistants, and I am told this force is inadequate under present conditions. This force will have to be materially increased if this bill is adopted authorizing insurance against loss of life and injuries of seamen.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is true of all bureaus. They grow like green bay trees—from a small force of clerks to a large force in a year or two, and I suppose they will continue so to grow.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from New Hampshire will understand that in the beginning we only appropriated $5,000,000 for payment of losses or insurance of vessels and cargoes, and the amount insured during the first year amounted to very little; now we appropriate $15,000,000, and this bill increases that amount to $50,000,000. The bureau is rapidly becoming a very large institution; it is already doing a tremendous work, and it is going to have to do a much larger work.

I will suggest to the Senator from New Hampshire, who is a member of the Finance Committee, that I think this amendment was agreed to unanimously in the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will state frankly to the Senator that I did not investigate the question of the force employed in the bureau, and I am entitled to the information I have asked for.

Mr. SIMMONS. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will venture to ask the Senator if he heard the appeal the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] made today to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], who had proposed an increase of salary, the Senator from Utah stating that it had been tacitly agreed somewhere that no salary should be increased this year.

Mr. SIMMONS. No; I did not hear the appeal of the Senator from Utah. I was not in the Senate Chamber until a few moments ago.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will leave that to be settled between the Senator from North Carolina and the Senator from Utah. The Senator from Utah seems to have the matter in mind.

Mr. SMOOT. I merely want to say to the Senator from North Carolina that after he gets through with his statement I am going to offer an amendment to reduce the salary of $7,500 to $5,000, which the official is getting at the present time.

Mr. SIMMONS. Very well.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. The Senator states that originally $5,000,000 was appropriated for the purposes of this bureau, and that it is now sought to have $15,000,000 appropriated.

Mr. SIMMONS. No; $5,000,000 was the first amount appropriated. Then we increased it to $15,000,000; and this bill proposes to increase it to $50,000,000.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I want to ask the Senator what is the occasion of that increase? Is it because the work of the bureau has increased or has it become a profitable investment for the Government?

Mr. SIMMONS. No; it is not now a profitable investment. During the first two years of the bureau's existence it seems to have been a profitable investment.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Can the Senator tell us what the profits were during the early period of the existence of the bureau, and what is the status of the institution now?

Mr. SIMMONS. I will state to the Senator that during the period from September 2, 1914, to January 1, 1917, the premiums upon insurance amounted to about $3,244,000. That was a monthly average of $115,000. In January, 1917, one month, the premiums amounted to $176,000; in February of this year to $223,000; in March of this year to $1,275,963.

Mr. POMERENE. What was the last amount?

Mr. SIMMONS. In March of this year the premiums collected amounted to $1,275,963. In April the premiums amounted to $2,772,323; and in May, up to the 21st of the month, the premiums amounted to $2,324,000.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator what the losses were?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. SIMMONS. In a moment. The figures given show that the premiums in the single month of April of this year were within about $500,000 of the total premiums for the period from September, 1914, to January 1, 1917.

Mr. POMERENE. Now, may I ask, is the Senator able to give us a statement as to the losses that were paid during these several periods?

Mr. SIMMONS. The known losses were $5,844,000—that is, up to the present time.

Mr. POMERENE. May I also ask whether there have been other losses which have not yet been adjusted?

Mr. SIMMONS. I think so; yes.

Mr. POMERENE. To what amount?

Mr. SIMMONS. I have no information as to that.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. May I interrupt the Senator for just a moment? I want to know how much the Government is losing—not what the losses of the insurers are but how much the Government is losing in undertaking to carry on this enterprise.

Mr. SIMMONS. I was going to state that.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Very well.

Mr. SIMMONS. We might say that up to January, 1917, I think, the Government did not lose anything at all but made a considerable sum. My understanding is that something around $3,000,000 of these premiums have been covered into the Treasury under the law as it existed before the last amendment, the amendment of 1916. I am not quite sure that I am accurate about that, but I think I am. Those premiums were covered into the Treasury. We have changed that now, so that any excess of premiums over losses shall be credited to the insurance fund. The losses in the beginning, Mr. President, were small, and the Government made a profit on the business, but the losses are now running high. They have been exceedingly heavy during the last few months, since the declaration of war. Up to the present time upon the total business the Government has had a profit, but this can not reasonably be expected to continue. Senators will see that when we were not insuring contraband goods, before the beginning of hostilities between this country and Germany, the losses were necessarily smaller, because, on account of the great number of our American ships that then carried contraband, there were very few that could be insured under the act. Since the declaration of war every American vessel, without regard to whether it carries contraband or not, is insurable; and necessarily since the risk of ocean transportation has multiplied as it has as the result of the ruthless submarine warfare being waged by Germany every American ship that goes from here to the Continent of Europe desires and must have insurance. They can not and will not sail without insurance, and as the rate offered by the Government is under the usual rate, naturally they will come increasingly to the Government for this insurance.

The proposition to increase the amount set aside for this purpose does not in any way increase the liability of the Government; but the Secretary of the Treasury feels—and properly so, I think—that in writing this enormous amount of insurance there ought to be available to him at all times an adequate amount of money to promptly pay any possible loss in excess of premium funds in hand. If the money is not needed to pay losses sustained, the money will not be withdrawn from the Treasury; but the probabilities are that from now on there will be substantial losses in excess of profits. These losses must be paid. If the Government does not provide now, by congressional action, the money to pay losses as they are sustained, as it ought to do, it will have to provide for their payment later. I think it very desirable to provide and insure prompt and quick settlement of these losses and that the public shall know the money is ready in ample quantity.

Section 2 carries several very important amendments. Under the present law the Government is only permitted to insure the vessel, its cargo, freight, and passage money. The amendments to this section provides for two additional classes of insurance. One is upon the effects on board of the master, officers, and crew. The other is against loss of life, personal injury by risk of war, and detention in case of capture by an enemy of the United States of master, officers, or crew.

The premium on the first class of insurance—that on the effects of the crew, master, and officers—is to be paid by them. The second class of insurance—that against loss of life, personal injury, and in case of capture and detention—is to be paid for by the owners of the vessel. The owners of the vessel are required to take out this insurance. If they do not take it out by the time fixed for sailing, and in case of failure heavy penalties are imposed and the bureau is authorized to insure at the expense of the vessel.

The bill provides a form of policy for insurance against personal injury of the master, officers, and the crew, based very largely upon the workmen's compensation acts of the Federal Government and of the several States. The insurance to the individual for this purpose is based on one year's salary or wage, as the case may be, the minimum being fixed at $1,500 and the maximum at $5,000.

Another important amendment is one authorizing reinsurance—a principle which is well recognized in the insurance business. It is proposed to apply this principle as between us and our allies. One of the effects of this reinsurance is to lessen the average risk of both parties to the agreement.

The only other specially important amendment to the present law is one increasing the amount appropriated for paying losses from $15,000,000 to $50,000,000. The original appropriation was for $5,000,000—since increased to $15,000,000—and up to date the premiums received have exceeded the losses sustained; but it must be remembered that until we became a belligerent no contraband going to belligerent countries was insured, this with a view to strict neutrality, and under these circumstances not only has the volume of business been relatively small but the more hazardous risks were excluded.

Upon our becoming a belligerent all this has changed, and the bureau has become a highly important instrument in the carrying on of the war. Insurance against war risks is necessary if our shipments by American vessels to the enemies of Germany are to be made in the present or in increased volume.

To carry out this function it is necessary that the bureau be prepared to issue policies, if needed, up to the entire value of the vessel and the cargo she carries. This may at times amount to several million dollars, and while it is hoped to make the charge to the shipper and shipowner sufficient to represent the cost of the insurance, it must be recognized that to estimate the percentage of shipping that will be destroyed in the future by submarines is difficult even for the most expert.

Two things the bureau must accomplish:

They must see that our shippers using vessels of our flag can get all the protection against war risks they legitimately require at rates no higher than those they would obtain from the insurance department of a foreign government if their shipments were made by steamers of those foreign flags.

They must see that American vessel owners can obtain sufficient war-risk insurance at reasonable rates to permit the vessel to engage in trade to the other countries at war with Germany, and to insure their crews.

Having these two objects in mind, it is manifest that the appropriation should be sufficient to preclude the possibility of claimants having just claims being obliged to await further action by Congress before being paid.

Making the appropriation available neither increases nor diminishes the sums the United States may have to pay, but is a guaranty that the payment will be prompt.

Mr. President, I now ask that the committee amendments be taken up first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Secretary will read the bill for committee amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 5, line 22, after the word "eye," to strike out "35" and insert "45"; in the same line, after the words "per cent," to strike out "and"; and, after line 22, to insert "Total destruction of hearing, 50 per cent; and," so as to make the paragraph read:

(b) In case of any of the following losses, for the payment of the percentage of the principal sum indicated in the following tables:
One hand, 50 per cent;
One arm, 65 per cent;
One foot, 50 per cent;
One leg, 65 per cent;
One eye, 45 per cent;
Total destruction of hearing, 50 per cent; and.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 10, after the word "insured," to insert "for distribution to his family free from liability of debt," so as to make the paragraph read:

Payments provided for in this section shall be made only to the master, officer, or member of the crew concerned, except that a payment for loss of life shall be made to the estate of the insured for distribution to his family free from liability of debt, and payment on account of detention by an enemy following capture shall be made to dependents of the person detained, if designated by him.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 24, after the word "vessel," to insert "prior to sailing," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3b. That in the event of failure of the owner of any vessel to effect insurance of the master, officers, and crew of such vessel prior to sailing, in accordance with section 3a of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to effect such insurance with the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance at the expense of the owner of such vessel, and the latter shall be liable for such expense and, in addition, to a penalty of not exceeding $1,000. The amount of such premium, with interest and of the penalty and of all costs, shall be a lien on the vessel.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 16, after the word "exceed," to strike out "$25" and insert "$20," and on line 22, after the word "exceed," to strike out "$25" and insert "$20," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to establish an advisory board, to consist of three members skilled in the practices of war-risk insurance, for the purpose of assisting the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance in fixing rates of premium and in adjustment of claims for losses, and generally in carrying out the purposes of this act; the compensation of the members of said board to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but not to exceed $20 a day each while actually employed. He is likewise authorized to appoint two persons skilled in the practices of accident insurance for the purpose of assisting the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance in the adjustment of claims for death, personal injury, or detention; the compensation of the persons so appointed to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but not to exceed $20 a day each while actually employed. In the event of disagreement as to the claim for losses, or amount thereof, between the said bureau and the parties to such contract of insurance an action on the claim may be brought against the United States in the district court of the United States, sitting in admiralty, in the district in which the claimant or his agent may reside.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 14, after the word "compensation," to insert "not to exceed 10 per cent of amount recovered," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5a. No claim agent or attorney shall be entitled to receive any compensation whatever for services in the collection of claims against the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance for death, personal injury, or detention, except when proceedings are taken in accordance with section 5 in a district court of the United States, in which case the judge shall, as a part of his determination and order, settle and determine the amount of compensation not to exceed 10 per cent of amount recovered, to be paid by the claimant on behalf of whom such proceedings are instituted to his legal adviser or advisers, and it shall be unlawful for any lawyer or other person acting in that behalf to ask for, contract for, or receive any larger sum than the amount so fixed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 2, after the words "sum of," to strike out "$25,000,000" and to insert "$50,000,000," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 7. That for the purpose of paying losses and return premiums accruing under the provisions of this act there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $50,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SIMMONS. I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, between lines 22 and 23, it is proposed to insert:

And that the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance may include in its policy undertakings to pay specified percentages of the principal sum for other losses or disabilities.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator, in a few words, state what will be the effect of that amendment? I can not quite connect it with subparagraph (b) of the bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the Senator will take the bill, he will see that this is a part of subsection (b). [A pause.] However, upon the suggestion of the Senator from Utah, that should probably come between lines 23 and 24 instead of between lines 22 and 23.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not know that it makes very much difference either way.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think that is the more orderly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, on page 2, line 11, I move to strike out "$7,500" and insert "$5,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, line 11, it is proposed to strike out "$7,500" and insert "$5,000," so as to read:

That there is established in the Treasury Department a bureau to be known as the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance, the director of which shall be entitled to a salary at the rate of $5,000 per annum.

Mr. SMOOT. Just one word, Mr. President. I hope the Senator in charge of the bill will accept this amendment or, if not, that the Senate will adopt it, because of the fact, as I stated this morning, when there was an endeavor to raise the salary of the secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission from $5,000 to $7,500, that when the legislative bill providing salaries for all the Government employees was before the Senate it was tacitly understood that during this year there should be no increases of salaries, and the Senator will remember that that understanding was strictly adhered to. In all of the other appropriation bills up to the present time it has been strictly adhered to, and I think it is a very unwise thing to have some special bill brought into the Senate and increases made of the salaries of any employees of the Government.

Not only that, Mr. President, but when you stop to think that the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the tens of thousands of employees under his direct charge, the Commissioner of Pensions, and the Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury each receive only $5,000 per annum, it would be very unwise and very unjust, in my opinion, to increase this salary from $5,000 to $7,500.

Mr. SIMMONS. Do I understand the Senator to say that the Commissioner of Pensions gets only $5,000?

Mr. SMOOT. Only $5,000; and I have called attention to it a number of times upon the floor of the Senate; and there is the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with that great empire of land under his direct charge, with tens of thousands of employees, receiving only $5,000.

Under these circumstances it would be at least unwise, and I believe very unjust, to provide here a salary of $7,500 for the Director of the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance, and I hope the Senator will accept the amendment.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I understand perfectly the sentiment which has prevailed here during this year and last year with reference to increases in salaries. I think the Senator probably is correct in saying that we have agreed generally upon the principle of not making increases for the present. The Secretary of the Treasury has recommended, I understand, this increase, and believes that it ought to be made. He thinks the character of the work requires not only efficiency but special technical training and knowledge, which ordinarily commands a good salary, and that the present director possesses both these qualifications, and the committee unanimously approved this amendment.

I therefore do not feel at liberty to accept the amendment which the Senator from Utah offers. I think the rule to which he refers, and which I grant we have been acting upon, in the main in present conditions a good one. But, Mr. President, every rule may have some exceptions.

Mr. President, it is a well-known fact that some of the departments of the Government have been losing their best-trained and best-qualified men because of inadequate salaries and the failure of Congress to provide for reasonable promotion and increase. They have been losing them to private employment, where better wages are paid for that class of men.

The head of one of these departments said to me only a few days ago that unless he could get some increase in the salaries for his men at the top, the men upon whom he chiefly relied, the men whose splendid training and familiarity with the work is largely of a technical character, many of them would leave the service and the department would have to rely upon raw, inexperienced, and perhaps inefficient men; that when he got a good man and after a few years' training he became thoroughly qualified to give the Government good and efficient service, he was frequently offered a better salary in private employment and the Government lost his services.

I do not think we ought to go, under the circumstances, into a promiscuous increase in salaries; but I do think, Mr. President, an exception ought to be made whereby the Government may, by proper recognition of high-class service, be able to retain its trained employees. I think this is a case of that kind. The Government succeeded when it inaugurated this new service in getting an exceptionally qualified man, a man who, if he would go into private employment, would probably get twice as much as the Government is now paying him. There is no intimation of that sort which has come to me, but probably he and others of his class will be tempted by not only the present high salaries that are paid but the higher salaries that are going to be paid under conditions that are immediately in front of us to enter private employment.

Mr. President, under the circumstances I can not accept the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah, but I shall feel satisfied with whatever action the Senate may be pleased to take upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVY AND MARINE CORPS.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, Order of Business No. 30 on the calendar is the bill (S. 1873) to temporarily increase the commissioned and warrant and enlisted strength of the Navy and Marine Corps, and for other purposes. A House bill exactly the same has already passed the Senate, and at the request of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] I move that the Senate bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

PROMOTION OF EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. MARTIN obtained the floor.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. MARTIN. I was not aware that there was anything calling for the immediate attention of the Senate, and I was about to move an adjournment. However, I will hear the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. POMERENE. I thought as the Senate is in pretty good humor this afternoon I might call up the so-called export bill, which is the first bill on the calendar, the bill (S. 634) to promote export trade, and for other purposes.

Mr. MARTIN. I understand a good deal of discussion is expected in the consideration of that bill, and the Senate does not appear to be ready to take it up.

Mr. POMERENE. I will not insist on taking it up now, but I wish to give notice that if it seems opportune to-morrow morning I shall call up the measure in the morning hour.

Mr. SIMMONS. Will the Senator withhold his motion for a moment?

Mr. MARTIN. I will withhold the motion.

ADDRESS BY SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY M'ADOO.

Mr. SIMMONS. On yesterday I presented a copy of the address delivered by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and asked that it be made a public document. That request was granted. That speech deals with the subject of the bonds we are now trying to float. It is thought that the utmost publicity should be given to that speech.

It has occurred to me under the circumstances, notwithstanding the rule that when made a public document a paper shall not be also printed in the RECORD, this being a public matter of the greatest present consequence it might be well to print the speech also in the RECORD. I ask unanimous consent that the speech be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, just a word. I suppose all Senators understand that there is virtually an agreement between the Senate and the House that wherever a speech or other paper is made a public document it shall not be printed in the RECORD. But, as the Senator from North Carolina has well said, the speech made in Chicago by the Secretary of the Treasury was made for the purpose of getting before the people of the country the necessity of subscribing to the liberty war bonds. For that reason, Mr. President, and as the RECORD will show it, I will state that I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The address is as follows:

ADDRESS BY HON. W. G. M'ADOO, SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, DELIVERED IN CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 17, 1917, AT A MEETING OF BANKERS AND BUSINESS MEN OF THE SEVENTH FEDERAL RESERVE DISTRICT.

"Gentlemen, it is difficult to make the people of the United States realize that their country is now actively involved in the most terrible and colossal war of all time. One of the serious defects of democracy is the fact that the people can be fully aroused only after some great disaster, and then frequently too slowly, to grave dangers—dangers that menace their very liberty and national integrity.

"Some wit, or maybe philosopher, has said that the best friends of the American people were the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. This is no longer true. Modern science and invention have nullified space. Already submarines have repeatedly crossed the Atlantic Ocean. Not only have German submarines visited our own shores, one of them having actually sunk merchant ships off the New England coast last summer, but the aeroplane has been developed to such an extent that it is only a question of military requirement when they will cross the Atlantic. Wireless telegraphy has also enormously facilitated as well as increased the dangers of modern warfare by making military operations on land and sea far more flexible and formidable. The Pacific Ocean has not been mastered to the same extent as the Atlantic, but it is only a question of time, and a very short time, when it could be equally conquered by a resourceful and well-equipped foe. With Guam and the Hawaiian Islands in possession of an enemy, submarine and aeroplane operations in the Pacific might become as easy as in the Atlantic.

"I cite these facts merely to show that America's splendid defensive isolation upon which we have relied for a century has been destroyed. We are face to face with the same unfortunate proximity to a formidable military power as that in which the European nations have found themselves for half a century. The only difference is that we have a body of water between us and that formidable military power, and this of itself will always make hostile attack upon us more difficult, but we should remember that the Atlantic has been reduced from a 3,000-mile stretch of ocean to a comparatively narrow river by the force of modern science and invention.

"We have also to support and maintain by force of arms whenever challenged the Monroe Doctrine, which has kept the Western Hemisphere free from European exploitation and attack for more than a century. The maintenance of this doctrine is essential not alone to the security of the United States, but to all of the Republics of the Western Hemisphere. The gravest danger to the peace and security of the world is autocratic military government, especially autocratic government dominated by ruthless and limitless ambition and organized in a higher degree than ever before known in the world's history.

"Never since the days of Alexander the Great has there been such an audacious and colossal project for world conquest and domination as that in which the German Kaiser is now engaged. Not alone does he seek to impose his will upon the whole of Europe, but once that ambition is realized to lay the heavy hand of tribute upon the rich possessions of the people of the United States, as well as those of Central and South America. In the furtherance of these objects the German Government has attempted to incite Mexico to war upon us and even to bring about a conflict between us and our friendly neighbor of the Pacific, Japan. We can not shut our eyes to these sinister designs of the Kaiser. We must awake to a realization of the situation and make every requisite preparation and sacrifice to protect ourselves against the evil possibilities of the future.

"Why are we at war with Germany? For the reasons just stated, as well as for the further reason that without shadow of right or justification in international law she has, for the past two years, flagrantly disregarded our rights, has killed our defenseless men, women, and children, who were engaged in lawful pursuits upon the high seas, has sunk our ships in the face of repeated warnings, and put at defiance the laws of civilization and humanity. This war has been thrust upon us in spite of every effort made by our great President through two years of extraordinary patience and forbearance to keep the Nation out of it. It is not alone because of the violation of our rights upon the high seas and the ruthless murder of defenseless American citizens, but it is because Germany threatens liberty and self-government throughout the world that the great American Republic has been compelled to enter this war. The safety and peace of the world in the future depend upon the establishment of self-government among all responsible peoples. It is only through democratic governments that the peace of the world can be preserved, because when a people have a determining voice in government time is taken for deliberation upon crucial issues, and the arbitrary will of no despot can then drive nations into war. Suppose that Germany and Russia and Austria had been self-governed people when the present controversy arose. Do you believe that there would have been war? Absolutely no!

"The deliberative bodies of those countries, if they had been self-governing, would have forced the issues to arbitration, or would have settled them peacefully through negotiation. Self-governing peoples are the surest guarantors of the peace of the world, because peoples, as a rule, are pacific and the provocation must be extreme before they will fight; because democracies are never highly organized for military purposes, and therefore have not the same temptation to war except upon extreme provocation. Perhaps it is also because all democracies are inefficient in a military sense, and where all are thus equally inefficient they do not present the same danger to each other. Therefore, if military autocracies can be destroyed, the greatest menace to the world's peace and security will be removed. If self-government can be substituted for military autocracies, liberty can be made supreme throughout the world, and the inestimable blessings of democracy and security will be conferred upon the human race. Already, as a result of the war, one great military autocracy has been destroyed—Russia—and upon its ruins there has been reared the benevolent structure of democratic government and democratic institutions. Germany is the sole remaining formidable type of military autocracy. She must be defeated in order that liberty and peace may no longer be imperiled. This is what America is fighting for—universal liberty. She has no selfish end to serve; she has no hostility to the German people. Her battle is with the cancerous system which is eating the very vitals of the German people—the Hohenzollern autocracy.

"If, as a result of this war, Germany shall become self-governed, the greatest achievement for the future peace of the world will have been recorded. But if the German military autocracy should succeed and dominate all Europe, then the issue will be reduced to a war between Germany, the supreme military autocrat on the one hand, and the great Republic of North America, the champion of liberty, on the other. No one can doubt the outcome of that conflict if the American people awake to the gravity of the situation, organize the mighty resources of the Nation, and equip themselves to conquer in a supreme struggle for human rights and liberty. We have no selfish end to gain; we seek no territory, no indemnities, no advantage in this war. We seek peace and liberty for the peoples of the world. We seek that and nothing more.

"In order to carry on the war, the first necessity is money. That is the reason we have issued this great Liberty Loan; that is the reason we call it the Liberty Loan, because the money derived from it will be dedicated to the cause of human liberty throughout the world. This is a noble and inspiring ideal, the only ideal for which the American people are willing to engage in war, and the only ideal which can quicken them to dedicate their lives and their fortunes with the same splendid patriotism that animated our forefathers when they gained for us the imperishable blessings of liberty. If we are wise, we will not permit the issue to be narrowed to a final decisive conflict between Germany, as the master of Europe, and the United States, as the champion of liberty in the Western Hemisphere. We will wage war vigorously in conjunction with France, Great Britain, Italy, and Russia in order that this terrible war may be terminated quickly and successfully, that further sacrifice of human life may be prevented, and that as few Americans as possible may have to be sent to the trenches and the bloody battle fields of Europe.

"It is for these reasons that the Congress has wisely provided for an extension of credit by the Government of the United States to the allied Governments of Europe making common cause with us in the war against Germany. The Congress has given authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to issue $5,000,000,000 of 3½ per cent tax-exempt bonds. Two billion dollars of these bonds will be sold and the proceeds applied to the creation and equipment of an American army and for the general purposes of the war, and $3,000,000,000 will be loaned to our friends and allies in Europe who are helping us to fight the military autocracy of Germany.

"For all loans made to the European powers, their bonds or obligations will be taken, bearing the same rate of interest and having the same maturities as the bonds of the United States, so that as our bonds become due the bonds of the European powers will become due, and as they pay their debts to us the debts of the Government of the United States to its own people will be paid and discharged. We do not wish to profit by any assistance we render to the European Governments who are fighting with us in this war. We wish to give them the benefit of our credit on the same terms as those obtained by the United States.

"This great Liberty Loan is the first effective step we can take in this war. Prompt financial assistance to the allied Governments through which they may be able to acquire quickly the necessary supplies and munitions of war in this country may enable them to gain a decisive victory before American soldiers may have to be sent to Europe. This Liberty Loan will put the Government in position to extend this financial aid. Every man and woman who buys a Liberty bond will contribute in the most immediate and directly helpful way to bring this horrible war to a quick conclusion, and the quicker the war is ended the greater will be the saving in human life and the less will be the human suffering which not alone the armies of Europe but the civilian populations of all the countries must endure.

"The financing of these bonds will not cause business disturbance. Their proceeds will be employed in the United States for the purchase of necessary supplies and material, and for that reason the transaction will resolve itself largely into a shifting of credits. The money will not be taken out of the country nor withdrawn from the avenues of business; on the contrary, it will be kept in the country and circulated and recirculated in the channels of business, with corresponding stimulation and profit to business and productive enterprise.

"In order to prevent any possibility of disturbance, the Treasury Department has announced that the bonds may be paid for in easy installments, and a plan has been devised for the redeposit in the banks of a large part of the proceeds, so that the operation will, as already stated, be more largely a shifting of credits than actual transfers of money. Pending the delivery of the bonds about July 1, the Treasury is issuing short-time certificates of indebtedness which can be purchased by banks and their customers in anticipation of bond allotments, and by this means the process of payment of the bonds is being greatly eased and facilitated.

"I earnestly urge all banks and intending purchasers of Liberty bonds to buy these certificates of indebtedness. They enable the holders to get interest on their funds while waiting for the delivery of the bonds, and at the same time give them a chance of rendering effective and essential aid to their Government.

"We should not, however, finance a great war solely by bond issues. There is not an unlimited investment market, and if there was it would be extremely dangerous and unsound to finance a war wholly with bonds. A period of dangerous inflation would set in and the after consequences would be disastrous to business. While a certain amount of wholesome inflation, or perhaps it would be better to say expansion, is essential—and that will inevitably result from the amount of bonds the Government must in any event issue—nevertheless inflationary dangers must be counteracted by a reasonable amount of wholesome taxation. We must in fairness to the present and future generations impose taxes in payment of a part of the expenses of this war.

"Wars involve sacrifice not alone of life but as well of property. We are sending our soldiers to the field and expecting them to make the supremest sacrifice that a patriot can make for his country. We offer him no protection for his life except the arms and ammunition with which we supply him in order that he may sell his life to the enemy as dearly as possible.

"We must not be less hesitant to require the sacrifices of property that are needed to make our soldiers effective upon the battle field. We must do it not only for this reason but for the further reason that sound economy and prudence require that a large part of this war should be financed through taxation. I earnestly hope that before the revenue bill now in the Congress receives the President's approval an equitable adjustment and distribution of the taxes may be found.

"This is, of course, difficult because the differences of opinion are so great and varied. Every responsible person at Washington is impressed with the necessity for wisely distributed taxation, and is making a patriotic effort to secure it. The full Committee on Ways and Means of the House, including Republicans and Democrats, have worked singlemindedly and diligently to produce a satisfactory measure, but, as in all revenue bills, there are differences of opinion, which can only be reconciled after the measure has gone through the crucible of debate in both Houses and agreed upon in final conference. We were never so able to bear the taxation proposed by the pending bill, namely, $1,800,000,000, as we are now. It is absolutely necessary in order to finance the war that this much revenue be provided. We may differ about the objects of taxation, but we must not differ about the amount. The country economically was never more strong. The financial situation was never more secure, the gold supply was never so great, and business, on the whole, was never so prosperous. The patriotism and resources of the country are great enough to sustain the burden of necessary taxation.

"This brings me to the point of a certain amount of apprehension, amounting in isolated instances to hysteria, about the future of business. Inevitably upon the happening of such a momentous event as a war like this there is a brief period of hesitation and uncertainty.

"There is natural anxiety about the future, but this rapidly disappears with the restoration of the equilibrium and when men begin to get the true significance of the situation. There is no reason why business should not proceed upon its normal course. There is, in fact, every reason why business should proceed upon a larger basis of prosperity than it has ever known before. This war of itself will compel the production and consumption of a greater amount of supplies than this country has ever before produced. I speak not alone of food products but of manufactures and industry in general.

"If the war continues another year, the allied Governments will probably expend in the markets of the United States at least $5,000,000,000 for supplies and materials. This alone would compel prosperity even if we were reluctant to take it. In addition to foreign purchases, our own Government must expend from two to four billions of dollars in materials and supplies for training a large army and for carrying on the operations of the Army and Navy and the civil establishments of the Government.

"It is likely that a total of $9,000,000,000 will have to be expended by the allied Governments and the Government of the United States in our own markets within the next 12 months. How can business be hurt by these expenditures? Business prosperity always depends upon demand. We lose prosperity when there isn't enough demand to absorb the products of our soil and our factories at remunerative prices, or when the demand is so small that industry is only partially occupied. We gain prosperity when the demand is in excess of the supply and when every productive enterprise is pushed to the utmost to meet the demand. At such times prices are high, the rewards of industry are great, and there is a general stimulation in all lines of activity. We are now undergoing in some parts of the country this brief period of hesitation and uncertainty, but if you will only look the facts in the face with even short vision, you must see that there is no reason for hesitation; on the contrary, that there is every reason to go forward with confidence. The first duty of patriotism is not to halt, but to proceed with new vigor to produce everything that can be produced on the farms, in the mines, and in the factories of the country.

"We must keep production in every line at the highest point in order to meet the essential demands of our own people and of the allied Governments of Europe. We must omit nothing in the way of productive enterprise which will contribute to the successful conduct of this war. My only fear is that we will have too much prosperity and that the price level of everything may be lifted instead of lowered. This is one of the important problems of the day. Perhaps it can only be dealt with through reasonable governmental control and regulation. But whether we have such regulation or not, one thing is certain, and that is that the soundness of our prosperity can only be conserved by the application of a reasonable amount of wholesome taxation. Why do I say that? Because we can not afford to take the risks of the unrestrained inflation that will come from bond issues alone. Reasonable taxation is perhaps the most certain corrective we can apply. This is an economic question of great importance.

"Aside from the justice and wisdom of financing a large part of the war by taxation, it is necessary that the people of the country shall prevent waste and extravagance during the period of the war. Wisely devised and equitably distributed taxation is most helpful in effecting this kind of saving and economy. I do not believe in the kind of economy which prevents people from supplying their normal needs, and the hysteria about economy in some parts of the country has been carried to unfortunate lengths.

"What we mean by economy is that everyone shall make it a point to prevent waste and extravagance, and that luxuries shall be given up during the period of the war. There is no reason why the normal needs of the people should not be satisfied just as much as heretofore, but there is every need for the stoppage of waste and the prevention of extravagance.

"It should be remembered that very soon the Government may call into the field for military training a million men. While in the Army these men will be withdrawn from productive enterprise, and all that they need and require will be a new demand upon the general store of the country. The general store is going to be overtaxed by the demands of our own Government and people, and by the demands of the allied Governments of Europe.

"If, therefore, we in the United States fail to prevent waste and extravagance, we shall not have the essential supplies to meet the situation. Have you ever reflected what it means if every man and woman in the country should save during the next year what is ordinarily wasted by each in the way of food and general supplies? If 100,000,000 people reduce their demand upon the general supply of food and materials through the stoppage of waste and extravagance it would release an enormous amount which in turn could be used for the purpose of supporting and maintaining 1,000,000 soldiers in the field.

"The whole effort should be to relieve the general store of the country from the unnecessary demands imposed upon it by the waste and extravagance of the American people. This will have a wholesome effect in every direction. The amount saved in a year by the practice of intelligent economy—not foolish or unnecessary denial—would be sufficient to pay the cost of this war for a year. Moreover, it will have a helpful influence in keeping down the prices of food and preventing the hardships which are imposed upon all the people whenever the general price level of the necessaries of life is raised.

"While we must keep production stimulated to the highest point, the Government must always have in mind, along with the equitable distribution of taxation, the purchase of supplies and materials at prices that will give reasonable profits. It is not fair to ask producers to sell to the Government at cost, but it is fair to ask them to sell to the Government at a reasonable profit.

"The total amount of the Liberty Loan authorized by the Congress is $5,000,000,000. Of this only $2,000,000,000 is now being offered to public subscription. The wealth of the United States is so great, the investing power of its people is so large, that the entire $5,000,000,000 could be absorbed without the slightest inconvenience or disturbance. The annual increase of wealth in the United States is said to be $50,000,000,000, so that if the entire $5,000,000,000 was subscribed it would represent only 10 per cent of the annual increment of wealth. The $2,000,000,000 of bonds now offered should be eagerly subscribed by the patriotic people of America not only because it is their first duty to help their Government, but because it is the safest investment on earth. As the Government is willing to pay 3½ per cent interest on the loan, exempt from all Federal, State, and local taxation, except, of course, inheritance taxes—and no bonds are exempt from inheritance taxes—what better investment for income and security can be found? There is no government on earth whose credit is so high; there is no government on earth whose obligations ars so impregnably protected. And then to subscribe to one of these bonds, even though it be of the smallest denomination, $50, is to enlist in that great army of free men and women of the United States who will have dedicated themselves to the cause of liberty throughout the world, and who, if they can not expend their blood for their country, can render, nevertheless, another kind of effective service to their country.

"Every dollar subscribed to this Liberty Loan is a blow struck for liberty throughout the world, a blow struck for democracy and self-government throughout the world, a blow struck for that happy day when the self-governed peoples of all the nations of the earth will rise up and proclaim the United States the greatest apostle of liberty, the noble champion who has brought to them the assurance of that stable and just peace which has been the dream of all the ages.

"It is, as our noble President said in his immortal address to the Congress, a terrible thing to lead this peaceful Nation into war. War is a terrible thing no matter how noble its object may be, but throughout the history of the human race many of the greatest and most glorious things have been achieved for civilization only by the sacrifice of human life in the fiery crucible of battle.

"What we are fighting for is the only thing a great nation of free men would be justified in fighting for. We are in this war because the call of humanity compels it. The German Kaiser has challenged civilization. His military autocracy stands today as the antagonist of the principle of humanity and self-government everywhere. The success of that principle would mean the universal enslavement of the human race. In order to gain his ends, the Kaiser has violated treaties. He has not hesitated to disregard the elemental laws of civilization and the primal rights of humanity. He has struck a mortal blow to the security of society, if by victory he sustains the doctrine that no treaty obligations are sacred when they interfere with what a nation conceives to be national necessity. When he violated the neutrality of Belgium and tore up the Belgian treaty as 'a scrap of paper' he announced a doctrine which, if sustained, makes impossible the security of the civilized world, because the maintenance of friendly relations and intercourse between modern nations is based absolutely upon the inviolability of treaty obligations.

"A few days ago a patriotic citizen walked into my office in Washington and asked me for a pad and a pencil. I handed him by accident a torn piece of paper—in fact, 'a scrap of paper.' He immediately wrote the following:

"I hereby subscribe for $5,000,000 of Liberty Loan bonds and agree to pay for them whenever called upon by the Secretary of the Treasury to do so.

"It was a thrilling incident to me, because there was the answer to the German Kaiser's defiance of the sacred obligations of a treaty.

"There was the answer of the American people, phrased in simple language by an American citizen, to the declaration that sacred treaties are mere 'scraps of paper.' He answered it for the American people with another 'scrap of paper'—a 'scrap of paper' upon which was expressed the American spirit in this war—that with 'scraps of paper' representing the billions of resources of the American people, the principles of liberty throughout the world will be vindicated and established for all time."

ARMOR PLATE PLANT AT CHARLESTON, W. VA.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I have a telegram from W. E. Chilton, formerly Senator from West Virginia, regarding the criticism which was made several days ago by some letter published in the RECORD concerning the high price of lots, in which it was stated that the citizens of Charleston, W. Va., were interfering with the construction of the armor-plate plant there. At his request I desire to have his telegram printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The telegram is as follows:

CHARLESTON, W. VA., May 21, 1917.

Hon. CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
Washington, D. C.:

I am informed by wire that Senator CALDER, of New York, put into the RECORD a letter signed Lewis, accompanied by some resolutions of some society meeting in Kansas by some or all of which it is sought to make it appear that real estate speculators here are embarrassing the Government in housing the people who will be connected with the Government armor-plate plant. I have tried to get Senator CALDER by telephone, for what I know of him gives me assurance that he would not do an unjust act, and it was my purpose to ask him for details and give him the facts. Failing to get him by telephone and in Senator TILLMAN'S absence I am wiring you, for, while you were an ardent supporter of Virginia for the plant, now that it is to be located here, I know that your intelligent advocacy of a Government plant and your observations while the fight was in progress, convinced you that the opposition to the principle of Government operation came from money sources, and you will not be surprised if Charleston, the successful candidate, gets a few stray shells which were loaded for the congressional fight against Senator TILLMAN'S bill.

I readily acquit Senator CALDER of any ulterior purpose, and I should imagine that the society passing the resolutions was misled. We here, however, are on the firing line, and we get the projectiles whether they come from philanthropic people interested in better housing conditions or from the manufacturers of armor plate who may wish to delay the work here, hoping that at some time in the future another administration may recommend that no plant be built at all. Cold water is not always called by that name, and the armor plate people who finally faced a Congress not afraid to pass the armor-plate bill seem not yet to have recovered from the shock. Let me assure you that Charleston would welcome any investigation as to her locality and the sincere desire of all the people of West Virginia, except about the percentage of German sympathizers in the United States, to aid the Government not only in building the plant and housing cheaply and comfortably all her employees, but in making this war a success and confounding all our enemies. We have raised $300,000 and paid for over 200 acres of land worth much more. We have organized a million-dollar company to build good houses to take care of the additional population. We are spending here now over twenty millions in plants other than the Government plant, and which came here before the armor plant location was settled. Real estate values have not been inflated unduly, and most of the purchases have been made by our own people. Our chamber of commerce, business men's association, and other local civic organizations have taken up actively and intelligently the subject of properly housing the new population, and we have given the Government ample level land located on the river, a paved street, and street car line to build its own houses. If our patriotic work and active, earnest treatment of this particular subject should fail, the Government has a guaranty of security from extortion in the liberal gift of valuable conveniently located land. I feel sure that neither Senator CALDER nor the Senate will permit an injustice to be done people who are doing their bit nobly and generously. Whatever may be requested of this city by legal or moral obligation will be done, and our people would be glad to show the Senate how alert they are and how fully they are impressed with the importance of the subject referred to in the letter put into the RECORD. This city would thank you to give the above facts to the Senate.

W. E. CHILTON.

Mr. MARTIN. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, May 23, 1917, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, May 22, 1917.

The House met at 11.30 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord God our Heavenly Father, help us to consecrate ourselves anew to Thee; that we may meet the duties and responsibilities of the hour with a firm and steadfast faith in the power of good over evil; that we may add truth to truth, strength to strength, better to good, and be assured of Thine all-inclusive love by which we shall live and love and advance through the eternal ages which are Thine. Comfort, we beseech Thee, the Member who has been sorely stricken by the sudden and unexpected death of his beloved wife. And let the Everlasting Arms be about the motherless boy. Help them to see through the eye of faith a glorious Beyond, where sorrows never enter; and all praise be Thine in His Name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 66) making immediately available the moneys appropriated for the investigation of the pneumatic mail-tube service in the act approved March 3, 1917, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

WAR REVENUE.

On motion of Mr. KITCHIN, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes, with Mr. FOSTER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. When the committee rose last night there was pending an amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS]. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. FESS: Page 30, line 14, after the word "organizations," insert "bona fide chautauquas or lyceum courses operated under a contract with local guarantors."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from North Carolina state whether it is his intention to run along this evening without a recess?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. Now, I suggest to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS], why not withdraw his amendment——

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, if I may have unanimous consent I will withdraw that amendment in order to offer another.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment just read, and without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, on page 30, line 13, after the word "religious," to insert a comma and the word "educational."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FESS: Page 30, line 13, after the word "religious," insert a comma and the word "educational," so that the line will read: "or which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational, or charitable institutions."

Mr. KITCHIN. I see no objection to that, and I will raise no objection to it. It puts educational institutions and societies on a level with religious institutions and societies.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, is this now a matter of unanimous consent?

Mr. FESS. No; this is offered for a vote.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Opening up the exemption to educational institutions is opening a very wide door, I want to say to the gentleman from North Carolina. Addresses delivered by men like the explorer Shackleton and by men who talk on special topics or matters such as our distinguished friend, Mr. Bryan, may discuss come under the classification of educational, and they are conducted very largely for profit.

Mr. STERLING of Illinois. It would not apply to that kind of an entertainment unless the profits went to an educational institution. They could not be conducted for private profit.

Mr. KITCHIN. I think the amendment is amply safeguarded. You know it was worded differently from this originally, and in the committee we left it out. It read originally "for educational purposes." Afterwards we changed it, so that the proceeds must go wholly to some institution.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Let us take the very matter of a chautauqua, which I think is what the gentleman from Ohio desires to include by his amendment. Is it contended that a chautauqua is not conducted for profit?

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, what I had in mind was to exempt the numerous lyceum courses given by the various educational institutions of the country. The amendment does not cover the chautauqua unless it is not run for profit. For instance, the circuit chautauquas run for commercial advantage, if that can be established, are not exempted, but the lyceum courses offered by schools and colleges will be exempted.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman offers his amendment to a paragraph of the bill which provides that the admission fee shall not be taxed where the proceeds inure exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational, or charitable institutions. That is the way it will read if his amendment carries.

Mr. FESS. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The chautauqua does not dedicate its profit to any institution, I understand.

Mr. FESS. If it is run for profit, it is not exempted by my amendment.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If a chautauqua can employ lecturers at the rate of $100 a night or can engage so distinguished a speaker as the Hon. William Jennings Bryan—this is not political—to lecture for $250 a night, certainly those receipts ought not to be exempted.

Mr. MEEKER. Will the gentleman yield for a correction? Mr. Bryan is paid as high as $750 a speech on a fifty-fifty basis.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I have no doubt he is worth it. I am not saying a word against his eloquence, but I am speaking of exempting from taxation those who are able to make so much money.

Mr. MEEKER. It is not intended that Mr. Bryan shall escape.

Mr. FESS. My amendment was precisely in the interest of what my friend from Pennsylvania is trying to get at. I wanted to exempt those associations that are purely educational and are not running a lyceum course for profit. If they are running it for a profit, they ought to pay the tax; but I want to exempt those lyceum courses that are offered by the Young Men's Christian Association and by various churches and by high schools, the proceeds of which do not go for any personal profit, but are expended for libraries or school education or something of that kind. I am sure that my friend does not want to tax those.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I move to strike out the last word. It is possible that organizations may be formed for educational purposes, having no intent to make profit for the members of the association; but it is inconceivable that a large educational institution can be formed that can afford to pay $750 a night for a lecturer, or any less sum, without somebody getting some profit that in these war times ought to be taxed. It is not impossible that some "educational" concern might be established to employ Charlie Chaplin, one of the best-paid artists in the world, to give educational lectures or performances, without paying any tax to the Government of the United States. This would not be fair to legitimate theaters, moving-picure shows, or other amusements approaching the educational. My attention has been brought to the fact that many "star performers" who come from Europe seem to be in high favor. They can drain the people of their admission fees in performances or lectures of one kind and another and get away without paying any taxes, while our own citizen "artists" are always mulcted and have to pay.

Mr. STERLING of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. STERLING of Illinois. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that it is not a question of whether the entertainment is educational in character. It might be educational and still liable to the tax. If the profit derived from the chautauqua goes for the benefit of any educational or religious institution, it is exempt from the tax. I think the gentleman makes a mistake in assuming that a chautauqua is exempt providing it is educational in its character, which is not the case.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I observe that we have taken out of the class to be taxed those who attend the agricultural fairs, and yet the mill worker who goes to the moving-picture show where he pays more than 5 cents is taxed. If the farmer wants to go to the agricultural fair, which pays salaries to officers, and so forth, there is no taxation.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. Does not the gentleman know that every farmer now takes his automobile and goes to the city to the moving-picture show every night?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I have often stated, and am glad to repeat, that I am one of the best friends of the farmer in this House and wish him well; but the farmer has more friends in this House than the man in the city, and I have observed that the farmer can be exempted from conscription while the boy in the mill and the clerk in the bank is caught for war service. The farmer is exempt from taxation in other respects, while the father of the boy who works in the mill is held for taxation; and I observe that in the matter of great products that are going into munitions of war, like cotton and grain, the farmer who is making profit just now is released from some of the burdens of taxation levied by this bill that are going to be all placed upon the men of the mill. We should hold Charlie Chaplin if he is making $750,000 a year—I am not sure he is a citizen of the United States—we should hold him or any profit-making lecturer or artist who may be operating under the guise of a chautauqua or educational institution. Let him pay into the Treasury of the United States a little of that $750,000 per annum. These are war times.

Mr. SLOAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. SLOAN. Will the gentleman state where the farmer is any more exempt from draft than the man who works in the mill?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The conscription bill specially designates that those employed in agricultural pursuits shall be relieved.

Mr. SLOAN. Oh, no; they are in a class that the President may exempt.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The Secretary of Agriculture, and, I think, probably hundreds of others in office in Washington, have indicated that the boy who goes to the farm to fight the battles of his country will be doing as much or more service than if he puts a gun on his shoulder and goes across the water into the trenches like the boy in the mill and the clerk in the bank are expected to do.

Mr. TOWNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. TOWNER. I want to call attention to the fact that it seems to me that the imposition of the tax would not reach Mr. Bryan or Charlie Chaplain. Does not the gentleman think that the imposition of this 5 per cent tax should be added to the ticket for the entertainment?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I think if the matter of educational exemptions is to apply to chautauquas, the voluntary or corporate associations, as the case may be, some of them may arrange that high enough salaries are paid to lecturers and others to leave no profits to be taxed.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. KITCHIN. I will take one minute—two minutes—to go to the gentleman from Illinois and two to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I think there can be no difficulty with regard to the point raised by these gentlemen. If gentlemen will examine the language of the section, they will see that the tax is not to apply where the proceeds inure exclusively to the benefit of religious or charitable institutions. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] adds educational institutions. It could not be held in any case that a chautauqua organization was exclusively an educational institution. I do not think there will be any difficulty about that proposition, I would say to the gentleman. I want to say, however, Mr. Chairman, that I wish it was. I do not take the position by any means—in fact, I am very much opposed to the position—that any tax should be placed upon the chautauquas in the United States or on lecture courses in this country. Because certain gentlemen get high prices for lectures and chautauqua addresses does not take from me the belief that on the whole these institutions are a great benefit to the people and the country, both educationally and in a high sense as entertainment. I wish that this section and provision reached only to those institutions that were exclusively amusements in their nature, exclusively unnecessary, exclusively for the purpose of entertainment; but when institutions such as the chautauqua are organized all over the country, which give the people both high-class amusement and a high class of instruction upon educational grounds, it seems to me that it is a tremendous mistake to tax them as it is intended to do by this bill. I would be glad to strike out the provision of the bill that applies to lecture courses and chautauqua courses. I believe such a tax is unjust, I believe it is unmerited, I believe it is inexpedient, and I wish it was out of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I understand that all debate upon this amendment has been exhausted?

The CHAIRMAN. There are still three minutes left.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Is it in order to offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Then I desire to offer a substitute for the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will be able to do that.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I think there can be no question about the advisability of adding the word "educational" to this section of the bill. Of course, it is true that even educational institutions are obliged to employ men to give the education, and the man who comes as a lecturer for the purpose of educating the people assembled by the associations which are banded together for educational and religious purposes, if he gets enough money out of the income he receives from that source, will be compelled to pay a tax on that income. There ought not to be any unnecessary burden placed upon institutions of this sort, and no tax should be imposed upon an admission ticket where people are gathered for the purpose of receiving educational instruction, and where they are endeavoring to accumulate a fund to be used exclusively by the local organization, which is not banded together for profit. I think the whole story is very simple. It is merely a question of whether you are going to make it more difficult for a church or an educational institution in a local community to have men come in from the outside to educate them on things about which they want education. I believe that every person who gives thoughtful consideration to this question will agree that there ought not to be any tax where the institution is banded together purely for educational purposes, and where the profit from the entertainment, whatever it may be, goes exclusively either to the educational institution or to the development of the church.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I take it that this amendment does not apply to a case to which the gentleman from Pennsylvania objected. I take it that if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] were employed by an educational institution or society to deliver a lecture and admission charges were made, and part of the proceeds went to pay the gentleman from Illinois, they would have to pay a tax under this amendment; but if the gentleman from Illinois charged nothing for his lecture, although charges of admission were made, and all of the proceeds went to the educational or charitable or religious institution, society, or organization, no tax would be charged.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment by way of substitute, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. MILLER of Minnesota: Page 30, line 13, after the word "institutions," insert the words "or to schools, colleges, or universities or any institution of learning organized thereunder or conducted thereby."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that that amendment should come in after the word "organization," in line 14, instead of after the word "institutions."

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. That is correct; and I ask unanimous consent to modify my amendment accordingly.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment, offered as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS], is simply that it will enable the educational institutions, essentially such, to have lectures, admission to which will not come under this tax provision. It exempts schools, colleges, and universities, and, in addition, institutions of learning organized under schools, colleges, or universities, or conducted by them. The purpose of this last part is to enable schools, colleges, and universities to conduct extension work, which is a very large part of the work now of modern colleges and universities. It will obviate that which has been troubling many of us, namely, the exemption of chautauquas. It does not exempt them. It does not exempt any such institution, and I am one of those who believe that chautauquas as they exist to-day, splendid institutions as they are, should not be classed as purely educational. They are a mixture of education and high-class entertainment and should be so understood throughout the country. They have educational features, certainly, but are not essentially and exclusively educational. I went to Buffalo Bill's circus the other night. I went to get educated; I wanted to see how Jess Willard used his gloves.

A MEMBER. Were you educated?

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I was not. I was one of those who were stung. They could avoid the tax perhaps by classing this show as educational. Of course, that construction would be far stretched and misleading, but no further far stretched or more misleading than the citations already made by gentlemen in this debate. So it seems to me this substitute meets the requirements of the situation and is free from the objections that have been raised.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, to save my life I can not see how that adds anything to it. I think you rather mystify it by putting that language in.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS] offers an amendment following the word "religious," in line 13, page 30. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] offers a substitute, after the word "organization," on line 14.

Mr. MANN. Is it really a substitute?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair really thinks it is a substitute. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER].

The question was taken, and the substitute was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the Chair was in doubt.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Division, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MEEKER. A parliamentary inquiry. This is on the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 114, noes 1.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment: On page 30, after line 12, before the word "proceeds," insert the word "gross," and on line 14, before the word "proceeds," insert the word "gross."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA: Page 30, line 12, before the word "proceeds," insert the word "gross," and in line 14, before the word "proceeds," insert the word "gross."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, that is hardly necessary at all.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to have the amendment offered by me yesterday and agreed to corrected by inserting the word "or" before the word "subscription," on line 2, page 30.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I suggest that that can not be made in the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Did the gentleman offer an amendment?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. No; I asked unanimous consent to correct the amendment. I ask unanimous consent to return to this section. I just wanted to insert the word "or" before the word "subscription," which was inadvertently omitted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. LAGUARDIA offers an amendment to the amendment adopted, by inserting the word "or" before the word "subscription," on page 30, line 2, after the word "admission," so that as amended it will read:

"Each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission or subscription to any place," etc.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 801. That there shall not be taxed under this title any bond, note, or other instrument, issued by the United States, or by any foreign Government, or by any State, or local subdivision thereof, or municipal or other corporation exercising the taxing power, when issued in the exercise of a strictly governmental, taxing, or municipal function.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment on page 32, line 6.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 32, line 6, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon and the following:

"Or stocks and bonds issued by cooperative building and loan associations which are organized and operated exclusively for the benefit of their members and make loans only to their shareholders."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than five years, or both, in the discretion of the court, and shall also forfeit any such forged or counterfeited stamp, die, plate, or other article and the vellum, parchment, or paper upon which it is placed or impressed.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend, on page 34, line 15, by striking out the words "at hard labor" where it says "imprisonment at hard labor."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. MANN. We no longer carry that language.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is in the old 1898 act.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows,

Amendment offered by Mr. MANN: Page 34, line 15, strike out the words "at hard labor."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 808. That the collectors of the several districts shall furnish without prepayment to any assistant treasurer or designated depositary thereof of the United States located in their respective collection districts a suitable quantity of adhesive stamps for sale. In such cases the collector may require a bond, with sufficient sureties, to an amount equal to the value of the adhesive stamps so furnished, conditioned for the faithful return, whenever so required, of all quantities or amounts undisposed of, and for the payment monthly of all quantities or amounts sold or not remaining on hand. The collectors shall supply their deputies with a sufficient quantity of such stamps and may sell to other parties within their respective districts who may make application therefor adhesive stamps upon the same terms allowed by law or under the regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who is hereby authorized to make such other regulations, not inconsistent herewith, for the security of the United States and the better accommodation of the public, in relation to the matters hereinbefore mentioned, as he may judge necessary and expedient. The Secretary of the Treasury may also from time to time make such regulations as he may find necessary to insure the safe-keeping or prevent the illegal use of all such adhesive stamps.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 38, line 5, strike out the word "thereof."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

2. Bonds, indemnity and surety: Bonds for indemnifying any person, corporation, partnership, or corporation who shall have become bound or engaged as surety, and all bonds for the due execution or performance of any contract, obligation, or requirement, or the duties of any office or position, and to account for money received by virtue thereof, and all other bonds of any description, except such as may be required in legal proceedings, not otherwise provided for in this schedule, 50 cents: Provided, That where the premium charged for the execution of such bond is in excess of $100, the tax shall be paid at the rate of 1 per cent of the premium charged.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 39, lines 22, 23, and 24, strike out all after the colon in line 22 to the end of line 24 and insert:

"Provided, That where a premium is charged for the execution of such bond the tax shall be paid at the rate of 1 per cent of each dollar or fractional part thereof of the premium charged: Provided further, That policies of reinsurance shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this subdivision."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, just what is the effect of that?

Mr. KITCHIN. As the bill is printed now, all bonds written, in which the premium does not exceed $100, have to pay 50 cents. The result is that on these rural-carrier bonds, indemnified by an indemnity company, the premium is only 50 cents, and the tax would be 50 cents. The effect of this amendment is to levy a tax of 1 per cent on the premium charged where a premium is charged.

Mr. MANN. That is what I thought you had just provided before, that the premium shall be 50 cents upon the bond.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; for an individual. When you sign the bond as an individual 50 cents will be collected. But when a bonding company makes charges——

Mr. MANN. But the 50 cents is not confined to a bond signed by individuals.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; where there is no premium charged.

Mr. MANN. I will not say so, positively, but I think the gentleman must be mistaken. I am doubtful myself about it. But the original provision in the bill was designed to make a charge of 50 cents for each bond.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. But if the minimum charge is but $100, then it would be 1 per cent?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. In other words, if the premium was to be $75 the tax on the bond was to be 50 cents?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Now, apparently the gentleman's amendment will make the tax 75 cents if the cost of the bond is $75.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; if a premium is charged.

Mr. MANN. But the proviso now only relates to where the premium charge exceeds $100.

Mr. KITCHIN. I am striking that out.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman mean to say that as the gentleman's bill was before, it did not provide for any charge when the premium was $100?

Mr. KITCHIN. If it was in excess of $100, it was 1 per cent. If under $100, it was 50 cents.

Mr. MANN. Now, the gentleman's amendment will make the charge 75 cents if the premium was $75?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; 1 per cent. Take the rural-carriers' bonds. Most of them have a premium of 50 cents.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman mentioned the rural-carriers' bonds. There are a great many bonds besides those. If it is the intention of the gentleman to increase the rate to more than 1 per cent on bonds where the premium amounts to $50, that is what it will do.

Mr. KITCHIN. On all bonds where there is no charge made it will be 50 cents, whether for $1,000 or $10,000. On all bonds where a premium is charged it will be 1 per cent of the premium charged.

Mr. MANN. I understand that is the gentleman's amendment. But that was the case before, except as to the bond where the premium was between $50 and $100. Now you simply increase the tax between $50 and $100?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; we simply increase the tax between $50 and $100 from the bill, and lower it——

Mr. MANN. No; you do not lower it anywhere. You increase it. I do not see the object of it.

Mr. KITCHIN. We lower it—of course we lower it. Suppose the premium charge here is $25. It is now 25 cents. Before it was 50 cents.

Mr. MANN. Then you have a contradiction. You said you had 50 cents, and then 25 cents.

Mr. KITCHIN. There is no contradiction. If the gentleman will read the amendment, he will notice that if no charge for premium is made it is 50 cents, no matter what the value of the bond is, and if a charge is made it is 1 per cent of the premium.

Mr. MANN. Does not the gentleman think that is "going some" to charge 50 cents on a bond where there is no premium charged, and if you pay a premium of $25, then you pay 25 cents?

Mr. KITCHIN. That provision is exactly like the bonding-company bond provision of the acts of 1898 and 1914, with reference to bonds for which a premium was charged.

Mr. MANN. That beats me.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman voted for it. Oh, the gentleman was not here in 1898?

Mr. MANN. I was here when all of these tax matters passed which are in the gentleman's memory, but I did not vote for all of them.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROWE. May I ask the chairman of the committee one word about the paragraph we have just passed?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. ROWE. In line 9, page 39, it says:

That every renewal or extension of the foregoing shall be taxed as a new issue.

That refers to bonds of indebtedness. In the State of New York we give a bond with a mortgage. In many States they take a note with the mortgage. Our savings-bank mortgages run for one year only. Would they be subject to a tax every year?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; every renewal.

Mr. ROWE. That would be a very large tax to put on mortgages.

Mr. KITCHIN. The mortgages are not taxed at all. It is just the notes.

Mr. ROWE. Yes; but here is the bond which goes with the mortgage in New York, which is of the full value of the mortgage.

Mr. KITCHIN. The law of 1898 taxed both.

Mr. ROWE. But it did not tax the renewal where there was no written renewal.

Mr. KITCHIN. There was a tax where there was a written renewal, but it did not tax extensions.

Mr. ROWE. Yes; but in reference to savings-bank mortgages, coming due every year, to pay a tax every year on a big mortgage would mean a large expense.

Mr. KITCHIN. The only addition is the words "or extension."

Mr. ROWE. Why should it not say "written renewal"?

Mr. KITCHIN. That would be a written renewal if it is an extension.

Mr. ROWE. There is no renewal on our savings-bank mortgages. They may continue to run for 20 years, but the mortgage says it is due in one year.

Mr. KITCHIN. If they run for 20 years, and on the face of it the mortgage is due in one year, then that would be an extension.

Mr. ROWE. No; it says one year, and then the savings banks never call for it. It is just a custom of the State.

Mr. KITCHIN. The word "renewal" would not touch them, but the words "extension of" do catch them.

Mr. ROWE. There are other States also that have the same trouble.

Mr. KITCHIN. Will the gentleman prepare an amendment to strike out the words "or extension"?

Mr. ROWE. I move to strike out the words "or extension," in line 9, page 39.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. In the State of Massachusetts all mortgages made to savings banks run for the term of six months, but they are witnessed, and that makes them run for 20 years before requiring a renewal. That has been so ever since the constitution of the State was established. The banks all take their notes for six months.

Mr. KITCHIN. The committee have no objection to striking out the words "or extension of."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. ROWE] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROWE: Page 39, line 9, strike out the words "or extension."

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman from North Carolina yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is it not possible that there will be no renewals at all, but simply granting extensions on the face of the notes?

Mr. KITCHIN. The banks will not do that. When the bank examiner comes around he will make them renew. I have been spending the greater part of my life in renewing notes.

Mr. ROSE. I presume with the words "or extension" stricken out it would provide that the tax shall be paid only when there is a renewal.

Mr. KITCHIN. Whenever they are renewed the tax will have to be paid.

Mr. JAMES. Will the gentleman from North Carolina yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. JAMES. Is the tax of 1 per cent on indemnity and surety bonds issued by a bonding company paid by the bonding company or the assured?

Mr. KITCHIN. That is paid by the bonding company. The gentleman refers to paragraph 2, beginning in line 14, page 39?

Mr. JAMES. Yes.

Mr. LANGLEY. Will the gentleman from North Carolina yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. LANGLEY. This section does not in any way interfere with or handicap the renewal of notes, does it?

Mr. KITCHIN. No.

Mr. LANGLEY. If it does, I am opposed to it.

Mr. KITCHIN. Let us have a vote, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. ROWE].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The stamps representing the tax imposed by this paragraph shall be attached to the stock books and not to the certificates issued.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I should like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina how does this affect mutual building and loan associations?

Mr. KITCHIN. We have already exempted them by an amendment.

Mr. DOWELL. On the other section they were exempted on the bonds, but this is the stock. It seems to me there should be another exemption here, if the gentleman desires that they shall be exempt under this provision as to stocks.

Mr. KITCHIN. Will the gentleman please speak a little louder? I can not hear him on account of the confusion.

Mr. DOWELL. This is on the face value of the capital stock?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; 5 cents, like the provision in the laws of 1898 and 1914.

Mr. DOWELL. But it also taxes the stock of building and loan associations?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; we have just exempted them.

Mr. DOWELL. But your exemption applied not to the capital stock, but to the bonds; and the stock is not exempt under this paragraph at the top of page 40.

Mr. KITCHIN. The amendment says:

Stocks and bonds issued by cooperative building and loan associations.

And so forth. It seems to me that covers it.

Mr. DOWELL. It would seem to exempt it under the other sections.

Mr. KITCHIN. The House has just passed an amendment excepting bonds and stocks for building and loan associations.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina what is the modus operandi with reference to stamp taxes attached to the stock books and not to the certificates? You provide that the stamp shall be attached to the stock book and not to the certificate.

Mr. KITCHIN. In this case the reason is——

Mr. MANN. I understand the reason, but what will be the method of operation?

Mr. KITCHIN. They will have the company issuing the stock stamp the stub on the stock book.

Mr. MANN. The man owning the certificate is supposed to pay for it?

Mr. KITCHIN. No.

Mr. MANN. The company will not transfer the stock and pay the expense.

Mr. KITCHIN. This refers to the original issue of stock. When I am selling my stock to another person I put the stamp on it.

Mr. MANN. Then this covers by the term "original issue" only the original stock?

Mr. KITCHIN. The original stock.

Mr. MANN. And it does not apply to any company in existence?

Mr. KITCHIN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

4. Capital stock, sales or transfers: On all sales, or agreements to sell, or memoranda of sales or deliveries of, or transfers of legal title to shares or certificates of stock in any association, company, or corporation, whether made upon or shown by the books of the association, company, or corporation, or by any assignment in blank, or by any delivery, or by any paper or agreement or memorandum or other evidence of transfer or sale, whether entitling the holder in any manner to the benefit of such stock or not, on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof, 2 cents: Provided, That it is not intended by this title to impose a tax upon an agreement evidencing a deposit of stock certificates as collateral security for money loaned thereon, which stock certificates are not actually sold, nor upon such stock certificates so deposited: Provided further, That the tax shall not be imposed upon deliveries or transfers to a broker for sale, nor upon deliveries or transfers by a broker to a customer for whom and upon whose order he has purchased same, but such deliveries or transfers shall be accompanied by a certificate setting forth the facts: Provided further, That in case of sale where the evidence of transfer is shown only by the books of the company the stamp shall be placed upon such books; and where the change of ownership is by transfer of the certificate the stamp shall be placed upon the certificate; and in cases of an agreement to sell or where the transfer is by delivery of the certificate assigned in blank there shall be made and delivered by the seller to the buyer a bill or memorandum of such sale, to which the stamp shall be affixed; and every bill or memorandum of sale or agreement to sell before mentioned shall show the date thereof, the name of the seller, the amount of the sale, and the matter or thing to which it refers. And any person or persons liable to pay the tax as herein provided, or anyone who acts in the matter as agent or broker for such person or persons who shall make any such sale, or who shall in pursuance of any such sale deliver any stock or evidence of the sale of any stock or bill or memorandum thereof, as herein required, without having the proper stamps affixed thereto with intent to evade the foregoing provisions shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall pay a fine of not exceeding $1,000, or be imprisoned not more than six months, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 40, after the word "not," in line 20, strike out all including the word "cent" in line 21, page 40, and insert "1 per cent."

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I am trying to amend this section by striking out the provision which imposes a tax of 2 cents on every $100 stock certificate, and in lieu thereof inserting a provision that the tax shall be 1 per cent. As it is now the brokers are receiving one-eighth to one-quarter of 1 per cent on all these transactions, and if there is anyone that can afford to pay a little larger tax it is these men who are dealing in stocks on the stock exchange. This does not increase the tax on the original stock issue. It only increases the tax on the sales on the various stock exchanges. When we take into consideration that the most of these transfers and sales are gambling transactions there ought not to be any objection. If gentlemen are anxious to gamble in stocks I think they can easily afford to pay 1 per cent for the privilege. I venture to say there is only a very small percentage of the American people that buy and sell these stocks. There might be 15,000 or 25,000 of these stock brokers who are making great fortunes at the expense of the American people, and I believe that it is no hardship to impose a tax of 1 per cent on these gambling transactions.

To my mind, I think it would be much better if we would completely eliminate and prohibit these dealings. I think the country would be greatly benefited, and in view of the fact that there is no provision prohibiting this kind of gambling, I think they can easily pay the tax of 1 per cent, especially in view of the fact that we are imposing a tax of 5 per cent on legitimate business that can not stand it as well as these gambling institutions. For that reason I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. I want to know if I get the idea the gentleman has in mind. He wants to strike out that language that would impose a tax of 2 cents on $100 or fractional part thereof and impose a tax of 1 per cent. That would be $1 on a hundred.

Mr. SABATH. Yes; instead of 2 cents it would be $1 on every hundred-dollar certificate.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Does the gentleman want to prohibit these transactions altogether?

Mr. SABATH. I think it would, in a great measure, eliminate a great many of these gambling transactions, especially cheap stocks, where the American people are, as I stated before, fleeced almost every day on the stock exchanges.

Mr. BATHRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. BATHRICK. Does the gentleman want to put a tax of $1 on a certificate of stock that is only worth $4, notwithstanding the face value is $100?

Mr. SABATH. That is what I am trying to correct. My amendment in place of taxing each share regardless of value 2 cents will tax them on their actual value 1 per cent, so that a $10 share would pay 10 cents, a hundred-dollar share $1 instead of only 2 cents.

Mr. BATHRICK. Does not the gentleman know that the broker would not pay that, but the men who are fleeced will pay just so much more?

Mr. SABATH. It will be the gamblers who are gambling in stocks. Nine-tenths of these transactions are through brokers and by gamblers.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is it the gentleman's contention that no tax is paid on a certificate under a hundred dollars?

Mr. SABATH. It is on $100. What would it be on $10?

Mr. BARKLEY. Two cents.

Mr. SABATH. According to the gentleman's view it might be 2 cents, but I would correct it, and make it $1. That would not hurt anyone.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, a tax of 2 cents has been imposed, because it was the rate carried in the Spanish-American War tax bill. This is a revenue measure, and in this measure we are not attempting to close up the exchanges. The exchanges are the regular mediums through which business is transacted in the great cities of this country. We are unwilling to believe that a crisis has come in our country which makes it necessary to close up these exchanges and stop trade in these stocks. The amendment changes the tax suggested in the bill from 2 cents on $100 face value to $1 per $100. The effect of it might be at once disastrous to the recognized method of doing business in this country. We think the revenue item provided in the bill ought to stand, and the suggested amendment, which might have the effect of closing exchanges and impairing the volume of business transacted therein should not be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word to inquire whether this provides for a stamp on stock which has no face value? You have provided for that upon the original issue of stock. Is there any provision in here in reference to the transfer of stock without face value? If there is, it has temporarily escaped my attention.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I am pretty certain that we intended to cover that. I can not put my finger upon it now.

Mr. MANN. I do not catch it in this paragraph. Of course, it ought to be covered.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; we intended to cover that. Just let this be passed over, and I shall come back to that. It ought to be in if it is not in.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, there is a correction in punctuation which I think should be made. At the end of line 24 there is apparently a period where there ought to be a comma.

Mr. MANN. That is correct.

Mr. LANGLEY. I suggest that the period be stricken out and a comma inserted.

Mr. MANN. That is not a period; it is a comma with the tail broken off.

Mr. LANGLEY. Probably.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will make the correction.

There was no objection.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. On page 41, line 19, a period ends the provisions of the law, and then you begin with the word "And" with the penalty. Does the gentleman not think that that word "And" ought to be stricken out?

Mr. KITCHIN. It would be better English; yes.

Mr. FESS. Then I move that the word "And" in line 19, page 41, be stricken out and that the word "any" be written with a capital letter.

Mr. KITCHIN. That should be done.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 41, line 19, strike out the word "And" at the beginning of the sentence and begin the word "any" with a capital "A."

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

5. Produce, sales of, on exchange: Upon each sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, including so-called transferred or scratch sales, any products or merchandise at any exchange, or board of trade, or other similar place, for future delivery, for each $100 in value of the merchandise covered by said sale or agreement of sale or agreement to sell, 2 cents, and for each additional $100 or fractional part thereof in excess of $100, 2 cents: Provided, That on every sale or agreement of sale or agreement to sell as aforesaid there shall be made and delivered by the seller to the buyer a bill, memorandum, agreement, or other evidence of such sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, to which there shall be affixed a lawful stamp or stamps in value equal to the amount of the tax on such sale. And every such bill, memorandum, or other evidence of sale or agreement to sell shall show the date thereof, the name of the seller, the amount of the sale, and the matter or thing to which it refers; and any person or persons liable to pay the tax as herein provided, or anyone who acts in the matter as agent or broker for such person or persons, who shall make any such sale or agreement of sale or agreement to sell, or who shall, in pursuance of any such sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, deliver any such products or merchandise without a bill, memorandum, or other evidence thereof as herein required, or who shall deliver such bill, memorandum, or other evidence of sale, or agreement to sell, without having the proper stamps affixed thereto, with intent to evade the foregoing provisions, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall pay a fine of not exceeding $1,000 or be imprisoned not more than six months, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 42, line 12, after the word "cents," insert the following:

"Provided, That no such sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell unmanufactured cotton shall be lawful until a tax of $2.50 a bale shall have been paid upon such unmanufactured cotton."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, some advices from the cotton belt indicate a desire to abolish the exchange system on the ground that the producer always gets the worst end of the deal on the exchanges. I am not vouching for this, but am repeating what I have heard from some of the States where cotton is produced. It has been charged here that exchanges promote speculation and otherwise tend to create fluctuations in the market and are depressing to the farmer who produces the cotton. Some of my friends from the South, not necessarily Members of Congress, have indicated that if a moderate tax were put upon cotton, such a tax, for instance, as $2.50 a bale, which would be about a 5 per cent ad valorem tax, it would strengthen the cotton market in the United States and tend to reduce the power of Liverpool to control and deliver cotton, a desideratum, I take it, which would be very much appreciated by those who believe in "America first." Cotton in the raw is not taxed at all. Cotton has the very distinct advantage of being protected by the constitutional provision against a tax upon exports. In normal times about 60 or 65 per cent of American raw cotton goes abroad and is there manufactured into marketable textiles at a wage rate and an overhead charge far less than can be attained in the United States. These foreign-manufactured articles come back to the United States, and when the tariffs are low tend to depress the great industries of the United States that would gladly encourage the manufacture of cotton goods to a greater degree than they do if they were given a fair chance to compete with their foreign rivals. Yesterday in an effort to equalize the taxes imposed by this bill an amendment was offered putting a tax of $2.50 a bale upon raw cotton—that magnificent product and monopoly of the United States, which during the year 1916 produced a billion five hundred million dollars worth of wealth, which now in large part reposes securely in many of our southern banks.

Mr. LEVER. Does the gentleman know how much was produced in 1914?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman refers to the slump in the price of cotton. Our mills were suffering when cotton was low, because our southern friends had not seen far enough ahead to give us the advantage of a tariff upon cotton manufactures that would so protect us in the mills as to enable us to take from the farmer of the South all his raw cotton at a fair price. We were unable to buy cotton when we would gladly have done so, because our friends had not given us the opportunity to run our mills to the full.

Mr. HOWARD. The gentleman does not contend that the South has a monopoly on the production of cotton?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Well, I have not heard that they raise any cotton in Maine or in Minnesota.

Mr. HOWARD. Forty-six per cent of it is in competition. In other words, 64 per cent of the cotton produced in the world is raised in the South.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I think the world's output of cotton is produced largely in the Southern States.

Mr. HOWARD. The gentleman from Florida made several attempts to get protection on long-staple cotton alone, and you and your party fought it vigorously.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No; I think not; but the Democratic Party is now going to give him protection in this bill if, with Republican aid, it succeeds in passing it. This bill will give him a 10 per cent duty on long-staple cotton, so that Florida can compete with that cotton which comes from elsewhere. This bill is going to take care of citrus fruits, and there are various other Democratic annexes to what ordinarily would be a Republican measure. But the point, Mr. Chairman, is this: If our friends from the cotton States are going to regulate the cotton exchanges and prevent speculation, we had best put a moderate tax upon cotton itself, as cotton pays nothing directly to help us promote this war; and as cotton is a war munition, making extensive profit out of the war, it seems but fair, if we permit these exchanges to make these transfers and these sales on futures of cotton, and so forth, we should at least recover a tax of $2.50 a bale, which is very moderate, seeing that cotton has been realizing about $100 a bale and that more than 11,500,000 bales went to market in 1916.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOWELL. I desire to inquire of the chairman of the committee the meaning of one word in this paragraph 5, which provides for a tax upon an agreement to sell or to deliver at any exchanges. Does that include the ordinary market house that is found in our cities? Will the chairman of the committee inform me as to the language of this section?

Mr. KITCHIN. On what page?

Mr. DOWELL. On page 42 it says:

Upon each sale, agreement of sale, or agreement to sell * * * any products or merchandise at any exchange.

Mr. KITCHIN. It says "at any exchange or board of trade." That means the produce exchange.

Mr. DOWELL. But the word "exchange" there may mean an ordinary market house.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, no. I will say to the gentleman this was in the act of 1898, and had a construction; it was in the act of 1914, and had the same construction. It is well defined. We did not change the language at all.

Mr. DOWELL. I think a number of these have been incorporated since that time.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, no. That is an exchange, a board of trade, or a similar produce exchange.

Mr. DOWELL. Of course the term "board of trade" explains itself, but the word "exchange" would seem to me to mean at any market.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, no.

Mr. DOWELL. If that construction the gentleman has put upon it is correct——

Mr. KITCHIN. The department has put that construction upon it.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Would the gentleman consent to an amendment putting the words "or any stock exchange" in there?

Mr. KITCHIN. We could not do that.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Why?

Mr. KITCHIN. Because a point of order would lie against that.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Does the gentleman say that to make it exact and certain as to what you mean would be out of order?

Mr. KITCHIN. You said "stock exchange." No; we did not tax stock exchanges.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. It was to put the words "stock exchange" in there, so that it would mean any sale on a stock exchange or a board of trade.

Mr. KITCHIN. Has the gentleman ever heard of wheat or cotton being sold on a stock exchange? It is always on a board of trade or produce exchange.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Stock or produce exchange. I am offering that with the idea of defining the meaning of the word "exchange."

Mr. KITCHIN. It is given a well-defined meaning by the Treasury Department. It has construed that language.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. This meaning is a definition given by the department, and was given at the time of the Spanish-American War, and other kinds of exchanges not covered by those definitions have been organized and have been in operation since that time.

Mr. MANN. This does not have to go back to the Spanish-American War. This was in the war-revenue bill passed a couple of years ago. It is the same thing. There is a recent construction.

Mr. DOWELL. I would like to have that construction put in the RECORD.

Mr. KITCHIN. I will not put it into my remarks. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] can put it in his.

Mr. DOWELL. I have not heard it defined specifically here.

Mr. MANN. It means a board of trade or a similar exchange.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is all.

Mr. DOWELL. It ought to be defined.

Mr. MANN. They call it the Produce Exchange in New York.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, let the Clerk read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That no bill, memorandum, agreement, or other evidence of such sale, or agreement of sale, or agreement to sell, in case of cash sales of products or merchandise for immediate or prompt delivery which in good faith is actually intended to be delivered shall be subject to this tax.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McCLINTIC: Amend section 807 by adding a new paragraph, to be known as "Paragraph 5a," as follows:

"5a. That all stocks, bonds, securities, and all other values which may be bought or sold at any board of trade, stock exchange, or similar place, which are not covered in the preceding sections of this act, there shall be levied and collected a tax of 2 cents on each $100 and on each additional $100, 1 cent. That all stocks, bonds, securities, and all other values which are not for immediate or prompt delivery, or are not intended to be actually delivered by the seller or received by the buyer, there shall be levied and collected a tax of 25 cents on each $100, and on each additional $100, 5 cents. A record shall be made of every sale or purchase by the officers of said institutions, and the collector of internal revenue is hereby given authority to make such rules and regulations as will be necessary to enforce the provisions of this section."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois reserves a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Chairman, I am offering this amendment with the hope that those in charge of this legislation will see the need of taxing those occupations which should be called on to do their part toward maintaining this Nation. I do not see why any class of business should be exempted, when at the same time this legislation reaches out and taxes so many legitimate occupations, in order that the revenue needed at this time may be made available.

This amendment, if enacted into a law, will cause a tax to be paid by that class of speculators which has not been provided for in other sections of the bill. Inasmuch as it is proposed to tax automobiles, musical instruments, and a great many other kinds of industries, occupations, and luxuries of life, I am of the opinion that it will be no more than right to cause a tax to be paid by those who claim the privilege of dealing in stocks, bonds, and liquid securities on the different boards of trade and stock exchanges in this country.

I have introduced a bill to prohibit speculation in grain and foodstuffs. If I had the opportunity, I would be glad to vote for any kind of legislation which would prevent speculation and dealing in futures. Inasmuch as it will not be in order to consider legislation that will bring this relief at this time, I have offered this amendment with the hope that same would be found in order and agreed to by the committee. I know it will raise a great deal of additional revenue, and when this tax is caused to be paid by those who desire to speculate the people of this country will say that the United States Congress did right and no favorable exemptions were made in behalf of persons or occupations. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

6. Drafts or checks payable otherwise than at sight or on demand, promissory notes, except bank notes issued for circulation, and for each renewal or extension of the same, for a sum not exceeding $100, 2 cents; and for each additional $100 or fractional part thereof, 2 cents.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question of the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. This tax will be imposed on certificates of deposit issued by building and loan associations and savings and loan associations, would it not?

Mr. KITCHIN. I did not catch the gentleman's question. Will the gentleman please speak a little louder?

Mr. SWITZER. The tax carried in the paragraph would be imposed upon a certificate of deposit by a building and loan or savings and loan association?

Mr. KITCHIN. No, sir.

Mr. SWITZER. Your exemption went only to stocks and bonds?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; stocks and bonds. But the notes given——

Mr. SWITZER. Should not your exemption also exempt money deposited in the nature of stock?

Mr. KITCHIN. If they give you a certificate of deposit, that does not bear any. This is simply a note.

Mr. SWITZER. You do not expect that to be taxed?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; not a certificate of deposit; no, sir.

Mr SWITZER. That is, a certificate of deposit will not be taxed?

Mr. KITCHIN. No, sir; only drafts and checks payable on demand——

Mr. SWITZER. Let me have it clearly in my mind. If I deposit $100 in a savings loan company and they issue a certificate to me paying 3 or 4 per cent interest that is not taxed?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; it is not taxed.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. CRAMTON: Page 43, lines 16 and 17, after the word "checks," strike out the words "payable otherwise than at sight or on demand."

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to provide for a stamp tax upon the great mass of bank checks, which for some reason was not provided in this bill.

To my mind they are a most suitable subject for taxation at this time. I understand that when we are raising approximately $2,000,000,000 of revenue annually in the form of new taxes it is bound to place a burden upon practically everyone in the country. Any tax is a burden. It is our duty, however, when we are placing this great amount of new taxation upon the country, to select subjects where the burden will be bearable if possible. [Applause.]

A tax upon checks is a bearable burden. It is not a heavy one, as is provided in this section 6. It will be 2 cents upon each $100, as was suggested by my colleague from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY], a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CRAMTON. In a moment. But if that particular figure does not appeal to the House, you have it in your power to change it after you have adopted my suggested amendment. By striking out the limitation on the word "check" you will thereafter have it in your power to fix the figure where you would prefer to have the tax. Now I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. What I wanted to know is this: Would $100 be the limit, or would it take anything up to $100 in a check?

Mr. CRAMTON. Anything up to $100, 2 cents; and every additional $100, 2 cents.

Mr. FESS. And anything below $100?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes; 2 cents.

Mr. FESS. A dollar check?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes. If a man thinks he can get better service by going across the street and paying the cash and saving the 2 cents, it is up to him to do it in that way. It is up to him. I take a lot of newspapers in my district. When I come to send out the checks for a dollar or a dollar and a half apiece, those are the checks that are worrying some gentlemen here. Do you suppose I am going to object to paying 2 cents on each one of those little checks? It is a pleasure to know that the money goes to maintain at the front the armies of the United States, and I am glad to pay it.

Mr. RUSSELL. What is the gentleman's idea about who would pay this tax, the banker or the depositor?

Mr. CRAMTON. The man who draws the check will put the stamp on it.

Mr. RUSSELL. Does not the gentleman think that it is a great hardship upon the laboring man who may at the end of the week get a check for his week's wages of $10, to have to pay 2 cents to get his money out of the bank?

Mr. CRAMTON. He will not have to pay it. The man who draws the check has got to make it a good check by putting the stamp upon it. There is no hardship to the laboring man. He gets the check. Or the manufacturer whose weekly pay roll is, we will say, $10,000 may go to the bank and draw a check for $10,000 and present it. It must carry a 2-cent stamp for every $100. He may draw out the cash and take it to the office and pay his labor in cash. If so, the manufacturing concern has paid the tax—and payment in cash is not always the worst method, for at any rate the man does not have to go to a saloon to get a check cashed. If, however, instead of paying in currency the payment is made by check, the employer will have to put a stamp on each laborer's check before it is given out.

Mr. RUSSELL. But they do not do that.

Mr. CRAMTON. Put it in the law that they must do it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CRAMTON. May I have one minute more? I have been interrupted so much.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that he may proceed for one minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRAMTON. I want to take this one minute to remind you that there can be raised by this means perhaps not the billion dollars that my friend Mr. FORDNEY speaks of, but certainly two hundred million or three hundred million, and it will come in in a form that nobody will feel, and it will take care of that absolutely unjustifiable tax on gross sales of automobiles, if you please, that we limited yesterday and made rather fair. It will permit us to go back and strike out those onerous and burdensome taxes on necessities of life, taxes that will bear heavily on the laboring man and the householder—the taxes on freight charges, on electricity and gas used for lighting, heating, and cooking, on tea and coffee, and so forth. I appeal to you now. This is your opportunity. The ruling of yesterday cut out all new subjects of taxation. This is an opportunity to add $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 or $400,000,000 to this bill and opens the way for cutting out the worst features of the pending bill.

Mr. RAINEY. Do I understand the gentleman to say that this 2 cents tax on bank checks will yield $200,000,000 or $300,000,000?

Mr. CRAMTON. Two cents on every hundred dollars or less will do so.

Mr. RAINEY. The Spanish War tax amounted to only $9,000,000 from bank checks.

Mr. CRAMTON. That was only 2 cents on every check. This will be 2 cents on every $100 or less and will yield immensely more.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, there is no tax that is more alluring in the abstract and yet more disappointing and disastrous in its application than the tax upon checks. I have the highest personal regard for my friend from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] who has offered this amendment, but I am sure if he had studied the operation and effect of a stamp tax upon checks he would not have offered the amendment.

I am not going to undertake to talk about the exasperation of a tax like this. That is purely a political objection to the amendment, and if that were all, in this emergency I would, of course, not consider it.

But there is another consideration which I want to submit to the gentleman from Michigan and to the members of the committee. If you put a tax upon bank checks, what will be the effect? We had the experience in the Spanish-American War. The effect will be that a great many people will withdraw their funds from banks. A man will say, "Well, I shall probably need $100 during this week," and instead of giving small checks he will simply go to the bank and give one receipt and get $100. He will put that in his pocket. A great many people will do that. You will reduce the actual cash in as well as the deposits of the banks of this country.

Mr. CRAMTON rose.

Mr. WINGO. Please let me finish this statement. You will not only reduce the deposits, which are not always representative of actual cash, but you will take the actual cash out of the banks of this country, and if this becomes a law, wise bankers will increase their reserve holdings. That automatically will decrease the credit facilities of the banks throughout the country, and the two items within themselves will withdraw from circulation great volumes of actual cash, and in addition to that will reduce the volume of credits of the country, which is not to be desired at this time. Now, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAMTON. Deposits in savings banks are not subject to check. In the next place, if a man draws out $100, how long will it be before that money will find its way back to the bank?

Mr. WINGO. I investigated that proposition when this was proposed a year or so ago. The country merchants will keep a lot of money in their safes for the purpose of accommodating their customers. The small shopkeepers will do the same.

Then, there is another thing you will do with reference to the larger man. Down in Mississippi and at the mills in the district of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON], when the manager gets ready to make up his weekly or semimonthly or monthly pay roll, instead of giving checks as he does now, and paying out very little cash, in order to meet that pay roll he will go to the bank and get the actual cash, as some of them are so foolish as to do now. Then, the men will have to sign the pay roll, and pay envelopes will be made out, and the amount due each employee will be placed in an envelope and handed him instead of paying by checks as do all mills that have accepted modern, sensible methods.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. It is my understanding that my colleague from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] said that was the way he paid his help now, by drawing one check.

Mr. WINGO. I am surprised to know that any one of the business ability of the gentleman should cling to such an old-fashioned method as that.

Mr. HARDY. The gentleman from Michigan yesterday was one of the strong fighters against the tax on gross receipts. Now, is not this even worse than the tax on gross receipts, being a tax on the turnover?

Mr. WINGO. It is not only a tax on credit, but it will result in an automatic reduction of the cash in the banks.

Mr. HARDY. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] is just on the other side from what he was yesterday.

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman says it would result in raising $200,000,000 or $300,000,000. I think we got four or five million in the Spanish War.

Mr. RAINEY. Nine million.

Mr. WINGO. I thought that is the estimate of what will be obtained from this.

Mr. CRAMTON. If the gentleman calls this a tax on the turnover, does he not think that $100,000,000 or $200,000,000 would be a very modest expectation?

Mr. WINGO. Oh, no. I think if the gentleman really thought that he would be afraid to offer it.

Mr. CRAMTON. I do not accept the claim that it is a turnover.

Mr. HARDY. With the permission of the gentleman from Arkansas, I would like to ask the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] to explain how it is that he opposes the tax on gross profits on the ground of injustice——

Mr. WINGO. Oh, I have not got time for that. The only object I had in rising was to call the attention of the committee to the effect which this would have in decreasing the actual cash in the banks of the country and decreasing the volume of credit. That is aside from the fact that the tax is "pestiferous"; and I am not offering that as a reason, but it is a dangerous thing to undertake to reduce the cash volume and credit.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 43, line 20, after the period insert a colon and add the following: "Provided, That no tax shall be levied or collected on drafts or checks amounting to $50 or less."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that that is not an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan. It is an amendment that should be offered later after this is disposed of.

Mr. MADDEN. Very well.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia). The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate on the paragraphs and amendments thereto close in 20 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. Chairman, I think this amendment ought to be defeated in the interest of everybody concerned. In the first place, it is not proposed or expected to raise a great amount of revenue. In the next place, it is a great inconvenience to nearly everybody who draws checks on banks, and especially to those who are not familiar with the law and not prepared with a supply of stamps. I remember when a similar law was in force during the Spanish-American War, the farmers of the country, who had been accustomed to do so, would give checks to farm hands on Saturday and they would go to the banks with the checks, but, having no stamps upon the checks, could not get the money until the check was stamped. The man who had worked a week for his wages had to pay 2 cents to the bank out of the proceeds of his small check when cashed. He fell out with the bank, he fell out with his employer, because he thought his employer ought to have paid it, and that it ought not to come out of his wages, he got mad at his Congressman for passing such a law, and I do not blame him. The gentleman from Michigan says that the man who draws a check must pay the tax, but the fact is the farmer, as a rule, has no stamps and can not stamp the check when he writes it; he gives the check to the laborer, but he is not at the bank when the check is cashed, and he does not pay it. I know of no way that you can impose any penalty upon the farmer if he does not stamp the check. As a rule he does not do so; but if he does, it is a great inconvenience from which we should protect him. This would have the effect of driving money into hiding, because men who only have small deposits in the bank will take them out rather than to suffer this inconvenience, and the withdrawal of deposits from banks not only hurts the banks but takes the money out of circulation and is detrimental to all of the business interests of the country. The amendment should be defeated.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, I do not understand how anybody can get up and talk about this being a tax on the laboring man. We have had this tax before several times, and I never heard anybody complain of it. The man who draws a check puts a stamp on it or he has it already printed in his check book.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PLATT. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The tax we had before was not a graduated stamp tax, it was a 2-cent stamp on each check.

Mr. PLATT. But the principal was the same as far as putting the stamp on.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. You could not print the stamp on the check under a graduated tax, and you would have to carry the stamps around with you.

Mr. PLATT. You can have it printed for all the small checks of less than $100 and put on the additional stamps for each hundred. Now, how much would this tax raise? The World Almanac, which ought to be good Democratic authority, says that the amount of checks that passed through the clearing houses of the country last year was $241,500,000,000. Two cents on each $100 of that amount would raise $48,300,000. Now, not one-tenth of the checks drawn in this country go through the clearing houses, though probably most of the very large checks do. At the very lowest estimate, I should think the proposed check tax would raise $100,000,000, and nobody would object to it. To some extent it would tend to diminish the number of small checks drawn, checks for a dollar or two or for fractional parts of a dollar, which cost the banks a good deal of extra bookkeeping, but nobody would complain of it, and in fact many people are asking why it is not included in this bill.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, with all due deference to my good friend from Michigan, if this tax is imposed it will be the most burdensome, and the most unfair, and the most unjust tax that could be put upon the statute books. There are concerns which it would tax more than their total profits. Take the small creamery companies in my district that issue small checks for all the produce they buy. The tax would amount to more than their net profits.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. How would it do to exempt checks up to $50?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Well, I have only a minute and a half and I can not discuss that now. When that amendment comes up we will discuss it, it is not before the House now.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes, it is.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. As the gentleman from Arkansas says, it would cause bank deposits to shrink all over the country. The farmer would have to carry a check book around with him and the stamps to pay for the cattle and the hogs, or he would have to carry the money, and I do not know which he would do; in either case it would be extremely burdensome. There are concerns that issue enormous amounts of checks compared with the business that they do, and these concerns would be taxed heavily.

Mr. LANGLEY. And would it not do enormous damage to the country banks?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It would be a great injury to the country banks, whose deposits would decrease if such a tax was imposed. It would work unfairly because there are some concerns which issue but few checks and yet do a large business.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I think it would be unwise to adopt this amendment for a number of reasons. I want to answer the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] as to the exemption of low-denomination checks. The effect of that would be to simply split the check. A check for $100 or $200 would be split up into three or four checks. That will be done. I think it would disorganize a very well-established system throughout the country.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SLOAN. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman does not think that a man would be so dishonest if he had a hundred dollar bill to pay that he would make two checks?

Mr. SLOAN. I do not want to reflect on the people, but the gentleman knows about what human nature is, and there are many who would like to make a dollar out of the Government better than out of anybody else. I think that the deposit of funds in our banks throughout the country is the best incentive and encouragement for thrift that we have. This would amount to the greatest hobbling of the business transacted between banks and ordinary bank depositors that could be conceived. I know something about the little banking business, as we have it in the rural communities, and I know how it did affect the banking business in the 1898 period.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SLOAN. I can not yield. I want to say this, That a large amount of the business transacted throughout the Northwest—a large factor of it—is the creamery business. We have several large establishments throughout the Northwest which issue to the farmers thousands of checks every month, payments being made every day or twice a week, or once a week or every two weeks or monthly. If they have to stamp every one of those checks it will mean a good deal to the man who is receiving the small payment, or it will have the effect of extending those payments over longer periods. I think as a means of hampering business, especially as it is organized in the agricultural communities, you could do nothing more effective than this. For instance, a man wants to do any little transaction. He does not have stamps with him. If he had to have a graduated stamp arrangement he could not meet that by the printing process suggested by some, because you have got to stop to calculate and then inconvenience both parties until the stamping can be figured out and adjusted. It will encourage small holders to keep their money in their pockets, to be lost or stolen. It will deprive the banks of a large amount of deposits which would decrease the crediting power of the banks in their communities.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Nebraska has expired.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, has the time all expired?

The CHAIRMAN. There are three assignments yet remaining. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN] has five minutes, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] five minutes, and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] two minutes.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, this is a proposition to strike out of lines 16 and 17, on page 43, the words "payable otherwise than at sight or on demand," and the effect of it is to place a tax of 2 cents upon checks, no matter what the amount of those checks may be, and no more. That part of the paragraph which provides for an additional 2 cents for "each renewal or extension of the same, for a sum not exceeding $200, 2 cents" can not have any effect at all. Whoever heard of a check being renewed or extended? This is an attempt to revive the old stamp tax on checks of the Spanish-American War period. We have had this tax before, of course, and that is the reason why we never should have it again, because of all the profanity provoking taxes this excels all, and if all of the profanity——

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. No. If all the profanity occasioned by this stamp tax on checks in the past on the part of nonchurch members and church members could be assembled and printed in volumes, the volumes would fill the Congressional Library.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. And it never yielded over $9,000,000, and it will not yield more than that now, and that would not compensate the churches for the backsliding of their members who are compelled to stick these little stamps on checks.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. RAINEY. And it will have the effect of imposing unusual burdens upon some of the industries of this country, as the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] has indicated. Out in the rural sections now they do not carry money around with them to pay small balances due merchants and for small purchases. They draw checks every day, checks for a dollar, checks for even a less amount than that, and the imposition of this check stamp tax now would mean that persons would be required to withdraw from their banks sums of money and carry paper money around with them, distributing it and the disease germs that go with paper money through the entire country. If there is any tax ever devised by the mind of man which is a complete nuisance, this is that tax, and the proposition ought to be voted down by a large vote.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN] I do not see, but I think he would yield me two minutes of his time under the arrangement.

Mr. MCLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman can take my time.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote upon this.

Mr. CRAMTON. But the gentleman from Michigan has yielded his time to me.

Mr. KITCHIN. He can not yield time under the five-minute rule.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAMTON. Debate upon this was all on one side.

The question was taken.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division, and I shall ask for tellers also, because the time was all assigned on one side.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan asks for tellers. Those in favor of taking the vote by tellers will rise and stand until counted.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I first asked for a division.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, the Chair supposed that the gentleman wanted to get a result upon his vote.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I want a division. The time was all given on one side.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 16, noes 89.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment I offered.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina a question. A little while ago we struck out the charge for the extension of bonds. I appreciate that there ought to be a charge for extension of notes, but this is what is likely to happen: A man goes to a bank or elsewhere and gives a note for 30 days. Upon that there is a tax. It seems to me that under this language if the holder of the note lets it go over a day without payment he is liable for a tax upon the extension.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that I think that ought to go out like the word "extension" went out when we were dealing with bonds.

Mr. MANN. I think it would operate very hard on the maker.

I move to strike out, on page 43, line 18, the words "or extension."

Mr. KITCHIN. I think that amendment ought to pass.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 43, line 18, strike out the words "or extension."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

7. Conveyance: Deed, instrument, or writing whereby any lands, tenements, or other realty sold shall be granted, assigned, transferred, or otherwise conveyed to or vested in the purchaser or purchasers, or any other person or persons, by his, her, or their direction when the consideration or value of the interest or property conveyed, exclusive of the value of any lien or encumbrance thereon at the time of sale and assumed by the purchaser, exceeds $100 and does not exceed $500, 50 cents; and for each additional $500 or fractional part thereof 50 cents: Provided, That nothing contained in this paragraph shall be so construed as to impose a tax upon any instrument or writing given to secure a debt.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out, on page 44, line 3, the words "and assumed by the purchaser."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LENROOT: Page 44, line 3, strike out the words "and assumed by the purchaser."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, we accept that amendment. I think it ought to pass.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I move further to amend, in line 2, page 44, after the word "encumbrance," by inserting the word "remaining."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 44, line 2, after the word "encumbrance," insert the word "remaining."

Mr. KITCHIN. I agree to that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

11. Proxy for voting at any election for officers, or meeting for the transaction of business, of any incorporated company or association, except religious, charitable, or literary societies, or public cemeteries, 10 cents.

Mr. STINESS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Rhode Island offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. STINESS: Page 44, line 24, strike out "10 cents" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "When the value of stock represented by such proxy is $100, and does not exceed $500, 10 cents, and for each additional $500 or fractional part thereof, 10 cents.

Mr. STINESS. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this amendment is a fair one, because it equalizes the amounts to be paid. As this bill reads, a person who owns $100 worth of stock pays exactly the same for a proxy as though $500,000 were voted. Now, this is not a matter which taxes a poor man, but it taxes the rich man, the man who holds the stock.

Now, we all know that in most of these large corporations directors and officers do not control the stock. The stock is held by a great many small holders, and they send out the notices of the annual meeting, and ask for proxies. When those proxies come in, if they get a majority of the stock they elect themselves or their friends. When the proxies are sent, particularly at annual meetings, there is usually a notice that goes with them, and when the stamp tax is required they will affix the necessary stamp. Now, in the case where these large insurance or railroad corporations receive these proxies it often represents from a thousand to five thousand or five hundred thousand dollars, and it seems to me in order to make things fair we should increase it according to the amount of stock. Therefore I hope this amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. STINESS. Certainly.

Mr. RAINEY. Does his amendment exempt stock with a face value of less than $100?

Mr. STINESS. It says with a value of $100 and not more than $500.

Mr. RAINEY. But if the value is less than $100, what effect will the amendment have?

Mr. STINESS. It will be 10 cents, the same as it is now.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. If the gentleman will permit, his amendment does not change the paragraph at all except to make a graduated tax as you go on up above $100, if I understand it correctly.

Mr. STINESS. That is right.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It seems to me the amendment ought to be accepted.

Mr. MANN. I would like to know what it is. May we have it reported again?

Mr. KITCHIN. I trust the gentleman's amendment will not be adopted.

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent to have the amendment reported again.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will report the amendment.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, if the amendment is as I suppose it is, it does not impose any tax upon a transfer of stock of $100 or under, but it does impose an exceedingly large tax on transfers of stock over $100.

Mr. STINESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. And makes these proxies exceedingly expensive.

Mr. STINESS. This is not a transfer of stock at all. It is simply a proxy to vote the stock, and I would ask the gentleman if he thinks it is fair to make the tax the same for voting on a proxy representing $500,000 as on a proxy representing $500 worth of stock?

Mr. RAMSEY. What does the gentleman consider a reasonable value?

Mr. STINESS. The market value.

Mr. RAMSEY. Why do you assume a value you do not know?

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Rhode Island, as a matter of fact, if it is not customary for the company itself to pay this stamp tax on proxies?

Mr. STINESS. I will answer the gentleman by saying that from my own experience, in what little stock I have had, the people who want to get control of the corporation ask me for my proxy on my stock, and state they would attach the necessary stamp. When they get the proxy for my stock and the proxies for the other stock they elect themselves to offices that pay large salaries.

Mr. MANN. Oh, well, the gentleman can send his proxy to anybody he pleases. Sending his proxy to some individual, working separately, instead of to an agent, or a committee representing a large number never does any good. But if there is a combination or a committee enlisting the proxies, as I understand it, they invariably pay for the stamps. The gentleman would very materially increase the difficulty of an independent organization endeavoring to oust the directors of an organization already in office, because they will pay this increased tax in any event out of the funds of the corporation, while the outsiders would have to pay it out of their own pockets.

Mr. STINESS. I will say to the gentleman that if they are endeavoring to oust the present officers they would take the trouble to go themselves instead of sending a proxy.

Mr. MANN. Oh, we know that the bulk of the shareholders in such a concern can not go. They are scattered all over the United States.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, my experience in regard to this matter is this: The directors of any corporation desirous of continuing their control of the corporation or company send out a letter asking for proxies, and at the bottom of the letter is a note to the effect that the expense of stamps on the proxies will be defrayed by the company on the receipt of the proxy. That is the practice now. The result, you may say, is that possibly in some cases they thereby continue their control. Of course, it is entirely optional with the stockholder either to send in his proxy or not, as he sees fit.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Is it not true that the company affixes the stamp of these proxies, no matter to whom they may run?

Mr. HILL. Yes; the company affixes the stamp to the proxy; no matter to whom they may run, and if you add to this expense you are simply burdening the company by an extraordinary and unnecessary cost of procuring a proper representation in the stockholders' meetings. It does not make any difference whether the stockholders are in favor of the existing officers or not. That will be a great burden upon the company if the company has thousands and thousands of stockholders. If, on the other hand, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] very fitly remarked, there is ground for ousting the officers of the company, and the majority of the stockholders think that there is occasion for having a change, and they start out to get proxies to reform the institution, the burden then falls on the very few who have given attention to the affairs of the company and who feel that its affairs should be adjusted; so that in one case it is a very great burden to the company, and through the company to the stockholders themselves, and in the other case it will make it almost impossible to secure a reform in the management of any large corporation if you add this great burden, which the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. STINESS] proposes to put on, of a 10-cent stamp on a graduated scale value of the stock that a man is giving the proxy for.

Of course, the immediate effect would be that where a body of stockholders had a desire to reform the company it would be impossible for them to assume that burden. On the other hand, those who wanted to keep in could prevent the accomplishment of that reform. Some revenue can be got out of it, it is true, but an attempt to adjust a situation of this kind by a tax would, it seems to me, simply aggravate the situation.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. In an ordinary case, unless there was some sort of attempt at reform, there would be a very small representation of the stockholders?

Mr. HILL. Yes. They would probably spend 10 cents on one proxy. But take the case of a company in my own State that has 30,000 stockholders. See what you would do if you put a graduated tax on proxies and practically prevented the stockholders from sending in the proxies at all.

Mr. STINESS. They ought to attend the meetings.

Mr. HILL. The gentleman says they ought to attend the meetings. The fact is, they reside all over the United States and can not attend the meetings. One-half of the stockholders in the company to which I have referred, numbering about 15,000 stockholders, are women, and to put this graduated tax on an instrument merely giving authority to somebody else to represent them at the stockholders' meeting would be a great mistake. This item is already big enough in the bill.

Mr. STINESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. STINESS. I will ask the gentleman if he has not heard it stated on the floor of the House that the members of the Committee on Ways and Means had shut their eyes and simply gone in to secure revenue, whether it could be defended or not? Does the gentleman think it fair that a man whose stock represents an investment of $500,000 should be treated the same as a man whose stock represented only $100?

Mr. HILL. Oh, the man whose stock represents $500,000 would probably go to the meeting, but the woman who had one share or half a dozen shares would not go. And besides that, the gentleman knows that thousands and thousands of stockholders in such corporations are women and representatives of estates and guardians of children, so that if this burden were imposed it would go to those least able to bear it; and in the case of its being paid by the company, the stockholders themselves would be forced to pay it ultimately.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. STINESS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend line 23, page 44, by inserting, after the word "religious," the word "educational."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. MILLER of Minnesota: Page 44, line 23, insert, after the word "religious," the word "educational."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

12. Power of attorney granting authority to do or perform some act for or in behalf of the grantor, which authority is not otherwise vested in the grantee, 25 cents: Provided, That no stamps shall be required upon any papers necessary to be used for the collection of claims from the United States or from any State for pensions, back pay, bounty, or for property lost in the military or naval service.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDERSON offers the following amendment: Page 45, line 7, after the word "service," strike out the period and insert "or upon powers of attorney required in bankruptcy cases."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, under the practice in bankruptcy cases creditors are required to make powers of attorney to the attorneys representing them in the election of trustees of the estate. In many of these cases both the claims of the creditors and the assets are very small. I have in mind one instance in my own practice in which there were more than 8,000 claims filed, and in over half of them the amount of the claim was less than $10.

A tax of 25 cents on a power of attorney to represent a claim of less than $10 is a very heavy tax, especially as it is a tax not upon profit but upon a transaction which already represents a loss. It seems obvious that the tax ought not to apply to powers of attorney given in a bankruptcy case.

Mr. MANN. I do not happen to be familiar with the practice in bankruptcy proceedings. Is it necessary for a lawyer, in order to represent a creditor, to have a power of attorney?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes; if he wishes to vote the claim at an election of trustees he must have a power of attorney.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. ANDERSON) there were—ayes 55, noes 53.

Accordingly the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

13. Playing cards: Upon every pack of playing cards containing not more than 54 cards, manufactured or imported, and sold, after the passage of this act, a tax of 8 cents per pack in addition to the tax imposed under existing law.

Mr. HOWARD. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I have a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. KITCHIN. I hope this amendment will satisfy the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 45, line 11, strike out the figure "8" and insert the figure "4."

Mr. HOWARD. I desire to oppose the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. OLNEY. I wish to ask the gentleman from North Carolina, would he be willing to strike out, in line 9, the words "containing not more than 54 cards"?

We must consider that in the game of five hundred, as it is played to-day, many of the packs contain 56 cards. Besides that, what would prevent a manufacturer from making packs containing 56 or 58 cards, perhaps four jokers? There seems to be a joker in this paragraph. Would not that prevent the collection of the tax, simply by putting in three or four useless cards?

Mr. KITCHIN. What does the gentleman want to strike out?

Mr. OLNEY. The words:

Containing not more than 54 cards.

That would tax five hundred cards and old maid cards.

Mr. KITCHIN. We certainly do not want to tax old maids.

Mr. HOWARD. Old maids ought to be taxed.

Mr. OLNEY. I think the language of the bill is rather doubtful, because I know the game of five hundred is largely played to-day in many families, and the five hundred packs consist of 56 cards. And what would prevent a manufacturer from making up a pack of 56 cards, in which three or four cards would be absolutely useless, thereby evading the tax?

Mr. KITCHIN. I want to say that the subject of playing cards is Greek to me. My colleague on the committee [Mr. LONGWORTH] seems to be an expert. [Laughter.]

Mr. OLNEY. Perhaps the gentleman from Ohio does not play five hundred.

Mr. BRITTEN. He does not play old maid, I promise you that.

Mr. KITCHIN. I think in the present law that language is found.

Mr. MANN. Is this a copy of the existing law as to the language?

Mr. KITCHIN. Of course, if this is the language of the existing law it ought not to be stricken out, because we got $750,000 from it last year under a 2-cent tax.

Mr. MANN. There has been a tax on playing cards ever since the year 1.

Mr. OLNEY. I suggest to the gentleman just to eliminate the words "containing not more than 54 cards."

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. COOPER] asked me what the language meant, and I told him I could not tell. If those words are in the existing law, there is no difficulty about it.

Mr. KITCHIN. Being a little ignorant of the law as to playing cards, let us pass it over for a moment and see what the existing law is.

Mr. HOWARD. It imposes a tax of 2 cents.

Mr. KITCHIN. Does it say anything about "containing not more than 54 cards"? I think we had better look that up.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to pass over this paragraph without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MASON. I desire to have reported an amendment which I offer.

Mr. KITCHIN. Before it is passed over, is there any objection to the amendment I have offered changing the figure "8" to "4"?

Mr. HOWARD. I want to be recognized in opposition to that.

Mr. KITCHIN. Then let it be passed over.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the reading of my amendment. Then, I will take only a couple of minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MASON: Amend, Title VIII, by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 14. One cent per pound on all canned meats, including all fish and fowl, to be paid by stamps on the original package, said stamps to be canceled in such a way as to show in legible letters the month and year of canning."

Mr. RAINEY. I make a point of order against that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman reserve his point of order?

Mr. RAINEY. I reserve the point of order.

Mr. MASON. Gentlemen of the committee, the thing sought here is a very simple one. Any man can see from the reading of the amendment what the purpose of it is. The complaint and trouble we have had in the past about canned meats has been largely due to the fact that the purchaser did not know anywhere within 5 or 10 years when the meat was canned. Certainly, the amendment is germane; and when the Government buys canned meat to send to the soldiers, or when for your own consumption you buy canned meat, you will know by an examination of the cancellation of the stamp whether the meat has been in the can 1 month, 1 year, or 20 years. I will reserve the balance of my time on the merits of this amendment.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. MASON. What is the point of order?

Mr. RAINEY. That it is not germane.

Mr. MASON. If it is not germane, I know of nothing that is. Does the gentleman make the point of order that the cancellation is not germane or that taxing canned meats is not germane?

Mr. RAINEY. There is nothing in this bill imposing a tax on canned meats of any kind, and under the ruling of the Chair the other day it is subject to the point of order.

Mr. MASON. That does not take it out, as I understand the rule and the decision of the Chair. We are raising revenue and I purpose to put a tax on canned beef as you put it on playing cards and upon notes and bills. Canned beef may not have been mentioned in this bill, and the subject matter does not come within the decision of the Chair day before yesterday.

Mr. RAINEY. I think it comes clearly within the rule and the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. FOSTER). The Chair thinks, without going into detail, that under paragraph 3, Rule XXI, this amendment would not be in order, and the Chair therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. MASON. With all due respect to the Chair, I feel compelled to appeal from the decision of the Chair. In the first place, I can imagine no case that would be more just than this amendment. You are all in favor of giving pure food to soldiers who fight valiantly for the flag, and, if so, you are refusing an opportunity here and now to do so in advance of the thing that scandalized the manufacturers and the people of the country in regard to embalmed beef.

I do not believe that there is any other way to write this in except by putting it under a stamp and canceling the stamp with the date when the same was manufactured. Of course, it may be that it will be necessary to wait for special legislation, but I think that as this is a bill to raise revenue, and does raise revenue, that it is germane. It is true you have not mentioned canned beef and you have not mentioned cans and you have not mentioned beef and you have not mentioned many other things. Yet, as a matter of fact, I suppose I may speak now of the fact that I intend to offer an amendment with reference to the income tax and put a tax on those who have been speculating in food products by taking 50 per cent of their profits. You have not mentioned that in the bill and yet it is legitimately a part of the income tax. I do not like to have the Chair overruled, and yet I feel like taking an appeal from the decision of the Chair upon this question. I believe it is entirely germane. I was sorry to see anyone so anxious to protect the people who sell canned beef without giving the date of it by making a point of order to this amendment.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, the point of order clearly covers the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois. The matter of a stamp duty on canned beef and matters of that kind has been thrashed out in this House in years that are past. I do not want to go into the question whether there are any merits in the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois because it is unnecessary to take up the time.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Does not the meat-inspection law provide for a date on canned meats of all sorts?

Mr. RAINEY. I think my colleague is right about it. I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order has been sustained and the gentleman from Illinois appeals from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. MASON. I should like to ask my colleague if there is such a provision in the law; if he is positive about it?

Mr. MADDEN. Surely.

Mr. HAUGEN. Does the gentleman mean in the meat-inspection law?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. HAUGEN. There is not.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, on the statement of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN], I will withdraw my appeal. I have just been informed by others, Mr. Chairman, that my colleague, Mr. MADDEN, is mistaken.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not think I am.

Mr. RAINEY. I call for the regular order.

Mr. MASON. The thing I am seeking to do is plain, but I am not trying to conceal anything. I ask to have the matter passed over until we can ascertain if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is right. If the cans are required to be dated it was under a law passed at a time I was not in Congress. My colleague, Mr. RAINEY, says that it has been thrashed out in the House. It was thrashed out and thrashed out in a way that was unsatisfactory to the consumer, and we propose to thrash it out again either in this Congress or at the next session. I am willing and anxious to deal fairly with the Chair and everyone else, and I will ask to have the merits passed over.

Mr. RAINEY. I do not think it is necessary, and I insist on the point of order, and we want to get through the bill at some time.

The CHAIRMAN. All the gentleman from Illinois asks is that it be passed over for the present.

Mr. MANN. Let us have a vote on the appeal and dispose of it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The question was taken, and there were 99 ayes and 24 noes.

So the decision of the Chair stood as the judgment of the committee.

Mr. KITCHIN. I now ask to return to paragraph 13, with reference to playing cards. I wish to say to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. OLNEY] that this paragraph follows the language of the present law "upon every pack of playing cards containing not more than 54 cards."

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Is there anything in existing law that places a tax on playing cards containing a number in excess of 54?

Mr. KITCHIN. No.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. What is to prevent a manufacturer making a pack of cards containing 55 or 56 cards?

Mr. KITCHIN. Nothing except that we propose to catch them at that for defrauding the Government. They have not attempted anything of the kind so far.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I call attention to the fact that there are certain manufacturers of playing cards that always put more than 54 cards in a pack.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; but they always pay the tax.

Mr. CANNON rose.

Mr. KITCHIN. Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to ask me any question about cards? Can I give the gentleman any information? [Laughter.]

Mr. CANNON. This allows a pack of 54 cards. Will there be two jokers?

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman will have to ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH].

Mr. LONGWORTH. Yes; two jokers.

Mr. CANNON. Then the country is safe. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I do not know very much about card games. What little I know I have learned from my good friend, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER], this morning, and I have been sitting over there talking to him about it, and he has given me a good deal of information.

Mr. MANN. That is information not usually obtained in the daytime.

Mr. HOWARD. I know nothing about these night games. [Laughter.] It might surprise some of you gentlemen if I were to make the statement that personally I do not know one card game from another, except as explained to me by those who had ulterior motives in trying to teach me.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. It would surprise us very much.

Mr. HOWARD. But that has not got anything to do with the point that I want to present to this House, which is this: The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] has offered an amendment to this particular provision of the bill which reduces the tax written in the bill from an additional 8 cents tax, which in all amounts to 10 cents a package upon playing cards. If there is any item on the face of the earth that can be taxed heavily and taxed without hurting anyone, and, on the other hand, doing a lot of good, it is playing cards; and 10 cents for these swells who go crazy about progressive bridge, and these "night owls" who play a game called poker will amount to very little for them and much to the Treasury, and it would be a good deal better for many people if this tax would prohibit them from buying the deck at all from experiences I have heard related by a good many of my friends. The result is that we have an item here from which we can get some revenue, and nobody will be hurt; because a man who has nothing else to do but to play a game of cards or the women who have nothing else to do but to play bridge whist can well afford to pay the 10 cents, and I hope this House will compel them to do so, whether the deck contains 54 cards or not. I do not know exactly how many it contains. There may be more than that. I understand that there is a game now that the church people have all gone crazy about in "attempting to whip the devil around the stump," which they call "rook"—at least that is what my friend MILLER tells me [laughter]—and that it is nothing in the world but a game where they use the numbers 1, 2, 3, and so forth, instead of the figures, or whatever they call them—spots, I believe they call them [laughter]—to denote what the card is. I understand that these decks have more than 54 cards. Why should they not pay a tax of 10 cents?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. There is no reason on this earth to reduce this tax, and I am surprised that one of the deacons of the Mount Hope Methodist Church, the chairman of this committee, would offer an amendment to reduce the tax on playing cards. I am astounded at him [laughter] and I expect to report it at the next session of the Methodist Church South; but I am sure so good and pure a man as he must have been led astray by the seductive pleas of his colleague on the committee, Mr. LONGWORTH, of Ohio.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Would the gentleman object to a tax being placed on the excess profits on card-games receipts?

Mr. HOWARD. I want it right on the deck, right on the package, and I do not care whether the manufacturer pays it or not. I would rather let the gambler pay it, or these society swells who devote more time to cards than they do to children.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. But I mean a tax upon the receipts of the game.

Mr. HOWARD. Oh, well, if you want to tax the thing they call the cat [laughter]——

A MEMBER. Does the gentleman mean the kitty?

Mr. HOWARD. There now, you see I have been misinformed after all. My friend from Minnesota, Mr. MILLER, told me it was the "cat." [Laughter.] If we could get dividends on that it would be a source of great revenue, but I do hope that this amendment of the chairman of the committee will not be adopted, and that the tax will stand at 10 cents. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. LONGWORTH) there were—ayes 59, noes 84.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 40 for the purpose of offering an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to return to page 40 for the purpose of offering an amendment, which he sends to the Clerk's desk. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 40, line 21, after the word "cents," insert a comma and add the following: "and where such shares or certificates of stock are without par value, the tax shall be 2 cents on the transfer or sale or agreement to sell on each share or certificates, unless the actual value thereof is in excess of $100 per share, in which case the tax shall be 2 cents on $100 of actual value."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE IX.—WAR ESTATE TAX.

SEC. 900. That in addition to the tax imposed by section 201 of the act entitled "An act to increase the revenue, and for other purposes," approved September 8, 1916, as amended—

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PLATT: Page 45, line 14, strike out the paragraph, lines 14 to 18, inclusive.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York has moved to strike out the first paragraph under Title IX. Of course, that motion really ought to be made at the conclusion of the reading of the title. I do not know how many amendments are going to be offered to this title, but why can we not reach an agreement to read the title through?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that we may read through Title IX without interruption, and that then amendments shall be in order to any portion thereof.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that Title IX be read through, and that it then be in order to offer amendments to any paragraph thereof. Is there objection?

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PLATT. Does that include the motion to strike out the whole section?

The CHAIRMAN. That will include the motion to strike out anything. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

(a) A tax equal to the following percentages of its value is hereby imposed upon the transfer of each net estate of every decedent dying after the passage of this act, the transfer of which is taxable under such section (the value of such net estate to be determined as provided in Title II of such act of Sept. 8, 1916):

One-half of 1 per cent of the amount of such net estate not in excess of $50,000;

One per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $150,000;

One and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $150,000 and does not exceed $250,000;

Two per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $250,000 and does not exceed $450,000;

Two and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $450,000 and does not exceed $1,000,000;

Three per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $1,000,000 and does not exceed $2,000,000;

Three and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $2,000,000 and does not exceed $3,000,000;

Four per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $3,000,000 and does not exceed $4,000,000;

Four and one-half per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $4,000,000 and does not exceed $5,000,000;

Five per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $5,000,000 and does not exceed $8,000,000;

Seven per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $8,000,000 and does not exceed $11,000,000;

Ten per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $11,000,000 and does not exceed $15,000,000; and

Fifteen per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $15,000,000; and

(b) A tax equal to 1 per cent of the value of the net estate not in excess of $25,000 (such value to be determined as provided in Title II of such act of Sept. 8, 1916, except that the exemption provided in subdivision (a) of section 203 of such act shall be $25,000 instead of $50,000) is hereby imposed upon the transfer of the net estate of every resident of the United States dying after the passage of this act.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment to strike out the whole title.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT] moves to strike out the whole title, and without objection, the amendment is so modified.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the committee and the House could hardly have intended to put a special penalty upon the estates of men who may sacrifice their lives for their country; but if you adopt this section you will penalize the wife and children of any man who goes into the war and loses his life. Certainly there will be a great many among the men who have already volunteered and among those who will be drafted and among men in the Officers' Reserve Corps who own property worth $25,000, which is rather a small estate. But I do not see, whatever the estate is, why a tax should be higher which comes only once in a lifetime, on a death that occurs during the war, than at any other time. This section is only calculated to raise in the first year $6,000,000, which is not enough to be of any consequence. And I am sure if it should go through it ought to except the estates of soldiers. We are going to conscript men in the Army, rich and poor, and certainly the House never could have intended to penalize the families of those who lose their lives for their country. [Applause.]

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, this tax follows the present estate tax. The brackets are the same all the way through. We increase the amount from one-third under the present law up to estates of $5,000,000 and over, and then we make it 5 per cent more on the first group of $5,000,000 to $8,000,000, and 7 per cent more on the second group, from $8,000,000 to $11,000,000, 10 per cent more on the next group, of $11,000,000 to $15,000,000; and 15 per cent of the amount by which such net estate exceeds $15,000,000.

It is a proposition which tends to dissipate large estates, especially during the period of this war. It will yield the first year $6,000,000, and each succeeding year $38,000,000 additional during the progress of this war. We think the tax ought to stand just as it is.

Mr. LENROOT. As I understand, the tax proposed in this bill does not affect the present exemption of $50,000 in any way whatever?

Mr. LITTLE. What is the $25,000 in for, then?

Mr. RAINEY. Oh, yes; in the last paragraph there.

Mr. ROBBINS. The last paragraph puts it on all estates.

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; the estates of $25,000.

Mr. ROBBINS. But not at all under $25,000?

Mr. RAINEY. No, sir. It only affects taxes under this; not under the old law.

Mr. LITTLE. If a man should volunteer and go to Europe and be killed, would his family have to pay this tax?

Mr. RAINEY. Of course.

Mr. LITTLE. I think that wrong.

Mr. RAINEY. There is not any provision by which any estate would be exempt no matter what the cause of death.

Mr. LITTLE. There ought to be. It is not right to kill a man and make him pay for it.

Mr. RAINEY. A soldier who is willing to sacrifice his life for his country——

Mr. LITTLE. That ought to be enough.

Mr. RAINEY. And the family should be patriotic enough, when these large estates——

Mr. LITTLE. Patriotic enough that they should not be penalized.

Mr. MONDELL. Under the new conscript law the soldier serves whether he will or no. You compel him to stand up on the firing line. Is it fair to take tax from the property of the man whom you compel to serve?

Mr. RAINEY. This tax applies to the estate of every decedent, no matter what the cause of his death, if his estate exceeds $25,000, during the pendency of this war, and the existing law imposed the same tax.

Mr. MONDELL. You ought to make an exception in case of the conscript.

Mr. RAINEY. This amendment is to strike out the entire title, which would give us, at the least, $6,000,000, and does not meet the objection the gentleman makes. It does not meet a single objection made on this floor, because existing law requires this contribution from the estate of any man who may die in this war as the result of wounds or diseases contracted in the war.

Mr. LITTLE. Why does not the committee make that exception?

Mr. RAINEY. And those between the ages of 21 and 30 are not likely to have very large estates, unless they inherit them.

Mr. LITTLE. You ought to encourage the millionaire to go and take a chance on getting killed.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 47, line 12, after the word "act," insert the following:

"Provided, That no estate tax shall be collected from the estate of any person engaged in the military or naval service of the United States during the war with Germany who may lose his life in battle while in line of duty, or who may die from wounds received in line of duty, or who may dies from disease contracted in line of duty.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. ALEXANDER). The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT] to strike out the title.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GOOD. The amendment which I have sent to the desk is to perfect the paragraph, and it takes precedence over a motion to strike out.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that when, even in this hour of need, the country takes the life of an American citizen, either in battle or his death results from wounds received in battle or from disease contracted in line of duty, we ought to stop there, so far as levying taxes are concerned. We ought to stop at the open grave of our heroic dead who give their lives for the defense of the flag, and not reach into the pockets of the widow and children for the savings of such a man and take a part of all that is left. The soldier has given enough when he has given his life for the defense of the flag.

This amendment is intended to exempt the estates from this tax of men who engage in the military and naval service of the United States and who lose their lives because of that service. It seems to me we ought to adopt that principle. [Applause.]

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I think the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT], and also the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] proceed on an entirely erroneous theory as to what this tax is and should be. A tax upon a man's estate at his death is no tax upon him. He is dead and gone to his reward, and whether that tax is 1 mill or 100 per cent he is away beyond any effect of its operation.

If this tax were so framed that the man died leaving a bare subsistence for the immediate benefit of his family, and it would operate upon that which they would receive, there would be some danger. But that is not the case at all. In the first place, $25,000 is exempted, and even in these days $25,000 is a goodly sum, and thereafter the amount of the tax is exceedingly small. In fact, I had in mind offering an amendment to increase the amount of these taxes in the earlier sums up to about $300,000 or $400,000, but on reflection I made up my mind that they could remain as they stand, so far as I am concerned.

This tax is additional to the inheritance taxes, so called, which are imposed by most of the States of the Union, and some gentlemen are inclined to believe it is a particularly high tax. But it is not so at all. This tax is put forward, because we are in a great emergency, because we are in a great war, at a time when we are endeavoring to raise enormous sums of money by taxation; and in the same breath we say and imply that as soon as the emergency ceases, as soon as the war ends, this tax will likewise end.

I want to call your attention to the character of taxes of this kind paid in the countries of Europe in peace times. The highest inheritance tax required in this bill is a tax of 25 per cent. That is the tax which must be paid on estates over $15,000,000. That is less than the peace tax charged in Germany. That is less than the income tax that has been paid for many years by combining the Imperial German Government inheritance tax with the inheritance tax imposed by each of the State governments in Germany. It is about the same as they were paying in peace times in England. How much higher it is now in England I do not know. How much higher it is in Germany I do not know.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. In a moment. It is about the same as the peace tax on inheritances in France prior to the beginning of this war.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I will yield for an inquiry.

Mr. PLATT. Does the gentleman think that inheritance taxes are distinctively peace taxes, and properly so, and not war taxes?

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. No. The inheritance tax is for the purpose of raising revenue for the use of the Government that has given protection to the man when the property was amassed. The protection was given in peace times and in war times, and the mere fact that we may be in war time when the man dies is no reason for removing the tax.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Yes.
Mr. MADDEN. Has the gentleman taken into consideration the fact that many of the States have inheritance taxes, too?
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Yes. I was going to speak of that. Even adding this to the taxes imposed by the respective States, you will not pay a higher tax than that which is customarily charged in other countries.
Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Yes.
Mr. FESS. I understood the gentleman said the highest tax in this bill would be 25 per cent. Twenty-five per cent on all estates up to $15,000,000, and over that 30 per cent. The maximum is $15,000,000, which, added to the maximum previously in force, of $15,000,000, is 30 per cent.
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I have a copy of the law here. It adds a tax of 10 per cent and then a tax of 15, making 25 per cent.
Mr. HELVERING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Yes.
Mr. HELVERING. It adds an additional 5 per cent.
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Yes. I admit that even adding the additional 5 per cent the amount is not greater than that paid in other countries at this time. As I began, so I want to close, by saying I think the proposed exemption of estates of soldiers who die in the war proceeds on a false basis.
The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.
Mr. CURRY of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? I ask that the gentleman's time may be extended half a minute. I want to ask him a question.
The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?
There was no objection.
Mr. CURRY of California. The gentleman called attention to the inheritance taxes in Germany, Great Britain, and certain other foreign countries as a criterion of the tax that should be levied by this country. I would like to ask the gentleman if Germany levies more than one inheritance tax? The National Government levies the inheritance tax in Germany. In this country the Federal Government levies an inheritance tax, and also 38 States, and the greatest item of income of the States of New York, California, and Pennsylvania comes from this double tax. As the Democrats say, they are pyramiding it.
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. That is what I endeavored to state. Not merely does the Government of Germany impose a tax on inheritances that goes into the imperial treasury, but in addition to that each of the component States of the German Empire, as for example, Bavaria, Baden, Wurtemburg, Saxony, imposes a like inheritance tax, so that the estate must pay the combined tax of the State in which it is situated and also the tax of the Imperial Government.
Mr. CURRY of California. Does it pay it to the Imperial Government?
Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Yes. It pays it in two different places.
The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].
The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.
Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.
The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HILL: Page 47, at the end of line 12, after the word "act," insert "But neither the tax imposed by this bill nor the tax imposed by the law of September 8, 1916, amended by this act, shall be imposed upon the transfer of the same property more than once in five years."

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, just a word. This is simply an act of justice. Let me suggest that the great bulk of the taxes that will come under this provision and that will come from the provision of the last law will come from old people who have accumulated estates.
It is reasonable to suppose that the time elapsing between the death of the husband and wife under such circumstances would not be very long, and to impose these taxes at the heavy rates at which they are now imposed by the State and by the Nation, five days after they have been imposed before, or a month after they have been imposed before, or as happened in several cases after the sinking of the Lusitania, where father and mother both died together, would strip the family of the property, the tax being imposed twice at the same time.
I listened to what the gentleman from Minnesota said in regard to the foreign tax. My impression is that the exemption in foreign countries provides that the tax shall not be imposed oftener than once in four years. I have no desire to make it five years or three years, or any other specific time; but I think the good judgment of the House will see that it is not the intention to confiscate property, and that there should be a reasonable time elapse after the first transfer tax was imposed before it would be imposed again on the same property. Understand, gentlemen, both these taxes are imposed on the estate before it is distributed. It is taken from the estate in bulk; and if 30 per cent is taken to-day, and the inheritor—the wife or child—should die a month hence, then 30 per cent more is taken in addition to the last tax. I say it is simply common justice that this tax on the same property should not be imposed oftener than once in five years. Therefore, I offer the amendment.
Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, one of the difficulties connected with the gentleman's amendment is this: It has happened recently in estates consisting largely of stocks and bonds that they have increased tremendously in value, sometimes in less than a year. An estate worth $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 might in five years be worth $8,000,000 or $10,000,000. If you provide that the tax shall not be assessed oftener than once in five years there will always be difficulty in identifying the estate, and there is no particular reason why the limit should be five years or four years, or why it should not be longer than five years. The amendment is the entering wedge which ultimately will tend to destroy this new estate tax in this country, so desirable for many reasons.
Mr. MADDEN. Will my colleague yield to me for a question?
Mr. RAINEY. Yes.
Mr. MADDEN. May it not be possible to word the amendment so that the amount of an estate left by a person to a son or daughter or wife could be exempted for a given period, if it was transferred again, without respect to whether you could identify the property or not?
Mr. RAINEY. Such an amendment might be drafted, but from my standpoint it would still be exceedingly objectionable and still the entering wedge which might destroy this estate tax.
Mr. HILL. I suppose the gentleman will concede that his argument that the estate might be increased and therefore the increment might be taxed, is just as strong against his proposition if the estate should decrease, and therefore he would be facing a loss.
Mr. RAINEY. Yes; but that seldom happens in reference to these large estates at the present time. They do not decrease in value. They keep on increasing in value. If the estate did decrease, of course it would operate the other way.
Mr. HILL. The gentleman concedes the justice of my amendment, but imagines it would be difficult to put it in operation. I think the justice of it ought to outweigh the difficulty of execution.
Mr. RAINEY. I do not concede the justice of it.
Mr. HILL. I say that as a matter of justice the amendment ought to be agreed to.
Mr. RAINEY. I do not concede the justice of the gentleman's amendment. In fact, I think it tends to destroy the entire value of this taxing principle.
The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL].
The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HILL) there were—ayes 62, noes 79.
Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.
Tellers were ordered; and the Chairman appointed Mr. HILL and Mr. RAINEY.
The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 75, noes 108.
Accordingly the amendment was rejected.
The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT] to strike out.
The amendment was rejected.
The Clerk read as follows:

Title X.—War customs duties.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the title.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.
The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 47, line 13, after the word "duties," insert "and war taxes on coffee and tea."

Mr. KITCHIN. This is to cover in the title another section which will be offered later.
The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1000. That on and after the day following the passage of this act there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles when imported from any foreign country into the United States, or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila), if such articles are now dutiable by law, a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem in addition to the existing duty (whether ad valorem or specific); and if not now dutiable by law, a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem. The duties imposed by this section shall be levied, collected, and paid under the provisions of existing law.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, the committee offers an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers an amendment.

Mr. KITCHIN. Let it be pending after it is read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 47, line 24, after the period, insert the following:

"This section shall not apply to (a) gold or silver bullion; (b) coins of gold, silver, copper, or other metal; (c) printing paper admitted free of duty under paragraph 567 of section 1 of the act entitled 'An act to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes,' approved October 3, 1913, as amended by the act of September 8, 1916; (d) ores of the platinum metals and platinum unmanufactured or in ingots, bars, plates or sheets, wire, sponge or scrap, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels and parts thereof composed of platinum for chemical uses; (e) nitrate of soda; and (f) mechanical ground wood pulp, chemical wood pulp, unbleached or bleached, and rags pulp."

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment by way of a substitute.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield for a minute to allow me to ask a question of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I observe that the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina does not include crude phosphates.

Mr. KITCHIN. No.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Nor does it include crude potash.

Mr. KITCHIN. No. It includes just the nitrate of soda, because that is mostly used now for the making of powder for munitions of war. The Government practically imports all of that now.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Do not these phosphates and potash enter very largely into fertilizer?

Mr. KITCHIN. We do not get any potash now. Most of the potash came from Germany, and we do not get any of that.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I understand.

Mr. KITCHIN. So it would not help or harm, one way or the other.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The amendment offered by the gentleman would tend to relieve the farmer and, to a certain extent, the consumer——

Mr. KITCHIN. It is an amendment exempting gold and silver bullion and coin.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is for the purpose of enabling the exchanges between this country and foreign countries.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; also platinum, nitrate of soda, wood pulp, and print paper.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it the intention of the committee to offer an amendment exempting phosphates, potash, and so forth?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; the committee did not authorize me to include those exemptions; I wish it had.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HILL: On page 47, at the end of line 24, section 1000, Title X, of H. R. 4280, as follows:

"Provided, That the duty of 10 per cent prescribed by this section shall not apply to the articles named in the following designated paragraphs of the act entitled 'An act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenues for the Government, and for other purposes,' approved October 3, 1913:

"Paragraph 436, relating to bullion, gold, or silver.

"Paragraph 451, relating to coal, anthracite, bituminous, culm, slack, and shale; coke; compositions used for fuel in which coal or coal dust is the component material of chief value, whether in briquets or other form.

"Paragraph 458, relating to coins of gold, silver, copper, or other metal.

"Paragraph 499, relating to guano, manures, and all substances used only for manure, including basic slag, ground or unground, and calcium cyanamid or lime nitrogen.

"Paragraph 605, relating to nitrate of soda.

"Paragraph 642, relating to personal effects of persons arriving in the United States.

"Paragraph 649, relating to mechanically ground wood pulp, chemical wood pulp, unbleached or bleached, and rag pulp.

"And provided further, That paragraphs 457 and 627, relating to coffee and tea, both paragraphs being part of the free list of the said act approved October 3, 1913, shall be exempted from the provisions of the 10 per cent duty herein prescribed; and in lieu thereof there shall be an import duty on coffee of 6 cents per pound and on tea 12 cents per pound."

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is not offered in a spirit of criticism, but rather for the purpose of calling the attention of the committee to some of the provisions in this section that would not only hinder but absolutely prohibit certain regular and legitimate business activities, which I believe they did not intend to do at this time. And I am also sure that if they had been in position to give more consideration to the effect and actual workings of such a proposal as is carried in this part of section 10—namely, putting a flat tax of 10 per cent on all articles now on the free list—they never would have reported it in this form, even under the stress, "We need the money." And my only desire is that the Ways and Means Committee will sometime in the near future report this section back to the House containing all its revenue-raising features, but with none of the absurdities or indefensible provisions that it carries at the present time.

I will not undertake to discuss at present all the articles on the free list that it is absurd and ridiculous to think of putting a 10 per cent tax on, but I will call the attention of the committee to some of the most flagrant violations, or enough of them to show you that there is no question but what this part of section 10 covering the free list must have much more careful consideration before it becomes a part of the revenue law of the land. Section 397 under the free list, in tariff act of October 3, 1913, provides:

397. Any animal imported by a citizen of the United States, specially for breeding purposes, shall be admitted free, whether intended to be used by the importer himself or for sale for such purposes: Provided, That no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in a book of record recognized by the Secretary of Agriculture for that breed: And provided further, That the certificate of such record and pedigree of such animal shall be produced and submitted to the Department of Agriculture, duly authenticated by the proper custodian of such book of record, together with an affidavit of the owner, agent, or importer that the animal imported is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree. The Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe such regulations as may be required for determining the purity of breeding and the identity of such animal: And provided further, That the collectors of customs shall require a certificate from the Department of Agriculture stating that such animal is pure bred of a recognized breed and duly registered in a book of record recognized by the Secretary of Agriculture for that breed.

The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such additional regulations as may be required for the strict enforcement of this provision.

Horses, mules, and asses straying across the boundary line into any foreign country, or driven across such boundary line by the owner for temporary pasturage purposes only, together with their offspring, shall be dutiable unless brought back to the United States within six months, in which case they shall be free of duty, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: And provided further, That the provisions of this act shall apply to all such animals as have been imported and are in quarantine or otherwise in the custody of customs or other officers of the United States at the date of the taking effect of this act.

A great many farmers living along the northern border either own or hire a pasture over in Canada and pasture dry stock and young cattle and horses in these back pastures during the summer months, and under the old law a provision or exemption is made for covering these cases; but under the law you are proposing now a farmer could not turn his own cattle in his own pasture if that pasture was across the Canadian border without paying 10 per cent on their value when he wanted to take them up in the fall. I know the Ways and Means Committee do not intend to do that.

Section 398 exempts as follows:

Animals brought into the United States temporarily for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of breeding, exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural, polo, or racing association; but a bond shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; also teams of animals, including their harness and tackle, and the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit.

Under the bonding provision provided in this section a great many Canadians bring their animals over to the United States for exhibition purposes; but, of course, no man would bring his stock into this country for purposes of exhibition and pay a customs duty of 10 per cent for the simple purpose of doing that; and if you do not make the provision in this law that covers these cases, you have done a great injustice to the people living along the whole northern border and you have benefited no one or collected no revenue.

Then I want to call your special attention to the last part of this section 398. This provides for the free admission of teams, harness, wagons, implements, and household furniture, and so forth, actually owned by immigrants coming to this country, for their own use after they get here, and not for sale or profit. Now, is there any man who would contend that these same exemptions should not be made in the present tariff law?

Now I come to section 404. This affects the business activities of the whole country:

404. Articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means: steel boxes, casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other containers or coverings of American manufacture exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks and staves when returned as barrels or boxes; also quicksilver flasks or bottles, iron or steel drums of either domestic or foreign manufacture, used for the shipment of acids, or other chemicals, which shall have been actually exported from the United States; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the exemption of bags from duty shall apply only to such domestic bags as may be imported by the exporter thereof, and if any such articles are subject to internal-revenue tax at the time of exportation, such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded; photographic dry plates or films of American manufacture (except moving-picture films), exposed abroad, whether developed or not, and films from moving-picture machines, light struck or otherwise damaged, or worn out, so as to be unsuitable for any other purpose than the recovery of the constituent materials, provided the basic films are of American manufacture, but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; articles exported from the United States for repairs may be returned upon payment of a duty upon the value of the repairs at the rate at which the article itself would be subject if imported under conditions and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the reimportation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed; or to any article manufactured in bonded warehouse and exported under any provision of law: And provided further, That when manufactured tobacco which has been exported without payment of internal-revenue tax shall be reimported it shall be retained in the custody of the collector of customs until internal-revenue stamps in payment of the legal duties shall be placed thereon: And provided further, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to animals made dutiable under the provisions of paragraph 397.

I will not take the time of the committee to read all of this. It provides that articles manufactured in the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means, may be returned to the United States free of duty. I would say that during the last two or three years our manufacturers have shipped a great many carloads of war supplies of various kinds to Canada that have been refused for some reason or other and the owner has been obliged to have them shipped back to his factory. Does anyone think that those people should be obliged to pay 10 per cent duty to get their own goods back? And they certainly will have to do it unless you make some provision in this law covering these cases. I want to say in this connection that we are now shipping hundreds of carloads of products to Canada in connection with war munitions that we ship in boxes with expensive lead linings. As soon as these containers are emptied they are placed in the same car and returned to the original shipper in the United States. It is absolutely impossible to do this under the law we are now discussing. At all times there are innumerable articles exported in containers of American manufacture that are returned empty or with even foreign goods packed in them that should be exempted and continued on the free list.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Certainly.

Mr. MADDEN. If provision was not made for the return of the containers, the cost of the container would have to be added to the price of the commodity?

Mr. SNELL. It would, and that would prohibit us from any competition in the market.

Section 424 of the old law provides for free entry to the United States:

424. Books, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, maps and charts imported by authority or for the use of the United States or for the use of the Library of Congress.

Now, it certainly can not be the intention or desire of this Congress to place a customs duty on articles imported under this section.

Section 428 of the old law exempts as follows:

428. Books, libraries, usual and reasonable furniture, and similar household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, all the foregoing if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

Section 436 of the old law exempts gold or silver bullion. Gold bullion is never shipped back and forth only as a settlement of trade balances between nations. A short time ago a New York business house brought into this country through Rouses Point, in my district, $16,000,000 in gold bullion in settlement of debt from the Russian Government. Under this bill they would have been obliged to pay $1,600,000 for the privilege of collecting their obligation and bringing the money into this country.

Section 458 exempts coins of gold, silver, copper, and other metals. Under this proposed law if you went over to Canada and came back with $1,000 in gold in your pocket you would have to give up $100, or 10 per cent, because gold coin is not excepted. Now, every thinking man knows that such absurdities as these should never be written in a law. And, of course, it was only an oversight, or no one would ever have thought of doing such a thing.

I will call your attention to only a few more of the idiosyncrasies of this bill, and I am sure you will agree with me that this section, at least, needs to be rewritten before it becomes a law.

A great many people along the northern border of my State take a Montreal daily, as that is the only one they can get and have it delivered the day published. Are you going to collect a 10 per cent duty on a penny paper, or will you exempt them, as they are under section 556 of the old law free list?

556. Newspapers and periodicals; but the term "periodicals" as herein used shall be understood to embrace only unbound or paper-covered publications issued within six months of the time of entry, devoted to current literature of the day, or containing current literature as a predominant feature, and issued regularly at stated periods, as weekly, monthly, or quarterly, and bearing the date of issue.

Personal effects, not merchandise, of citizens of the United States dying in foreign countries could not be sent back home free unless you make an exemption. That means that the watch of the soldier who died in a foreign land fighting for his country could not be sent back to the bereaved wife or mother without paying a customs tax of 10 per cent. Why, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, it would be the height of folly to adopt this section at this time.

582. Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment in the actual possession of persons emigrating to the United States owned and used by them abroad; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for any other person or persons, or for sale, nor shall it be construed to include theatrical scenery, properties, and apparel; but such articles brought by proprietors or managers of theatrical exhibitions arriving from abroad, for temporary use by them in such exhibitions, and not for any other person, and not for sale, and which have been used by them abroad, shall be admitted free of duty under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in case application shall be made therefor.

Under section 582 of the old law professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment in actual possession of persons emigrating to the United States, owned and used by them abroad, are admitted to this country free, and certainly at this time when we are scouring the country for carpenters and men of all trades, do we want to do anything to discourage their coming here and bringing their instruments and tools of trade with them?

I just want to call your attention to section 642 and I am through:

642. Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles, and similar personal effects of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall include only such articles as were actually owned by them and in their possession abroad at the time of or prior to their departure from a foreign country, and as are necessary and appropriate for the wear and use of such persons and are intended for such wear and use, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale: Provided, That in case of residents of the United States returning from abroad all wearing apparel, personal and household effects taken by them out of the United States to foreign countries shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, upon their identity being established under appropriate rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. * * *

You will see that in the last part of this section in the old law that in the case of residents of the United States returning from abroad all wearing apparel, personal household effects, and other implements actually taken out of this country with them can not be brought back into this country under the law now proposed without the payment of a 10 per cent duty. A great many farmers have emigrated to the Canadian northwest, and have taken their teams, implements, and household utensils with them, and after being up there for a short time they find that the country is not gold and sunshine, as it was held out to be, and they want to come back to this country and bring their goods and effects with them, and that has been the law for all time, and I do not believe that the committee of this House intends to change it at this time.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman is referring to those Americans who have been induced to go to Canada with their goods and effects who were disappointed and who desire now to come back to the United States?

Mr. SNELL. Yes; and to bring the same things with them that they took to Canada.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. What is the gentleman's fear—that the 10 per cent tax will be levied upon their goods by reason of the passage of this title?

Mr. SNELL. Exactly; if they are not exempted.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman lives near the Canadian border. I would like to know from him if he can tell about how large is this procession of people who desire to come back from Canada after they have been induced by advertisements to go over there?

Mr. SNELL. I could not tell you how large it is, but it applies to quite a number of people along the border.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it not a fact that the Canadian Government levies a duty upon these American goods when they go to Canada?

Mr. SNELL. I am not sure.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Canada takes from the American who seeks to go over there to establish a home or do business, and the United States, according to the gentleman's argument, would now charge the American coming back? Is that it?

Mr. SNELL. He would be caught coming and going, unless you make his exemption.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman does not mean to say that Canada imposes a tax upon immigrant goods coming into Canada from the United States?

Mr. SNELL. I do not know definitely what these regulations are.

Mr. ANDERSON. Not for the personal use of the immigrant.

Mr. SNELL. Unless they are exempted they can not get back into this country free of tax.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does Canada put a tariff tax upon stock and agricultural implements?

Mr. SNELL. I could not tell you about that, but unless you exempt them in this law you can not bring them back free of duty.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Canada certainly puts a duty on lumber in some form or other.

Mr. SNELL. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. And Canada has greatly increased its tariff upon all articles upon which it can increase it, coming from the United States.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, I have too much faith in the business sense of this House to believe that you are willing to place into law such absolute absurdities as I have called to your attention, and I trust it will meet the wisdom of the committee to entirely rewrite the section pertaining to the free list, or what would, in my judgment, be much better, entirely pass it for the present and later in the year give it the time and consideration a section of this importance is entitled to, and report it to the House drafted in such a manner that it will not only meet your own approval and deserve the support of the Members of the House but that it will command the respect and commendation of the business activities of the whole world.

Mr. Chairman, I want to support a revenue measure. I voted for all the appropriations asked for by the committees of this House in preparing for war. I know full well that we must have money to pay them. I do not want to exempt anyone from paying his share of taxes. I do not feel too badly because you have raised the income taxes and kept in all the excess-profits taxes, but I will feel ashamed and humiliated if we give to our people this revenue bill as it stands to-day as representing the best sense and judgment of this House, when every man on this floor, every man on the street—yes, every thinking man in the whole country—knows that it must be rewritten by the Senate before it becomes a workable law. If you can not write a revenue bill that is right in four weeks, then take eight, for anything that is worth doing at all is worth doing well. We have delegated to the Executive practically all the power we have except the ways and means of raising revenue. We should certainly take the time to do that right. When the men who wrote this bill come frankly before us and say that the bill "is indefensible, except that we need the money, and that they are going to shut their eyes and swallow their medicine," it is asking too much of the loyal men of this House to follow them. I will shut my eyes and take my medicine, but I reserve the right to keep them open when I am reaching into the closet to select that medicine. Now, let us all open our eyes and our minds and improve this bill before it is ever passed to the Senate.

Mr. GARLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GARLAND: Strike out, after line 10, all the rest of the paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following: "The rates of duty established by the tariff act of August 5, 1909, known as the Payne Tariff Act."

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to ask if the pending amendment is not the amendment proposed by the gentleman from North Carolina, with the substitute proposed by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL]?

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair understands, the gentleman from North Carolina has offered a committee amendment.

Mr. HILL. And I offered a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. And the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] offers a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]. The Chair understands the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GARLAND] has offered an amendment to the original text.

Mr. LENROOT. I suggest the gentleman should withhold that until we dispose of this.

The CHAIRMAN. Which would make the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania——

Mr. MANN. I suggest to the Chair that the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] is an addition to the text, and not to strike out any part of the text.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair stands corrected. Then the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GARLAND] is not in order now.

Mr. GARLAND. But later it will be?

The CHAIRMAN. It will be.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to present a parliamentary inquiry. I understood from the reading of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut that it included the tax on coffee and tea. Am I correct about that? If I am correct, if his amendment should be adopted, when the next paragraph is read relating to that subject an amendment to that would not be in order? I desire to offer an amendment to the next paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks if that is in the next paragraph it would be in order to strike it out.

Mr. MANN. The next paragraph is an excise tax.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and amendments thereto close in one hour.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate on this section and amendments thereto close in one hour. Is there objection?

Mr. GARLAND. I object.

Mr. KITCHIN. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. GARLAND. I want only about five minutes, but I want to have an opportunity to discuss my amendment.

Mr. KITCHIN. We will guarantee that you have that five minutes.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. I have an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina. I want to ask whether it is in order or not.

The CHAIRMAN. Not now. It may be later.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the request. We will not recess until the House passes the bill.

Mr. MANN. The committee?

Mr. KITCHIN. I want the House to pass the bill, too.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. LINTHICUM] is recognized.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Chairman, in the course of the debate yesterday a reference was made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] in connection with the offer of the yacht of Capt. Isaac E. Emerson, of Baltimore, to the National Government. I do not think the gentleman from Illinois meant to create any false impression, but one of the Baltimore papers so interpreted same. I quote the remark:

Mr. MANN described the offer sarcastically as one designed to keep the yacht and its crew out of danger, and declared that if the report was true Secretary McAdoo's son, who is to command the yacht, is to be given a "fat job to keep out of danger," while "men and women's children—their sons—are to be drafted into the Army as private soldiers."

While, as I say, I do not think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] meant to create any false impression in this statement, it was carried in one of the Baltimore papers in such large headlines that Capt. Emerson, while trying to do a patriotic duty, feels very much aggrieved by the interpretation indicated by the heading in the paper. For instance, such headlines as these—

Emerson yacht offer derided—MANN tells House captain wants it out of danger—Fat job for McAdoo's son—Reported to command boat "behind lines."

In reply to the statement of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and thinking that some statement was necessary, I have procured from the counsel of Capt. Emerson a statement from the captain, which I want read by the Clerk in my time, explaining the whole situation and showing that Capt. Emerson's sole purpose and idea was a patriotic one which he felt he owed his Government and wanted to perform by offering this magnificent yacht for use during the war, which he refuses to sell.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LINTHICUM. Let me have this read, and then I will yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

BALTIMORE, MD., May 22, 1917.

Hon. J. CHARLES LINTHICUM,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. LINTHICUM: At the request of Capt. I. E. Emerson I write you with regard to the statement made by Mr. MANN yesterday on the floor of the House. Such statement is not justified by the facts, and Capt. Emerson therefore, I think, is entitled to have the facts stated on the floor of the House as publicly as the original statement; and as Mr. MANN suggested that he thought it was right and proper that some one should write a letter setting the matter straight, I feel that Mr. MANN himself will, as a matter of justice and right, present the facts hereinafter stated to the House that they may receive the same publicity as his original statement; otherwise I hope you will be able to find opportunity this afternoon or evening so to do.

The Government asked Capt. Emerson some time since whether he was willing to sell or charter his yacht to the United States, and this he was unwilling to do for any valuable consideration, but when the question came up of giving the Government free use of the yacht for the term of the war he expressed himself entirely willing to take that course, provided the yacht should be assigned to the fifth naval district. His purpose in requesting such assignment was that the Philadelphia, New York, and Boston districts seemed to be fully supplied with patrol boats of that character, and therefore it seemed to him well that as there were very few yachts adapted to the purpose within this district, that this yacht should be assigned thereto.

The suggestion of Mr. MANN that the tender was upon condition that the yacht should only be used in the Chesapeake Bay is entirely untrue, since the fifth district not only includes the Chesapeake Bay, but includes 200 miles, more or less, of the Atlantic coast, including the coast of Cape Hatteras and other dangerous points. In fact, such assignment might be considered as dangerous as any use to which a patrol boat could be put. The protection of the entrance of the Chesapeake Bay is certainly not a safety-first assignment.

The suggestion also that Francis H. McAdoo, the son of the Secretary of the Treasury, is in command of this boat, is without any foundation. The Navy Department has assigned to the command of this boat Lieut. Phillips, of the United States Navy, and as chief engineer Lieut. Goobe, of the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, who is also a lieutenant in the Naval Militia. McAdoo is enrolled as a sailor.

Capt. Emerson also feels that it is only fair to state in regard to McAdoo that his enrollment was purely voluntary on his part, he being a married man with wife and child dependent upon him.

Yours, very truly,

HENRY W. WILLIAMS.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Now I will be glad to answer the gentleman.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. This yacht was supposed to be worth $500,000?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then I can not ask the questions I had in mind.

Mr. FORDNEY rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire time for debate, but I do want to offer a preferential amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LENROOT: Add to the Kitchin amendment: "(g) Articles enumerated in paragraph 177 of the act entitled 'An act to reduce tariff duties and to produce revenue for the Government, and for other purposes,' approved October 3, 1913."

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, if I am correct in reading the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] most of the items mentioned in that amendment are set forth in the amendment presented by the committee, covering gold coin and silver coin and gold ore, and all such matters.

The gentleman from Connecticut recommends that the duty on coal be excluded, but he seeks to have a duty imposed at the rate of 6 cents per pound on coffee and 12 cents per pound on tea. The amount of duty, as provided for in the bill on the 10 per cent ad valorem basis, is nine-tenths of a cent per pound on coffee, based on the value of imported coffee last year and 1.8 cents per pound on tea, as tea was imported last year at the value of 18 cents a pound. Therefore there would be a duty collected as per the present bill on coffee of $10,800,000. We consume about 1,200,000,000 pounds of coffee and about 100,000,000 pounds of tea each year, all of which is imported. The duty on tea as provided in this bill will yield $2,000,000, or a total of $12,800,000 on tea and coffee, based on the imports of tea and coffee last year. If the gentleman's amendment is adopted there will be collected in the next 12 months $84,000,000 on tea and coffee.

Now, I submit, gentlemen, that the price of foodstuffs in this country during this war is very high at the present time and is going higher. As long as the war lasts—mark what I say—prices are going to advance. Therefore to impose upon the people of this country a tax on such articles is calculated to still further increase prices. Everybody uses tea or coffee. I say we imported 1,200,000,000 pounds of coffee and 100,000,000 pounds of tea.

That is an excessive tax upon the poor people who must have tea and coffee. To begin with, gentlemen, there is more money provided for in this bill than we ought to impose upon the people now. [Applause.] If you adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL], you are going to have, as I have said, $84,000,000 more on tea and coffee that the people of this country use, and I am opposed to that kind of a tax; and especially so, gentlemen, since we are raising an abundance of money, and more money than we ought to raise in this bill.

Now, under ordinary conditions the tax on the household goods of the people going back and forth across the border from the United States into Canada ought to be excluded. But we are engaged in war, and "war is a dreadful thing." Nobody wants taxes imposed upon them, but everybody must come forward and contribute their mite during the period of this war. That will be but a very small sum of money imposed upon people on account of their household goods or personal effects going from this country abroad and then coming back. We ought not to complain of paying that small amount, whatever it may be. There are many other ways in which we can raise a very large sum of money, but I am opposed to adding any more taxes to the bill unless we strike from the bill some of the objectionable features that are in it and reduce in some manner the taxes that are now in the bill, taxes which this House has already declined to strike from the bill.

Coal and many other things can afford to pay tax when imported into this country to help along with this war. But the gentleman's amendment, while it strikes from the protective list some few articles, imposes a great hardship upon the people of the country. The bill as it is now contains a horizontal increase ad valorem on all articles such as have been recommended by the committee to be placed upon the free list, and that provision will raise a very large sum of money. This is the most unscientific tariff law ever enacted by Congress, but it will raise a large sum of money. This coming year, if this bill goes into effect as it is written here in reference to our import duties, we will collect $500,000,000 on imports. Under existing law we would collect about $200,000,000 on imports.

I submit, gentlemen, that to put a consumption tax upon foodstuffs and a consumption tax upon clothing that the poor people of this country must have is a wrong principal of raising taxes, and the amendment of the gentleman from Connecticut ought to fail. [Applause.]

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, in the first place, there is no reference in the amendment I have offered with respect to clothing, as the gentleman might have discovered if he had examined it. It is now on the dutiable list. There is no provision in the free list for clothing except as a man brings in $100 worth of wearing apparel in his trunk or on his back when he comes from abroad, so that that has nothing to do with the case. In the second place, I have not very much sympathy for the argument of a man going over into Canada and being taxed on the things that he brings back, in view of the fact that Canada taxes him on the things that he takes over; and in the next place the first thing that Canada did in the beginning of this war was to put on 7½ per cent additional duty upon things coming from the United States. So we will dismiss that argument.

There are two amendments proposed, one by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] and the other by myself as a substitute. There is not very much difference between them except in two or three points. I will call attention to them. Both recommend a very sensible proposition, that we should not tax the gold and silver sent here by foreign nations to pay debts to us. I do not believe anybody would want to collect customs duties on gold coming from foreign countries into this country. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] and I both agree on that proposition. I then take up the question of coal, and propose that this additional duty of 10 per cent shall not apply to coal coming into this country.

Mr. MOON. Will the gentleman kindly allow me to interrupt him for a moment?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. MOON. I want to understand the meaning of this amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina, concurred in by the gentleman from Connecticut, in reference to white print paper.

Mr. HILL. I am coming to that in just a moment.

Mr MOON. I suggested a few days ago that I would offer an amendment upon that question, but I do not want to do that if the language used in the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina, concurred in by the gentleman from Connecticut, will cover it.

Mr. KITCHIN. My amendment covers that. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MOON] suggested it to us the other day, and we took it up after he suggested it and included it in the amendment.

Mr. HILL. My purpose in offering this amendment is not to disturb the dutiable list in any respect whatever, so far as the 10 per cent addition is concerned. I do not believe this is the time or the place to make a tariff revision under present circumstances. I do not believe it could be wisely or successfully done, and my own personal judgment is that the operations of the war and the effect of the war would practically nullify any tariff, no matter what it was, in its actual operations, so long as the war lasted.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. The gentleman referred to coal.

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Will he kindly state how much coal is being imported into the United States?

Mr. HILL. I can not tell the gentleman. I did not intend to go into a tariff discussion, and so did not fortify myself with the figures necessary to do so. Coal is now on the free list.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Yes; I understand that.

Mr. HILL. My proposition is that the 10 per cent additional duty shall not apply to it, and that it shall remain undisturbed on the free list as it is now. That provision is not included in the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]. There is the first difference between us.

The third exception is "coins of gold, silver, and metal." I do not think it needs any argument to convince you that there should not be a 10 per cent duty added to coin which is sent from abroad to this country to pay debts due in the United States.

The next proposition, which the gentleman from North Carolina has not included and which I think he might wisely have included, is "guano, manures, and all substances used only for manure, including basic slag, ground or unground, calcium cyanamid, or lime nitrogen."

In the last session of Congress we appropriated several million dollars to manufacture the last-named article here. I do not know why we should now pay a duty on it to prevent it from coming here pending such manufacture. I have added it in the interest of the South. We do not use it to any extent in my section of the country, but it is of vital importance to the South that they should have lime nitrogen and nitrate of soda. The gentleman from North Carolina did include nitrate of soda, but did not include cyanamid or lime nitrogen. That is the second difference.

Paragraph 605, relating to nitrate of soda—if I am not mistaken, the gentleman from North Carolina includes nitrate of soda in his amendment, does he not?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. HILL. So we agree on that.

Mr. KITCHIN. As I understand the gentleman from Connecticut, we agree on everything in my amendment.

Mr. HILL. Yes; except the duty.

Mr. KITCHIN. And you want to add something else.

Mr. HILL. No, not entirely; because the next item relates to personal effects of persons arriving in the United States. The law now provides that a person coming into the country does not pay a tariff on personal effects not exceeding $100 in value.

Mr. FORDNEY. In reply to a question by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HAMILTON], I will say to the gentleman that there were 1,040,000 tons of coal imported into this country last year.

Mr. HILL. It would not amount to much. The demand for coal is almost universal now.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut has expired.

Mr. HILL. I would like an extension of time. I simply want to explain the difference in the two amendments.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for five minutes.

Mr. HILL. I will just explain the amendments, and then quit.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman will be granted five minutes additional time.

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. I do not believe any of you want to repeal the free list in respect to personal effects brought in by a person coming into this country and make them dutiable.

On mechanically ground wood pulp the difference between the two amendments is this: The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] would include manufactured news-print paper. If he does that, he ought also to include wood pulp. He ought to take in paragraph 547 as well as paragraph 649.

Mr. KITCHIN. Wood pulp is included in my amendment.

Mr. HILL. I did not know that. There are two separate propositions in the free list. One is print paper valued at less than 2½ cents a pound, and the other is wood pulp in paragraph 649. I have included wood pulp. I have left the possibility of the 10 per cent duty going on to news-print paper in paragraph 547.

Now, those are the only differences in the amendments so far. I come to the final difference, and that is the difference of the duty on tea and coffee. In other words, so far I have included fertilizer and fertilizer materials, which are of vital interest to the cotton and tobacco growing States of this Union. All of them are not included in the gentleman's amendment. I think they should be.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Did the gentleman notice that it is proposed by the Department of Agriculture to ask for $10,000,000 to bring nitrates into the United States?

Mr. HILL. Certainly; and at the same time they are putting a duty on them when they are talking about appropriating millions of dollars to bring them here, and the absurdity is too manifest for argument.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. The gentleman's amendment includes manures and nitrates to aid in the production of foodstuffs.

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Why does not the gentleman exempt foodstuffs?

Mr. HILL. I will show the gentleman frankly. Does the gentleman see the obliterated lines in this amendment? It includes the basic foodstuffs. I drew the amendment to include wheat, grain, meats, and other basic foodstuffs in the United States, in view of the fact that we are in war, but I found when I presented it in the committee that it was going to raise a tariff discussion at once, and I therefore crossed out every single one of them, and simply offered the amendment in such a way that it can provoke no controversy except on the question of tea and coffee, upon which I want to be heard. I do not think it is the time and place to raise a tariff discussion, but personally I would do what the gentleman from Alabama suggests.

Now, as to the question of tea and coffee. We had a duty on tea during the Spanish War. What was the result? We did not pay any more for it. After the war was over we repealed the duty, and what was the result? We did not buy tea for any less. Japan took the export duty off when we put a duty on, and she put it on when we took it off. That will be the case of coffee and tea.

One of the best arguments I ever heard in the House was from the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] when he made an exhaustive study on the question of a tariff on coffee, showing that prior to the war Germany charged 7 cents a pound duty on coffee and was selling coffee throughout Germany at retail for 4 cents less than it was sold here.

Mr. STEENERSON. And that was based on the testimony of the head of the Coffee Trust.

Mr. HILL. Now, another thing: We do not owe the coffee-producing countries anything, anyway. If I am correctly informed, Brazil got out of her valorization scheme about $200,000,000, a large portion of which we paid in this country. I am perfectly satisfied that the export duty in coffee-raising countries will all come off.

Now, is it an arbitrary and unjust proposition we are submitting? We have stricken out $80,000,000 of revenue from this bill since yesterday noon. My judgment is, as the bill now stands, that no money will practically be collected from automobiles. This will equal that; it will raise $84,000,000. It will do nobody any harm. I do not think that within three months after that tax is put on the American people will pay one single penny more for tea or coffee because of it, for we are taking it now subject to export duties from the various countries which have a keen competition for the largest market in the world, and thus export duties, one after another, will be sliced off if we put the tax on, and we will get $84,000,000, which we need and greatly need in the prosecution of this war.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. DENISON. Would the gentleman be in favor of a tariff on tea and coffee as a part of our permanent policy?

Mr. HILL. I do not know whether I would in time of peace or not. I am in favor of it now, and I think I will have to be in favor of it in the future in view of the enormous addition that this war is going to make to our current expenses in the way of interest on the debt that we are in process of creating and the permanent enlargement of our Army and Navy. We are never going to get back to the old conditions, and I say to you that in my judgment a great many economic ideas on the tariff and revenue formed by us in the past are, in many cases, on both sides of the House, going to be revolutionized by conditions caused by this war into which we are now entering.

Now, is it an unjust tax? The Treasury suggested to the committee 5 cents on coffee and 15 cents per pound on tea. Great Britain is collecting 12 cents a pound on coffee while we propose a tax of 6 cents. While we propose a tax of 12 cents on tea they are collecting to-day 25 cents. In other words, we propose to the American people to put just one-half as much duty on tea and coffee as Great Britain has to-day. If we put the English duty on these two items, we could get a revenue of over one hundred and fifty millions annually.

Mr. HICKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. HICKS. What is the export duty on Brazilian coffee?

Mr. HILL. That is a hard question to figure out in view of the old valorization-scheme and the relation of the Federal Government to the coffee-producing States of that country.

Mr. HICKS. About what is it?

Mr. HILL. I can not tell, it is so complicated with the relations between the General Government and San Paolo and other States that it is difficult to state. But as a matter of fact under the valorizaion scheme coffee went from 8 or 9 cents up to 17 or 18 cents, and that difference was paid by the world. I am informed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] that it is 3 cents a pound.

Mr. TOWNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HICKS. Yes.

Mr. TOWNER. As I understood, the gentleman said the average import price of coffee was 9 cents a pound. That was before the war.

Mr. HILL. That was before the war.

Mr. TOWNER. Under normal conditions.

Mr. HILL. That is my recollection; I think it is about 12 cents now, and it has been as high as 18.

Mr. TOWNER. And 18 cents a pound for tea. Can the gentleman give me the average wholesale price of coffee and tea before the war?

Mr. HILL. I think the gentleman from Ohio can answer that question better than I can.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I can not answer it during 2 years before the war, but for 10 years previous the average import price has been 8½ cents and the retail price 25 cents.

Mr. HILL. That is it exactly.

Mr. LONGWORTH. And the cost of preparing the coffee for the market—that is, the roasting and the cleaning, and so forth—was only about a cent and a half, so that the value of the coffee in condition for the consumer was not to exceed 10 cents, but he was forced to pay 25 cents for it. Somebody took off a profit of 150 per cent.

Mr. HILL. Absolutely.

Mr. TOWNER. And the statement was made that the average wholesale price was 18 cents, or almost twice the import cost.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut has again expired.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. The statement made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] in regard to the manner in which the tea and coffee business is conducted gives another reason why it will not cost the American consumer 1 cent more if this duty of 6 and 12 cents is put on, because the cost of tea and coffee practically bears no relation to the retail selling price, and I will ask the gentleman from Ohio if that statement is not correct? Is it not a fact that in the gentleman's study of this question he has determined that practically the cost of tea and coffee bears little or no relation to the retail selling price?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Absolutely; while in Germany, which is also a very large coffee-drinking country, they do. As the gentleman stated, there was a duty of 7 cents a pound on coffee there, and yet the average retail price for these same 10 years was a little less than 23 cents a pound.

Mr. TOWNER. Was it not also true that the price in Great Britain on both tea and coffee to the consumer was always lower than in the United States?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I think that is true, although they drink so little coffee in England that I did not go into that very carefully.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to get into a tariff discussion, but I do want to say that since this war began Great Britain has a great deal more than doubled her receipts from customs, but I have prepared this amendment, with the exception of tea and coffee, simply to prevent the application of this 10 per cent duty to certain essential things, essential for the welfare of the South, the cotton-growing and tobacco States, essential for the comfort of the people with reference to coal. I do not think it will have very much effect, but it will help some in the extreme northeast, along the Maine coast, near Nova Scotia. I have included also the securing of $84,000,000 of revenue without harm to any living human being on earth, in my judgment, and substituting something to fill the hole which was punched into this bill yesterday by the taking off of the tax on automobiles. Whether that tax will be put back or not I do not know, but we need that money. There is no easier way to get it. Tea and coffee are not sold closely upon the basis of cost. They are sold upon brands, on package prices, and it would not affect the cost of them after the first readjustment, which will probably take two or three months. I submit the amendment, and I ask whether it is not a fair substitute. If you want to adopt Mr. KITCHIN'S amendment and put a duty on tea and coffee at 6 and 12 cents a pound, you will vote for my substitute. If you do not want to put a duty on tea and coffee, you will vote for Mr. KITCHIN'S amendment instead of my substitute. I submit that as a business proposition to meet the existing emergency, and I leave it to your judgment.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to the substitute, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HUDDLESTON to the substitute of Mr. HILL: At the end of the amendment insert "articles and substances intended for use as human food and in the composition thereof."

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Chairman, just a few words upon this subject. The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] says that he would have included an exemption of human food except for his wish to avoid a tariff discussion. I am as anxious to avoid a tariff discussion as anyone, but if it be a choice between taxing the food of the people, and especially the food of the great masses of our people, and have a tariff discussion, it strikes me that it is time for a tariff discussion.

This is a war-revenue bill, and the emergency is great; but it seems to me that while all must expect to suffer, and every man to pay his fair share, we ought to exhaust other subjects of taxation before we proceed to the people's food. My belief is that we ought to lay taxes on luxuries and the nonnecessaries of life as high as they will stand before we go to taxing food that everyone must have.

A tax upon the food of the people is a frank and candid attempt to lay a tax per capita—to support the war out of a per capita tax—because the tax falls equally upon all of the people, the rich and the poor, the millionaire and the workingman, for all have to eat. They have to eat sugar, drink coffee and tea, and to use other common necessaries of life. The poor use just about as much of these things as the rich; when you levy a tax on coffee you take as much out of the pockets of the poorest man in all of the country as you take out of the pockets of the millionaire. When you levy a tax on sugar that goes into the laboring man's coffee, or into his tea, or into his daily food, you levy a per capita tax upon the poor man and the members of his family just about the same as you levy upon anyone else. This is wrong; it is unjust; it is violative of every sound principle of taxation.

When the time comes, if it should be absolutely necessary, I would vote for taxes upon the necessaries of life. I would vote to tax the poor man's food—his bread and meat, and the beverage he drinks at breakfast—but I would rather vote for a tax on doors and for a windowpane tax. I would rather lay a tax on anything that the human mind can conceive than to lay it on bread and meat and things that the poorest man in the land has to have every day and every meal.

I have the highest regard for the opinion of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] upon matters of tariff taxation, but I must decline to believe that the foreigner will pay the tax when it comes to coffee and tea. I must decline to believe that the foreigner will pay the tax when it comes to sugar or other necessaries of life. I am willing to make some concessions along this line, but how can we vote for a measure that we know to a certainty is going to increase the cost of the poor man's food, and not merely his but the food of every man in the land? I do not see how we can justify such action. Of course, on this side of the aisle there will not be any Democrat who will attempt to justify it.

Ever since the Democratic Party has been a party it has opposed taxes upon the necessaries of life, and as long as the Democratic Party is worthy of the name it will stand for the same principle. I believe there are on the other side of the aisle—the Republican side—many who oppose taxes on necessaries, who think that the common man, the man who toils, should have some consideration. How can any of us who hold to these principles—how can any of us who believe that it is unjust that the Government should be supported by per capita taxes laid on the people—vote in favor of this tax upon the common necessaries of ordinary existence? [Applause.]

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to address myself to the amendment which I have proposed, which seeks to exempt from this 10 per cent ad valorem tax the articles enumerated in paragraph 177 of the Underwood tariff law, which, frankly, is sugar. Now, there have been a great many whisperings about this House since this bill was introduced as to the part that sugar has played in the framing of this bill, and during the debate thus far no one has attempted to defend the action of the committee with reference to sugar.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am a protectionist—a Republican. I want to see a tariff upon all articles sufficiently high to protect American industries, but, Mr. Chairman, I am not the kind of a protectionist that seeks to pile up protective duties upon an industry that needs no protection during this war time, and seek to give to the manufacturers additional profits when their profits already are exorbitant. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] stated a little while ago that he was opposed to consumption taxes. So am I, except where absolutely necessary. I have tried to get some consumption taxes out of this bill—namely, that relating to light and heat—but the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] was not opposed to consumption taxes of that character then. He is opposed to consumption taxes, Mr. Chairman, but in the very next section of this bill you will find a consumption tax upon tea and upon coffee imported into this country after the 10th day of May; and, since there was no objection to consumption taxes upon tea and coffee, why did they not include sugar?

Now, I am not opposed to a consumption tax on sugar. It may be necessary. We can not do away with all consumption taxes, but what I am opposed to in this bill is to increasing the price of sugar to the American people, and under this bill that the gentleman now stands for for every $9 we collect from the American people by reason of this increased tax upon sugar only $5 goes into the United States Treasury and $4 of it goes into the treasury of the sugar manufacturers of the United States.

I hold in my hand a circular from the gentleman's State, issued by the Michigan Beet Growers' Association, in which they give some interesting figures. I want to say, in passing, that the manufacture of beet sugar is one of the most important industries of my own State of Wisconsin. I would be the last to do anything to injure that industry, but because sugar manufacturers of Wisconsin will receive an exorbitant profit from this action is no reason why I should support it.

This circular from the Michigan Beet Growers' Association shows that the net resources of the 15 beet-sugar factories of Michigan, under their own sworn report, including real estate, in 1915 amounted to $23,525,551. Their total assessed valuation of both real and personal property, however, was only $6,209,900. And as to the results of the operation of these factories in 1915, the total cost of operation, including the purchase of beets, the coal, the labor, and all the overhead expenses, was $7,853,581, and the net profits to those factories that year were $11,262,066, or nearly 50 per cent upon their entire resources under their own sworn affidavits.

Now, if this provision remains in the bill with the 10 per cent ad valorem duty upon sugar imported, you will make a present to these sugar factories of how much? Based upon the imports of 1915, the last Government statistics which I have, we will present to the sugar manufacturers of this country $14,000,000 and the Treasury will get only a little over $15,000,000.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. Is not the difficulty with all protective-tariff taxes that they tax the American people a great deal more than goes into the Treasury?

Mr. LENROOT. Not at all.

Mr. LITTLE. This is not a protective-tariff tax.

Mr. LENROOT. That is not true. There is no protection with reference to this matter, as the gentleman from Missouri himself must concede. When an industry in the United States is making a profit of 50 per cent on its present investment and capitalization, any tariff that seeks to give them more than that is not a protective tariff.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman can not denounce it any too strongly for me.

Mr. LENROOT. I want to ask the gentleman, then, is he going to vote for this proposition?

Mr. BORLAND. Any tariff that affects an industry in this country has exactly that operation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. LENROOT. No. I ask for five minutes, Mr. Chairman. This is a very important subject.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LENROOT. Now, Mr. Chairman, it is not the same in any respect. I am willing, whenever necessary, to support and maintain tariff duties for any industry in the United States to enable an American manufacturer to pay American labor American wages, so that they can live according to the American standard. I am willing to vote for such tariff as is necessary to do that, but I am not willing to stand here and vote for a tariff the only effect of which is to tax the American people, not for the benefit of the Treasury of the United States but for the benefit of some sugar manufacturers in the United States.

I have here, Mr. Chairman, some very interesting statistics. In 1915 we imported $157,000,000 worth of sugar. We collected a duty of $49,525,000. By this bill, if the imports were no greater—but they will be—we would get $15,700,000 for the Treasury, but there were 4,000,000,000 pounds manufactured in this country, and when this 10 per cent ad valorem tax is levied we will compel the purchasers of sugar in this country to pay $14,160,000, not one penny of which will go into the Treasury of the United States.

Now, if you want to be fair—if we must tax in this war time the people of this country for the sugar they use—we ought to levy an excise tax upon it, and tax them all alike, because the only excuse for a tariff tax under those circumstances is that of protection, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] will not stand on this floor and say that a tariff tax upon sugar that to-day is quoted in New York at 7½ cents per pound wholesale, having nearly doubled in price in the last two years since this war began, is necessary for the protection of the American sugar manufacturer.

Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether this amendment of mine will be adopted or not, but unless some explanation shall be given for the treatment of sugar in this tariff bill, it will be a disgrace to the American Congress if it is permitted to remain in the bill in the form that it now is. [Applause.]

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] loves to make a target of me, somehow or other, I do not know just why. It may be because my Republicanism is not as good as his, but I will leave that question to the House to determine.

If the gentleman's amendment is put into effect, he complies with the demands of Mr. Frank C. Lowery, of the Federal Sugar Refining Co., of New York, who has spread broadcast over this land misrepresentation and positive downright misstatements of facts about sugar. I refer to Mr. Lowery, not to my good friend from Wisconsin, who is excited and misinformed, that is all. [Laughter.]

Let me first say, gentlemen, that under the Payne tariff law the duty upon sugar coming from Cuba was 1.34 cents a pound. Cuba had then a preferential rate, as it has now, of 20 per cent below the full duty paying sugar or the duty paid on any other article of imports. Under the Underwood tariff law as it is now written full duty-paying sugar pays, in round numbers, 1.26 cents a pound. Therefore the Cuba sugar is imported at 1 cent per pound. Mr. Frank C. Lowery, secretary and sales agent of the Federal Sugar Refining Co., of New York, has been very industriously circulating literature among Members of Congress for several years past, claiming that a duty on sugar is highway robbery.

Prior to the war in Europe free-trade England collected a duty on sugar of four-tenths cent per pound. The duty on imported sugar going into England to-day is 3 cents a pound. The price of sugar in this country when the beet sugar and the cane sugar produced by our domestic industry comes on the market is always lower than at any other time in the year, and that sugar is on the market less than one-half of the year. It is not on the market now; neither beet nor cane sugar produced in this country.

About one month ago, knowing that my beloved friend from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] would have a conniption fit when anything in the shape of a tariff would be presented in this House, I went back over a period of 10 years prior to the European war and obtained an average margin between imported raw and refined sugar as sold by the sugar refining companies in New York and New Orleans and Boston and so on, the seaboard refineries; and the difference between the price paid by those refiners on raw sugar delivered in New York, duty paid, and the price for refined sugar was 84.6 cents per 100 pounds. From the beginning of the war in 1914 down to the 1st of January this year that margin has increased to an average of 95.7 cents per 100 pounds.

Since the 1st day of January of this year, a time when most of the domestic sugar had gone off the market, the margin increased until Mr. Frank C. Lowery's concern, the Federal Sugar Co., since the 6th day of April, has been holding a margin of 2¼ cents a pound between imported raw and refined sugar, and the average margin since the 1st day of January down to the 13th of April has been 2.17 cents per pound. The refiners of this country want to put out of business, as my beloved friend from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] wants to put out of business, the domestic sugar industry of this country.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FORDNEY. Let me finish this statement and then I will yield to the gentleman. Prior to the war in Europe Germany made for export from a million and a half to two million tons of sugar and supplied England with her sugar. England came here at that time for a very small portion of her sugar. Immediately upon the declaration of war England could get no more sugar from Europe, France making none for export, and the price of sugar went up immediately in this country, because the second day after the war began Great Britain made contracts in Cuba for a year's supply of raw sugar. Sugar can be produced in Cuba at a cost of a cent and a half a pound. That is the testimony before the sugar investigating committee known as the Hardwick Committee, of which I had the honor to be a member. Cuba is getting to-day 5¼ cents a pounds for her raw sugar f. o. b. Habana, as shown here by Willett & Gray's Statistical Trade Journal, which I receive, the most reliable statistical trade journal, I think, in the world; and the Federal Sugar Refining Co., of which Mr. Lowery, about whom I have spoken, is secretary and sales agent, holds the margin or difference between 6¼ cents a pound and 8¼ cents a pound, or 2¼ cents a pound—highway robbery, if there ever was such a thing.

Mr. LENROOT. Now, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman stated that I desired to put these companies out of business. I would like to ask the gentleman whether he thinks a profit of 50 per cent on the entire capitalization for one year, as I read from the gentleman's own State, looks like being put out of business under the present tariff?

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not know about the correctness of that statement. I never knew of any such profit being made by any concern in that business in this country. If such profits have been made, I never heard of it before. I never owned a dollar's worth of sugar stock and never expect to, and have no interest in any way, shape, or manner except this: As I started to say to you, Germany has surprised the world in this war by her industrial preparedness.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HICKS. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have five minutes longer.

Mr. CANNON. How much time would the gentleman like?

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, about 10 minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Make it 10 minutes.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan be allowed to proceed for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked that the time of the gentleman from Michigan be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORDNEY. If Germany had not been so well industrially prepared as she is, how long would the war in Europe have lasted? We consume in the United States 4,000,000 tons of sugar annually, and we produce in this country 1,000,000 tons. Since the war broke out prices have been abnormally high both on sugar and on all other agricultural products, and the duty imposed upon all imports has no effect whatever. You could sweep the tariff away and not injure an institution in this country for the time being, because the abnormally high price caused by the war is a thing that prevails. But when the war is over, then we will need protection. There are 14 new plants now under construction in the United States, because of the stimulated values of sugar since the war began, 77 plants being in operation in 18 States in the Union; the 14 mentioned are new ones being built. We need about 400 such factories to supply us with all the sugar that we consume. We have the money, we have the soil, we have the desire to do business, and we need that employment for American people. Why not foster that industry and make all the sugar that all the people of the United States consume?

Mr. BLACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Just in a minute. If we were in the situation that Germany is in to-day, and our ships were driven from the sea as the ships of Germany are driven from the sea, where would we go for our sugar supply, when our people produce only 25 per cent of our consumption? Oh, my friends, if it is just and equitable to strike from this bill any duty on sugar, it is just and equitable to strike out the duty on wheat, potatoes, corn, and every other article of food and clothing that the people of this country use. Why do you pick out sugar? I seem to be your target day in and day out, sir. I am called Sugar Beet JOE, the champion of the sugar industry of the country. It is a sweet name and I am proud of it. [Applause.] Ever since that industry was established in this country in 1898 I have been a champion of that industry, because I know its value to the American people. Every time you vote to reduce the duty on sugar you vote to destroy a great American industry. Sugar has always been an object of taxation in all times past, for a hundred years—yes, ever since the organization of the Government of the United States. Even in the Wilson Democratic tariff law of 1898 there was a duty upon sugar of eight-tenths of a cent a pound.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Under the McKinley tariff law sugar was free.

Mr. FORDNEY. But the McKinley tariff law put a bounty on domestically produced sugar to offset the free sugar at that time. And there was a small tax upon imported sugar, owing to its grade, in the McKinley tariff law. But I am afraid I am getting away from the gentleman's question. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLACK. I understood the gentleman that it mattered not what tariff was put upon it, there would not be anything added to the price. I just want to call attention to the fact that as soon as the question of an impost tax on sugar was agitated the sugar brokers sent out to the wholesale grocers of the country notice that any consumption taxes or impost taxes that were imposed by Congress would be added to the price of sugar.

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, yes; Mr. Lowery telling the same darned old fibs. [Laughter.] The gentleman from Texas has evidently been reading the literature sent out by that gentleman.

Mr. BLACK. I did not refer to Mr. Lowery; I referred to Thomas S. Witherspoon, the New Orleans agent, one of the largest sugar brokers in the South. He is the broker for the American Sugar Refining Co.

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes; he belongs to the same Lowery gang from whom you have received your information on sugar.

Mr. BLACK. These circulars are addressed to the firm of which I am a member.

Mr. FORDNEY. Now, what does the American Sugar Refining Co. do? The sugar growers of Louisiana and Texas make no refined sugar; they sell their raw sugar to the American Sugar Refining Co., and that companys pays the Cuban price delivered in New York less 15 cents a hundred pounds—the freight from New Orleans to New York. They pay less for Louisiana sugar than Cuban sugar sells for in

New York, deducting the freight from New Orleans to New York. To-day the American Sugar Co. are producing 63 per cent of the sugar consumed in this country.

Now, the gentleman refers to the profits made. This gentleman, Mr. Lowery, testified before the Ways and Means Committee that when the Federal Sugar Co. was organized, with a capital of $10,000,000, the stockholders paid in $3,280,000 cash and issued $10,000,000 of stock. So that two-thirds of that stock was water. I have on my desk a circular sent out by that company about six weeks ago, showing that their profits this year are more than $3,000,000—more than 100 per cent on the capital invested.

Why, let me tell you, if the American people and the English people were to get together and fix a fair price under your proposed food-control law the people of the United States would be getting sugar to-day for 6½ cents a pound instead of 8 and 10 cents a pound. The profit is going to the Cuban planter and to the refiners of sugar.

Now, the Michigan Sugar Co., which is the largest sugar company in the United States, having six factories, have advanced the price of beets from $5.50 per ton to $8 per ton, and are paying the farmers in Michigan a sliding scale for beets based on the value of sugar. Did you ever hear of any such sliding scale of prices for refined sugar coming from the American Sugar Refinery or the Arbuckles or the Federal Sugar Refinery or any of the great sugar-refinery companies in the country? No. I say to you, gentlemen, that free trade on sugar means the destruction of our great domestic industry. It has been said by some men who are in favor of free sugar that we do not have the soil in this country to produce a sufficient amount of beets to furnish us with our consumption of sugar. The Secretary of Agriculture some years ago sent out experts to examine the soils in many States of the Union and make a report. I have a copy of that report in which these experts said they had examined the soil of 274,000,000 acres of land in the United States, and that if one crop of beets were raised on that number of acres and an equal amount of sugar be extracted from those beets based on the sugar contents of the beets that year in Michigan for the production of sugar, it would produce more sugar than all the people of all the world have consumed since the birth of our Savior. [Applause.]

And yet free traders say we have not got soil enough to raise sugar in this country to supply our consumption of sugar. Gentlemen, putting sugar on the free list in this bill is a direct slap at that domestic industry.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman say what effect free trade has had on the price of sugar in normal times and what effect on the Sugar Trust?

Mr. FORDNEY. The profit of the refineries in the country would increase, the domestic industry would decrease, as it did just prior to the time when we repealed the free-sugar clause of the Underwood tariff law. Last year we collected, in round numbers, $56,000,000 on imported sugar. There was a rebate or drawback of 99 per cent of duty paid on all raw sugar refined exported, amounting to $19,801,000 last year. So the total receipts of the Government on sugar were about thirty-six and a half million dollars. This 10 per cent ad valorem proposed in the bill will add another half cent a pound to the duty on sugar when valued at 5 cents a pound, and would yield half the amount of the duty collected last year, or about $28,000,000 plus the amount of the drawback or export to Europe. We exported to England last year 703,000 tons of sugar.

Mr. HOWARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. HOWARD. Does the gentleman think that the 10 per cent, plus additional duty on sugar, will have a tendency to decrease the very high price of sugar now to the consumer?

Mr. FORDNEY. No; not while the war lasts. When the refiners of this country are able to maintain a margin of 2½ cents, you accept it from me that they will rob the people to the full limit, as they always have done. And every time our domestic sugar comes on the market down goes the price of sugar to the consumer; and at all times let me say to you that the general price of domestic sugar ranges from 10 to 40 cents a hundred pounds below the refined sugar sold by the refineries.

Mr. HOWARD. I want to ask the gentleman whether he thinks that this additional tax would give the great body of sugar producers in this country, who do not seem to be any more patriotic than other sugar refiners, a very great advantage and greatly enhance the value of their stock while this law remains in force?

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, do not say that.

Mr. HOWARD. They do not seem to be reducing the price of their sugar to the consumer.

Mr. FORDNEY. They have sold and do sell, if they have any now, at from 10 to 40 cents a hundred pounds always under the price of refined sugar sold by the seaboard refineries.

Mr. HOWARD. The ultimate consumer does not get the benefit of it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Under the present tariff do the beet-sugar interests get adequate protection?

Mr. FORDNEY. They claim they can live under that in normal times.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am not asking the gentleman what they claim; I am asking him what he thinks, who knows.

Mr. FORDNEY. I think 1 cent or about 1 cent a pound comes very near offsetting the difference in the cost of imported sugar and sugar made from beets in this country; but that will not give adequate protection to your Louisiana sugar.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am not talking about that.

Mr. FORDNEY. Let me conclude, so that the House will understand. In normal times it costs 3½ cents per pound to make refined sugar from beets, while it costs 3¾ cents to produce raw sugar from cane in the State of Louisiana. Then that sugar must be refined at a cost of about three-eighths of a cent a pound. Therefore to produce a pound of refined sugar from cane costs a little more than 4 cents, while beet sugar can be produced for 3½ cents.

Mr. FITZGERALD. There is no difference in the sales price to the retailer, whether cane or beet.

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, yes; there is. There is always a difference in the wholesale price. What it is to the retailer I do not know.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has again expired.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that it be extended for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. FORDNEY. I will be very glad to yield to the gentleman. I do not want to take up too much time upon this question, but it is a matter of importance.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. When the present rates are raised by 10 per cent, if they are raised, will the gentleman state how they will compare with the rate under the Payne bill and the rate under the Dingley bill?

Mr. FORDNEY. I did state, but perhaps the gentleman did not understand me. Under the Payne tariff law the duty on Cuban sugar, which had a preferential rate of 20 per cent under other imported sugar, was 1.348 cents per pound. Under the Underwood law it is in round numbers 1.051 cents per pound. The gentleman will remember that an ad valorem duty is a higher duty when the price of the article is high and declines when the import price declines, but at 5-cent sugar 10 per cent ad valorem is a half cent a pound. Therefore the duty under this law, if this bill goes into effect, on Cuban sugar will be 1.40 cents per pound, or about that.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I want to see if I understand the figures which the gentleman has given. The gentleman states that it costs to refine cane sugar three-eighths of a cent a pound.

Mr. FORDNEY. For instance, to refine imported raw sugar in this country, according to evidence furnished by the refiners of this country, costs about three-eighths of a cent a pound. It costs that to convert the raw sugar into refined sugar.

Mr. LONGWORTH. What is the margin they maintain that the refineries are able to get along with?

Mr. FORDNEY. For 10 years before the war the margin was 84 cents per 100 pounds.

Mr. LONGWORTH. What is it now?

Mr. FORDNEY. Two and a quarter cents a pound.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Therefore the difference between three-eighths of a cent a pound and 2¼ cents a pound is profit?

Mr. FORDNEY. Seven dollars a barrel on 45,000 barrels a day, which is about the output of the American Sugar Refining Co.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Then your friend Lowery is doing pretty well?

Mr. FORDNEY. Our friend Lowery turns out about 8 per cent of the sugar consumed.

Mr. LONGWORTH. And he is getting along very well?

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, very well, indeed. He is very prosperous, I believe.

Mr. LONGWORTH. He is getting about 150 per cent profit.

Mr. FORDNEY. He shows in a circular which I have that their profits last year amounted to more than $3,000,000 on a capital of $3,280,000.

Mr. LONGWORTH. And he does not want to pay 10 per cent additional for his raw product? Is not that all there is to it?

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, that fellow will kick about a duty on sugar after he is dead. [Laughter.]

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. OSBORNE. I desire to ask the gentleman from Michigan, independent of the question of protection or free trade, if this 10 per cent customs tax will have a tendency to carry out the object of this bill, namely, to provide revenue to defray war expenses?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes. Sugar is one of the great revenue producers of the country, one of the articles which has always been in every tariff bill, whether enacted by the Republican or the Democratic Parties.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes.

Mr. CRAMTON. The gentleman referred to the increased price paid the beet growers in Michigan, the increase being from $5.50 a ton to $8 a ton I think he stated. Was not that practically entirely due to the fact that the farmers went on a strike and that the governor mediated and secured the increase?

Mr. FORDNEY. My good friend, last year the prices of beets were far above the price the year before. This year the farmers asked for more pay for their beets, and there was a difference between the sugar manufacturers and the farmer for some time on that matter and it looked as though they were not going to get together. I have been informed by one of the sugar factories of the State that they had all the acreage they wanted, but the governor got the farmers and the proprietors of the sugar factories together a month or two ago and got a compromise and fixed a sliding scale for the factory to pay to the farmer according to the price of sugar.

If the price of sugar goes up the price to the farmers for their beets goes up. If the price goes down for sugar, down goes the price to the farmer. That is the situation. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the amendments pending be closed in 26 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that debate on the pending amendments terminate at the expiration of 26 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I wish to submit a parliamentary inquiry. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] has offered an amendment to which the gentleman from Connecticut has offered a substitute, both providing that the provisions of the section shall not apply to certain named articles. If one of those amendments should be adopted, would it still be in order to add by the way of amendment additional named articles to be on the free list?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman state that so that we can get the facts?

Mr. MANN. The amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] proposes to exempt certain named articles from the 10 per cent duty levied. If that amendment should be agreed to under this limitation of debate, after debate is concluded, will it still be in order to offer an amendment adding additional articles to go on the free list under this exemption?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks it would be.

Mr. MANN. I have no objection to closing debate, then. I thought that was to be the case.

Mr. ALMON. I wish to submit an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] as amended by the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

The CHAIRMAN. There will have to be some voting done before the gentleman's amendment will be in order.

Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I want to make a unanimous-consent request. I want to ask unanimous consent to add to my amendment, and be considered as one amendment, the following:

And (g) articles specified in paragraph 642 of such act of October 3, 1913.

That is a personal-effects paragraph, so that people can have a $100 personal exemption of personal effects, when coming into the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to add to his amendment a provision read by him, so as to make it a part of, and to complete, the original amendments. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] to strike out "(g)" and add "(h)."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that when a vote is taken on the substitute I offered, which covered two provisos, one relating to certain items to which the 10 per cent duty should not apply, and the second proviso, relating to tea and coffee on which increased duty should apply, the vote be taken separately on the two provisos.

Mr. MANN. It does not require unanimous consent. The amendment is subject to revision, anyhow, at the request of anybody.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I have sent to the desk an amendment intended to perfect the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]. Do I understand there is to be a vote after 26 minutes' debate on the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina to this bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The voting will begin, which will reach the Kitchin amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I think my amendment should be presented before that is voted on.

Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman included in that time?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. No, sir.

Mr. MANN. Then make it 31 minutes.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOWARD. I would like to ask through the Chair the gentleman from North Carolina one question that I want some information on, because I want to offer an amendment if I can. I want to ask the gentleman if under this 10 per cent blanket clause gold bullion would be subject to taxation?

Mr. KITCHIN. No. I have offered an amendment to relieve that.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for 31 minutes, then, so that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] may offer an amendment and speak on it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] asks unanimous consent that at the expiration of 31 minutes debate on the pending amendments shall be concluded.

Mr. MANN. That is, there shall be 31 minutes of debate.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; and the voting shall then begin. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] is recognized.

Mr. BATHRICK. Mr. Chairman, I want to reserve the right to object. I want to understand what the time is on—the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] or all the amendments pending.

Mr. MANN. All the pending amendments.

Mr. BATHRICK. Does that mean that on an amendment proposed by any Member he does not have time to speak to it?

Mr. MANN. He can offer a further amendment after the Kitchin amendment is voted on.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I was very much surprised at the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] and the argument he made in support of it. I was surprised in the first place because from a Republican standpoint it is a pretty flabby argument. I was the more surprised because the gentleman from Wisconsin, who is generally very well informed, has evidently not kept informed on the sugar situation at all.

Now, this is true with regard to sugar in this country, as we all know. I am giving you no new information. I am just recalling the situation to your mind. Under normal conditions in this country sugar sells here, so far as the surgar-refining trust will allow it to sell under competition, at a price fixed by the cost of the crude or raw abroad plus the cost of importation and refining. Under such normal conditions, if we put a duty on sugar, the duty does raise the price of sugar by not the amount of the duty always but by something nearly approximating it. And, from a Republican standpoint, that is why we put a duty on sugar, in order to make the price high enough to encourage the production of sugar in America and thus make us independent of the outside world in times like these. But since the European war began the price of sugar in the United States has in no wise been effected by the tariff, and you would have to lay a tariff duty as high as at least 2 or 2½ cents a pound in order to make it affect the price of sugar in the United States at all, as evidenced by the figures given by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Eighty-five hundredths of a cent a pound is about the average margin between the raw and refined sugar in normal times and 2½ cents now. There is a margin of at least a cent and a half, nearly 2 cents, above what the refiners could sell sugar for, based on the foreign price of the raw and what they are selling it for.

Now, it is true that the beet-sugar producers also benefit by that higher cost, but their relative benefit is small, because as the prices of all agricultural products have increased the farmers have demanded a higher price for their sugar beets than they asked under normal conditions, threatening to go out of the sugar-beet business if those higher prices were not given, and they have been given those higher prices, not because the sugar-beet manufacturers are philanthropists, but because it was possible to pay those higher prices and still make sugar at a profit under these conditions.

Now, there are many items of consumption that may possibly be increased slightly in price by this 10 per cent increase in the tariff duty, but sugar is not one of them, for there is that wide margin of profit to the refiner that we propose to take up to the extent of 10 per cent of the present importing cost.

My belief is, based on some knowledge of the situation, that the price of sugar will not be affected one iota by this increase in the tariff. On the other hand, we will get from it a very large and juicy sum of money for Uncle Sam in this his time of need. We have lost by the reduction of the duty on sugar under the Underwood bill, down to this time, about sixty million good dollars that might be now in the Treasury of the United States, and we all know that the levying of those duties during that war period would not have affected the price of sugar at all, for sugar has been sent and kept sky high by reason of the very large amount of sugar-beet territory in Europe that has been turned to other purposes, and the consequent decrease in the supply of sugar.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has expired.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. If there will be no effect from taking this tariff off or leaving it on the price of sugar, what are you and Mr. FORDNEY so wrought up about? [Laughter.]

Mr. MONDELL. I am not wrought up about it. I certainly do not desire to increase the price of sugar, but I do not believe that we should sit here and allow misstatements to be made about this subject or any other matter affected by this bill. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I have been listening to these sugar tariff debates for a great many years. If there was not a war in the United States, there was a war in some other place, or some other visitation of Providence according to the advocates of a tariff on sugar that made the tariff ineffective on the price of sugar.

We consumed last year in the United States about 8,000,000,000 pounds of sugar. Over five billions and a half of it was imported sugar, and 3,229,000,000 pounds of it was domestic sugar. With a 10 per cent ad valorem increase of duty we will receive between $15,000,000 and $19,000,000 of additional revenue from sugar. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] admits that with the present tariff, even from his standpoint—that of the highest protectionist in the United Staets—that rate is adequate to compensate for the difference in the cost of production abroad and in the United States, and that duty of 10 per cent ad valorem adds one-half cent a pound to the price of sugar. If the sugar refiners pay a half cent additional for imported sugars, it adds half a cent additional on domestic sugars. Under this 10 per cent ad valorem provision the Government will obtain from $15,000,000 to $19,000,000. The beet sugar producers, producing 1,641,000,000 pounds annually, will receive a bonus of $8,000,000 on their output. If the present tariff is adequate and it is desired to raise additional revenue by the imposition of any kind of a tax upon sugar, the equitable and the fair and the just way would be to impose an excise tax upon all sugars. An excise tax of one-half cent a pound, which is the preferential which the beet sugar growers get out of the provisions of this bill, will result in a revenue of from $15,000,000 to $19,000,000 to the Treasury with a resulting benefit of $8,000,000 to the beet-sugar producers. An excise tax on sugar equivalent to the 10 per cent ad valorem tax would put $40,000,000 into the Treasury without adding a single penny to the cost of sugar to the American people, and at the same time would eliminate this unjustifiable and indefensible and exorbitant profit which to the beet sugar people are given under this provision.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. The gentleman will concede that when the margin between the raw and refined sugar for 10 years before the war has been but 84 cents per 100 pounds and is now 2½ cents, this half cent a pound can be paid by the importer and he will still make a high and abnormal profit.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I have listened to that misleading argument about the difference between the refined and raw sugar for many years. The refiner buys the raw sugar in the open market. The domestic producer obtains practically the price paid for imported sugar, or just a shade under it. This 10 per cent ad valorem adds half a cent to the cost of the imported sugar, and it enhances the price of domestic sugar to the same extent without any compensating benefit to the consumer.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. No. I have only five minutes, and the gentleman had lots of time.

Mr. FORDNEY. I want to correct an error that the gentleman has made.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, the domestic producer obtains the benefit of this additional price resulting from the increase of one-half cent a pound in the tariff, which amounts to a profit of $8,000,000 to the beet-sugar producer. If that half cent was levied as an excise tax upon all the sugars used in the United States, whether domestic or imported, it would produce a revenue of $40,000,000 instead of the proposed $15,000,000 to $19,000,000, and the additional profit paid as the result of legislation would not be had by the beet-sugar producers.

This bill is not a protective tariff bill. It is designed and intended, or supposed to be intended, for the purpose of getting revenue for the Government because of the exigencies of the war, not to enhance the profits of any particular group, not to afford protection for any particular group. I undertake to say that if any gentleman in this House is entitled to a halo, to flowery wreaths, or to highly decorative ornaments for his work on this revenue bill, it is the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] for his effective work in behalf of the beet-sugar producers of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, during the general debate on this bill I heard it said several times by members of the Ways and Means Committee that this bill was framed on the idea that about 5 per cent of the taxes to be raised by this measure would fall upon the poor class and about 95 per cent upon the rich or the quasi rich, or on luxuries and quasi luxuries. But it seems when it comes to the question of customs duties there was no regard for the poor in the increase of duties on the necessaries of life, and increased burdens were levied upon the poor as well as the rich.

The Underwood tariff law imposes tariff duties upon luxuries, and puts necessaries of life upon the free list. When it comes to the writing of this section of this bill, no distinction is made in the increase of the tax upon luxuries and upon the necessaries of life. So it seems to me that the contention that this measure is based upon 5 per cent increase upon the necessaries of life or upon the things to be consumed by the poor, and 95 per cent upon luxuries and quasi luxuries is not well taken so far as this article of the bill is concerned. The cry is coming up to us from every part of this Nation for relief from the high cost of living; but here to-day, instead of giving them relief from the high cost of living, and instead of making provisions to prohibit the control of the high cost of food stuffs, it is proposed to place an additional tax of 10 per cent upon some of the real necessaries of life of every poor man in this country.

Mr. HELVERING. If we hurry this bill through, I understand from the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. LEVER] that the food-control bill is the very next bill to come before the House.

Mr. ALMON. It ought to have come before this. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the whole of Title XII, and when the proper time comes I intend to move to strike it out section by section. I believe that if any increase ought to be made in tariff duties, this bill ought to be referred back to the Committee on Ways and Means, and let them bring in a bill providing for an increase of customs duties upon certain articles, and not on the real necessities of the poor people at this time who can scarcely pay their living expenses under present conditions. Title X seems so unfair and so unlike every other part of this bill that I believe it ought to be rewritten, and if you want to make an increase in the customs duties let it be on luxuries and not upon the necessaries of life. [Applause.]

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina that I would like to have the Clerk read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois: Line 9, after the words "nitrate of soda," insert the words "guano, manures, and all substances used only for manure and for phosphates."

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the object of this amendment is to perfect the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina in what I think to be an essential feature, namely, that substances used for fertilizers may be allowed to come into this country free of duty. If there is anything that we want to do, it is to encourage the productivity of our soil. If this is, as many believe, just a start or initiation of a long war, we want to encourage the production of the soil; for, after all, gentlemen, this war must be fought or won according to our ability to produce things to keep our armies and the armies of the allies in the field. I am advised that this amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina, while primarily intended to apply only to munitions of war, does much more than that. I have investigated the reports of the Department of Commerce and I find that last year there was imported into this country $32,129,397 worth of nitrate of soda. This all came from Chile. Under this act $3,212,939, approximately, of revenue would be derived from this source.

Now, the gentleman from North Carolina says that this is to be used largely for munitions. I had a conversation with a gentleman down in the Ordnance Department to-day on this subject, and I ascertained that during the past year and at the present time about one-twentieth of the nitrate of soda brought into this country is used for the making of munitions. It takes about two and a half pounds of nitrate of soda to make one pound of explosive used for ordnance. So that nineteen-twentieths of the nitrate of soda is to-day used by the people in the United States for fertilizing their soil. Fortunately I live in a part of the country where we do not need to fertilize our soil with this sort of substance—in the fertile valley of the Mississippi. But I am told by the gentlemen who live in the South and East that in the cotton country and east of the Allegheny Mountains nitrate of soda is largely used.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I will.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I wish the gentleman would give me the name of the man who said that only one-twentieth of the nitrate of soda is used for explosives.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. He was a colonel or an officer in the office of the Chief of Ordnance.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I doubt whether one-twentieth is used for fertilizer.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. That was the opinion expressed by two gentlemen on the subject.

Mr. STEVENSON. Did the gentleman inform you that one ton of nitrate of soda of the character that is used in making explosives is equal to six and four-tenths of that used in the fertilizer?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. No.

Mr. STEVENSON. That is the fact.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I am told that a large proportion of the nitrate of soda is used in fertilizer.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I understand the gentleman is quoting some authority, but I dispute the authority.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I am not responsible for the authority. Now, I want to say if it is right to exempt from the operation of this act, and I think it is, nitrate of soda, it is also right to exempt from the operation of it all other fertilizing substances. I understand that there was imported into the country last year $6,327,000 worth of other fertilizers. They came from the Netherlands, from British India, and Canada, and other sources. Large quantities of bone meal and other substances came across the border—over $6,000,000 worth. It occurs to me that when we are working along these lines and trying to increase the productivity of the soil we ought to extend this exemption to all fertilizing substances. [Applause.]

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I want to say a few words in regard to the Lenroot amendment. The committee in reporting the 10 per cent horizontal increase in the tariff makes no exception. The bill places an additional 10 per cent rate on three or four thousand different articles and sugar is included. As I said the other day, the 10-cent provision in this bill is neither scientific nor adjusted in accordance with the real equities of the matter, but it is inserted in this bill only to raise $200,000,000 of revenue. The 10 per cent increase on any one of the three or four thousand articles will not produce as much revenue as the 10 per cent increase on sugar. The 10 per cent increase on sugar will raise $20,000,000 to put into the Federal Treasury. It is not a question of free sugar or higher tariff on sugar, but simply a question of getting $20,000,000 revenue into the Treasury.

Neither the beet-sugar industry nor the cane-sugar industry need the 10 per cent increase. These industries need no protection; they do not need a cent of tariff on sugar so far as they are concerned. The war itself is a better protection than any tariff they have ever had. Not only do they not need a penny of protection, but the fact is that we are exporting for the first time in the history of the Government hundreds of millions of pounds of sugar. We exported last year 1,576,000,000 pounds of sugar in competition with all the world. I want the House to understand that the 10 per cent is not a protection to anybody except the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call attention to the fact that in the amendment the gentleman from North Carolina has introduced and my amendment the only difference between us is the first proviso, and the House has unanimously consented to allow them to be separated. I exempt coal, guano, nitrates, cyanamid, and all articles used, just as the gentleman does in the separate amendment; they are all included in my exceptions.

I do not except print paper, but I do except wood pulp, so that when the question comes on the question of my substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina those who want to vote not to have the fertilizers increased and not to have the duties on coal will vote for my substitute instead of the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. KITCHIN. In other words, as I understand the question, the gentleman's amendment includes everything in my amendment and adds coal, guano, lime, nitrogen, and cyanamid?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, if sugar should be exempted from the 10 per cent tariff duty, and the revenue thereby lost sought to be regained by an excise tax or duty on sugar, would such an amendment be subject to the point of order that has been frequently made during the progress of this debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman would have to propound his parliamentary inquiry at the time the question arises.

Mr. REAVIS. There are a great many gentlemen who might feel inclined to vote against this tariff on sugar, but who would want to know that we were not decreasing the revenue derived from this bill by so doing.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair can hardly anticipate, but still in the opinion of the Chair it would be out of order.

Mr. REAVIS. It would be subject to the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I believe I understood the Chair to state that Mr. MANN had five minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

Mr. FORDNEY. Is it possible for anyone else to use that time? If so, I would like a minute or two. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state the situation at the desk before putting the motions. The gentleman from North Carolina has offered an amendment to which the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] offered an amendment. To the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] has offered a substitute, and to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Connecticut the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HUDDLESTON] has offered an amendment. The amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina will be perfected, and the vote will first be had, therefore, on the Lenroot amendment. The substitute will then be perfected, and then the vote will be on the substitute to the amendment. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, can we have the amendment again reported?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin to the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HOWARD and Mr. HUDDLESTON) there were—ayes 29, noes 130.

So the Lenroot amendment to the Kitchin amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] offers another amendment to the Kitchin amendment, which will be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 9 of the amendment, after the words "nitrate of soda," insert the words "guano, manures, and all substances used only for manure and crude phosphates."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the Graham amendment to the Kitchin amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois) there were—ayes 51, noes 76.

So the Graham amendment to the Kitchin amendment was rejected.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit an amendment to the Kitchin amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ALMON: Page 47, add to the Kitchin amendment: "Articles enumerated in paragraphs 506 and 530 of the act entitled 'An act to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government and for other purposes' approved October 3, 1913."

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman, that exempts hides, cattle, and leather.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for debate has been exhausted. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ALMON] to the Kitchin amendment.

The question was taken, and the Almon amendment to the Kitchin amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The vote now comes on the amendment to the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HUDDLESTON] to the substitute of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HUDDLESTON) there were—ayes 10, noes 100.

So the Huddleston amendment to the Hill substitute was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] for the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

Mr. HILL. With the unanimous consent that was granted that coffee and tea be voted on as separate propositions.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; and the vote will be on the first provision. The gentleman from Connecticut demands a division, and the Clerk will report the first division.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for half a minute, in order that I may ask the gentleman from Connecticut a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. As I understand it, the gentleman intends by his amendment to include all in my amendment and add coal, guano, lime, nitrogen, and cyanamid?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. KITCHIN. In your amendment you leave out print paper?

Mr. HILL. I do.

Mr. KITCHIN. You want print paper as it comes in under existing law?

Mr. HILL. It is a matter of a good deal of indifference to me. If the gentleman wants to amend my substitute, I shall not object.

Mr. KITCHIN. I will make this proposition, that if you will just add to my amendment here coal and fertilizers.

Mr. LONGWORTH. And personal belongings.

Mr. KITCHIN. That is already in mine. If you will just add to mine your proposition of coal and fertilizers and——

Mr. HILL. You have print paper in already?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. HILL. You add your coal, lime nitrogen——

Mr. KITCHIN. Fix it, and I accept yours and you accept mine. That is the way to do it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOWARD. The gentleman from North Carolina was tipsy, then, to make that trade.

Mr. KITCHIN. It gets all you want; all you are voting for.

Mr. HILL. Now, Mr. Chairman, I will ask unanimous consent to withdraw the first proviso, the other items being included now, all of them, in the amendment of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. POWERS. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask what is covered?

Mr. HILL. It covers those things on the free list precisely the same as the amendment of the chairman of the committee, except it would not include manures, lime nitrogen, and so forth, which mine did, and also coal, which mine did. Now he has taken them into his and I withdraw the first proviso.

Mr. POWERS. And that will leave coal on the free list?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. LANGLEY. What part of your amendment does it leave?

Mr. HILL. It leaves coffee and tea.

Mr. POWERS. I will have to object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. POWERS] objects. The Chair will have——

Mr. HILL. Does the gentleman from Kentucky object to my withdrawing the first proviso?

Mr. POWERS. On the coal proposition.

Mr. HILL. I will withdraw all except the coal proposition, and take a separate vote on that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] asks unanimous consent to withdraw everything in the first proviso of his amendment except that which relates to coal. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is now on so much of the proviso as relates to coal as an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

Mr. HILL. Which he has accepted.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. I would like for a great many reasons a vote on the second proviso, relating to tea and coffee.

Mr. KITCHIN. Wait until I get mine in now.

Now, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my first amendment and offer in its stead the following.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] asks unanimous consent to withdraw his original amendment and submit in lieu thereof an amendment which he sends to the Clerk's desk, and which the Clerk will report. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 47, line 24, after the period insert the following: "This section shall not apply to (a) gold or silver bullion; (b) coins of gold, silver, copper, or other metal; (c) printing paper admitted free of duty under paragraph 567 of section 1 of the act entitled 'An act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes,' approved October 3, 1913, as amended by the act of September 8, 1916; (d) ores of the platinum metals, and platinum, unmanufactured or in ingots, bars, plates, or sheets, wire, sponge, or scrap, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels, and parts thereof, composed of platinum for chemical uses; (e) nitrate of soda; (f) mechanical ground wood, pulp, chemical wood pulp, unbleached or bleached, and rag pulp; (h) articles specified in paragraphs 451 and 499 of such act of October 3, 1913."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut now offers what has been described as the second proviso as an amendment to this amendment.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the gentleman from North Carolina tell the committee what is in the paragraph referred to in the Underwood tariff bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. Fertilizers and coal, and platinum, and wood pulp, print paper, gold bullion and silver bullion, and coin.

Mr. FORDNEY. It does not include anything else? You refer in your amendment to the Underwood tariff law.

Mr. KITCHIN. As amended. These paragraphs were in the Underwood tariff law.

Mr. FORDNEY. You only include, without going through it, the articles that you have mentioned?

Mr. KITCHIN. It only includes the articles I have mentioned—gold and silver bullion, coin, and so forth, print paper admitted free of duty under paragraph 567 as amended——

Mr. FORDNEY. I will take the gentleman's word. All I wanted to know is that the paragraph referred to is the one mentioned by you.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. As to sections 451 and 499 and 642, what is included in (h) in that thing?

Mr. KITCHIN. Four hundred and fifty-one is coal, 499 is fertilizer, and 642 is personal effects.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Connecticut to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

The question was taken, and the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FESS. Have we just added 6 and 12 cents to tea and coffee?

The CHAIRMAN. No.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman, I submit an amendment to strike out the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not advised, but has any other gentleman an amendment at the desk relating to the Kitchin amendment?

Mr. KITCHIN. What is the amendment of the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL]?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it. It is what has been described by certain gentlemen as the second proviso.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to take any advantage of the House. The amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina was perfected by taking in the items which I had included and which he had not. I then withdrew that portion of the amendment. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] objected to coal being withdrawn, and a separate vote was taken on coal, and the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina was adopted, including coal. There then remained but one vote, and that was the vote on the second proviso, including tea and coffee.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, there was no vote on the Kitchin amendment.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the vote be taken over again. Of course, Mr. Chairman, there was no vote on the Kitchin amendment, because the amendment to the amendment had not been acted upon.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair submitted it to the committee as what was described as the second proviso.

Mr. HILL. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that that vote be taken over again.

Mr. KITCHIN. As I understand it now, the vote is on the gentleman's amendment adding tea and coffee.

Mr. HILL. To levy a duty on them.

Mr. KITCHIN. How much?

Mr. HILL. Six cents on coffee, and 12 cents on tea. That is one-half of what it is in England to-day.

Mr. KITCHIN. So that whoever votes for the gentleman's amendment votes to increase the tax on tea and coffee.

Mr. LANGLEY. In other words, it is about six times that which is carried in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Connecticut to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken, and the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it to amend the Kitchin amendment?

Mr. ALMON. It is to strike out the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina, as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment to the section, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SNELL: Amend section 1000 by adding another paragraph thereto, as follows:

"And this section shall not apply to the following-named articles, to wit:

"1. Any animal imported by a citizen of the United States, specially for breeding purposes, whether intended to be used by the importer himself or for sale for such purposes;

"2. Horses, mules, and asses straying across the boundary line into any foreign country, or driven across such boundary line by the owner for temporary pasturage purposes only, together with their offspring;

"3. Animals brought into the United States temporarily for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of breeding, exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural, polo, or racing association; but a bond shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; also teams of animals, including their harness and tackle, and the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit;

"4. Books, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, maps and charts imported by authority or for the use of the United States or for the use of the Library of Congress;

"5. Books, libraries, usual and reasonable furniture, and similar household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, all the foregoing if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale;

"6. Newspapers and periodicals; but the term 'periodicals' as herein used shall be understood to embrace only unbound or paper-covered publications issued within six months of the time of entry, devoted to current literature of the day, or containing current literature as a predominant feature, and issued regularly at stated periods, as weekly, monthly, or quarterly, and bearing the date of issue;

"7. Articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means; steel boxes, casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other containers or coverings of American manufacture exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks and staves when returned as barrels or boxes; also quicksilver flasks or bottles, iron or steel drums of either domestic or foreign manufacture, used for the shipment of acids, or other chemicals, which shall have been actually exported from the United States; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the exemption of bags from duty shall apply only to such domestic bags as may be imported by the exporter thereof, and if any such articles are subject to internal-revenue tax at the time of exportation, such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded; photographic dry plates or films of American manufacture (except moving-picture films), exposed abroad, whether developed or not, and films from moving-picture machines, light struck or otherwise damaged, or worn out, so as to be unsuitable for any other purpose than the recovery of the constituent materials, provided the basic films are of American manufacture, but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; articles exported from the United States for repairs;

"8. Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment in the actual possession of persons emigrating to the United States owned and used by them abroad; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for any other person or persons, or for sale, nor shall it be construed to include theatrical scenery, properties, and apparel; but such articles brought by proprietors or managers of theatrical exhibitions arriving from abroad, for temporary use by them in such exhibitions, and not for any other person, and not for sale, and which have been used by them abroad, shall be admitted free of duty under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in case application shall be made therefor;

"9. Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles, and similar personal effects of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall include only such articles as were actually owned by them and in their possession abroad at the time of or prior to their departure from a foreign country, and as are necessary and appropriate for the wear and use of such persons and are intended for such wear and use, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale."

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, that last article is already covered in the former amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]. I desire to withdraw that last section.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that will be done.

There was no objection.

Mr. SNELL. These are practically the articles I covered in the statement I made a little time ago of things that were simply overlooked by the committee, and it would simply be absurd and ridiculous to put them into the tariff law at the present time.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. SNELL. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is it the language of the existing tariff law, putting these articles on the free list?

Mr. SNELL. Yes; it was cut out of the law bodily.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, it was not the intention of the committee that these articles should have any tariff placed upon them.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Why not? How could it be otherwise, in view of the language put in the bill? How could the committee have any other intention in view?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Did the gentleman ever make any amendment to any bill that he ever brought in here?

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is not the question. The gentleman said the committee did not intend to put a tax on the articles enumerated.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Well, the gentleman will kindly be seated until he is recognized. [Laughter.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. I understood the gentleman had yielded. I was in order.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, as I stated, the committee did not intend to place any tariff on these articles. They were among the things the committee did not have any controversy about, and for that reason we failed to put them in the bill. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] stated that the language used is the same as that used in the present law. It is the same, with the exception of the proviso in the present law. Having exempted these articles, and having repealed the proviso, it is not necessary that the proviso should be inserted in this amendment.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the amendment by striking out the words "except moving-picture films," and I would like to ask the gentleman from New York, or any other gentleman who can answer the question, this: As I understand the purpose of this, it is to admit free into the United States the articles enumerated, and moving-picture films are excluded from that free admission.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. No. These are moving-picture films that have been collected in the United States and sent abroad for some reason or other and then permitted to come back again.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. That is just where the gentleman makes the big mistake of his life. That is just exactly what it does not do, and I want to tell you what it does do, because I have found out. If this is the old law as it stood, it enacts a great injustice.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It is the old law.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I can buy from the Eastman Kodak Co., as I have done, 5,000 feet of moving-picture film, or 10,000 feet if I can borrow enough money, and I can go to Panama or Porto Rico or to China or Japan or France with a moving-picture machine of my own, take the pictures myself, have nobody else touch them, bring them back to be developed in the United States, to use them myself, and I have got to pay a duty on that film. That is exactly what I have had to do, and it is wrong.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. No; the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. The gentleman can not advise me on that, because I have been up against it. Therefore I make the motion to strike out those words. As I understand it, if we strike out these words, picture plates made in the United States sent abroad and brought back will come in free. I admit that I may not have the language exactly correct, but that is my understanding.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It says:

Films for moving-picture machines, light struck or otherwise damaged or worn out, so as to be unsuitable for any other purpose than the recovery of the constituent materials, provided the basic films are of American manufacture.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. That is not the part to which I refer.

Mr. LENROOT. I have it here.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I shall be glad to have it read.

Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman undoubtedly refers to that part of paragraph 404 admitting free of duty dry plates and films of American manufacture, except moving-picture films.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. Yes. Why can we not take a film manufactured in America to Panama, expose it and bring it back, and have it come in free? If anybody has a reason to give why it should not, I should like to hear it, and I will yield time for that purpose. But the law to-day is that that can not be done, and it works a very great hardship upon a great many people who are not in the commercial moving-picture business at all.

Mr. MANN. To wipe this out would not help the situation any, would it? If you strike out this exemption it will simply make that provision apply to a lot of other things.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. My opinion is that if we strike out the exception, dry films would be construed to include moving-picture films, and therefore they would come in free.

Mr. LENROOT. They would not be free. They would be subject to the additional tax; that is all.

Mr. HILL. If you do not strike it out, you will have 10 per cent more duty to pay.

Mr. MANN. You will add 10 per cent if you do strike it out.

Mr. LENROOT. No; if you do not strike it out, it will be subject to the 10 per cent. If you do strike it out, it will be exempt.

Mr. MANN. These items are to pay the 10 per cent additional, and if you strike these words out of the amendment, it leaves them to pay the 10 per cent duty, because this is the exemption.

Mr. LENROOT. No; if the gentleman will yield, if the words "except moving-picture films" are included, they will not then come in with the exemption of the 10 per cent. If they are stricken out, they will.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. In other words, if they are stricken out, they will be free from this additional tax of 10 per cent.

Mr. LENROOT. That is as I understand it.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. If those words are stricken out, then moving-picture films made in the United States, taken abroad and exposed, can be brought back into this country to be developed and used without incurring this additional tax imposed by the bill. I sincerely trust that will be done.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER] offers an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL], striking out the words "except moving-picture films." The question is on the amendment.

The question being taken, the Chair announced that he was in doubt and ordered a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 68, noes 75.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois: Amend the amendment offered by Mr. SNELL by adding the following:

"Books and music, in raised print, used exclusively by the blind, and all text books used in schools and other educational institutions.

"Lifeboats and life-saving apparatus specially imported by societies and institutions incorporated or established to encourage the saving of human life.

"Miners' rescue appliances, designed for emergency use in mines where artificial breathing is necessary in the presence of poisonous gases, to aid in the saving of human life, and miners' safety lamps and parts, accessories, and appliances for cleaning, repairing, and operating all the foregoing.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM].

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from New York——

Mr. KITCHIN. Is this the Snell amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. This is the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL].

The question being taken, on a division there were—ayes 125, noes none.

Accordingly the amendment of Mr. SNELL was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ALMON] asked for recognition a moment ago to move to strike out.

Mr. ALMON. First I have an amendment to the Kitchin amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it a motion to strike out or an amendment to perfect?

Mr. ALMON. To perfect the amendment, to add to the Kitchin amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 47, add, in line 24 after the period, the following:

"Provided, that there shall not be levied, collected, and paid any duty or tax under the provisions of this section upon articles imported from foreign countries into the United States which are on the free list under the provisions of an act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, approved October 3, 1913."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On pages 47 and 48 strike out Title X and substitute the following:

"That a direct tax of $500,000,000 be, and is hereby, annually laid upon the United States and the same shall be, and is hereby, apportioned to the States and Territories and the District of Columbia, respectively, in proportion to population, as ascertained by the census enumeration of 1910. The said direct tax laid by this act shall be assessed and laid on the value of all land, exclusive and irrespective of the improvements thereon: Provided, That all lands belonging to the United States or to any State shall be exempted from assessment and taxation under this act: And provided further, That all land subject to taxation under this act shall be valued and assessed for the purpose of taxation at its full market value on the first Monday in March of each year: And provided further, That for purposes of taxation under this act every mortgage on real estate shall be treated and assessed as an interest in the land therein described; and the tax in the proportion of land value, represented by the amount due on the mortgage, shall in all cases be a primary charge against the mortgagee."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. RAINEY. I reserve a point of order.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order.

Mr. CROSSER. Will the gentleman withhold it?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I will withhold it for one minute.

Mr. CROSSER. I wish the gentleman would withhold it for three minutes.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I will make the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, after line 18, on page 47, all the rest of the paragraph and insert, "The rates of duty established in the tariff act of August 5, 1909, known as the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act."

Mr. GARLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer that amendment to strike out of this bill for war revenue the flat 10 per cent on all imports and insert the provisions of the Payne Tariff Act of 1909, for the reason that every one of the committee, on both sides of the House, has been all day on this particular title explaining that it is not right, telling us that it is an abortion, telling us, in the language of the committee:

Your committee realizes that this tax is not scientifically nor equitably adjusted and recommends the same only as a war tax. It is estimated that the additional revenue during a 12-month period from the tax imposed on this title will amount to $200,000,000.

Now, under the amendment that I have offered the Secretary of the Treasury shows that last year under the present tariff law there was collected $213,000,000. The statement was made on this floor, and it is correct, that the tariff law of last year on articles imported into the country was an average only of 9 per cent ad valorem. It was also shown that that was just half of the amount of the revenue derived from the tariff of 1909, which was an average of 18 per cent ad valorem on articles brought into this country last year. In other words, if this law was in effect now you would collect, taking last year as a basis, $213,000,000 more than you did last year, or a total for the year, in round numbers, of $426,000,000.

The report of the committee is that 10 per cent all around will collect $200,000,000 only. Some of the members of the committee state it will collect $500,000,000. There have been no hearings in the making up of this schedule whatever. The people who must pay this tax were not permitted to testify. It is a hit-and-miss proposition, and everyone says that it is only for the purpose of getting revenue and it is not equitable in any sense, but is offered "because we need the money." Here is a plan of getting money by substituting the other tariff law, of 1909, that hearings were held upon, that the committee reported upon, that was argued out here and shown to be an intelligent plan of collecting money, and that was in operation for four years and proved its value. For that reason I believe that this amendment should be adopted. This will bring the revenue desired and it will not put the burden on the poor man, which we are all trying to avoid; it will not put the burden on the necessities of life, and it will give the revenue, because you have the evidence that it did do so. [Applause.]

I know it is a protective measure and that is the reason, and the only reason, why the majority of the committee, being Democrats, will not permit this amendment to prevail, as it would be acknowledging the efficacy of a Republican principle. Even with the drums of war beating the call to arms and with the extremity of the necessity of raising funds to support the war staring us in the face the amendment, because only of its being a Republican measure in principle, will not be permitted to prevail. This bill is replete with inequalities, and I understand the Senate has been giving hearings to those whose business will be destroyed or crippled by the inadequacy of this bill, and yet this branch of Congress is the initiatory body on legislation pertaining to revenue, yet the cry of the distressed by this bill have been ignored and Members of Congress asked to vote for it "just because we need the money." [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. HASTINGS: At the end of section 1,000 page 47, strike out the period and insert a semicolon and add: "Provided, That this section shall not be effective longer than two years after June 30, after the conclusion of the war with Germany."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KINCHELOE: Page 47, line 21, after the word "specific," strike out the balance of said line and all of line 22, down to and including the words "ad valorem."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 47, line 14, strike out section 1000.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman, just one word in addition to what I said a few moments ago. I remember that the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means said in his remarks in general debate upon this bill that he and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY], ranking Republican member of the committee, were of the opinion that this title should not be incorporated in this bill, but had agreed to it in order that a unanimous report might be had; and I believe time will demonstrate that they were right at that time. We know not, and we have no means of knowing, what the expenses of this war are going to be. We know not, except approximately, what revenue will be raised by this bill; but I candidly believe that the provisions of the bill, with the exception of Title X, war customs duties, is as much as should be collected from the people of the United States at this time; and while I am satisfied that it will go through this House, I doubt very much whether Title X, war customs duties, will be a part of the law when it is approved by the President of the United States.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to oppose the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ALMON]. In doing so permit me to say that we should not forsake the time-honored system of raising revenue to support this Government in time of war. I am not of those who believe that whatever we have done in the glorious history of this country is wrong. I am not of those who would turn their backs on that system of revenue which has proved efficacious in every crisis of the country. I desire to call attention of the House to a few figures. In 1793, when our Treasury was empty, we collected $4,255,306.56 at our ports, and in internal revenue only $337,705.70. That was under Washington. The system was inaugurated and carried to success by the matchless Hamilton, who divides honor with the Father of his Country in the successful beginning our Republic made. Under Jefferson, in 1801, our total revenue was $12,945,455.95, of which there was collected at the ports $10,750,778.93 and only $1,048,033.43 in internal revenue. Eighty-three per cent under Jefferson was collected at the ports and 8 per cent in internal revenue.

The War of 1812 was fought under Madison, a Democratic President. The total amount of revenue collected was $14,340,709.95, of which $13,224,000 were customs dues and only $4,755 internal-revenue taxes, 92 per cent customs, 8 per cent all others, internal revenue being only three one-hundredths of 1 per cent.

In 1831, under President Jackson, the customs revenue was $21,922,000 and the internal revenue $12,160.62—88 per cent customs and only five one-hundredths of 1 per cent internal revenue.

In 1847, Polk's administration, during the Mexican War, total ordinary revenue $26,467,703.16. Of that sum $23,747,864.66, or 89 per cent, came from customs while only $375, or one fifteen-hundredth of 1 per cent, came from internal revenue.

In 1863, Lincoln's administration, Civil War period, total ordinary revenue $112,094,945.57. Customs, $69,059,642.40, or 61 per cent; internal revenue, $37,640,787.95, or 33 per cent. It was thus apportioned in the turning point of the great war for national existence.

In 1872, Grant's administration, total ordinary revenue, $374,106,867.56; customs, $216,370,286.77, or 57 per cent of total; and internal revenue, $130,642,177.72, or 34 per cent of total. This was good enough under the soldier-President administration.

In 1886, Cleveland's administration, total ordinary revenue, $336,439,727.06; customs, $192,905,023.44, or 57 per cent of total; internal revenue, $116,805,936.48, or 34 per cent of total. So it was under a constitutional Democratic President.

In 1898, McKinley's administration, Spanish-American War, total ordinary revenue, $405,321,335.20; customs, $149,575,062.35, or 36 per cent of total; internal revenue, $170,900,641.49, or 42 per cent of total. So we fought and won that glorious war.

In 1910, Taft's administration, total ordinary revenue, $675,511,715.02; customs, $333,683,445.03, or 49 per cent of total; internal revenue, $289,933,519.45, or 44 per cent of total.

In 1915, Wilson's administration, total ordinary revenue, $697,910,827.58; customs, $209,786,672.21, or 30 per cent of total; internal revenue, $415,669,646, or 59 per cent of total. Alas, the degeneracy of these recent years when "equal rights are accorded to some and special privileges to foreigners."

Estimated revenue, 1918—United States.

Total ordinary revenue	$1,235,550,000
This bill	1,800,000,000
Total	3,035,550,000
Estimated customs	230,000,000
This bill—customs	200,000,000
Total (or 14 per cent)	430,000,000

Should the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama prevail, the customs collections would amount to only 7 per cent of the total revenues for 1918.

Revenue receipts of United States, 1791 to 1916, both inclusive.

Customs	$12,854,895,422.24
Internal revenue	10,630,905,611.75
Total ordinary receipts	25,819,422,222.52

Customs, 49 per cent of total ordinary receipts.

Internal revenue, 41 per cent of total ordinary receipts.

Receipts of United States, 1791 to 1913, both inclusive.

Customs	$12,039,620,889.89
Internal	9,322,492,929.67
Total ordinary	23,607,173,675.74

Customs, 55 per cent of total ordinary receipts.

Internal revenue, 39 per cent of total ordinary receipts.

The foregoing was before it became fashionable for those in power to condemn as wrong the policies under which we won wars and triumphed in peace.

Receipts, 1914, 1915, and 1916.

Customs	$715,292,532.35
Internal	1,308,412,682.08
Total ordinary	2,212,248,546.78

Customs, 32 per cent of total ordinary receipts.

Internal revenue, 59 per cent of total ordinary receipts.

This bill of $1,800,000,000 total will produce in customs $200,000,000, or 11 per cent.

Great Britain—War finances.

Total revenue	$2,570,525,000
Customs (or 13 per cent)	352,895,000

Canada—War finances.

Total revenue	$232,000,000
Cutoms (or 58 per cent)	134,000,000

I refer to the revenue laws of England with less reverence than do some people. I tell what Britain is doing largely to meet the taste of those who like that kind of argument. I do not urge you to follow Britain. I call attention to the fact that Britain in her belated extremity is following what we have done, both in times of prosperity and stress.

It might be worth while to say that if we finance this war we must do it in the American way. We should not take all of our advice about filling our Treasury from those whose outstretched hands are so effective in emptying it. If this war is won, it will have to be won in an American way. As we now see it, it must be won by American means, men, munitions, and money. If the submarine menace is met, let us depend upon American genius and skill. Not upon the advice of those who seem to have failed.

If the American diplomats, headed by the superb Elihu Root, would bring Russia back into the war to do her part, let there not be too great dependence on the advice of those whose diplomacy let her out of the war. The old saw of "Let George do it" has failed, and allied Europe now says, "Let Sam do it."

On the day that we severed diplomatic relations with Germany Lord Northcliffe's London Times said that we could do our most effective service to the allied cause by financing Russia and Italy. To this has been added Britain, France, and Belgium. Joffre and Balfour no sooner touch our soil than they implore, between checks, the sending of troops to the continental trenches. We hear too much about military advice from across the waters about whether our armies should come from appeal or draft. The same advice is quoted when the question of sending a legion of volunteers led by the world's leading character now in private life, whose footsteps on the soil of France were worth 10,000 men. The objection to mature men on the Continent and the insistence that only those in the first decade of manhood shall offer themselves should not be commended.

So in financing our war let us do it in the American way. That the war may be fought in the American way and terminated in American victory after the manner of Americans.

It is needless for me to repeat that this tariff section does not meet my own protection-revenue views. But it is the best that the committee could agree upon. The sorely beset Christian on the soil of Syria who snatched the Saracen sword from his assailant did not wait to have it purged or blessed before he wielded it with terrible effect in defense of his comrades.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama to strike out the section.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1001. That upon all coffee or tea heretofore imported into the United States, which was held on May 10, 1917, or any day between such date and the day succeeding the day this act is passed by any person, corporation, partnership or association (except a retailer who does not sell coffee or tea at wholesale), and intended for sale, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax of 1 cent per pound in the case of coffee and of 2 cents per pound in the case of tea.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 48, strike out lines 1 to 9, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 1001. That upon all coffee or tea which on the day this act is passed is held by a retailer (who does not sell coffee or tea at wholesale) in a quantity in excess of 50 pounds in the case of tea and 200 pounds in the case of coffee, or by any other person, corporation, partnership or association in any quantity, and which is intended for sale, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax of 1 cent per pound in the case of coffee and of 2 cents per pound in the case of tea."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. KITCHIN. This amendment makes it clear that the tax will apply to all tea and coffee held when this act takes effect, except that the retailer is exempted to the extent of 50 pounds of tea and 200 pounds of coffee——

Mr. LONGWORTH. Held and intended for sale.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. And everybody pays a tax on all coffee and tea he has on hand and intended for sale at the time of the passage of this act, except the retailer is exempted from the payment of the tax on 50 pounds on tea and 200 pounds on coffee.

Mr. FARR. It affects the retailer who is a large importer?

Mr. KITCHIN. All coffees and teas held and intended for sale on the day this act passes will pay a tax of 1 cent per pound on coffee and 2 cents per pound on tea, except the retailer has an exemption of 50 pounds of tea and 200 pounds of coffee.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. What about those wholesalers who have made contracts for the delivery of coffee to retail dealers for resale and have not yet been able to make delivery?

Mr. KITCHIN. We have an amendment that we will propose later on providing that on all contracts for the sale of articles taxed in this bill, made before April 6, 1917, before the date of the declaration of war, the tax shall be paid by the purchaser instead of by the seller.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Now, that will partially relieve the situation, but this bill that proposes this tax was introduced on May 10, so I am informed, and a number of wholesale coffee roasters have made their contracts for delivery, at least in the neighborhood of May 10. These contracts were made on a certain basis. You undertake to put a tax on their coffee, and they will not only lose their profits but will sustain a considerable loss.

Mr. KITCHIN. Of all the tax laws we have ever had since the foundation of the Government this is the only one that has proposed to take care of existing contracts in this way so far as I have been able to inform myself. So that if we did exactly like the Congress has done in all other revenue legislation, including tariff legislation, we would not give any protection at all.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The only point of my objection is this, that we will take care of them until April 6, but it does not take care of these coffee roasters who have these contracts that were made after April 6.

Mr. KITCHIN. I am very sorry the gentleman was not in here yesterday. We discussed this April 6 provision. I am aware, however, that the gentleman was engaged in work with the Committee on Appropriations and did not hear my explanation with reference to this provision.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I have been in attendance at my subcommittee, and have not been able to attend as I would like to have done.

Mr. SNYDER. How far do they expect to carry these contracts that were made prior to April 6?

Mr. KITCHIN. The purchaser would have to pay it under the proposed amendment. They have never paid it before.

Mr. SNYDER. It seems to me a year——

Mr. KITCHIN. If you were selling any of these articles that are being——

Mr. SNYDER. I happen to be on the other side of it.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not think it ought to run more than a year.

Mr. FORDNEY. The object is to protect the coffee that is in the country now. It is estimated there are 5,000,000 pounds of coffee in this country in the hands of the wholesaler, a very large amount, as collateral of a loan to the Government of Brazil, and it is intended to catch that coffee.

Mr. KITCHIN. I may further state to the gentleman that he is correct; that we were informed that at least a year's supply in the last few months have been imported into this country in order to escape any possible import tax on coffee or tea.

Mr. LOBECK. The idea of this amendment was to protect the bill?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I have offered an amendment to strike out this paragraph. I desire to be heard now in support of that amendment, and also in opposition to the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN]. I am opposed to the whole proposition of any tax or tariff duty upon coffee and tea, because they are necessaries of life in practically every household in the land, rich and poor alike, and since there are so many more of the poor than there are of the rich it will result in imposing an added burden upon the vast majority of the people, who are now bearing too much. If this paragraph is stricken out it would result in deferring for a time, I hope, the rise in the price of these two necessaries of life which is certain to follow the enactment of this bill. There are other items of taxation in this bill too numerous to mention which will in one way and another be passed along to the consumer, and that means the poorer classes as a rule.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. Do you hold, then, that the tariff on any article will result in raising the price of that article?

Mr. LANGLEY. Undoubtedly, if it is a noncompeting article. If it is something that is not produced in this country and something that our people must have, of course it will raise the price to the consumer.

Mr. HASTINGS. I did not know that any gentleman on that side of the Chamber ever held that.

Mr. LANGLEY. The gentleman ought to know better than that, at least I think he ought. That is one of the cardinal doctrines of our protective theory.

Mr. Chairman, of course I realize that it is practically a waste of time to discuss these matters here, for everybody knows that regardless of the shape in which the bill passes the House it will be torn all to pieces in the Senate, so that it will be an entirely new bill when it comes back to us. But at the risk of being called a demagogue again I am going to say a few words now, while I have the opportunity, in behalf of the poorer classes of the people of this country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANGLEY. No; I will not. I am sorry, but my time is too limited. I would rather be called a demagogue because I plead for them than to be called a statesman, as some gentlemen are, and think too lightly of the burden that taxation imposes upon the poor and of the suffering that poverty brings to their homes. [Applause.]

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield to his colleague?

Mr. LANGLEY. I can not yield unless I can get additional time.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Just for one question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANGLEY. No; I can not. My friend will please excuse me. I have too much to say in the short time allotted me to spare him any of the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, so far as I am concerned, I have very little patience with the man who, when he needs votes, calls upon the boys to come to his rescue, and then when he gets here to Washington climbs up on a pedestal and draws the cloak of his imaginary superiority about him and forgets the fellows who made him what he is. [Applause.] And, Mr. Chairman, I have still less use for that other class that we sometimes find in legislative bodies who denounce their colleagues as demagogues and accuse them of talking only for home consumption and who prate about sacrificing their own political futures for the sake of their country, and immediately thereafter rush out into the park and hastily put their ears to the ground and listen intently for the echo of the applause which they, too, expect to elicit from an admiring constituency. [Applause.]

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. LANGLEY. No; I really can not. The gentleman knows that I have but little time. Mr. Chairman, all that these self-styled martyrs deserve—and all that they usually get in these days—is a scientific and undramatic bow from the White House. [Laughter and applause.] There has been a good deal of discussion here and elsewhere of the backwardness of the people in buying our war bonds, and some have contended that it is due to the doubt that business men feel about what is going to be done to them in the way of taxation. Of course, that is one of the reasons, but it is not the only one. Gentlemen, let us not deceive ourselves about the situation. I do not claim to possess any special knowledge of human nature and public opinion that other gentlemen do not possess, but, unless I am very much mistaken, there are many of you who do not correctly interpret the present temper of millions of our people and their lack of enthusiasm over this war. They think commercial greed helped to get us into it; that our merchant ships and our people should have been warned by our Government to keep out of the danger zone, and that if this had been done the war might have been avoided. Moreover, you have made conscripts of their boys and some one else is making nondescripts of their Congressmen, and I really do not think they relish this very much. [Applause.] But there is still another reason, and since no one else seems to want to do so, I am going to say what it is: You are preparing to send their boys to European battle fields without their consent, and they do not like that. [Applause.] This is not due to any lack of patriotism, for you know and I know that if any foreign enemy, however powerful, should dare to come to our shores for the avowed purpose of invading our country and our homes, 20,000,000 American men, loyal, brave, and true, would rise up and crush them. [Applause.] I think also that our President missed a great opportunity to help popularize this war when he refused to let Roosevelt take his volunteers to France. But all these things are behind us now.

Mr. Chairman, I see that my time has about expired, and I shall have to avail myself later of the privilege granted of extending my remarks in the RECORD in order to state more fully and in greater detail my position upon this bill and my objections to many of its inequitable provisions and erroneous principles that even an emergency war-tax measure should not embody. I want to say in a few words that I am unalterably opposed to putting such a heavy tax on the people now, when the productive power of the Nation is impaired, and necessarily becoming more so, and when the burden of living expenses is so great. To do so would necessarily result in further curtailment of production and correspondingly weaken our power to prosecute the war. I am opposed, as a general proposition, to imitating the methods of our enemies, and sometimes I fear that we have already gone too far in that direction. But in one respect, at least, I think we should imitate them, and that is by making future generations share the bulk of the money burden of this war. We ought not to bleed the present generation too much industrially while it is contributing its blood for the liberty and happiness of posterity. If we were justified in going into this war upon the far-reaching plans now proposed, it was upon grounds that mean as much, if not more, to future generations than to us, and I know they will be glad to share the larger part of the financial burden of it when they see, if they do, that the war meant as much to them as is now contended. Moreover, the country will be much greater and richer 50 years hence, and its people will be enjoying to the fullest the fruits of the sacrifices of to-day, and the burden of taxation will not fall so heavily upon them as it would upon our people now. It has not been shown to my satisfaction that we need immediately anything like all of the staggering sums that you are proposing to raise, but even if we do, I am utterly opposed to this pay-as-you-go policy for which some gentlemen are contending, with the added hardships that it will impose, in the face of the fact that our credit is the highest of any nation on earth and our borrowing capacity almost unlimited. I am in favor of stringing it out over a period of not less than 50 years. I think that 25 per cent to be raised by taxation now is the maximum limit to which we should go, and that the other 75 per cent should be raised by long-time bonds. I believe also that the 25 per cent to be raised by taxation should be levied chiefly upon those with large incomes, who get the greatest benefits from government, who are so well able to pay the tax, and who can do so without being deprived in the slightest of the comforts and even the luxuries of life, and that only a nominal part of it should be levied upon those who are really not able to bear any of it, for it has been our unbroken experience that in the end—and in spite of legislative efforts to prevent it—much of taxation is ultimately passed along to the poor.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask one minute more in order to read an original poem for the edification of some gentlemen.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to proceed for one minute longer.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have a minute and a half.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. HOWARD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. LANGLEY. It is in emulation of the example set by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] yesterday.

Mr. KINCHELOE. I am interested in the gentleman's amendment. Will the gentleman submit to a question?

Mr. LANGLEY. In a moment. The poem is entitled "Pass It Along to the Poor," sung to the tune of "The Moneyless Man."

Mr. VARE. Mr. Chairman, we can not hear the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

Mr. LANGLEY. I read:

PASS IT ALONG TO THE POOR.

(Sung to the tune of "The Moneyless Man.")

If we put a tax on most anything,
They'll pass it along to the poor,
Who don't seem to have their white alley show
That they had in the days of yore.

A penny a pound on coffee, you say,
Or two on a pound of tea,
Is not so much for a fellow to pay
Into Uncle Sam's Treasury.

[Laughter.]

But you seem to forget that nothing is left
When all he has earned is gone;
For the pawnbroker's shop is no place to go
When a fellow has nothing to pawn.

If he fails to purchase a liberty bond,
He's put in the "Slacker's Brigade";
But how can he buy when shorn of his cash,
With no one to render first aid?

[Applause.]

If he shoulders a gun and lays down his life,
He's put on the hero's roll;
But he hasn't a gambler's chance to get
On the Chesapeake Patrol.

[Laughter.]

If a fellow who knows what poverty is,
For him dares to lift a hand,
He's twitted and jeered by those in control,
And stamped with a demagogue's brand.

But, like Roosevelt, the brave, we will still suggest
What's best for the country's relief;
And if 'tis denied by the powers that be,
We'll salute the Commander in Chief.

[Applause and cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] if Representative MOORE did not write that poem?

Mr. LANGLEY. No; I wrote his. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. POWERS] is recognized.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I did not vote for the declaration of war between the United States and Germany. Possibly I do not therefore feel under quite the same obligation to vote for enormously large and manifestly unfair appropriations to carry on the war as others do who helped to get us into it.

WAR OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN AVOIDED.

I have believed all along and still believe that this war could have been and should have been avoided. In the last presidential campaign, when the Democrats, with trumpet tongues, were proclaiming that President Wilson ought to be reelected because he had "kept us out of war" and would continue to do so if permitted to remain in power, I said in public speeches at that time that if President Wilson should be reelected and should continue his weak, vacillating, unfair, and unneutral attitude and policy toward the nations engaged in war that it would be only a question of time when we would be involved in it. The time is now here. I believe that the attitude of this country should have been one of absolute neutrality. For years I have watched carefully the drift of affairs and have never let an opportunity pass to lend my mite toward avoiding a conflict. I believed it could honorably be done.

On March 7, 1916, I voted for the so-called McLemore resolution, which called upon the President of the United States to warn American citizens not to travel on the armed merchant ships of the nations engaged in war and to advise them that it was at their own risk should they do so. Technically our citizens had the right to travel upon armed merchant ships of the countries at war, but proper regard for the peace and welfare of this country ought to have restrained them from that course; and if they had no regard for the welfare of our country, I did not believe, and do not now believe, that this country should be plunged into war by reason of their reckless and foolhardy acts. I believe that our citizens, in so far as they could, should have remained at home until this world-weary war in Europe was over, and that if necessity or imperative duty demanded that they sail the seas, I believe that they ought to go, if at all possible, on American ships flying the American flag. In that event they would not likely have been molested.

I said in a speech on this floor some time ago:

We have the undoubted right to sail the high seas on unarmed belligerent merchant ships. Nobody denies it. We have the right to travel at will the public streets, roads, and thoroughfares of our land. Nobody disputes it. But if two families living on either side of some public highway become engaged in a deadly conflict, would it be the part of wisdom and good common sense to undertake to exercise the right of traveling along that particular highway at a time when the bullets were flying across it thick enough and fast enough to darken the sun? I do not think so. And while we have the right to sail at all times all parts of the high seas, there are times when we should not insist upon exercising every iota of every right we possess.

But a majority of the Members of this House apparently did not feel that way, for they refused by a vote of 276 to 142 to even consider the McLemore resolution. President Wilson indorsed that course. I do not believe that it is always best to exact the "pound of flesh." When the world is crazy and mad, and when there is no doubt about the recognition of our rights; when once it sobers up and comes to its senses, I believe, as I have said, that we ought to count the cost before insisting upon every technical right that may be ours.

ARMING AMERICAN SHIPS.

On March 1, 1917, when a bill was before the House authorizing the President of the United States not only to supply merchant ships with defensive arms so as to enable them to defend themselves against unlawful attack when engaged in peaceful pursuits upon the high seas but to also arm ships carrying munitions of war to the belligerents, I made a speech in behalf of, and voted for, the Cooper amendment to the bill, which was in these words:

Provided, That no ship of American registry, while armed in the manner aforesaid, shall carry a cargo consisting in whole or in part of arms or ammunition consigned to a belligerent country or to any citizen thereof.

I did not believe that the United States ought to be shipping arms and ammunition to the allies, or any other belligerent country, and I did what I could to keep Congress and the Government from committing that folly, but the Cooper amendment was voted down by a vote of 293 to 125. So the course was persisted in that carried us nearer and nearer to the brink of open hostilities. President Wilson urged upon Congress the passage of the law that gave him the authority to arm the ships, although many believed that he already had ample authority. Mr. KITCHIN, the Democratic leader of the House, in speaking of the bill before its passage, said:

If he (the President) wants to get this country into the European war and make the world one vast cataclysm of blood and slaughter, he can do so with or without the enactment of this bill. If he wants to keep this country out of the European war and make its blessings to shine out to mankind through the coming ages an example of the divine reward of peace, he can do so with or without the enactment of this bill. Clothed with the powers given by the Constitution, a President of the United States can, at his will, without let or hindrance of Congress, create such a situation which makes war the only alternative of the Nation.

If the President did not already possess such power and authority, as many believed he did, to create such a situation as would make war "the only alternative of this Nation," I did not want to clothe him with it. I believed and still believe that war should not be declared except upon the most impelling reasons; and that it was the bounden duty of the representatives of the people to count carefully the gains and costs to them before saddling on the people the fearful hardships and awful costs of war.

GEORGE WASHINGTON SAID WE SHOULD COUNT THE COST.

George Washington, our first and greatest President, adhered to the doctrine that it was the duty of our country to choose peace or war as our interests, guided by justice, might counsel.

WE HAVE HERETOFORE HAD PROVOCATION FOR WAR.

If it had been the purpose of our Government to go to war every time some of our well-known and well-recognized rights had been violated, ample provocations have been thrust upon us heretofore. In Mexico, for example, and within the last few years, our property has been destroyed, our men have been murdered, our women have been outraged, our flag spat upon and trampled in the dust, and yet our Government took no positive action, except to warn Americans living and staying in Mexico to leave their property and flee to this country for their lives.

On November 2, 1914, in flagrant and open violation of our well-known and well-recognized rights as a neutral nation to trade with other neutral nations, like Norway, Holland, Sweden, and so forth, Great Britain gave notice to us and the world

"that the whole of the North Sea must be considered a military area," and that "within this area merchant shipping of all kinds, traders of all countries, fishing craft, and other vessels will be exposed to the gravest dangers from mines it has been necessary to lay." The idea of England largely was to keep our food supplies, ammunition, and so forth from reaching Germany. Following this, on February 4, 1915, and as a retaliatory measure, so she claimed, the Imperial German Government declared a war zone around the British Isles and warned the world that those who enter the war zone would do it at their peril. The North Sea which Great Britain blockaded and the waters around England which Germany blockaded—I realize the word "blockaded" is not quite the proper one—are all parts of the high seas upon which all countries have the right to freely go unmolested and unafraid. The United States, in the main, respected Great Britain's blockade of the North Sea, although a few of our ships entered it, and two of them—the Carib and the Evelyn—were blown up by English mines and sunk with the loss of human life. The United States failed to respect the war zone declared by Germany around Great Britain. Our ships and people have continued to enter it, and Germany has without warning sunk our ships right and left and murdered our people by the wholesale. England, in the meantime, cut off our trade with the neutral world, seized our ships, pressed them into her own service, and rifled our mails at will.

THE CAUSE OF THE WAR.

Since the United States, at England's behest, had foregone her right to sail the North Sea and trade with neutral nations, I had believed that the real cause of war on our part, should we enter it, would be to enforce our right to enter the ports of Great Britain and her allies. Our purpose evidently in so doing would be to carry them food, clothing, arms, ammunitions, and to trade with them at our pleasure. Judging from the position taken by our Government, and especially that taken by President Wilson, I thought Germany's interference with that right constituted our real grievance. I believed our loss of life and property in trying to enforce this right would be the immediate and real cause of war, if war should come. But when Congress was called together in extraordinary session on April 2 to deal with the question of war or peace, apparently the reasons and motives of the United States, and especially those of President Wilson, in entering the war had been much enlarged, if not altogether changed; for President Wilson, in his message to Congress on April 2, after reviewing the many wrongs on the part of the German Government, said:

> Our motive will not be revenge or the victorious assertion of the physical might of the Nation, but only the vindication of right, of human right, of which we are only a single champion. * * * Our object is to vindicate the principles of peace and justice in the life of the world as against selfish and autocratic power and to set up amongst the really free and self-governed peoples of the world such a concert of purpose and of action as will henceforth insure the observance of those principles. * * * We are glad, now that we see the facts with no veil of false pretense about them to fight thus for the ultimate peace of the world and for the liberation of its peoples, the German peoples included, for the rights of nations great and small, and the privilege of men everywhere to choose their way of life and of obedience. The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted upon the tested foundations of political liberty. We have no selfish ends to serve. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when those rights have been made as secure as the faith and the freedom of nations can make them.

Later, on May 13, 1917, President Wilson, speaking on the occasion of the dedication of the Red Cross Building here in Washington, said:

> We have gone in with no special grievance of our own, because we have always said that we were the friends and servants of mankind. We look for no profit. We look for no advantage. We shall accept no advantage out of this war.

It is due the President to say that he later said he did not mean to apply that we had no grievance. That we do have a grievance nobody denies. In the President's appeal to the Nation he said that we had entered the grim and terrible war "for democracy and human rights."

If the President's message to Congress stated our real grievance, and truly set forth the cause of war, we have entered it largely to vindicate and make possible the democracy of the world; to overturn plutocracy and set up democracy among the nations across the seas. I do not believe that we should have entered this world conflict for the accomplishment of that end. We should leave free the various governments of the world to work out their own problems and live under whatever form of Government they may desire. But a majority of the Members of Congress shared the views entertained by the President, and at 3 o'clock at night, on April 5, by a vote of 373 to 50, the House declared that a state of war existed between the United States and the Imperial Government of Germany, and "all of the resources of the country" were pledged to bring the conflict to a successful termination.

THE $1,800,000,000 REVENUE BILL.

It is proposed to raise this year by direct taxation nearly $2,000,000,000 to meet the first year's expenses of the war. Since war has been declared and since we are now into it, I feel that it is my duty to support every reasonable measure for its successful prosecution, and I am sorry I can not see my way clear to support this bill.

I could not and did not vote for the selective draft or conscription bill, and I can not vote for this one. I did vote, though, to increase the pay of the soldiers, who had to go to war, to $30 per month, and that is not near enough. This revenue bill proceeds upon the wrong principle. It undertakes to make the present generation bear the costs of the war. That is not right. If this war benefits anybody much in this country except munition makers, money lenders, the purchasers of foreign bonds, and a few others—and I do not object to them paying—it will be the people of future generations and not those living in the present one; and the people of future generations and not those of the present one should be made to pay most of the money cost of this war.

Is it not enough for the present generation to do the fighting and suffer the pangs, heartaches, and hardships incident to this war? Is it not enough for the present generation to have its great industrial life disarranged, disorganized, and upset without taxing it to death to meet the expenses of the war as they are incurred? You can not kill the cow and still get the milk. You can not tax industries and people out of business and still expect incomes from them. Is it not enough for the present generation to fight the battles and bear the high cost of living? It can not do that and still have money to meet these exorbitant taxes. If a long time ago this Democratic administration had stopped the shipment of foodstuffs, arms, and ammunition to the allies, war might have been avoided, and certain it is that the food problem in this country would not be so grave and serious as it is to-day. People from my district write me that these are the hardest times they have ever experienced. Corn, for example, is selling there for $2.25 per bushel; flour, $16 to $18 per barrel; bacon, 30 cents to 40 cents per pound; and other things in proportion. I paid 60 cents this morning for a pound of butter. People in my district, many of them, are suffering as the result of the exorbitant prices they have to pay for the necessaries of life; yet you propose to unduly tax and burden them in this revenue bill.

As an example, Mr. Chairman, tea and coffee are set aside, and there is imposed upon those two articles a special tax over and above the articles taxed in section 1000. In other words, section 1000 imposed a duty of 10 per cent on articles imported into this country after this act becomes a law. On shoes, clothing, tea, coffee, and everything else that may be imported into this country after this act becomes a law there is a duty of 10 per cent imposed. But in the case of tea and coffee, the poor man's drink, you undertake to impose a duty upon the tea and coffee in this country on the 10th day of May and between the 10th of May and the time this act becomes a law. In other words, you are setting those two articles aside for special taxation over and above the 10 per cent duty imposed on the tea and coffee that comes to this country after this act becomes a law.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. POWERS. I yield.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The committee did that for the reason that they thought that if this last amendment was not imposed the importer or jobber who had this stock on hand would simply add the tax to his price because he could get it.

Mr. POWERS. For the same reason you ought to have put a tax on every other article now in this country and touched by this bill, because if your argument applies and is sound as to tea and coffee it is also sound as to everything else.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POWERS. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I will say to the gentleman that there is a very wide margin between the price the importer pays for tea and coffee and the price the consumer pays.

Mr. POWERS. I realize that; and it is not only true of tea and coffee but of other things, besides what is to hinder the importer from adding the 1 cent per pound on coffee and the 2 cents per pound on the tea now on hand and making the consumer pay it?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. POWERS. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. What does the gentleman think of the plan of putting a tax on tea and coffee and following it up with a law regulating food prices? Would it not be the proper thing to make them a monopoly right off and take possession of them by the Government?

Mr. POWERS. The question you present is a big one, and I am sorry my time will not permit me to go into it. There are so many unfair provisions in this law that I expect to cast my vote against it. Long-time bonds ought to be issued and a protective tariff laid to get the money to carry on this war and meet most of its expenses. The future generations—those most likely to be benefited—could pay off the bonds without material hardships. The tariff is the time-honored way of the Republican Party for raising revenue. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to strike out the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LANGLEY: Page 48, strike out lines 1 to 9, inclusive.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] to strike out the paragraph or section.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA: Page 48, line 1, after the word "tea," insert "or Postum, or any imitation of or substitute for coffee or tea"; and on line 8, after the word "coffee," insert "or any imitation of or substitute for coffee"; and on line 9, after the word "tea," insert "or any imitation of or substitute for tea"; "and there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid a tax of 1 cent per pound in the case of Postum or any imitation of or any substitute for coffee or tea by whatever name known, designated, or sold, which is manufactured, prepared, or made in the United States."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA].

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Has all time expired?

The CHAIRMAN. No; the gentleman from New York is entitled to five minutes.

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this close in six minutes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I will be through in three minutes.

Mr. KITCHIN. In five minutes, then.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I want five minutes on the title.

Mr. EMERSON. I would like one minute.

Mr. KITCHIN. Then I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Reserving the right to object, I have an amendment to strike out the entire paragraph. I should like to know whether this agreement would prevent that.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that to strike out section 101?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. No; the whole of Title X.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's motion will be in order after the perfecting amendments have been voted on.

Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania. Will the agreement preclude debate on amendments?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; the gentleman will be included.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Just a moment. What is the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that debate on this section and amendments thereto shall terminate in 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from North Carolina arrange the division of the 10 minutes?

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA] wants three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA] is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, my amendment covers all imitations or substitutes for coffee or tea. The bill provides for a tax on coffee and tea, which will increase the price and which will encourage the marketing of spurious imitations and dangerous substitutes. If you have these imitations on the market, you will not collect the revenue that you expect to collect under this bill. Moreover, we want to discourage some of the substitutes and imitations that are now on the market that contain drugs that are injurious to health. We do not want to have a Nation of chronic dyspeptics or drug addicts.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio come under the agreement as to time?

Mr. KITCHIN. One minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. EMERSON] is recognized for one minute.

Mr. EMERSON. I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. EMERSON: Page 48, line 13, after the word "paid," insert as a new section:

"The song 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is hereby declared to be the national anthem of the United States of America."

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, strange as it may seem——

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. EMERSON. On the point of order I want to say that I take my hat off to the nerve of the man who will stand up against my amendment and make a point of order against it.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all of Title X.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Chairman, I take it as axiomatic that the burdens of government should be borne in the same proportions as its benefits are shared. We start out with that principle. The principle is tempered by the qualification that the burdens of government must never exceed the citizen's ability to bear them, and by the further qualification that government must never cost the citizen more than it is worth to him. If a government costs more than it is worth, then it is not fit to exist. Of course, I do not refer wholly to financial and material benefits, but include all the benefits of government which may come to the citizen.

I have criticized this title in the bill as levying a per capita tax on the people of the United States. If the committee had sought to levy an equal tax upon every man in the United States, whether rich or poor, it could not have devised a more effective method to do so.

It seems to me that this title ought to be stricken out. Every member of the committee who has spoken on the question has admitted that this title in the bill is vicious and defective. It is the most unscientific title in the whole bill or any bill that has ever been presented to Congress touching the subject of taxation.

Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to occupy the time of the House in an extended discussion of the subject under consideration. I do want, in behalf of the constituency I have the honor to represent, to protest against the method that has been pursued in framing this important legislation and against its passage in the form it was reported to the House. Personally I have no sympathy with the contention that we should accept this bill as it came from the committee and expect the Senate to rewrite it in proper form. There is every reason why the House should prepare and pass a proper revenue bill, and the Constitution particularly delegates that power to us when it provides that all revenue measures must originate in the House. We are therefore shirking our duty if we shift the responsibility for framing revenue legislation upon the Senate. Never before in the Nation's history have we been confronted with such tremendous and far-reaching problems; never before has the world faced such a struggle. With millions of my fellow citizens I had earnestly hoped that the tragedy of our entrance in this holocaust might be averted. [Applause.] With unparalleled patience this Nation sought to find a way of maintaining an honorable neutrality and preserving the rights of her citizenship. History shows no more zealous advocate for world peace than this Nation has exemplified. Tolerant of injured rights to the last degree, nothing remained for us but to express in formal declaration that, war having been made upon us, we must defend our national honor against the aggression of those who would destroy our property and sacrifice the lives of our citizens on war's red altar. The first steps have been taken. We can not now retrace. The Nation has spoken; while the conflict lasts its word will not be recalled. Engaged as we are, we can not do otherwise than adequately prepare for every phase of future conflict or defense. The best political and social economy recognizes the importance of a preparation for peace as well as for war. Adequate military and naval protection is not necessarily a tendency toward militarism. In civil life we protect our homes and firesides against marauders. Shall we not, then, provide that protection for the country that symbolizes our common home? Pacifism that is supine, indifferent to assault, negligent, and colorless leads to national decadence.

The history of civilization is in nothing more clear than that the downfall of nations has been due to one of two causes, either through the overwrought ambition to dominate by force or power or else by the insidious sapping of the vital elements through luxury and overindulgence. A half century of peace has put into the background the qualities that find expression in the stir of war. Except for the brief event of the Spanish-American War which stirred our patriotic fervor, we have had no occasion to be aroused. Our isolation has been our defense. But to-day the Nation has a realization that the world little dreamed of a decade ago. Whatever may be the issues of the war, new adjustments must be made. New conditions must be met. New and perplexing problems will come up for solution. So long as we were isolated and our existence merely individual it was of little immediate consequence what our status of preparedness for war might be; but the moment we became a part of the concert of nations a new obligation forced itself upon us. And that obligation was a clarion call, a trumpet sound that calls in no uncertain tones for a preparation that in the near or remote future makes for permanent peace. [Applause.] Much as we deplore the necessity that has determined for us a prominent part in the world war, we have no alternative but to prosecute with vigor the tremendous task we have undertaken. Our lines of defense must be established. Men and munitions must be supplied. Our preparation shall be for ultimate peace as well as for the immediate war. A common country is awake to the issues. It will not count the cost, realizing, as it does, that the interests of democracy and humanity are at stake.

During the period leading to our declaration of war and since that time I have tried consistently to support the administration in its policies. I voted for all preparedness legislation in the Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth Congresses. I supported the armed-neutrality bill, the war declaration, the bond issue, the espionage bill, and the new Army bill just passed. I realize that we must raise a large sum of money to carry on the war, and am willing to vote for any reasonable revenue measure. I am not willing, however, at this time to inflict the additional taxes proposed in this bill upon our people. I am not convinced that it is necessary to do so at the present time, and believe that the bill should be amended so that instead of raising the proposed $1,800,000,000 by direct taxation a part of this money should be raised, if needed, by the sale of short-term bonds. We claim that this is a war for humanity; then, why should this generation bear more than its share of the expenses and burdens? Why should the business of to-day be required to bear the burdens of the war to the point of confiscation or destruction? If, as has been indicated, it will be necessary to raise more money within the next year, the time between this and the convening of Congress next December could be used to good advantage by the Ways and Means Committee in drafting a bill that will be more equitable and scientific than the measure now before the House. The most enthusiastic supporter of the present bill justifies it only on the ground that we need the money. I fully agree with the plan of increasing the tax on incomes and excess profits; but I am opposed at this time to levying taxes upon the necessities of life, which must be paid by the people of moderate means. With the present high cost of living the average wage earner has all he can do to earn a living without paying increased taxes.

I also favor prompt legislation to prevent food speculators from manipulating the price of food, and believe that drastic measures should be enacted to prevent same. [Applause.]

Speaking more specifically for my constituency, I wish to say that though many are bound by ties of kinship to the powers with which we are at war, yet they do not hesitate to declare their full-hearted allegiance to the land that has become their permanent home. They will not fail or falter in their loyalty, devotion, and support of every measure that stands for humanity. Few, if any, communities in any States have, regardless of State or National aid, inaugurated such extensive movements looking toward the conservation of every type of industry and activity so that we may be fully prepared for every emergency. The farmers are intensifying their activities to meet one of the most fundamental needs. Everywhere in my district there is enthusiastic response to the call of farm service. In the mining sections and in all lines of industrial achievement my people are eagerly making the best possible adjustments to render the most effective service. Financial institutions and agencies have given ungrudging support to every kind of endeavor. Having thus committed themselves to broad and liberal policies, they have every right to expect that this Congress will use its great powers in organizing the resources of men and material efficiently and economically; that partisanship shall play no part in the distribution of duties or honors; that the taxes necessary to support our cause shall be reasonably assessed and economically administered and that no narrow or selfish motives shall determine our votes in the difficult and exacting problems we shall be called upon to solve. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HUDDLESTON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HUDDLESTON) there were—ayes 9, noes 91.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1102. That where additional taxes are imposed by this act upon articles or commodities upon which the tax imposed by existing law has been paid, the person, corporation, partnership, or association required by this act to pay the tax shall make return under oath in such form and under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe. The tax shown to be due by such return shall be collected by assessment, or paid by stamp, as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may determine.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 49, strike out the words in lines 23 and 24, as follows: "Or paid by stamp, as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may determine," and insert the following: "and paid on or before November 1, 1917."

Mr. KITCHIN. That simply extends the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1104. That whoever fails to make any return required by this act or the regulations made under authority thereof within the time prescribed or who makes any false or fraudulent return, and whoever evades or attempts to evade any tax imposed by this act or fails to collect or truly to account for and pay over any such tax, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $1,000, or to imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, at the discretion of the court, and in addition thereto a penalty of double the tax evaded, or not collected, or accounted for and paid over, to be assessed and collected in the same manner as taxes are assessed and collected, in any case in which the punishment is not otherwise specifically provided.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 50, line 22, by adding, after the period in said line, the following:

"The Secretary of the Treasury, at a date to be fixed by him, shall cause a list of the individuals, citizens, or residents from whom has been collected an income tax under the provisions of this act to be posted in a public place in a post office in the county or other municipality designated by him, in which may be the home of such persons, the names of all those persons, residents thereof, coming under the income-tax provisions of this act: Provided, That a list of all those persons coming under the provisions of this act whose domicile may be beyond the boundaries of the United States shall be available for public inspection at the office of the Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, the object of the amendment must be apparent. A few days ago an amendment was proposed requiring the publicity of the income-tax returns made by individuals under this act. I thought that amendment was wise and voted for it. However, an overwhelming majority of the Members who voted upon the proposition were against the amendment, and it failed of adoption. I can see no good reason why that amendment should not have prevailed. It is exactly in line with the policy we apply throughout the country in our methods of taxation. Why should there be secrecy with regard to the property that any citizen of the country possesses, and why should we not follow the policy that is now followed of making the tax records of the various States available for public scrutiny? Indeed, this very publicity makes for honesty and prevents favoritism in the administration of the tax laws of the various States. I can see no valid reason why the same principle should not be applied to the income tax. However, the House has decreed otherwise.

The amendment that I propose falls far short of that which the House voted down last Friday. The amendment that I propose, if enacted into law, will require that there shall be published in each county of the United States in some post office of the county a list of those residents of the county whose income is so large that they are required to come within the provisions of the law. It is not required that any publicity shall be made of the returns set forth by each individual. All that is required is that the name of each individual paying an income tax shall be posted. It seems to me that all the objections that were urged against the amendment offered a few days ago can not apply to this proposition, because there is disclosed nothing of the business of the individual, nothing of his sources of income that Members thought objectionable, nothing other than the fact that he has an income large enough to come within the provisions of the law.

It is impossible for this Government to maintain a spy system that will be adequate to check up on the consciences, much less the conduct of the citizens of our country. We abhor a spy system anyway. Most of the people of this country are loyal and desire to bear their part of the burden of the responsibility of the Government. All of such people will gladly welcome whatever publicity may come from the fact that their names may be published for a few days as those paying income taxes in order that the dishonest or indifferent citizens may, through the absence of the publication of their names, be singled out by citizens of the respective communities and be required to pay the same taxes which their honest neighbors have already been asked to pay.

I do not believe in a law that puts a premium upon the rogue. I do not believe in a law that encourages the evasion of taxes. I do not believe in a law that is enforced largely by the conscience of the honest man and that fails of enforcement when applied to the dishonest, because there is no conscience there to direct a compliance with the law. For this reason I hope that my amendment may prevail.

Not many days ago you passed a law providing for the policy of the selective draft. You provided in that law that all male persons between the ages of 21 and 30 present themselves for and submit to registration under the provisions of the act. The law gave to the President the power to direct the persons before whom such appearance should be made, and the law further imposed a heavy penalty of punishment by imprisonment up to one year for any person who failed, of his own volition, to present himself for registration.

Gentlemen, we did not leave this matter to the conscience of the citizens generally of the country, and yet here is a matter that involves the life, maybe, of our people; that involves, at least, the possibility of military service. We saw at once that it would be impossible to have a host of secret service agents and spies go through the country and report an eligible list of men between the ages of 21 and 30. We saw at once that the only reasonable and practicable way by which this list could be prepared within a short time would be by requiring every male citizen between the ages indicated not to wait until he was called, but to go forward and to register that the country might know his age and his residence. And then, gentlemen, we left the element of notoriety in the community and the community conscience, as well as the conscience of the individual, to see to it that full registration is made. Aye, indeed, we have gone beyond this, and we have provided a penalty that means imprisonment upon the person who fails to respond.

Shall we say that as applied to the selective draft the provision is reasonable, but that as applied to the question of raising revenue the same measure of publicity is unreasonable? Gentlemen, I think not. If it is reasonable in the one instance it is reasonable in the other. Indeed, I am not sure that we should not go beyond what I have suggested in the amendment and provide not merely for the publication of the names of those who come under the provisions of the income-tax law, but that we should require, as we do in the selective-draft law, the citizens of the country to voluntarily come forward within certain dates and report to proper officers their income if it shall be in excess of the amount provided in the law. It will be seen that the amendment that I have introduced falls far short of being as extreme as that which you have already applied to the tax that you are making upon the manhood of the country.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman know the probable cost of the publication of the names of the individuals and the number of people that would be employed in order to post this information?

Mr. FRENCH. I have not made any estimate on that. I have not any figures on it, but the proposition is very analogous to the system we follow in all cities and counties of having our tax lists, our tax rolls, made up so that we can know something of what the individuals throughout the different counties are doing.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I desire to ask the gentleman how he would provide for that where there is a great number of income-tax payers. I like the idea, but would the gentleman have a book published and placed in a public building or post office?

Mr. FRENCH. I have no doubt that that would be the arrangement that the Secretary of the Treasury would provide. The language of the amendment is intended to be very liberal and to give a great deal of administrative discretion.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I am thinking of the large cities, and I would favor the amendment if it was practical, because I believe the financial slackers of the Nation should be conscripted.

Mr. FRENCH. I have no doubt that the financial slackers would more than pay the expense of this added institution. I would say this, that some days ago the House voted out a proposition to require publicity of incomes and the sources of incomes. It seemed in the judgment of the House that that was going too far. Here is a proposition that does not contemplate that at all, but merely contemplates that there shall be in each county a list of those who are amenable to the law, and then we will let public opinion assist the conscience of those who would otherwise be slackers in impelling them to come under the provisions of the law.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Would it not give it sufficient notoriety to put it in the Official Bulletin?

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. RAINEY. Does the gentleman know how much this would cost?

Mr. FRENCH. I have not an estimate of that.

Mr. RAINEY. It would cost $500,000; and how would the gentleman reach those income-tax payers by this method whose income is paid at the source entirely?

Mr. FRENCH. I have not attempted especially to reach them, and their taxes will be paid at the source.

Mr. O'SHAUNESSY. I wish to say to the gentleman from Illinois that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue said to me, and I presume to other Members of this body, that for every million dollars given to him he could collect, I think, ten or fifteen million dollars from those who were evading their honest taxes.

Mr. RAINEY. The administrative features are the difficult features connected with it.

Mr. FRENCH. Gentlemen, I am not much given to criticism of our country and our people. On the other hand, I believe in our country and I believe in the loyalty and devotion of most of the people who make up our country. In the public speaking that I do in my home State and in many of the States of this Union I preach the doctrine that our country is the best country on earth, that our people for the most part are governed by pure motives, and that our public officials have in their hearts for the most part the purpose of contributing their mite to making our country a still better place in which to live and making better the conditions of the average man and the average woman within our land. Mr. Chairman, this is a sort of hobby of mine and I believe that it is necessary that we preach this doctrine in order that we counteract honest mistakes and opinions of sincere men and the malicious falsehoods that are being circulated by irresponsible and erratic creatures who make their living by preying upon the credulity and passions of those who have confidence in them. But, Mr. Chairman, loyal as we may be to our country, and loyal as we may be to the rank and file of those who make up our citizenship, we can not be blind to the fact that here and there in small ways and in big ways there are some who fall below the standard of honor and loyalty and patriotism that is measured up to by the masses of our people. Indeed, were it not for such people government would be quite simple. It is to meet just such persons as these that we should pass the amendment that I have proposed.

Mr. Chairman, it seems incredible that there should be in our land any who look upon the misfortune of the world at this hour not as a misfortune, not as a calamity, but as a glorious opportunity. I have here a book entitled "The Book of Daniel Drew." You remember that Daniel Drew was one of that coterie of New York men engaged in high finance 50 years ago. He was one of the Tweed gang; he was one of the men that made fortunes out of the sorrows of our country in the days of the Civil War. He prepared and outlined a confession or statement of his life, which has been edited by Mr. B. W. White and published under the title that I have mentioned. On pages 160

to 162 we find remarkable statements Daniel Drew is quoted as having said:

What won't make butter must go into cheese. If the war must come, I decided to make it help my fortunes. And I must say that I soon began to wonder how I had been of two minds as to the advantage or disadvantage of a war. For I saw very quickly that the War of the Rebellion was going to be a money-maker for me. * * *

I found myelf getting really interested in the movements of armies and such-like things. * * *

In fact, we financial men organized a way for getting early news from the seat of war. A silver key will open any kind of a lock. We had on our pay roll sutlers, reporters, private soldiers, and officers even up to generals. Also, there were politicians in Washington, even a Congressman or two, whom we used to pay. * * *

We didn't dare make offers of this kind to Abe himself. Lincoln was an unpractical man, so far as making money went. All he thought about was to save the Union. * * *

I got to taking a great interest in the boys in blue. I came to look upon them as heroes. * * *

They were beating the waters, so to speak, and we in Wall Street were getting the fish. * * *

When Richmond was finally taken, I for one was sorry to have the war come to an end, so great had been my change of view toward the whole affair.

Gentlemen, listen again to those final words:

When Richmond was finally taken, I for one was sorry to have the war come to an end.

My God! Can it be possible that a human being can so debase himself by any process of reasoning or logic that he will regret to see the end come to so horrible a national affliction as the Civil War because he will have to look to new avenues of industry to make his profits? Gentlemen, I am glad to say that, for my part, I believe that Daniel Drews were few in those days. I believe that Daniel Drews are few in our land to-day, but I believe that it is the duty of this Congress to see to it that dishonest men shall pay the same tax that is required of the man who is honest in his private affairs and who is honest toward his government. There was a Judas among the 12, we are told, and here and there is the rascal who seeks to evade his responsibility, and to make him bear the duty that is imposed upon citizens generally is a part of the duty that this Congress must perform. I shall not take the time of the House to refer at length to the incomes that are being made by numerous concerns and individuals throughout the United States as a result of the havoc that has been going on during the last three years. In a statement that appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 18, prepared by the American committee on war finance, there is set forth the amazing profits, staggering almost in their immensity, that have been made by concerns within our own land at the expense of the blood and sorrows of Europe. I have been in favor of taxing the profits of these concerns for the maintenance of our Government. I have been in favor of taxing the large incomes of these men engaged especially in this line of business for the support of the administration at the present time; and, gentlemen, I believe that we should so enact this law as to leave no avenue open whereby any may escape through his lack of conscience the same responsibility that is imposed upon the honest citizen who will come forward and say, "Here is my income and here is my contribution to the Government under the laws that you have passed." Gentlemen, publicity will be the great stimulant to the conscience of some of these men, and discovery through the publicity will be the agency for reaching those who can not even be touched by publicity, but will be compelled to share the responsibility of the hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman make the point of order?

Mr. LONGWORTH. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Chairman, let us have the amendment again reported.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. FRENCH: Page 50, line 22, amend by adding, after the period in said line, the following:

"A list of all those names coming under the provisions of this act shall be available for public inspection at the office of the Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. MANN. When?

Mr. FRENCH. I would be very glad to carry into that the provision that was in the other amendment.

Mr. MANN. I am not asking about the other amendment; I am asking about this.

Mr. FRENCH. I should suppose that it would be at all times. They would be open to inspection at all times.

Mr. MANN. You make your return at present before the 1st of March. I suppose the gentleman has just received in the last few days his notice of his income tax from the local office. They have not got his name in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue here, and they will not have until they audit those accounts, and then it will take a large number of clerks quite a length of time to put the names in the volume where they belong. I do not care how many are made public, but it seems to me it would be just adding a very considerable expense with no possible benefit. It is a good deal like that provision of the Constitution that requires detailed statements of all expenses to be published. In the course of time the expenditures of the Government are so great that there is not a man, woman, or child in America who pretends to read even what is published upon the subject, and they do not publish what the Constitution requires, because we have set it aside in that respect, as in some other respects.

Mr. FRENCH. And I have no doubt that the publicity given in the counties of the United States to those who come under the tax laws stimulates immensely the collection of revenues throughout the country.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1106. That where the rate of tax imposed by this act, payable by stamps, is an increase over previously existing rates, stamps on hand in the collectors' offices and in the Bureau of Internal Revenue may continue to be used until the supply on hand is exhausted, but shall be sold and accounted for at the rates provided by this act, and assessment shall be made against manufacturers and other taxpayers having such stamps on hand on the day this act takes effect for the difference between the amount paid for such stamps and the tax due at the rates provided by this act.

Mr. KITCHIN. I have a committee amendment that I would like to offer.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, after line 12, insert the following:

"SEC. 1107. That (a) if any person, corporation, partnership, or association has prior to April 6, 1917, (1) made a bona fide contract with a dealer for the sale, after the tax takes effect, of any article (or, in the case of moving-picture films, such a contract with a dealer, exchange, or exhibitor for the sale or lease thereof) upon which a tax is imposed under Titles III, IV, VI, or X, or under subdivision 13 of Schedule A of Title VIII, or under this section, or (2) made a bona fide contract for the furnishing of advertising or advertising space, after the tax provided under section 504 or under this section takes effect, and (b) if such contract does not permit the adding of the whole of such tax to the amount to be paid under such contract, then the vendee or lessee shall, in lieu of the vendor or lessor, pay so much of such tax as is not so permitted to be added to the contract price.

"The taxes payable by the vendee or lessee under this section shall be paid to the vendor or lessor at the time the sale or lease is consummated, and collected, returned, and paid to the United States by such vendor or lessor in the same manner as provided in section 503.

"The term 'dealer' as used in this section includes a vendee who purchases any article with intent to use it in the manufacture or production of another article intended for sale."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the amendment propose to pass a tax on to the purchaser where the contract was made prior to the declaration of war and delivery occurs after the passage of this act?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is, if the contract had been made prior to the declaration of war?

Mr. KITCHIN. Prior to April 6.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If a contract for goods purchased in Canada or somewhere in Europe comes up against the new 10 per cent tariff, for instance, and delivery is not made until after the passage of this act, then the purchaser to whom the goods are delivered would pay that tax?

Mr. KITCHIN. He would pay the tax in cases of that kind.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will that apply also to those who were shipping by freight, and were unable to get cars, and had made contracts for freight delivery?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; for articles mentioned in Title III, beverages; Title IV, tobacco; Title VI, tax on manufactures.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. What I meant to ask now was in reference to the section which provides a 3 per cent tax on railroad freight rates. That will not pass?

Mr. KITCHIN. No.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] said if a contract was made prior to the declaration of war. That amendment has no more to do with the declaration of war than the man in the moon. It is April 6, 1917.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is the date of the American declaration of war.

Mr. MANN. Why do you not fix the time when this bill was introduced?

Mr. LEHLBACH. It was reported on May 9.

Mr. MANN. You did not expect people to stop doing business because there was a declaration of war?

Mr. KITCHIN. I really have no objection to that.

Mr. MANN. It would seem to me, under the circumstances, as no one can tell even yet, not even when the House passes the bill, what will be the rate, if the rate should be lowered on the final passage it would hardly be proper for the seller to now add that amount to his selling price. Why do you not put it the date of the passage of the bill?

Mr. KITCHIN. That would be the very thing we would want to avoid.

Mr. MANN. Why do you care? You get it from one or the other.

Mr. KITCHIN. I think it ought to be either the time of the declaration of war or the time of the introduction of the bill.

Mr. MANN. It is perfectly patent, it seems to me, if you fix it at the present date, the seller will now add that amount to the selling price, whereas the final rate may be less. Take the carbonic-acid gas case. A manufacturer now producing carbonic-acid gas will sell it for 4 or 5 cents a pound. If he has to pay 8 cents a pound on that from this date, or thinks he has, he will add that to his present contract price, whereas the final law may provide for 6 cents a pound.

Mr. KITCHIN. But if you have the law as you say, then every man before the law passes will begin to make his contracts, because generally the seller is more keen to the law and what is apt to be the law, and he will make his contracts, and then the purchaser will have to pay this tax.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman expects to have the purchaser pay it, anyhow.

Mr. KITCHIN. And then the purchaser will have to pay the tax, too. He will have to pay twice.

Mr. MANN. I hope the purchaser will not be as simple as that.

Mr. KITCHIN. I think the gentleman's suggestion to make it the date the bill was introduced is all right, because that gave notice that we were going to levy taxes.

Mr. SNYDER. Here is a letter from a lumberman, written to me, in which he says:

I should say not over one-third, probably not over 25 per cent of that, which will come over has been sold before we were acquainted with the fact that probably a 10 per cent ad valorem would be put on, so the Government would get this on a very large part of the lumber coming over.

Mr. KITCHIN. There is nobody injured, except I can imagine one class of people that will possibly be injured; but nobody can be injured substantially, for the reason that it puts it on the purchaser to pay the tax, so that he can recoup when he finally sells to the ultimate consumer.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I agree that nobody can be injured if the gentleman will make it May 10 or the date the bill was introduced.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Make it May the 9th.

Mr. KITCHIN. I move that we substitute for April 6, 1917, May 9, 1917.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Will the gentleman from North Carolina yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. But let us finish this, and then I want you to make your statement.

Mr. LEHLBACH. I want to make some more suggestions to you with reference to this.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment.

Mr. KITCHIN. We make it May 9, 1917, instead of April 6. May 9 is the date when we introduced the bill.

Mr. SNYDER. I do not see why it would not be just as proper to make it April 6, the day the war started. This evidence right here shows that these men evidently had notice that 10 per cent was going to be put on practically all of the lumber.

Mr. KITCHIN. There was not a man on the committee who knew we were going to put this into the tariff bill until that afternoon. It was a surprise and real shock to me. I make that motion, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The motion has been made,

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Has the gentleman from North Carolina any objection to placing after the word "article" the words "or commodity"? It is a question whether the term "article" is broad enough.

Mr. KITCHIN. That covers everything.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Is a quantity of gas an article?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes. It is covered. I guarantee that it covers that proposition.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Suppose a wholesaler has a contract already existing and the price has been fixed. Does this amendment permit him to put the addition upon the vendee instead of the vendor?

Mr. KITCHIN. Upon the vendee, provided he is a retailer or dealer, so that he can put it on the final purchaser. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Chairman, I have some amendments to offer. Is this a vote on the committee amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask for a vote on the committee amendment.

Mr. LEHLBACH. If a vote is going to be called for I will not offer my amendment.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman can offer it afterwards.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEHLBACH to the committee amendment: Page —, after the word "article," in line —, insert the following: "or commodity."

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw that amendment and offer another.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws his amendment and offers another. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEHLBACH to the committee amendment: After the word "delivery," in line —, strike out the comma and the words "after the tax takes effect."

Mr. KITCHIN. What line is this?

Mr. LEHLBACH. That is where the word "delivery" occurs the first time. I do not have the copy with me. It will read "sale and delivery after the tax takes effect."

Mr. KITCHIN. That is the very object, to protect them.

Mr. LEHLBACH. If the sale and delivery does not take place after the tax takes effect this entire bill does not affect it at all. If the sale or delivery is subject to the provisions of this law, it does not make the slightest bit of difference whether the contract itself in express terms provides for the sale and delivery after the act takes effect, or whether the practical exigencies of the case make the delivery take place after the act takes effect. In other words, here is a contract to furnish a man with a year's supply of something within a year. The contract does not specify that this sale or delivery must necessarily take place after the act takes effect. It can be called for now, although in the ordinary course of business it would not be called for until August or September. The way it is drawn now you make an express contract for sale and delivery after the act takes place. In other words, the sale and delivery in accordance with the terms of a contract must take place after the act takes place. It excludes contracts as to which the time is not specified.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, let us have a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Chairman, I withdrew the other amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to section 602. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] called my attention to it. I wish to offer an amendment there.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to return to section 602, on page 29, for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yesterday we struck out section 602 and section 603 and inserted a new section 602, as appears in the RECORD, at page 2868. I want to add, after that new section, these words: "Nothing in this section shall be construed to impose a tax upon articles sold or delivered prior to April 6, 1917, where the title is reserved in the vendor as security for the payment of the purchase money." I will change the date to May 9.

We should have added this provision to the section yesterday. It covers cases of this kind: Articles which are sold and already delivered and the title retained in the vendor for the balance of the purchase money. We do not want a man in such a case to pay any tax if the sale was really made before May 9. For instance, here is a piano manufacturer. He may have millions of dollars' worth of pianos out on the installment plan. A purchaser has it in his house and perhaps there remains due on his piano only $15, as the last installment. We did not intend to impose a tax on that purchaser. That is the reason for suggesting this amendment.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman really think we ought to fix that date—May 9?

Mr. KITCHIN. I rather think so.

Mr. MANN. The business will not cease between May 9 and, say, August 1, when this bill becomes a law. [Laughter.] I am not facetious. If this 5 per cent tax should go out in the course of the movement of this legislation through Congress, and from this date on the seller should add 5 per cent to the selling price, the purchaser would be mulct to that extent, and the Government would not get a cent out of it. If the seller does not add the 5 per cent, but takes his chances on it, he may be bankrupted if he has a large and thriving business and not much capital. Of course, that does not necessarily follow. But to pick out May 9, when nobody could, of course, contemplate that that would be the date selected, from May 9 up to the present time it would be a tax on the seller, but from the time this goes into effect, when word goes out to the manufacturers and sellers, if they add this to the price—and I suppose most pianos are sold on the installment plan—this tax would be added to the price which the purchaser paid, although the tax may not finally remain in the bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not think we ought to strike out May 9, 1917, and specify that this tax shall not apply to sales of the kind specified and made prior to the time this tax goes into effect. I think nineteen out of twenty of the vendors, as soon as this bill was reported, added this tax to their selling price and to all contracts for the future, because they said, "Why, Congress is going to impose that tax." They ought to pay the tax in such cases.

Mr. MANN. Yes; but why should they do it up to the present time? Nobody has had to pay the tax up to the present time. There is nothing in this bill that would require them to pay it unless this provision goes in.

Mr. KITCHIN. If you leave this provision out, then hundreds of people will have stocked up in anticipation of the passage of the law and we could not catch them at all.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no; not hundreds of persons. These instalment sales, if that is what the gentleman refers to, only apply to small purchasers, individual purchasers. It seems to me you ought not to go back of the present date at least, and I think the result will be that a whole lot of purchasers will pay to the seller this extra 5 per cent, and there is more than an even chance that the 5 per cent will be cut down before this bill becomes a law, or will be stricken out entirely.

Mr. KITCHIN. If you put it at the time the act takes effect every one who sells one of these articles from now on, or who has sold it from the time when this bill was reported, will have added the amount of the tax to his sales. I believe it is best to let it stay at May 9.

I ask unanimous consent that, in the substitute which was adopted for sections 602 and 603, and which appears at page 2868 of yesterday's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, the Clerk be authorized to change the date April 6 to May 9.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to modify that amendment as stated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will again report the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the new section 602, agreed to yesterday, and which appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 21, 1917, at page 2868, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"Nothing in this section shall be construed to impose a tax upon articles sold and delivered prior to May 9, 1917, where the title is reserved in the vendor as security for the payment of the purchase money."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE XII—POSTAL RATES.

SEC. 1200. That the rate of postage on all mail matter of the first class, except postal cards, shall hereafter be, in addition to the existing rate, 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof. Postal cards, and private mailing or post cards when complying with the requirements of existing law, shall be transmitted through the mails at 1 cent each in addition to the existing rate.

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and amendments thereto close in 30 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Amendments to section 1200?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] asks unanimous consent that all debate on this section and amendments thereto close in 30 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That section applies only to first-class matter.

Mr. KITCHIN. This applies only to first-class matter.

Mr. LARSEN. Reserving the right to object, I should like to know how you expect to divide that time? I should like to have a little time on this section myself.

Mr. KITCHIN. On the first section?

Mr. LARSEN. Yes.

Mr. KITCHIN. Does the gentleman want five minutes?

Mr. LARSEN. Yes; I would like five minutes.

Mr. SEARS. I would like seven minutes. I have two amendments.

Mr. KITCHIN. Let us make it 35 minutes, then.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph, section 1200, and all amendments thereto close in 35 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand the gentleman from North Carolina to specify who is to have the time?

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentlemen who desire to speak will give their names to the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to know, so as not to get them confused.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman from California, Mr. RANDALL, desires 5 minutes; the gentleman from Florida, Mr. SEARS, 7 minutes; the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. LARSEN, 5 minutes; the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. KING, 3 minutes; the gentleman from New York, Mr. PLATT, 5 minutes; the gentleman from New York, Mr. CHANDLER, 5 minutes; and I want 5 minutes.

Mr. COX. Reserving the right to object——

The CHAIRMAN. It is too late to object. The agreement has been made.

Mr. KITCHIN. I will leave the Chair to work it out, because several gentlemen who had not asked me for time when the request was made are asking for it now.

Mr. LARSEN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee assures us that the proposed measure is not entirely satisfactory to any member of his committee, and I doubt whether it meets the approval of any Member of the House. As for myself, it is in many respects very unsatisfactory, and at this time I feel sure it will not be so re-formed or amended as to meet my entire approval. But we should all realize that the bill is a war measure, drawn under war conditions, to meet an extraordinary demand imposed upon the American people as a result of our Nation being drawn into such an enormous conflict. Upon this principle, and perhaps this alone, can we justify such action.

It is certainly gratifying to be assured by the committee that the bill is not a political measure and that no political dissension crept into its consideration before the committee.

We all appreciate the liberality with which the Ways and Means Committee has received proposed amendments. I have voted for many and shall continue to vote for all others which will, in my opinion, tend to lift the financial burden of this war from the shoulders of the producer and the laboring classes, but I realize we can not relieve it all. In doing so, I am actuated by no unkind feeling toward capital or the wealthy classes. I wish we had more of both. But I feel that capital and especially accumulated fortunes should bear the financial burdens of this great struggle upon the principle of simple justice—that the strong should bear the burdens of the weak, and especially in times of national disaster and distress.

While the measure is not a political one, still we can not consent to pass without challenge certain statements of a sectional character made by the venerable and distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], and others for whom we entertain a very high regard. They, at least, seem to make the boasted claim that their section will contribute more to the war than other sections, especially the South. May I remind them that the willing sacrifice of blood can not be compared with paltry dollars? May I also suggest that many of their richest citizens gather toll from the South and other sections than their own, frequently reaping where they have not sown, and that, therefore, they should not attempt too strenuously to localize or boast of their financial contribution?

Georgia stands seventh in population and fourth in volunteering for Army service to date. There are only 120 persons in the United States who pay an income tax upon more than $1,000,000, and one of these is from Georgia. The per capita wealth of the State in 1916 was only $8.83, yet she paid the Government $556,838.41 income tax, so we must admit that she is doing her part.

The paragraph of this bill which provides for a 3-cent rate of postage on the first-class mail matter seems to me very unjust, and I trust it will be so amended as not to increase the present rates. This class of mail now nets to the Government something like $90,000,000 per year, and if the present rate should be increased to 3 cents the senders of first-class mail will be taxed about $160,000,000 more than is necessary. Yet by the terms of the bill the second-class mail, including magazines and newspapers, that have done so much to bring on this war will be taxed about $50,000,000 less than is necessary to pay expense of carriage.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LARSEN. My time is short.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. I am only asking for information. How much is being received under the present law? I think the gentleman stated at the outset about $90,000,000.

Mr. LARSEN. Yes; about $90,000,000, and the proposed section increasing it about $70,000,000 will make in all about $160,000,000, more than is necessary.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. The increase will be about $70,000,000?

Mr. LARSEN. Yes.

The press has often said since Congress has been in session, that every man is expected to do his part. I for one am willing to do it, but I want to see the press of this country, for one time, do its part also. [Applause.]

I am in favor of a much higher rate on second-class mail than the bill now provides, and will support the proposed rate only upon the theory that it is the highest that can be fixed at this time.

The Curtis Publishing Co., with its various publications—the Saturday Evening Post, the Ladies' Home Journal, the Country Gentleman, and others—costs this Government a loss of about $4,700,000 annually. The advertising in the May issue of the Ladies' Home Journal was worth to the company about $450,000, yet it was distributed by the Government at a loss of many thousands of dollars. The editor of this magazine, as well as the editor of the Saturday Evening Post, receives a salary of $100,000 per year. I do not know what the editor of the Country Gentleman gets but suppose it is enough, and I submit that it is an outrage on the American people that the Government must lose annually more than $4,000,000 for the accommodation of those millionaire grafters. An attempt to increase the rate of first-class postage is equally as unjust.

We can not justify a loss of $83,000,000 per year on second-class mail upon the theory that it is for the "dissemination of knowledge." Of course, that may be its intention, but the common people who pay the tax never reap the benefit. They pay the tax and then the press for all they get. If we propose to "disseminate" $83,000,000 worth of "knowledge" annually throughout this country, then let us give it to the common-school system. It will mean about $7 for each child within the school age, and the pro rata for such a State as Georgia would be at least $2,000,000 per year. [Applause.]

I can not conclude my remarks without reference to the proposed amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], which would levy a tax of $2.50 per bale on cotton.

I gave him credit for more fairness and impartiality than his attitude in the House during the past few days has shown. During this crucial period, when party lines have been obliterated and Members of all parties are working hand in hand with one thought and purpose, is no time for the introduction of discriminating legislation. No well-informed, fair-minded man will sanction such narrow and prejudiced statesmanship. He should not pride himself upon the introduction of such indefensible class legislation, for it can only serve as unimpeachable evidence of his shortsighted vision and lack of appreciation of the conditions and environments of the southern farmer and the needs of the Nation. It is a reflection upon his ability as a statesman, and does even less credit to his sense of right and justice. This is no time for the peanut politician to wave the red flag of sectional dissension, and his own constituents will not approve of his unworthy efforts.

The people have not forgotten the attitude of the gentleman in 1914 when the farmers, especially of the South, were being bound and gagged, as it were, by unconscionable speculators. Cotton was then selling for less than 6 cents per pound, and the farmers of the South lost on the one crop alone more than $400,000,000. If he were unwilling to help the farmers when these nefarious pirates of speculation were robbing them, why should we wonder that he would seek to saddle this unjust burden upon the humble producer now? I was not a Member of the House then, but I am here now, and can be depended upon to defend their interests to the best of my ability.

May the country excuse his indiscretion as a youthful folly, knowing that his kind is rapidly diminishing and will soon wither and fade from the earth. His amendment will rest only in the archives of oblivion.

Few of us, I dare say, can comprehend the importance of the cotton industry as applied to the business conditions of this country. Not many people are aware that the ebb and flow of the financial conditions of the entire world can be attributed, either in periods of prosperity or in adverse conditions, to the production of a large or small crop of the fleecy staple. Especially is this true of to-day, when the major portion of the world is engaged in a fearful slaughter of human beings. This state of affairs has naturally tended to place a greater stress upon the worth of cotton and it is to-day utilized in more different ways than any other known commodity. The clothing and feeding of our own Army and Nation, as well as the duty we owe our allies to feed and clothe them, depends largely upon the production of cotton. It means, besides shelter for the vast armies of the universe, clothing for all humanity, sails for our ships, tires for automobiles, food for our live stock and for our own table; it means medicated cotton and millions of bandages for the wounded; it also means the fiber for powder and glycerin for the high explosives. Without it our munition plants would be useless assets. It is, Mr. Speaker, the one plant to which the entire world, whether at peace or at war, can depend for almost everything; the lone plant upon which the Government must look for the solution of our food problem and for bringing this war to a successful conclusion. To prove this, I respectfully refer you to any newspaper of consequence or magazine in this country. Its pages are filled up with appeals to the farmer, appeals to the patriotism to double all former records of production of farm products. Never in the history of the world have the nations been more dependent upon the humble farmer. Untold activities for intensified farming are everywhere apparent, and broad-thinking men of the country are trying to encourage it rather than to stifle and oppress it. [Applause.]

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I send to the Clerk's desk two amendments, which I ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 14, after the figures "1,200," strike out all of lines 14, 15, 16, and 17, down to the word "postal."

Second amendment: Page 51, line 17, after the word "thereof," insert: "provided the rate of postage on letters of the first class shall be 2 cents an ounce or fraction thereof."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment I wish to offer.

The CHAIRMAN. The debate upon this first paragraph and all amendments thereto is limited to 35 minutes, and that time has been apportioned to certain Members who asked for it.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. I understood that the gentleman was allowed seven minutes to introduce his amendments and seven minutes assigned to him, and he proposes to discuss his amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct, and the gentleman from Illinois will be permitted to offer his amendment later.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, the first amendment I have offered, if passed by this House, will leave the postage exactly as it is now on first-class mail matter. In other words, first-class mail matter will be carried at 2 cents an ounce or fraction thereof. I have introduced the amendment because I believe it should be adopted, and I trust this House will agree to it. There is to my mind no excuse for placing upon the people an additional burden of 1 cent an ounce or fractional part thereof when the first-class mail has for past years been paying to this Government $80,000,000 more than it costs the Government to transport it. In talking to a gentleman the other day, he said that this was the most equitable tax in the bill, that everybody paid it, and that he and I were once poor, but that now we could pay it. I want to say that I remember the days when I was poor, and that is why I do not care to place an additional tax on the people, when already they are paying $80,000,000 more than it costs the service they are receiving.

But there can be no defense to the proposition for placing this extra stamp on the first-class mail. I will not take up any more of your time on that proposition, because in my endeavor to keep the freight rates lowered so the cost of food will not be increased to the poor people of this country this House by a small vote voted it down by a small majority, evidently desiring to tax everybody to the limit.

It does not amount to much, my friends, but to my mind when you pay 1 cent extra on first-class mail that is now paying this enormous profit to the Government you are taking from the poor laboring man and the washwomen and the poorer class of people throughout the country who are not able to buy periodicals the widow's mite to place upon the letter that they may write to their relatives and thus place an extra burden on them, even though that burden may be small. [Applause.]

Mr. McKENZIE. Is it not a fact that this provision hits the large mail-order houses harder than anyone else?

Mr. SEARS. It does not; because the mail-order houses send out their catalogues under the third-class postage, 2 ounces for 1 cent. Their business is carried to the people, and the people in writing back to the mail-order houses will have to place 3 cents on the letters, and the people pay the freight and the mail-order houses, as usual, escape.

I want to say, briefly, that it looks as though it is useless to appeal to this House unless a lobby is back of a proposition. No one has raised his voice, no one has talked for keeping the first-class mail at the present rate, and not a single Member of this House has received a telegram to keep it at that rate; but I believe, if the past is any criterion, when we reach the next section in this bill, where telegrams have been numerous from our friends back home, we will hear loud talking and much proclaiming that the rate should not be increased; but the poor people in your district, my colleagues, who can not reach you in that way, who know nothing of this tax, and therefore have not wired you, will have raised no sentiment for my amendment. But I want to tell you it is not necessary for them to wire me, and I do not believe it is necessary to wire you. By this no criticism is intended for anyone who writes or wires me. On the contrary, I invite and welcome information.

As to the second amendment, it provides that in cities where there are city carriers the rate shall be 2 cents on first-class matter for each ounce or fractional part thereof. I want to say to the Ways and Means Committee that if you do not adopt that amendment you will lose in revenue. The merchant in your home town, where there is a city carrier, can go out and get a boy, where he has two or three thousand letters to deliver, and deliver those letters at a price less than 2 cents each, and therefore the merchant will not use the mail and will not pay 3 cents on those letters. They are going to use the cheapest way to deliver the mail; and you will find that in these small cities they will employ carriers to deliver their mail once a month instead of delivering same through the post office. If they do use the mails, however, as I stated, that tax will go upon the people that patronize the local grocery or the dry-goods man in your district, and I trust, at least, that the House will remember the people back home that sent them to Congress and not compel them to place a 3-cent stamp on first-class mail matter where it is a drop letter. Again I say to you, you can not defend the placing of 3-cent postage upon first-class mail where it does not go out of your home town and only place a postage of 3 cents on mail that goes from New York to California. I believe that instead of raising the $70,000,000, as estimated by the Committee on Ways and Means, if you do not adopt the second amendment I have offered, the Ways and Means Committee will reduce the postage on drop letters by ten fo fifteen million dollars throughout the country. I sincerely trust this amendment will also pass.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida has expired. The question is on the first amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the second amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 17, after the word "thereof" insert:
"Provided, That the rate of postage on drop letters of the first class shall be 2 cents an ounce or fraction thereof."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida, which the Clerk has just reported.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SEARS) there were—ayes 47, noes 21.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chair appointed Mr. RAINEY and Mr. SEARS to act as tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 80, noes 45.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, strike out section 1200 as amended.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I might favor this section in the bill if it would do what the Committee on Ways and Means estimates that it will do. The fact of the matter is that it defeats itself, not by what the section contains but what it fails to tell. I hold in my hand a postal card which pays the Government the highest revenue of any mail matter which goes through the mail—$1.68 a pound, as it requires 168 postal cards to weigh a pound.

Mr. LARSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDALL. Yes.

Mr. LARSEN. Has the gentleman ever had any practical experience in postal matters in connection with the post office?

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I do not like to refer to personal experience, but I will say that I had 15 years of employment in the Postal Service, the major portion of that time being on the greatest railway mail train in the United States—the New York and San Francisco fast mail. A postal card weighs 168 cards to the pound, and it pays a revenue of $1.68 a pound to the Government, and if the section proposed by the committee is adopted the postal card will disappear from the mail service entirely, with the exception of a few souvenir post cards. The reason for that is that postal cards in this day are used almost exclusively for advertising purposes. No one writes a letter on a postal card.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Oh, yes.

Mr. RANDALL. Nobody in my district. There may be a few in the gentleman's district. When the rate becomes 2 cents on postal cards and the rate on third-class matter remains at 1 cent for each 2 ounces, the third-class matter will take all of the business that the postal card is doing. The third-class mail matter technically pays the Government 8 cents a pound, or 1 cent for each 2 ounces, but in practice the third-class matter pays the Government about 12 cents a pound.

So that when you transfer the business from the postal card at $1.68 a pound the Government will get 12 cents a pound in third-class matter instead of in postal cards.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDALL. I will.

Mr. MANN. Does it take 168 postal cards?

Mr. RANDALL. It takes 156 to 168, according to the weight of stock they use. Sometimes they use a lighter stock, and until recently they printed a small-size postal card.

Mr. SWITZER. Does it cost the Government anything for the card?

Mr. RANDALL. Very little. In comparison with the revenue, $1.68 a pound, the original cost of the postal card is insignificant.

Mr. RAKER. What does it cost the Government to carry the unsealed letters?

Mr. RANDALL. They can not determine it any more exactly than you can determine the cost of first class.

Mr. RAKER. You have already stated the Government gets so much for handling these postal cards. About what is the rate on the mail matter that is not sealed?

Mr. RANDALL. One cent for each 2 ounces, or 8 cents a pound.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Does the law require a postal card to be of any particular size? I have seen them two or three times as large as the one the gentleman has. Probably 50 of them would make a pound.

Mr. RANDALL. Where the card is used for a written message it must correspond in size with the regular postal card issued by the Government. When it is used for printed matter it can be of any size.

Mr. BATHRICK. The gentleman figures that the postal card pays $1.68, and that if we pay 2 cents on a postal card as the rate for carrying it, the postal cards would entirely disappear in preference to the third-class matter of an unsealed envelope?

Mr. RANDALL. Yes.

Mr. BATHRICK. Has the gentleman taken into account the actual cost of the envelope, the cost of sealing it and getting it ready?

Mr. RANDALL. It is not sealed.

Mr. BATHRICK. Or the cost of putting the contents in it?

Mr. RANDALL. Yes. It will cost very much less than $10 a thousand, which would be the extra cost of the 2-cent postal cards.

Mr. BATHRICK. It will cost $3 a thousand for the envelope, whatever the printed matter is on the inside. If he goes out into the market to-day with the high price of printing it will cost him $3 a thousand for the envelopes.

Mr. MANN. It depends on the quality of the envelopes.

Mr. BATHRICK. I have been in the printing business a good many years, and I know what I am talking about.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL] has expired.

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have the time allotted to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from California may have the time allotted to him. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BATHRICK. Has the gentleman figured on the cost of a circular that will be put inside?

Mr. RANDALL. The cost of a circular of the size I have here, including the envelope, would probably be $3 a thousand for both, and the extra cost on the postal card alone is $10. The argument in favor of the circular is that you can use 2 ounces at the same rate.

I want to say a word in regard to the first-class matter. I have found it my experience, and I think it is the experience of every man who has been in the mail service, that one-half of all the letters in the mail service which are carried under a 2-cent stamp are advertising letters. The reason for that is that business houses prefer to pay 100 per cent difference in cost over the cost of a circular in order to send a sealed advertising letter. Now, when you add another 1 cent to the cost of sending a sealed advertisement, 50 or 75 per cent of your advertisers will go back to the third-class matter under the 1-cent cover, and mail 3,000 pieces where they will mail only 1,000 at the 3-cent rate proposed.

Mr. MEEKER. Will the gentleman state to the committee in his experience, both in the service and in the investigation of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, if this will work actually against the revenue of the Government?

Mr. RANDALL. It will actually work against the revenue of the Government. I understand the Post Office Department is against this whole section.

Mr. DOWELL. It is true the Government is now making a profit on the first-class mail, is it not?

Mr. RANDALL. Undoubtedly.

Mr. DOWELL. Does the gentleman know what amount the Government is providing by the first-class mail?

Mr. RANDALL. The Government sells about $170,000,000 worth of 2-cent stamps and 2-cent stamped envelopes and $10,000,000 worth of postal cards. Of course, four times as many postal cards go through the mail that are manufactured by private concerns—that is, with the stamp placed upon them—as are manufactured by the Government.

Mr. DOWELL. Can the gentleman state the profits the Government makes on this mail?

Mr. RANDALL. The first-class matter pays practically all the expense; that is, the first-class and third-class matter pay the cost of running the department.

Mr. LUNN. I want to understand whether the postal authorities are against this action.

Mr. RANDALL. I understand the Postmaster General is against this section.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, this section is drawn to yield $70,000,000 a year, and the Post Office Department does not deny that proposition.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. In a moment. First-class mail, of course, pays its way and yields a large surplus, and the position taken by the Post Office Department is that it ought not to be the subject of revenue for this Government. But this clause will yield the revenue we claim it will yield.

In Canada they recently advanced their first-class postal rate 50 per cent. Not long ago a communication was received from Canada to the effect that that change had resulted in a diminution of mail, but I understand that the latest communication from the post-office department of Canada shows that their increase of 50 per cent in the charge for carrying the first-class mail has resulted in an increase of revenue of 40 per cent.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes; in just one moment. Now, the gentleman's argument with reference to driving post cards out of the mails does not seem to me to be tenable, because on these circulars which appear in unsealed envelopes it is not possible or permissible, as I understand under the postal laws, to write messages. Souvenir postal cards and other postal cards that are not souvenir postal cards are used to a very considerable degree for the purpose of conveying private messages, and it is not at all reasonable to suppose that the use of postal cards for this purpose will end with the adoption of this rate, because, as I have said, you can not write your messages on circulars and send them in unsealed envelopes under the law as it stands now, as I understand it, and under the law as it will be if this amendment is adopted.

Mr. RANDALL. I will state to the gentleman that in a telegram received by me from the Postmaster General of Canada, he says that the volume of mail in Canada is not affected to any extent by the increase of rate. Does the gentleman say it has been increased?

Mr. RAINEY. My statement was that the volume of mail was, in the first instance, decreased on account of the imposition by Canada of these increased rates; but the latest information received from the Postmaster General of Canada is to the effect that the increase of 50 per cent in the rate there has resulted in a 40 per cent increase in the income produced from that class of mail. That is the statement I made. The telegram just read by the gentleman from California shows that now there is no diminution in the volume of mail.

Mr. RANDALL. Does the gentleman know that there is a third-class rate in effect in Canada?

Mr. RAINEY. I am not informed as to that.

Mr. RANDALL. Does not the gentleman believe that a third-class rate would affect the first-class rate if they had one?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the amendment of the gentleman from California was to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. GORDON. Can we not have that reported?

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, a great many Members have gone home to their dinners with the understanding that there would be no vote on these amendments until 35 minutes. Is the 35 minutes up now?

The CHAIRMAN. The 35 minutes' time is not up yet. There are 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask my colleague in charge of the bill about one matter. This bill provides that hereafter the rate of postage shall be increased?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. That would mean immediately after the bill is signed by the President and becomes a law.

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. That would mean the next morning?

Mr. RAINEY. I think that is true; yes, sir.

Mr. MANN. It seems to me we ought to say "10 days after the passage of this act."

Mr. RAINEY. I have no objection to that amendment.

Mr. MANN. Because it will be impossible the next morning, and nobody can take advantage of the prospective passage of the act.

Mr. RAINEY. I think my colleague is right about that.

Mr. MANN. Then I will offer an amendment, Mr. Chairman, on page 51, line 15, to strike out the word "hereafter" and insert in lieu thereof the words "10 days after the passage of this act."

Mr. RAINEY. I accept the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MANN: Page 51, line 15, strike out the word "hereafter" and insert in lieu thereof the words "10 days after the passage of this act."

Mr. RAINEY. I accept that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. PLATT. I do not care to use it on this section, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. This is an amendment to strike out.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. Chairman, is there any time yet remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. There is no time unallotted.

Mr. CARAWAY. I thought this gentleman had time.

The CHAIRMAN. It was allotted to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. CARAWAY. He yielded it back.

Mr. ROWE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. I would like to speak to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can have no time, but he can offer an amendment. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. ROWE].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROWE: At the end of the amendment adopted, which was offered by Mr. SEARS, add: "to be delivered within the area of any city" so that as amended the matter will read: Page 51, line 17, after the word "thereof," insert "Provided, The rate of postage on drop letters of the first class shall be 2 cents an ounce or fraction thereof, to be delivered within the area of any city."

Mr. ROWE. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has no time. The Chair thinks the time can not be transferred without unanimous consent. The Chair understands that the time was allotted to individuals.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no. A memorandum was made of individuals, but the time was not allotted. The time was only fixed to close debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from New York, Mr. ROWE, in the time of the gentleman from New York, Mr. PLATT.

Mr. ROWE. Mr. Chairman, there is only one city among the larger cities that I know of in this country that has a large number of postal districts, postal areas, and that city happens to be the city of New York. I think there are something like 20 postal areas within the limits of the city of New York, while Chicago and Boston and Philadelphia and the other large cities have each only a single area.

Mr. MANN. They have different post offices in the city of New York.

Mr. ROWE. We have different post offices and different postmasters. So that in all the large cities except New York a drop letter would go anywhere within the limits of the city; but in New York City it would only go within the limits of the district where it was mailed, unless we adopt an amendment of this kind.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Would the gentleman's amendment exclude letters intended for delivery on free rural mail routes out of these towns?

Mr. ROWE. I do not know about that.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. The gentleman's amendment clearly would exclude drop letters from being carried over the rural mail routes leading out of the town where the drop letter was mailed.

Mr. ROWE. They could not be anyway.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. I do not know about that.

Mr. ROWE. Mr. Chairman, in the city of New York we shall be working at a very great disadvantage, and will be the only city in the Union limited in this way, while all the other cities having very large areas will be able to have their drop letters delivered within their city limits. The postal area of Boston, for instance, is more than twice the area of the city of Boston. All that we ask is that within the limits of the city of New York a drop letter shall be delivered for the 2-cent postage.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman from New York yield for a question?

Mr. ROWE. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GORDON. Would your amendment exclude a city which has adjacent cities that are a part of its postal district?

Mr. ROWE. It would not.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. Yes; it would.

Mr. GORDON. I think it would.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. They would only go within the limits of the city.

Mr. ROWE. There are 20 different postmasters and post offices in the city of New York.

Mr. GORDON. Adjoining the city of Cleveland is the city of East Cleveland, which is a separate municipality, and on the west is the city of Lakewood; but East Cleveland and Lakewood are both within the postal jurisdiction of the Cleveland Post Office.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. But they are not within the corporate limits of the city of Cleveland.

Mr. ROWE. Does the gentleman want to have drop letters delivered within the postal-district area?

Mr. GORDON. Within the postal-district area, so that a drop letter mailed in Cleveland can be delivered in East Cleveland or Lakewood, which is under the jurisdiction of the Cleveland post office.

Mr. BENJAMIN L. FAIRCHILD. The situation which the gentleman describes is equally true of Boston.

Mr. PLATT. Under the present law a drop letter, so called, can only be mailed in a city where there are no letter carriers.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Chairman, I should like to have the gentleman repeat what he said about Boston. The Boston Representatives sitting over here have seen some New York Representatives talking together over there, and we heard the name of Boston mentioned, but we do not know just what was said about our city. We would like to have it repeated.

Mr. ROWE. I shall be glad to repeat it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I intend to take only a minute. In the time allotted to me I wish to have a telegram read. It comes from the board of trade of the most prosperous and largest city in the eastern section of my State. Some of these men are of large means; others are poor, but all are patriotic.

The CHAIRMAN. The telegram will be read in the time of the gentleman from Arkansas.

The Clerk read as follows:

HELENA, ARK., May 7, 1917.

Hon. T. H. CARAWAY,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

The full directorate of the Helena Board of Trade has unanimously instructed me as president to request you to lend your unqualified support to the proposed increase in postal rates as a means of securing revenue needed by our country in the gigantic struggle in which we are now involved, and we trust there will be nothing to prevent you doing so.

JOS. L. SOLOMON, President.
S. A. MCGUIRE, Secretary.

[Applause.]

Mr. CARAWAY. I can not quite appreciate the attitude of gentlemen who insist that postal rates within city limits shall be 2 cents an ounce, but are entirely willing that the cost of communication between other parts of the country shall be 3 cents. It is a peculiar viewpoint, as it appeals to me, that gentlemen, simply because they live in cities, think they are entitled to some special consideration from this Government that is not accorded to other people. You do comparatively little business by mail with each other in your own city. The mail matter that is transmitted from the country to the cities is very largely the source of the business done in the cities. It strikes me it is dangerously near unpatriotic to insist that because you live in a city you should be granted this special privilege as demanded in the amendment now pending, and that the burdens of this war which should be borne by the entire country are to be shifted according to your vote to the people who live in the country and the smaller towns. I had this telegram from the city of Helena read because I think it displays a commendable spirit upon the part of those people, who are willing that their country shall raise revenue to carry on this war and they are willing to pay their part of it. I want to place it in the RECORD as a tribute to their patriotism. [Applause.] Some one must pay while others fight, and I am glad my people are willing to do their full part of both. The amendment should be defeated.

I also wish to present the following letters which I have received. They show that business men of that section all recognize their obligation and do not wish to shirk this burden:

BANK OF COMMERCE,
Earle, Ark., May 12, 1917.

Hon. T. H. CARAWAY, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CARAWAY: I feel so much interested in our national affairs that I am prompted to write you as to the feeling of our people and your friends in this district.

While we have not felt the effects of war, except for the high prices, I know that conditions will be bad and we will have to suffer many hardships if this war continues for any length of time, more interest is being taken to raise something to sustain ourselves and try to live at home and not be dependent on the other sections of the United States for food, but some steps should be taken by the Government to regulate the price of food and commodities that affect the people so much.

We will be willing to accept a maximum price on our cotton and cotton seed if the Government will make a maximum price on what we must buy. If the Government must have the war tax, we stand ready to pay our part and will not flinch, and if incomes are to be taxed on lower schedules we are ready to pay our assessments. What we are required to do we are ready and willing to do it now.

* * * * * * *

Of course these matters may cover a larger scope than we at home are able to comprehend, and I am merely conveying to you our local feeling in these matters.

With best wishes, I remain,
Yours, very truly,

H. A. MORRISON.

PARAGOULD, ARK., May 10, 1917.

Hon. T. H. CARAWAY,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR FRIEND: Your favor of the 14th instant to hand.

I must compliment you on your promptness in answering letters. It is really wonderful how you manage to answer the letters you receive. I understand that you can not do everything, and you know if a "fellow goes to a dance he must pay the fidler," and I know also that if there is war we have to pay the expense of war. Certainly every institution will try to shirk some of the taxes, but as far as I am concerned I do not begrudge anything I pay out if we come out victorious.

If you can use me in any way at all, will be too willing to do anything in my power. If I was a few years younger, I assure you I would try and enter active service, but as I am 64 years of age I am willing to do anything to help the cause all I can, and please do not hesitate to give me any kind of work you think I can do.

Yours, truly, A. BERTIG.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. ROWE].

Mr. ROWE. Mr. Chairman, may I substitute another amendment for that? I think this new amendment will obviate the difficulty of the gentlemen from Boston.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Modified amendment offered by Mr. ROWE: After the word "thereof" in the Sears amendment insert:

"Provided, That where there are several postal areas within any city it shall include the area of the city."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. ROWE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ROWE) there were—ayes 36, noes 99.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from California to strike out the paragraph.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RANDALL) there were—ayes 52, noes 86.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following as a new section.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 51, line 20, after section 1200, insert a new section as follows:

"SEC. 1201. On and after June 1, 1917, all publications devoted exclusively to mail-order advertising shall be classified as third-class mail matter."

Mr. MANN. I reserve a point of order on that.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, many persons have the opinion held by the gentleman from Florida who stated a moment ago that mail-order catalogues are in the third-class mail classification. The fact is that they are not third-class mail, but are classified in parcel post. Within three years there has been a change of classification involving a decrease of millions of dollars in the postal receipts of this country. Mr. Chairman, there is a conflict between the retail selling of goods by local merchants and the control of selling by a few great out-of-town corporations, which grows more bitter every year. Mail-order houses in a few great cities are growing by leaps and bounds at the expense of the local dealers. Huge fortunes are being piled up by the members of the few concerns, while the merchants in the towns see their business lessened year by year. Naturally, a conflict follows such a situation and it is a conflict between the country at large and certain big cities, which are centers of the mail-order business. It has become a conflict between local bread and butter and extra dividends for Chicago millionaires.

The mail-order business is a plant of comparatively recent growth in American business life. The first one was established by A. Montgomery Ward in 1872 in Minneapolis. He started out as buying agent for a number of local organizations of the Patrons of Husbandry, but the buying proved unsatisfactory in a few years to the farmers concerned. Then Ward began to carry a stock from which orders were filled, establishing his business in Chicago.

In 1913, testifying before the parcel post committee of the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, C. Thorne, vice president and general manager, stated that the capital stock of the company amounted to $500,000, par value $100, with book value of $2,500. The company had then an accumulated surplus of $9,000,000.

A new branch has been opened in New York City, with an initial investment of $5,000,000.

It is declared that the business this year will amount to more than $75,000,000.

The largest concern of the kind is that of Sears, Roebuck & Co., of Chicago. It was incorporated in Illinois in 1895 and reorganized and incorporated in New York in 1906. It has a capital stock of $60,000,000, half of which has been issued as stock dividends since 1911.

The New York American of February 28 of this year contains a report from this company, stating that sales for the year 1916 amounted to $146,838,000, a gain of 30 per cent over the preceding year. It continues:

Sales for 1917 are certain to exceed $200,000,000. Net earnings on this volume of business will probably be in excess of $20,000,000.

It is estimated that the total amount of business done by mail-order houses will amount in a single year to half a billion dollars.

Now, the question arises as to the reason for this immense increase in the business done by these companies. It is without doubt due to the fact that they have spread broadcast the idea that they can sell cheaper than the local merchant.

The fact is that the destruction of local established business is due in large measure to the special privileges enjoyed by the mail-order houses.

They are exempt from taxation almost entirely, since no State or municipality can tax a business which uses the mails exclusively. The town may tax agents and peddlers who do a transient business, and they do so on the principle that the local merchants with whom they compete pays taxes for local purposes and are entitled to some protection. But the mail-order houses can not be reached in that manner.

Many lines of business are taxed in this revenue measure. They will be burdened to a great degree and the excuse given with uniform reiteration is that the Government needs the money. Then, why exempt these mail-order houses, which are making more net profit in proportion to investment than almost any other business in America?

But exemption from taxation is but one privilege enjoyed by these mail-order houses. The Government, through its Post Office Department, gives them a princely subsidy.

These concerns depend upon huge catalogues, which are sent out twice each year. The average weight is 4 pounds. Formerly these catalogues were classified as third-class matter and required 32 cents in postage each. But some time ago the Department changed the classification so that these advertising catalogues could be sent as books, at a charge of 8 cents each for the first zone. The result was that the mail-order houses promptly arranged it so that every catalogue could be sent out at first-zone rates. This was done by shipping the catalogues to central points by freight and mailing them through the surrounding country.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. I will.

Mr. MONDELL. How much difference is there between the rate in the gentleman's amendment and the present rate?

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. These standard-size catalogues would pay 32 cents, where now they pay 8 cents. That is a difference of 24 cents on a catalogue. The manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co. says that they send out 7,000,000 catalogues in the spring and 7,000,000 in the fall. The first year that the classification went into effect it was stated that the Chicago post office lost $3,000,000 in postal receipts.

Mr. MANN. That is not so.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. I can not vouch for its accuracy, but I have seen it so stated.

When it is realized that one concern alone claims to send out 7,000,000 catalogues at a single time the amount of this subsidy can be better understood. It means a clear gain of a million and a half dollars on a single issue.

But there is still another angle to this matter, which works against the local merchant directly. The minimum weight entitled to be mailed as books shuts out 99 per cent of the catalogues of local firms who might desire to compete on that basis with the mail-order houses. The average dealer can not prepare or use a catalogue of such a size and, as a result, is compelled to pay the full rate of third-class matter.

Every consideration of justice demands the adoption of this amendment I have offered. It should be made a part of this bill, because the Government needs revenue from such sources as will work least harm and derangement. The mail-order houses would suffer not at all in vital way and, in fact, would be but paying a slight return for valuable privileges accorded them by the Government.

It should be adopted also because it will in some degree equalize competition between these great houses and the local dealer. No one denies that any citizen has a right to spend his money where he pleases, but it is fair to demand that a foreign firm shall not be permitted to handicap the home dealer unjustly in the race for patronage.

Here is a chance to get revenue and equalize, in some degree at least, the competition between the home dealer and the owners of the centralized mail-order houses in Chicago and New York. That is the idea of this amendment, and I submit that whether it is technically in order or not it should be adopted and written into this bill, which is changing postal rates in order to secure increased revenues. It means a square deal to all concerned without injury or injustice to any concern. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, third-class mail matter is not included in parcel-post rates under the law. That is, when the parcel-post law was passed, third-class mail matter was expressly excluded. That was partly for the purpose of preventing mail-order houses sending their catalogues at the low rates fixed by parcel post. I do not know the reason which actuated the present Postmaster General under the general authority included in the parcel-post law—which, by the way, no one in Congress suspected existed until it was put into effect—I do not know the reason which actuated the Postmaster General under that general authority to change the rating of third-class matter, including mail-order catalogues and putting them in the parcel-post rates, but I assume that he had some reason for it. Before that was done on a number of occasions the matter was brought before the House on a proposition to change the third-class matter to parcel post. I was roundly denounced in many parts of the country because I objected to unanimous consent to consideration of a proposition of that character. Subsequently the Postmaster General, without any act of Congress, by virtue of the authority which he claimed to have, covered the third-class matter into the parcel post. I am not willing, without the House knowing anything about it, to change the ruling of the Postmaster General, when that ruling has been in effect for several years and the Post Office Committee has recommended no legislation to change it. I suspect that one reason was that if the mail-order catalogues were not given the parcel-post privilege they would be sent by express by much cheaper rates than the old third-class rate was.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. But I do not know what the reason was. I know that if anyone here knows, he has not disclosed his information. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I wanted to say that great quantities of catalogues are sent from Chicago to Seattle by freight and then distributed in the first and second zones from that center.

Mr. MANN. I think that is the habit. I do not approve of it.

Mr. SIEGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. SIEGEL. On May 15 Assistant Postmaster General Koons wrote to me that the change in the classification of books, which includes catalogues, from third-class matter to parcel post has enabled the department to handle this class of mail with a profit, which before was handled at a loss. I made particular inquiry at the time on account of certain statements being made here by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEENERSON] regarding Sears, Roebuck & Co., and the answer was that the department is now making the profit instead of a loss, as when it was handled in the other way.

Mr. MANN. I thought when we passed the parcel-post law that mail-order catalogues ought to remain in the third class and pay third-class rates. I saw to it that that provision stood in the bill—at least, I did my share, and it was considerable—and I do not think we ought to change now. I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that this is not germane to the bill. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, we have a committee substitute for section 1201, which we have now reached, and I ask that the substitute be read instead of the section.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to perfect the original text.

Mr. STEENERSON. I have an amendment that I desire to offer.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. It will only take a moment to read the section. I suggest that we read the section, and then have the committee amendment reported in full—that covers a number of sections—and have the right to offer amendments to the original text and to the committee substitute.

Mr. RAINEY. That will be satisfactory.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the Clerk will read the original text.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1201. That on and after June 1, 1917, the zone system applicable to parcel post shall apply to mail matter of the second class, and the rates of postage shall be as follows: Two cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the first or second zone, 3 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the third zone, 4 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for the delivery within the fourth or fifth zone, 5 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the sixth or seventh zone 6 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the eighth zone: Provided, That the rate of postage on daily newspapers, when the same are deposited in a letter-carrier office for delivery by its carriers, shall be the same as now provided by law: Provided further, That nothing herein shall affect existing law as to free circulation and existing rates on second-class mail matter within the county of publication: Provided further, That the Postmaster General may hereafter require publishers to separate or make up to zones in such a manner as he may direct all mail matter of the second class when offered for mailing: Provided further, That second-class mail matter mailed to subscribers from an office other than that of publication shall pay the same rate as if mailed from the office at the place of publication: And provided further, That in the case of newspapers and periodicals entitled to be entered as second-class matter and maintained by and in the interests of religious, educational, philanthropic, agricultural, labor, or fraternal organizations, not organized for profit and none of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual, the second-class postage rate shall be 1½ cents a pound or fraction thereof, irrespective of the zone in which delivered, except when the same are deposited in a letter-carrier office for delivery by its carriers, in which case the rate shall be the same as now provided by law. The publisher of such newspapers or periodicals before being entitled to the foregoing rates shall furnish to the Postmaster General, at such times and under such conditions as he may prescribe, satisfactory evidence that none of the net income of such organization inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual: And provided further, That the Postmaster General, on or before the 10th day of each month, shall pay into the general fund of the Treasury an amount equal to the difference between the estimated amount received during the preceding month for the transportation of first and second class matter through the mails under this title and the estimated amount which would have been received under the provisions of the law in force at the time of the passage of this act.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the committee substitute, a copy of which is on the gentleman's desk, be considered in lieu of section 1201.

Mr. MANN. Why does not the gentleman now send up the committee substitute and offer it?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

Mr. MANN. It is in order. Some gentlemen wish to offer amendments to the original text.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to perfect the original text. I think I would have preference in that.

Mr. KITCHIN. I offer the following as a substitute for the original text.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman's motion is to strike out section 1201 and insert?

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes; I make that motion.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

On pages 51, 52, and 53 strike out all of section 1201 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 1201. That on and after July 1, 1917, the zone system applicable to parcel post shall apply to mail matter of the second class, and (a) from that date until November 1, 1917, the rate of postage shall be as follows, except as hereinafter provided: One and one-sixth cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the first zone, 1⅓ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the second or third zone, 1⅔ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the fourth or fifth zone, 2 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the sixth zone, 2⅓ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the seventh zone, and 2⅔ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the eighth zone, and (b) from November 1, 1917, until March 1, 1918, the rate of postage shall be as follows, except as hereinafter provided: One and one-third cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the first zone, 1⅔ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the second or third zone, 2⅓ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the fourth or fifth zone, 3 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the sixth zone, 3⅔ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the seventh zone, and 4⅓ cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the eighth zone, and (c) after March 1, 1918, the rate of postage shall be as follows, except as hereinafter provided: One and one-half cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the first zone, 2 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the second or third zone, 3 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the fourth or fifth zone, 4 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the sixth zone, 5 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the seventh zone, and 6 cents a pound or fraction thereof when for delivery within the eighth zone.

"SEC. 1202. That the rate of postage on daily newspapers, when the same are deposited in a letter-carrier office for delivery by its carriers, shall be the same as now provided by law; and nothing in this title shall affect existing law as to free circulation and existing rates on second-class mail matter within the county of publication: Provided, That the Postmaster General may hereafter require publishers to separate or makeup to zones in such a manner as he may direct all mail matter of the second class when offered for mailing.

"SEC. 1203. That in the case of newspapers and periodicals entitled to be entered as second-class matter and maintained by and in the interest of religious, educational, philanthropic, agricultural, labor, or fraternal organizations, not organized for profit and none of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual, the second-class postage rate shall be, irrespective of the zone in which delivered (except when the same are deposited in a letter-carrier office for delivery by its carriers, in which case the rates shall be the same as now provided by law), 1½ cents a pound or fraction thereof from July 1, 1917, until March 1, 1918, and thereafter 1½ cents a pound or fraction thereof. The publishers of such newspapers or periodicals before being entitled to the foregoing rates shall furnish to the Postmaster General, at such times and under such conditions as he may prescribe, satisfactory evidence that none of the net income of such organization inures to the benefit of any private stockholders or individual.

"SEC. 1204. That where the total weight of any one edition or issue of any publication mailed to any one zone does not exceed 1 pound, the rate of postage shall be 1 cent for each 8 ounces or fraction thereof.

"SEC. 1205. The rates provided by this title shall relate to the entire bulk mailed to any one zone and not to individually addressed packages.

"SEC. 1206. That where a newspaper or periodical is mailed by other than the publisher or his agent or a news agent or dealer, the rate shall be the same as now provided by law.

"SEC. 1207. That the Postmaster General, on or before the 10th day of each month, shall pay into the general fund of the Treasury an amount equal to the difference between the estimated amount received during the preceding month for the transportation of first and second class matter through the mails and the estimated amount which would have been received under the provisions of the law in force at the time of the passage of this act.

"SEC. 1208. That the salaries of postmasters at offices of the first, second, and third classes shall not be increased after July 1, 1917, during the existence of the present war. The compensation of postmasters at offices of the fourth class shall continue to be computed on the basis of the present rates of postage, but in no case shall such compensation be less than that received during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this section and all amendments thereto be closed in one hour.

Mr. MANN. Make it four hours, two hours on a side.

Mr. KITCHIN. Let us make it two hours and a half.

Mr. MANN. On a side?

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, no.

Mr. MANN. As far as I am personally concerned, I am willing to forego all talk and vote on this amendment, but gentlemen have amendments they desire to present. How much time can we get along with on this side?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will make it two hours, one hour to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. MADDEN——

Mr. MANN. Oh, well, we are not in favor of the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman from North Carolina a question. Being a member of the committee and having reserved the right to offer an amendment on the floor, ought I not to have an opportunity to do so. I am in favor of a flat 2-cent rate.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman certainly will have that opportunity.

Mr. MANN. I am in favor of striking the whole thing out of the bill.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the committee amendment which I would like to discuss for 15 minutes.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. KITCHIN. If there is any objection to it, I do not want to make the request to put it at two hours.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. We may get along better without it.

Mr. KITCHIN. We will be here until 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning. Very well, I withdraw my request. Go ahead and pitch in.

Mr. MANN. Suppose we agree on an hour and a half on a side.

Mr. KITCHIN. I am willing to come to some agreement to limit the debate. Yes; I will ask unanimous consent to make it an hour and a half on a side; three hours altogether.

Mr. STEENERSON. Reserving the right to object, I would like to know if I can have some time. This is the only thing in the whole revenue bill that I have studied.

Mr. MANN. Let us understand that a gentleman can offer an amendment, and after it is offered and discussed, we will vote on it. Otherwise, it is impossible for the Members to have their amendments presented to the House. If, on the first amendment we use all the time discussing the general subject, the gentlemen will not have a chance. I think every gentleman should have a chance to offer his amendment and present his case and let us vote on it without running on forever with the debate.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I will renew my request, that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto be closed in three hours, an hour and a half for and an hour and a half against.

Mr. TILSON. Does the gentleman mean section or title?

Mr. KITCHIN. There is only one section.

I ask that I control half of the time and the gentleman from Illinois half the time.

Mr. STEENERSON. Which gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. KITCHIN. The older one here.

Mr. MANN. Let the Chair control the time.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Reserving the right to object, the lines are very distinctly drawn here between those who favor the zone system and those who favor the flat rate or no change in the law at all. I am the only member of the Committee on Ways and Means who is not in favor of the committee substitute, and I have some rights in the premises. I should like to have something to say about the time in opposition.

Mr. STEENERSON. I have no objection to the gentleman's controlling the time.

Mr. KITCHIN. Let the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] control the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] asks unanimous consent that debate upon this section and all amendments thereto——

Mr. KITCHIN. Close in three hours; one-half to be controlled by myself and one-half by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The CHAIRMAN. One-half to be controlled by himself and one-half by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE]. Is there objection?

Mr. SIMS. Reserving the right to object, I would like to know what it means. Does it mean that we pass this bill to-night or talk all night?

Mr. KITCHIN. It means we are going to do our best to pass it to-night.

Mr. SIMS. Why do you want debate on this thing?

Mr. KITCHIN. Because we can not get unanimous consent in any other way.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington objects.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I withdraw the objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] a while ago offered an amendment.

Mr. MADDEN. My amendment has not been reported yet. I wish to have it reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment has not yet been reported, but the committee has agreed upon time.

Mr. MANN. He can not talk without getting time.

Mr. MADDEN. I expect to get my time, Mr. Chairman. I understand I am to get it from the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

Mr. MONDELL. Will the opportunity be given before the debate begins to offer amendments, so that they can be pending?

Mr. MANN. No; not at all.

Mr. MONDELL. I desire to offer an amendment to strike out the entire section.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. If you do that, you will cut the three hours' debate out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 51, line 21, beginning with the word "That," strike out all down to and including the word "zone," on page 52, line 6, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the rates of postage on publications entered as second-class matter, including sample copies to the extent of 10 per cent of the weight of copies mailed to subscribers during the calendar year, when sent by the publisher thereof from the office of publication or when sent by a news agent to actual subscribers thereto, or to other news agents for the purpose of sale, shall be 1 cent a pound or fraction thereof for the portion of the publication devoted to reading matter other than advertising, and 3 cents a pound or fraction thereof for the portion devoted to advertising."

On page 52, line 12, beginning with the word "Provided," strike out all down to and including the word "publication," on page 52, line 19.

On page 53, line 2, strike out the words "irrespective of the zone in which delivered."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Is it in order now to offer a substitute for the amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks so.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I offer the following as a substitute.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I offer the following substitute for the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. As a substitute for the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute for the committee amendment, offered by Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania: Insert in lieu of the amendment the following:

"SEC. 1201. That on and after July 1, 1917, the rate of postage on all mail matter of the second class shall be 2 cents a pound or fraction thereof."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman from North Carolina intend to use some time?

Mr. KITCHIN. Not now.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, pending that, I wish to yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama will be recognized for three minutes.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not in order to entertain a parliamentary inquiry when a gentleman has the floor.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Chairman, I am sending to the Clerk's desk a letter written to me by the President of the United States. I ask to have it read, in order to remove an impression that seems to obtain among some people in our country with regard to a speech that the President made recently to the Red Cross Association in the city of Washington.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, May 22, 1917.

Hon. J. THOMAS HEFLIN,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. HEFLIN: It is incomprehensible to me how any frank or honest person could doubt or question my position with regard to the war and its objects. I have again and again stated the very serious and long-continued wrongs which the Imperial German Government has perpetrated against the rights, the commerce, and the citizens of the United States. The list is long and overwhelming. No nation that respected itself or the rights of humanity could have borne those wrongs any longer.

Our objects in going into the war have been stated with equal clearness. The whole of the conception, which I take to be the conception of our fellow countrymen, with regard to the outcome of the war and the terms of its settlement, I set forth with the utmost explicitness in an address to the Senate of the United States on the 22d of January last. Again, in my message to Congress on the 2d of April last those objects were stated in unmistakable terms. I can conceive no purpose in seeking to becloud this matter except the purpose of weakening the hands of the Government and making the part which the United States is to play in this great struggle for human liberty an inefficient and hesitating part. We have entered the war for our own reasons, and with our own objects clearly stated, and shall forget neither the reasons nor the objects. There is no hate in our hearts for the German people, but there is a resolve which can not be shaken even by misrepresentation to overcome the pretensions of the autocratic Government which acts upon purposes to which the German people have never consented.

Cordially and sincerely, yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

[Applause.]

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the committee amendment that I wanted to offer. This is an amendment to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will look the matter up. The Chair does not think it is in order now. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Ways and Means have offered an amendment to the postal laws which fixes a zone system of charges, the result of which, in my judgment, would be to prevent the distribution of literature to many sections of the Nation. My own judgment is, and it is the judgment of all men who have given consideration to the question, that we ought under no circumstances to divide the country into sections; that we need the thought of the East to intermingle with the thought of the West; that we need the thought of the West to intermingle with the thought of the South and of the North and of the East; that what we want to do is to have our thought national in its character, not sectional; and I believe that if we adopt the zone system we will do more to retard the progress of the American people than anything else we could do. [Applause.] Sectionalism in thought among the American people from the foundation of the Government to the present day would have kept many parts of this Nation unheard of, but nationalism in thought, due to the fact that we have been liberal in the distribution of literature, the work of the minds of our greatest men, has made America great and the thoughts of her people one. [Applause.]

It is said that we lose a lot of money by the transportation and handling of the second-class mail, and if we consider this question solely upon the money basis the statement is true. But I believe there is a higher reason than money for the action of the Government in the development of the intelligence of the American people. Patriotism needs a single line of thought among the people of the Nation, and if we expect to maintain our prestige among the nations of the world we must have a Nation composed of people with national ideas; and national ideas can not be inculcated in the hearts of the American people if we establish the zone system of distributing the literature of America to the people of America. [Applause.]

In lieu of the amendment offered by the Committee on Ways and Means, I have proposed an amendment which provides that all publications shall pay for their handling and transportation by the Post Office Department 1 cent a pound for the reading matter and 3 cents a pound for all advertising matter contained in the publications. To-day only 1 cent a pound is paid, and if my amendment shall be adopted, 3 cents a pound for every pound of advertising matter sent in any publication will be added to the present charge, and will yield to the Treasury of the United States more than double the amount of money we now receive. I believe that this amendment should be adopted, first, because it recognizes the importance of education, recognizes the right of literature to circulate among the American people, recognizes the right of national in lieu of sectional thought from ocean to ocean and from Lakes to Gulf, recognizes the necessity of maintaining our prestige as a people, recognizes the importance of affording every opportunity to every man, to every woman, and every child under the Government for cheap education. So I come to you to-night offering to increase the revenues of the Government and at the same time maintaining the line of national thought among the American people, whereas the amendment offered for your consideration by the Committee on Ways and Means will destroy every fabric of educational facility which this Government has worked for years to maintain and upbuild.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GORDON. Do you favor the zone system for the parcel post?

Mr. MADDEN. I am in favor of the zone system for nothing. I believe we ought to have a straight, flat price for the movement of the commodities that educate and furnish information to the American people. [Applause.]

Mr. GORDON. Then, for the transporting of a ham to California, you would charge the same as you would to transport it to Baltimore?

Mr. MADDEN. That is not education. That is feeding the appetite. That is not catering to the intelligence and patriotism of the American people, and I do not put a ham in the same class that I put an opportunity to build up brains and patriotism.

Mr. GORDON. Do your advertisements consist of brains and patriotism?

Mr. MADDEN. Under the amendment I propose we will charge all the advertisement costs to handle.

Mr. GORDON. Oh, no.

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, yes; and I speak advisedly. I speak as the result of long and careful investigation, and the gentleman speaks without having thought at all. [Applause.]

Mr. HASTINGS. Does it cost any more to carry advertising matter, say, from Washington to Baltimore than it would from Washington to San Francisco?

Mr. MADDEN. Of course it does not cost as much to carry it to Baltimore.

Mr. HASTINGS. But you do not propose any difference in the rate.

Mr. MADDEN. We are making no difference, because what we would lose in one direction we would gain in the other. It will not cost the Government one-quarter of what we charge nor one-tenth of what we charge to carry these publications to Baltimore, and the charge made in the amendment which I propose, equalized all over the United States, will pay the cost and pay a profit.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. The gentleman has been for many years a member of the Post Office Committee?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. How much does it cost to carry second-class mail per pound, and how much does the Government receive?

Mr. MADDEN. It depends altogether on how far you carry it.

Mr. GORDON. I mean all of it—the average.

Mr. MADDEN. We have never been able to do this on the basis which I now propose, for we have always been handicapped by the fact that the magazines have taken advantage of the express rates for short hauls, and the Post Office Department has been compelled to carry the publications on the long hauls; but if we compel them as we will do now by the charge of 10 per cent additional for express rates to send their publications through the post office, we will not only not lose money by the adoption of the amendment which I propose, but the cost of handling and transportation when the long and short hauls are equalized will yield a profit to the Treasury of the United States every year. What more do you want?

Mr. GORDON. What does it cost now?

Mr. MADDEN. It costs now at the highest cost about 8 cents.

Mr. GORDON. And you want to allow them to be carried for 1 cent.

Mr. MADDEN. It costs less than 1 cent on some of the short hauls, and if the amendment that I have proposed is adopted and the differences are equalized the transportation charges will also be equalized, and the Treasury of the United States will have an annual balance from this source. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I believe I can say without any exaltation of myself that I know something of this question. For eight years I have been a member of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, and almost continuously during that period of time the question of second-class mail rates has been a burning issue. That committee has sat for days, for weeks, and months at a time, giving exhaustive hearings to every man, to every concern, to every publisher in the United States.

I am here this evening to say to you gentlemen that it is not longer a mooted question as to what it actually costs the Government of the United States to transport and deliver the second-class mail. I would have every Member of this House this evening draw a plain distinction between the transportation of the mail and the transportation of the mails accompanied with delivery of them on the other. The transportation of mail relates exclusively to the haul by the railroads. The transportation and delivery of second-class mail relates not only to the haul of the mail on the railroad trans, in the screened-wagon service, in the motor-wagon service, but it means the actual delivery of that piece of mail to the final and ultimate reader of it.

Now, you can not get very far away from the Hughes Commission. You are almost anchored there so far as the minimum amount that it costs to handle and transport second-class mail matter. I will pin my faith on Judge Hughes when it comes to rendering a decision on a question of law. Judge Hughes in 1912, with two other men, for nearly three months, sat in the city of New York to determine that question. Judge Hughes arrived at the opinion that it costs 5.5 cents a pound to transport and deliver second-class mail, and that that did not include the handling of mail in the post office. That did not include the cost of handling mail in the screened-wagon service; that did not include the cost of transporting and handling mail in the automobile service. In that estimate Judge Hughes when he arrived at the conclusion that it cost 5½ cents a pound to transport the mail there was left out of that equation between $85,000,000 and $88,000,000 already arrived at as to what it cost to transport and deliver the second-class mail.

Now, I have the greatest confidence in my friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN], but I can not agree with him on this question. I think he is wrong. Now, gentlemen, the figures I am going to give you are not mine, they are the figures of the Post Office Department. In the first place, I desire to say that I do not believe that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is workable. I think it is too cumbersome. The Post Office Department last week wrote me a letter in which it said that there was transported last year through the mails approximately 400,000,000 pounds of advertising matter. Now, that 400,000,000 pounds of advertising matter at 3 cents a pound, according to the gentleman's amendment, would bring a revenue of $12,000,000. I have not had the committee's amendment figured out for me, but the Ways and Means Committee tell me that under the proposed amendment it will bring in the way of revenue between $16,000,000 and $18,000,000.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. For a question.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman does not contend that there would be any difficulty in the administration of the weight proposition by the Post Office Department?

Mr. COX. No. So if you put it on a revenue basis, the gentleman's figures fall between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 below the amount estimated in the way of revenue to be raised by the Committee on Ways and Means. Now, I know that every Member of this House is just as honest as I am. I am not going to impugn the motives of any man, for the reason that our viewpoint sometimes changes the whole current of our lives, but for the life of me I can not understand how any man is willing to stand on the floor of this House and vote to strike out this proposed change in rates in second-class mail matter. [Applause.] To me it is unthinkable, it is unbelievable, that the American Congress will ever undertake to do it. I hold in my hand, gentlemen, what is called the Motor Age. It weighs 2 pounds and 10 ounces. It has 391 pages, and there are not 25 pages of reading matter in it. Men take it who buy automobiles, and the automobile manufacturers buy it, and yet that piece of literature—if you call it such—is going through the mails at the rate of 1 cent a pound and it has been since 1885, and here we propose to increase by 100 per cent the postage on first-class mail matter to make up that deficit.

I hold in my hand a publication called the Iron Trade Review. It weighs 44 ounces. It has 401 pages and there are not 20 pages of reading matter in it.

I hold in my hand the Iron Age, which has 460 pages, weighs upward of 3 pounds, and there is not 10 pages of reading matter in this magazine. It has 450 pages devoted to advertising purposes.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I can not. These books with many others belong to a great string of advertising journals in this country, and all these concerns are incorporated. These concerns are in a holding company known as the United States Publishing Association. The Iron Age netted 110 per cent on its capitalization in 1913, and in 1912 it sold for more than $1,000,000. I have heard men in this House say that they were in favor of striking out all of this increase in the second-class postage. Now, I have not picked out any exceptional pieces, large or small. But it is absurd, when you go through the list of them. I put a telegram in my speech the other day which explained some things. Our committee was having hearings in February, 1914, and Mr. MOON received a telegram from one of these publishers, these newspaper men, in which he said, in effect, "We defeated Taft for President in 1912 because he undertook to put his hands on this proposition, and if you undertake to do the same thing you will hear Rome howl from north to south in your own party."

Mr. CHANDLER of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. No. The Congress has been held up until to-day to scandal, contempt, ridicule, and the scorn of the countless number of men and women in this country who are being overcharged on their first-class postage.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. COX. I will ask the gentleman to yield me three minutes more.

Mr. HELVERING. I yield three minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. COX. The only way to solve this question is exactly as the Ways and Means Committee has figured it out, and that is by the zone system. Why was the parcel post put in the zone system? The Central West, the part of the country which I come from, needs the goods of the East, and the eastern part of the country needs the goods of the Central West, and the only fair way to arrive at the parcel post was through the zone system, so that we could get their goods and they could get ours. And the only proper way, when you come to diffusing knowledge and literature and information is upon the zone system, exactly as the Parcel Post System has worked.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield for a question.

Mr. MADDEN. My colleague knows, does he not, that under the Parcel Post System they haul carloads of coal and iron ore?

Mr. COX. Oh, we barred that out. I can not agree with the gentleman on that. I will agree that the proof before our committee showed that they were doing that to some extent, but as soon as the department found it out it was stopped, and it has not been practiced any more.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. For a question.

Mr. MONDELL. Does the gentleman really think that we ought to treat the dissemination of news and ideas and information as we treat the transportation of beans?

Mr. COX. If the gentleman will read the postal laws he will see that it is against a provision of the postal laws to tax the American people for advertising. When you come to the newspapers, we have not affected them. I was in hopes that the Ways and Means Committee would put some extra charge upon them. The average rate of haul for newspapers out of the city of Chicago is only 376 miles. The average rate of haul out of St. Louis upon newspapers is less than 300 miles.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. No. The average rate of haul in my own State is 92 miles. The average rate of haul in the State of my friend from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] can not possibly be over 100 miles.

Mr. RANDALL. How about New York?

Mr. COX. About 500 miles; and if my friend from the State of Washington [Mr. JOHNSON], who has been so very much wrought up over this matter, feels that he is going to be ruined, or that the publishers of that country are going to be ruined, then I have some figures that I would like to show him, and they are figures not prepared by me, but prepared by the Post Office Department. Oh, it makes all of the difference in the world as to whose ox is gored. That is the one thing in this whole matter. As Mr. FORDNEY said the other day, this bill is wrong because it taxes somebody. That is what is the matter with it. It is wrong because there is a little, weak, puny, feeble attempt to compel the second-class mail people in this country to pay a part of what they ought to have paid for lo these many years.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEENERSON].

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment here which I desire to present.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it a part of the agreement that these amendments shall be voted on at any particular time or at the end of the three hours' discussion?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that these amendments are to be voted on just as soon as they stop debate upon the particular amendments before the committee.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. One speech upon either side?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will not rule under these circumstances that they have to do that, for the reason that the Chair does not control the time.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from Minnesota is now about to speak upon another amendment.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, during the general debate I discussed the proposed zone rates for second-class mail matter, and suggested an amendment to the clause which provides that such matter shall pay postage from the office of publication, wherever mailed, so as to include advertising catalogues. I pointed out that the order placing catalogues in parcel post and mailable anywhere at local zone rates had resulted in a loss of millions to the postal revenue. Formerly they paid a rate of 1 cent for every 2 ounces or fraction thereof, which brought in a little over 8 cents per pound, while now a large publisher of catalogues, like Sears, Roebuck & Co., who issues six or seven millions of them every year, can ship by freight to distributing points, thence by parcel post at local zone rates of less than 2 cents per pound. I showed that catalogues weighing 5 pounds formerly paid 40 cents each postage, while now they are shipped by freight to central points and mailed to the two first zones at 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound, making 9 cents postage and freight not over 5 or 6 cents, or 15 cents in all, a saving of 25 cents on each catalogue, which on the 6,000,000 shipped by Sears, Roebuck & Co. amounts to $1,500,000 per year. On the face of it this would seem to be a loss to the postal revenue and a gain by the publisher. This must be true unless the publisher can ship so much cheaper from place of publication to place of mailing than the Government can as to wipe out the difference.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], on Tuesday last, undertook to refute my argument on the authority of the Post Office Department. He said:

> Through the courtesy of the gentleman from New York I have received from the Post Office Department a statement which I will take the liberty of read'ng and which will clearly demonstrate that the statements made by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEENERSON] are not founded on facts.

The statement looks suspicious. It is not signed. He does not say who "the gentleman from New York" was that gave it to him. The statement shows on its face that it must have been prepared by Sears, Roebuck & Co., for no one else has the statistics given. The Post Office Department has no record of the number of catalogues mailed at the different offices separately from other parcels. All they have is a count of other parcels. For two weeks in April and two weeks in October in each year from which they estimate size and number of all parcels mailed. Here it is:

> (1) I find upon examination of our records that Sears, Roebuck & Co., of Chicago, mailed approximately 7,000,000 of their large catalogues during the past year, of which number about 1,000,000 were mailed at Chicago and the others were shipped to their distributing points. (2) The rates on parcel post are so adjusted that the net revenue per pound is practically the same, no matter to which zone shipped, and while the gross revenue would be less when shipped by freight to distributing points and then placed in the mails, the net revenue would be more. In addition to these large catalogues this firm also distributes millions of smaller catalogues twice a year, which are distributed from the Chicago plant. (3) This company does not ship any of its merchandise to distributing points for the purpose of mailing. The postage on the parcels mailed by Sears, Roebuck & Co. at Chicago alone amounts to about $2,500,000 per annum. Notwithstanding the very large amount of postage paid by this concern, it is not given any preference over any other firm, corporation, or individual. Many others distribute their catalogues and some ship their merchandise in the same manner as the company mentioned. (4) The flat rate of 1 cent for each 2 ounces or fraction thereof which prevailed for catalogues before books were placed in the parcel post did not meet the cost of handling and transportation, and they were handled at a loss. The change in the classification of books, which includes catalogues, from third-class matter to parcel post has enabled the department to handle this class of mail at a profit, which before was handled at a loss. (5) The shipment to certain distributing points by freight and then placing the matter in the mail has not been made possible by order of the Postmaster General, but by the law authorizing the parcel post, which was enacted by Congress and which established a zone system. (6) The Government does not have a monopoly on the transportation of fourth-class matter, and any person has a right under the law to ship it a part of the distance either by freight or express and then place it in the mail if he so desires. No discrimination has been shown by the department in favor of any individual, firm, or corporation in handling their mail, and a single parcel mailed by the individual receives the same consideration as the parcels mailed by the largest concerns.

I have divided the statement into six parts and will refer to them in order.

No. 1. Says "Sears, Roebuck & Co. shipped 7,000,000 catalogues last year." I said from five to six millions. Mine was an understatement of the facts.

No. 2. "The rates on parcel post are so adjusted that the net revenue per pound is practically the same, no matter to which zone shipped," and so forth. That does not prove that it is more profitable for the Government to transport and handle catalogues in the first two zones for less than 2 cents per pound (1.8) than to charge at the rate of 8 cents a pound, or 40 cents for each catalogue.

No. 3. "The company does not ship any of its merchandise to distributing points by freight for the purpose of mailing." The reason is that the shipments being scattered over a whole year are too small to afford any saving by bulk shipments, and besides when shipped by mail the customer pays the postage. Big catalogues for a whole year can be shipped in large lots at one time, but merchandise is shipped gradually as ordered. While it is true all shippers are treated alike, the rule in question in practice operates in favor of the concern that has so large a business that it can ship catalogues by freight for remailing as against the smaller one.

No. 4. "The flat rate of 1 cent for each 2 ounces or fraction thereof, which prevailed for catalogues before books were placed in parcel post, did not meet the cost of handling and transportation, and they were handled at a loss." This is simply not true. It was proven in my argument on the cost of the mail that parcels can be carried on an average at 3¼ cents. Five-pound catalogues can certainly be carried at a profit at a flat rate of 8 cents per pound, when the department says there is a profit in all parcel post at an average rate of 3¼ cents. The average length of haul of catalogues must be approximately the same as the length of haul of the merchandise advertised in them, and Sears, Roebuck & Co. ship all that direct to customer, which they say is a profitable business to the Government.

No. 5. "The shipment to certain distributing points by freight and then placing the matter in the mail has not been made possible by the order of the Postmaster General, but by the law authorizing parcel post." This is a quibble. It was not possible to carry on this catalogue graft under the parcel-post law until the Postmaster General issued the order classifying books as parcel post. Had Congress dreamed he would use this power to change the classification of mail matter to the advantage of large mail-order houses, the power would never have been conferred.

No. 6. "The Government does not have a monopoly on the transportation of fourth-class matter, and any person has the right under the law to ship it a part of the distance by either freight or express and then place it in the mail if he so desires." The cost of handling third-class matter, especially large books, is less than the average for other parcels, and therefore there would be a profit of from 4 to 5 cents a pound at the old rate. Under the act of July 28, 1916, the department has authority to ship mail by freight, > at not exceeding the usual and just freight rates, in accordance with the classifications and tariffs approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Further the act reads, to wit:

> The Postmaster General shall, from time to time, request information from the Interstate Commerce Commission as to the revenue received by railroad companies from express companies for services rendered in the transportation of express matter, and may, in his discretion, arrange for the transportation of mail matter other than of the first class at rates not exceeding those so ascertained and reported to him, and it shall be the duty of the railroad companies to carry such mail matter at such rates fixed by the Postmaster General.

Again:

> The Postmaster General is authorized, in his discretion, to petition the Interstate Commerce Commission for the determination of a postal carload or less-than-carload rate for transportation of mail matter of the fourth class and periodicals, and may provide for and authorize such transportation, when practicable, at such rates, and it shall be the duty of the railroad companies to provide and perform such service at such rates and on the conditions prescribed by the Postmaster General.

And again:

The Postmaster General may, in his discretion, distinguish between the several classes of mail matter and provide for less frequent dispatches of mail matter of the third and fourth classes and periodicals when lower rates for transportation or other economies may be secured thereby without material detriment to the service.

It will be seen from these provisions that not only can the Post Office Department obtain freight rates as low as can any individual shipper, but it can obtain the same rate from the railroads as the express company pays, which is usually one-half what the individual pays. Express rates on newspapers from New York to Buffalo are 41.3 cents per hundred pounds, and the distance is 438 miles. From New York to Cincinnati, 757 miles, the rate is 68.6 cents per hundred pounds. From New York to Chicago, 982 miles, the rate is 78.8 cents per hundred pounds. From New York to St. Louis, 1,065 miles, the rate is 92.2 cents per hundred pounds. From Philadelphia to Pittsburgh, 350 miles, the rate is 25 cents per hundred pounds. When the Post Office Department gets the same rate as the express company, they can carry as cheaply. With properly adjusted postage rates, they can make a profit, while successfully competing with the rival service. The facilities the Post Office Department has for delivering packages are superior to any organization in existence, for no express company or delivery concern can reach the farmer at his home like the Rural Delivery Service. The assertion, therefore, that it is of advantage to the Postal Service to have mail-order houses ship their catalogues to distributing points by freight, there to be mailed on local zone rates, is absurd.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] takes me to task for having attacked the character of Mr. Rosenwald. He says:

Now, I wish to state to the gentleman from Minnesota that if he knew Mr. Rosenwald and knew of his standing, character, and reputation in Chicago, he would not have made these offensive statements about him. It is apparent that the gentleman from Minnesota has but a vague knowledge of Mr. Rosenwald, as, in the first place, he is not a Democrat. I regret it exceedingly [laughter], as the only mistake that I ever knew him to make was when he joined and assisted the Republican Party in the last two campaigns.

I deny that to call a man a Democrat is defamatory. Evidently the House did not think it serious, for they greeted the announcement with laughter.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEENERSON. No; I will not yield. The gentleman will not deny that in the last Democratic campaign in Chicago for mayor he and his friend supported the Democratic nominee, Mr. Sweitzer. I have seen that in the newspapers printed in Chicago.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman goes by what he reads in the newspapers?

Mr. STEENERSON. Do you deny it?

Mr. SABATH. I deny that I have supported, together with Mr. Rosenwald, any candidate.

Mr. STEENERSON. I decline to yield further. If the gentleman thinks it is defamatory to say that a man is a Democrat, well and good. [Applause.] I did not suppose it was.

I deprecate as much as anyone the introduction of personalities in debate, but my references to individuals were necessary in order to elucidate the point I was discussing. In the debate that preceded my remarks repeated allusions were made to individual publishers and publications, such as the Curtis Publishing Co., Mr. Curtis, its president, the Iron Age, and even the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON], a Member of this House, was referred to in his individual capacity as a publisher. No one thought of rebuking the speakers who made those references to individuals, because it was an incident to the discussion, and proper. My allusion to Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Mr. Rosenwald was necessary to illustrate the point I was making.

There are a large number of mail-order houses in the United States, and the total number of large catalogues annually issued, if estimated at 30,000,000, would, under the old rate, bring in $12,000,000 postal revenue, instead of $2,700,000 under the new. Sears, Roebuck & Co. is the largest, and sent out over 7,000,000 last year. One year after the order putting catalogues into parcel post went into effect, February 24, 1915, they increased their capital stock by $20,000,000, and, according to Financial Press, declared a stock dividend of 50 per cent April 1, 1915. This is the year that the Post Office Department incurred a deficit of $11,000,000, instead of a surplus as the year before.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, there is nobody here to defend the postal card. There is nobody here to defend the 2-cent letter that the masses of the people send. There is nobody here to defend the parcel post, because it is not attacked, but under existing law to-day post cards pay $1.70 a pound for being carried through the mail. This bill will increase this postage to $3.40 a pound. Nobody here to complain. A letter sent at 2 cents' postage averages from 45 to 50 letters to the pound—90 cents to $1 a pound. Nobody here to complain; nobody here to defend a 2-cent letter. There is no great interest bearing down upon the Members of this House. Parcel post pays from 5 to 12 cents a pound, owing to the distance it is carried. Nobody complaining. Second-class mail matter 1 cent a pound, and many representatives of that interest complaining because it is proposed to make that class of mail pay 2 cents a pound. Let me tell you something. I have no quarrel with the Curtis Publishing Co. any more than I have with any other publishing company.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Michigan yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. FORDNEY. No; I will not. The gentleman had plenty of time. I just want to show the difference between the gentleman's patriotism and mine, and I have but five minutes in which to do it.

Mr. MADDEN. I just want to correct a statement that the gentleman made.

Mr. FORDNEY. You can not correct anything I have said here. [Laughter.] I want to be courteous to the gentleman, but I can not yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. FORDNEY. Here is the Curtis Publishing Co. I went over to the Library of Congress and I saw the reports which I was directed to consult by the Postmaster General as the sources where I could get information concerning the great magazines and newspapers, their circulation, and the number of pounds distributed, and the postage paid. And what do I find? Every Postmaster General has reported as to the loss of revenue to the Government on second-class mail matter, stating that it is 8 cents a pound. The Government gets 1 cent per pound for handling second-class mail matter and it costs 9 cents to do the work. The Curtis Publishing Co., among their other publications, publishes the Ladies' Home Journal. The loss to this Government last year for handling that publication, calculated upon a loss of 8 cents a pound for its circulation, based on their issue of last week, was $1,275,590.

Mr. McCORMICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. FORDNEY. No; I beg the gentleman's pardon. I will yield, if I have time, but I can not yield just now.

The Saturday Evening Post, another of their publications, distributed 38,335,670 pounds through the United States Post Office at a loss of 8 cents a pound to the Government, or a loss of $3,066,825. The Country Gentleman, another of their publications, distributed 5,900,000 pounds through the mails at a loss of 8 cents a pound, or a loss of $400,490; or a total loss on those three publications of $4,742,933.

I do not pick out those big publications because I have any particular quarrel with them, but the Curtis Publishing Co. is one of the great publishers and distributors of second-class mail matter in the country, and the loss to this Government at 8 cents a pound on those three magazines—only about one-half of their total publications went through the mails; the balance went by freight or express—but the loss to the Government last year on those three publications was, as I have said, $4,472,933. That money, gentlemen, would pay 3,900 men a hundred dollars a month for a year. That loss to the Government for handling those three publications last year would meet the annual pay roll of 26 of the largest sawmills in the United States. Ah, a subsidy to the Curtis Publishing Co.! And yet men will stand here and defend that rate for carrying second-class mail matter through the mails. [Applause.]

As I said, gentlemen, you propose to put a rate of $3.40 a pound on postal cards. You propose to put $1.42 a pound on 2-cent letters, and you propose to put 2 cents a pound on second-class mail matter. There was a loss last year to the United States Government, as reported by the Post Office Department, of $89,000,000 on the handling of second-class mail matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman from North Carolina yield about three minutes more to me?

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield two minutes to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for two minutes more.

Mr. FORDNEY. There was a loss, I say, of $89,000,000 to the Post Office Department on second-class mail matter, at the rate of 1 cent a pound on second-class mail matter, $1.70 on postal cards, an average of 90 cents on 2-cent letters, and from 5 to 12 cents a pound on parcels post. Where do you believe the loss came from? And yet there are men here defending the great metropolitan papers and the magazines in the enjoyment of that subsidy. It is not particularly the newspapers that are going to meet this pay roll if this bill passes as recommended by the committee. That loss is going to be largely paid by the magazines. Oh, I know that the wrath of the magazines will come down on my head like a hawk on a chicken, but by the good Lord that is above me, gentlemen, if I can impose upon second-class mail matter only a small portion of their just dues, to be paid during this great war, I think I shall have done some good to the constituency that I have the honor to represent. [Applause.]

There is nothing sent by mail or railroad or steamboat freight in this country that does not pay its way, except second-class mail matter. [Applause.] And gentlemen stand here and defend that rate. It is unjustifiable, gentlemen. In this great crisis, for God's sake where is there a publisher in the land whose patriotism does not go beyond skin deep but will come here and pay without whimpering his fair share in the gathering of this money to carry on this great war to protect your sons and my sons in the trenches? [Applause.] Oh, shame on the fellow that would not do his fair share. I am not one of that kind. [Applause and cries of "Vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. MADDEN. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 61, noes 146.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, the substitute which I offered a little while ago for the committee amendment provides for a 2-cent per pound flat rate on second-class mail. The present rate for second-class mail matter is 1 cent a pound, and the complaint generally is that the Government suffers a heavy loss by reason of that rate.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] has just explained some of the reasons why, in his judgment, there should be an increase in the postal rate on second-class matter. He has reflected upon the Curtis Publishing Co., which is one of the largest publishing concerns in the world, and which sends forth over this country and into every State the three publications that he has mentioned. I have watched the growth of those publications and have had a pride in that growth, since their headquarters happen to be in the city that I have the honor, in part, to represent. And since they have done much to spread the fame of that city, I take pride, as I think every other American does, in the splendid development of these publications and in the influence they have attained throughout this land.

I can not quite agree with the gentleman from Michigan as to the figures he has presented. I am told that if the rates suggested by the committee were to go into effect it would cost these three particular publications about five times as much for their postal distribution as they are obliged to pay to-day, which is something over $650,000 per annum.

Now, the trouble seems to be, and it was so far as the committee was concerned, in ascertaining the real facts with regard to loss on second-class matter. Not desiring to differ altogether from the conclusions of the majority of the committee, I am frank to say that there was not before the committee the kind of information that one would want to have in order to determine a question of this magnitude. It was conceded by the postal authorities, at least those from whom we were able to obtain information, that the entire revenue derived from second-class matter at this 1-cent per pound rate was $11,000,000 per annum. It was said that there was a great loss to the Government above that. Well, I assume that even if you were to abolish the second-class rate altogether, the Government would still be at the expense it now is for transportation, and the charge overhead, which would continue substantially the same. So it seems to me that what we want to determine to-night is the amount of revenue we can get fairly out of this second-class business. Surely we do not want to destroy what we have. If we get $11,000,000 out of a 1-cent per pound rate, we will get twice $11,000,000, or $22,000,000, out of a 2-cent per pound rate, and that is my proposition. It is purely a revenue proposition.

The best the committee has to offer is a zone system, which is uncertain, and which has met much opposition in this House already, which proposes to raise only $27,000,000, or only $5,000,000 more than the 2-cent flat rate would yield. The publishers say that the zone system will put many of them out of business. The fact seems to be well established that some of the smaller papers and many of the smaller magazines must quit business if the zone system is carried into effect. Now, mark that the difference as between $22,000,000 which the publishers say they might be able to stand on a 2-cent-per-pound basis and the zone system which proposes to produce $27,000,000, is only $5,000,000. Shall we risk putting so many establishments out of business for this amount?

It has been said time and again that while this tax bill is going to be a severe burden upon the people and a severe tax upon industry generally, it is not intended to punish business. If, therefore, you want to preserve the publishing business and give those engaged in it a fair chance, adopt the 2-cent-per-pound flat rate, which is double the rate now paid, making $11,000,000 more revenue than we now receive. The zone system threatens the very existence of many of these publication establishments.

I think I am safe in saying that the committee had no alternative for raising revenue from second-class mail except the zone system, and that the best it could find in the way of revenue was this $27,000,000, a gain of only $5,000,000 over the 2-cent rate, which will not disturb business. The original bill would have produced $19,000,000; but the amendment modified that and brings the total estimated revenue from this source up to $27,000,000. The committee does not stand by its original report. To-night it brings in a substitute which proposes to raise $16,000,000 only, whereas the original bill proposed to raise $19,000,000. The committee in effect corrected the original plan, but that does not alter the fact that it threatens the existence of many legitimate and worthy business enterprises.

Mr. VARE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. VARE. Would not this amendment of yours simplify the postal work of the department?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It would save a great expense in a rearrangement of the system. It would save a considerable expense in overhead, because the machinery of the Government would run just as it does now. Information and light through these publications would be disseminated just as they are now. Publishing establishments would be encouraged to go on just as they do now, except that they would pay twice as much as they have been paying heretofore. In other words, for the purpose of raising more revenue we would be doubling the expense to the publications without adopting the troublesome and dangerous zone system.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand, the gentleman believes that this substitute offers no more relief for the publishers than the original bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. No; it does not. In the opinion of many publishers, they would have to go out of business.

Mr. FOCHT. That is my information also.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. How much time have I used?

The CHAIRMAN. Seven minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I do not expect or hope to cast any particular light upon this proposition which has been discussed for days in the five minutes which I shall consume, but my point of view of this matter is so different from that which I have heard spoken so often on the floor of the House that I desire very briefly to give my views.

We spend every year in the United States hundreds of millions of dollars in primary education and a very large amount in college education for the youths. But the great educational force of the country is in the newspapers and magazines. [Applause.] The great mass of the people of the country get most of their education, outside of their daily experience, from the reading of the news and other articles, including advertisements, in the newspapers and magazines. I am not sure but that the advertisements are fully as educational as the literary news articles in these publications. Now, no one would suggest that we close our schools in order to take the money raised by taxation for this purpose and spend it in the war. No one would suggest that we stop the primary education of the land, and I know of nothing which will be more valuable to the people of the country than to have these educational facilities in their highest degree during the war. [Applause.] I think it will be a mistake to lay a burden upon them. We all know that the inception of the second-class mail privilege was for educational purposes. It has continued for educational purposes. I think it ought to continue for educational purposes, and I hope the House will strike the whole provision out of the bill. [Applause.]

Another thing, there never has been in the history of the world such a growth of business in the country as has taken place in this country since the second-class mail privilege was first granted. Before that the growth of business was slow, and the development of the country was slow. I desire to say that the circulation of the newspapers and magazines throughout the country with their advertisements has contributed more to the growth of business in this country, unparalleled in the world, than any other one single factor. [Applause.]

But in coolness we can raise sufficient money in other ways without endeavoring to lay the heavy hand of taxation upon these influences which have worked from the start for the best interests of the country. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HASTINGS. Let it be reported again.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out section 1201.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, may I intervene another speaker before this amendment is passed upon?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has control of an hour and a half of the time.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, it seems to me that this is one of the most important questions that we have considered in this entire bill. I would like to suggest that the subject matter of this question ought to be considered in some other place than in this bill. It is a post-office regulation and is not a revenue question, and the effort to correct inequalities in the Postal Service by attempting to do so through the revenue tax is not good legislation. On that score I think the question is objectionable.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. For a brief question.

Mr. NORTON. Does the gentleman understand that any part of this tax is to be used for defraying expenses of the Post Office Department?

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Yes; the substitute provides that some of it shall be paid out in salaries.

Mr. NORTON. It is not so provided in the bill.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. I would like to give the gentleman time to answer his questions, but I want to say a few things myself.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania means that it prohibits paying salaries.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. No; it goes further, I think. It provides also that the salaries of certain postmasters will not fall below a certain sum, guaranteeing it, looking to a possible diminution of mail carried in certain districts in consequence of this legislation.

The question presented to us is one which affects a number of interests. There is no doubt, in my mind at least, but what the enforcement of this tax is going to drive out of business 40, 50, or 60 publishing houses of which I have some personal knowledge in this country. I will not take the time to quote the figures as they were given to me on a periodical that is one of the important educational publications—the Review of Reviews—but the statement of their account shows that their net earnings for the year past were $17,000, and this bill, as reported from the committee, will impose a tax upon them equal to $38,000; in other words, the entire net income would be absorbed and they would have to pay the balance out of their capital. The manager of this concern, an entire stranger to me, speaking about it, said, "I am a patriot; I am willing to contribute my share to the expenses of the war. If Congress will tax me for every dollar of my net income I will pay it willingly; but for God's sake leave me my business when the war closes, so that I may go on and make a living." [Applause.]

Mr. Gompers has given his opinion of this zone system in a quotation which I will take the time to read, illustrating another interest that is greatly affected by this proposed tax. Mr. Gompers, who is recognized as the labor leader, says:

> To place a double and triple tax upon the public press is without warrant and excuse, and simply means that many publications will be forced out of existence. Such a condition will seriously menace the conditions of life and work of the men and women employed in the printing and closely related and kindred trades by throwing thousands of them out of employment. Shall we sit idly by while the very livelihood of thousands of our fellow workers is placed in jeopardy and while the labor and sympathetic public press is seriously menaced?

Now, first, the publisher is affected by being driven out of business; second, the working man and woman is affected by being deprived of employment through the regulating of a practice which is said to be improper in the Postal Service of this country, but which has existed for several decades unchallenged.

Surely, my friends, we can afford to preserve these business interests, these sources of employment and wage earning, and maintain a tax similar to that which was proposed by my colleague from Pennsylvania. I had intended to offer an amendment reducing it to one and a half, a flat rate, and wipe this pernicious zone system out of the bill, but I am willing to follow the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] and vote for a rate of 2 cents a pound, which will produce nearly as much as the committee contemplated should be produced by this tax.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH].

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, in order to show that all Pennsylvania statesmen are not as one upon this subject, I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read in my time a letter received this morning from a very distinguished Pennsylvania statesman, and an editorial published in a newspaper owned by him.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 19, 1917.

Hon. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. LONGWORTH: I inclose editorial published this morning in my newspaper, the Pittsburgh Gazette Times. I wrote this editorial myself. It seemed to me that the stand taken by most publishers against any increase in second-class rates was so selfish and narrow that it was up to me to disclaim any sympathy with them, and to show that all newspaper publishers are not anxious to shift the burden of taxation onto other shoulders.

Very sincerely, yours, GEORGE T. OLIVER.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I will now ask that the Clerk read the portion of the editorial which I have not marked out, so as not to make it too long.

The Clerk read as follows:

PUBLISHERS SHOULD PAY THEIR SHARE.

Among the many items in the war revenue measure now pending in Congress none has been the subject of greater controversy than the proposed increase on second-class mail matter, which includes magazines and newspapers. Representatives of these publications have appeared before the committees of both House and Senate protesting vigorously against any increase, and they have gone to the limit in enlarging upon the damage that will ensue to them and to their industries if it is insisted upon. It must be acknowledged that this damage is by no means imaginary. The increase in postage will bear hard on all newspapers and it may possibly drive some of the smaller magazines out of business. The Gazette Times will, of course, suffer along with the others, but, notwithstanding all that has been said, it is of opinion that opposition to any increase in these rates is both unwise and unpatriotic. It may be that the rates proposed are too high and that some modification ought to be made, but any revenue measure which proposes to continue unaltered the present rates on second-class matter and at the same time levy enormous increases on every other conceivable class of taxable subjects would be nothing less than an evidence of contemptible cowardice on the part of the Congress.

It must be borne in mind that these publications are now carried through the mail at an annual loss to the Government of something like $90,000,000. If the increases proposed in the bill are effected, it will add only $19,000,000 to the revenue, so that even with these increases the service will still be performed at a loss of more than $70,000,000 a year. It is not fair, it is not right that the publishers of the country should ask such a favor from the Government at a time when its necessities compel it to lay hands on every dollar that is obtainable.

* * * * * * *

The Gazette Times has repeatedly said that the proposed revenue bill is unwise in that it endeavors to raise too much money by direct taxation, and that it would be far better to limit the amount to be raised to $1,000,000,000 a year, leaving the rest to be provided for by bonds. But even if this were done some part of the money ought to be raised by an increase in postage. The publishers can not expect to escape when all other industries must suffer. * * *

Mr. GRAY of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Ohio yield?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I simply want to say this: Everyone knows who the gentleman is who wrote that editorial. He is a former Senator from the State of Pennsylvania, a very patriotic man, and a man largely interested in publishing newspapers. I merely want to say that that is my speech upon this occasion. I can not better it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL].

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Chairman, appreciating the burden which confronted the committee in drafting this bill, my inclination has been, wherever possible, to vote with the recommendations of the committee, but there is one vital objection embodied in their recommendations as to postal rates on newspapers which, it seems to me, is dangerous. We ought not to have the zone system of rates upon periodicals and magazines. However justifiable it may be in the parcel-post system, it is not applicable in the dissemination of newspapers and periodicals,

One great difficulty in our country is the lack of knowledge and information upon the part of some sections of the country with other sections.

If a citizen from the eastern coast goes to the Pacific coast and scans the newspapers in San Francisco, the paucity of information which he gets of events on the Atlantic seaboard States is such as to make him lonely and homesick. There ought to be a more generous dissemination of news and information and a wider discussion of questions which concern particular sections of the country in order to create a common interest. I think the zone system as applied to second-class postal rates is an innovation which ought to be discouraged. I believe that in so far as it is attempted to be made applicable here, it will prove so injurious to the country that it ought to be eliminated. As to the rates, Mr. Chairman, I admit that the present rate of 1 cent per pound is too low. I take it that everyone must recognize that, but at the same time a great business has been built up by substantially every newspaper, either of large or small circulation, upon that system; and if we are going to increase the rate it ought not to be made in a drastic manner, but by degrees. I think an increase of 100 per cent in the present rate of second-class postage is sufficient, even if it does not go too far, and because the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania simply increases the present rate 100 per cent upon a flat basis, and because it discards the dangerous and un-American zone system, I shall favor the amendment. I oppose either in time of war or in time of peace a zone system in the distribution of newspapers and periodicals.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMALL. Yes.

Mr. COX. Does not the gentleman know that from 1789 to 1832 we operated the Post Office Department under the zone system?

Mr. SMALL. That does not affect the merits of the proposition. It ought to be the purpose of Congress and the purpose of the department to bring different sections of the country closer together by a common information, by a common interest, by the common educational processes of the newspapers and of periodicals. I hope that the amendment will be adopted. [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, there has been much said about the Hughes Commission and its report. That commission consisted of Mr. Justice Hughes, the distinguished jurist; President Lowell, of Harvard University; and Mr. Wheeler, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, one of the great business associations of the United States. They made an exhaustive examination of the second-class mail-matter question, and here is one thing that they said:

> The question of raising the rate on second-class matter mailed by publishers and news agents from 1 cent to 2 cents a pound is a more serious one. But we are of opinion that the change is reasonable and should be made.

The distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] said that one Postmaster General after another had reported that the cost of carrying second-class mail was 9 cents; that for carrying it we received only 1 cent; and that therefore the net loss was 8 cents. But the Hughes Commission say, speaking of these very reports of the different Postmasters General:

> Our attention has been directed to the fact that the Postmasters General in their annual reports have repeatedly commented upon the increase in the volume of second-class matter, and upon the disparity between the supposed cost of transporting and handling it in the mails and the amount received as postage. Their estimates evidently reflected the opinion of the officers of the department, but they were based upon general experience in the service and not upon a scientific ascertainment of cost.

The commission reported, it appears, that these statements of the Postmasters General were not based upon a scientific ascertainment of cost.

After weeks of thorough investigation, the commission reported:

> First. That the evidence submitted does not justify a finding of the total cost of transporting and handling the different classes of second-class mail matter.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> Fifth. That upon the basis of the apportionment for the fiscal year 1908, as modified by subsequent reductions in the expense of railroad transportation, the cost of paid-at-the-pound-rate matter for the services above mentioned is approximately 5½ cents a pound.

Instead of the cost of second-class matter being 9 cents, the commission reported it to be then only 5½ cents, and that this cost would be still further reduced. The report says:

> That by the extension throughout the country of the method recently introduced of transporting certain periodicals by freight instead of the usual mail trains, the cost of paid-at-the-pound-rate matter will be further reduced.

Gentlemen, you call this robbery. But are you aware of the fact that in Canada, where they are now sending hundreds of thousands of their young men to the trenches of Europe to fight and die, they carry second-class mail matter from Nova Scotia to Vancouver, clear across this continent, for only one-half a cent a pound, and that Canada has not increased postal rates on second-class matter since the war began?

Upon grounds of the very highest public policy we ought to consider the transportation——

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I can not. We ought to consider the tranportation of newspapers and magazines as a thing entirely different from the transportation of lumber, or sugar, or any similar commodity. Some of these magazines are wonderful affairs. For example, one of them has during the last year or more, at the small subscription price of $1.50 a year, been carrying once a month through the mail all over the Nation—I have seen the magazine in humble homes in the West—very beautiful copies of some of the great paintings of the world. One dealer in pictures has declared that to get elsewhere only one copy as fine as some of these in this magazine would cost from six to eight dollars. This magazine educates people. These superb pictures have brought immeasurable pleasure to thousands of homes everywhere throughout the country.

Canada carries newspapers and magazines for only one-half cent a pound from ocean to ocean. Why? Because Canada knows that newspapers and magazines are utterly separate and apart in character from lumber and ham and bacon.

There is no more reason why you should have the zone rate in carrying newspapers than the zone rate in carrying letters.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I wish I could have one minute more.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman one minute.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] the other day read some ludicrous excerpts from a story published in a magazine, and therefore, he said, we ought not to carry second-class mail at a cent a pound. But undoubtedly there are thousands of letters carried in the mails in the United States every year that contain expressions as oversentimental as were those contained in the article which the gentleman read. And would that fact justify the gentleman in demanding the establishment of the zone system for the carrying of letters? No; far from it. That sort of attempt at argument does not touch the merits of the proposition at all—not at all. The question is greater—far greater—than that. It is not a question of mere money making. As a matter of the very highest public policy, as a matter of principle, we ought to permit the sending through the mail of every kind of respectable publication at the lowest practicable rate. The Post Office Department is practically self-sustaining now, and would be entirely so but for the rural free delivery. In 1902 the Postmaster General in his report says:

> It will be seen that had it not been for the large expenditure on account of rural free delivery the receipts would have exceeded the expenditures by upward of $1,000,000.

But will any of you gentlemen who want the zone system vote to do away with the rural free delivery because it does not pay cash dividends? [Applause.]

As to the proposition for a zone system, the Hughes Commission said in its report:

> The policy of zone rates was pursued in the earlier history of our Post Office, and has been given up in favor of a uniform rate in view of the larger interests of the Nation as a whole.
>
> It would seem to the commission to be entirely impracticable to attempt to establish a system of zone rates for second-class matter.

The only other joint commission of Congress on second-class matter held voluminous hearings in 1906. On page 28 of the report of this commission the zone-rate system is considered, as follows:

> Neither, for reasons almost equally obvious, is a solution to be found in a zone system of charges * * * which would artificially restrict the diffusion of the periodical agencies of intelligence. * * * Would it not be politically and socially unwise to create arbitrary barriers against the processes of national unification and solidarity?
>
> Apart from the social and political considerations, which to our minds are conclusive, there are serious administrative difficulties in the way of a zone system of charges.

Thus the two distinguished commissions on second-class mail of recent years, the only two, both reported squarely against the zone system.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I ask that my amendment, as accepted and agreed to by the gentleman from North Carolina, be now read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment as suggested. Is there objection?

Mr. LONDON. I object.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I offer the amendment which is at the Clerk's desk in its present form. I offer to amend the substitute in the manner in which the Clerk now has it before him.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, the Chair thinks, can not offer another amendment.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman has a substitute pending, and it is open to amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; but there is one amendment pending to the substitute now.

Mr. MANN. Who has offered that?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

Mr. MANN. No; but his is a substitute for the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. No; the gentleman from Illinois, the Chair thinks, is under the wrong impression. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offered an amendment to the committee substitute for section 1201——

Mr. MANN. I think the Chair is under a misapprehension. The gentleman from North Carolina offered an amendment by way of a substitute for the section. The gentleman from Illinois, my colleague [Mr. MADDEN], offered an amendment to the original text, and then while both those were pending the gentleman from Pennsylvania offered a substitute for the committee amendment. That substitute was subject to amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair begs to state the parliamentary situation as he understands it from the beginning. First the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] offered a substitute for section 1201 and other sections. Then, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] offered an amendment to the original text, which was voted on.

Mr. MANN. It had not been voted on when the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania was offered.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct. The gentleman from Pennsylvania then offered an amendment striking out section 1201. I think the gentleman from Illinois gets confused with the idea——

Mr. MANN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. That the gentleman from Illinois offered one section as 1201.

Mr. MANN. No; I am not confused.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the Chair finish his statement. Then, if he is incorrect the Chair will be glad to be corrected. There were in the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina several sections, but only one amendment. Now, the gentleman from Pennsylvania moved to amend that by offering an amendment striking out section 1201 as it is in the substitute and inserting what there is here.

Mr. MANN. But the gentleman from North Carolina was contending a moment ago that that was not the case. The amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania was to strike out the original section in the bill. If it is held that the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania was simply to amend section 1201 in the committee amendment, he does not want to offer any amendment. I understood that he offered a substitute for the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks he can clear this up by reading the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania in his own handwriting:

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania moves to strike out section 1201 of the committee substitute and insert the following.

Mr. MANN. That is all right, but when the gentleman from North Carolina read it to the House he read it to strike out section 1201 of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania) there were—ayes 80, noes 160.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. STEENERSON offers the following amendment: Amend the committee amendment by striking out sections 1201, 1202, and 1203, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That on and after June 1, 1917, the rates of postage on second-class matter shall be as follows: On newspapers and periodicals that have a mail circulation of not exceeding 5,000 copies, 1 cent per pound; those having a mail circulation of more than 5,000 but not exceeding 50,000 copies, 1½ cents per pound; those having a mail circulation of more than 50,000 but not exceeding 100,000 copies, 2 cents per pound; those having a mail circulation of more than 100,000 but not exceeding 200,000 copies, 3 cents per pound; those having a mail circulation of more than 200,000 but not exceeding 300,000 copies, 4 cents per pound; those having a mail circulation of more than 300,000 but not exceeding 400,000 copies, 5 cents per pound; those having a mail circulation of more than 400,000 copies, 6 cents per pound: Provided, That the rate of postage on daily newspapers, when the same are deposited in a letter carrier office for delivery by its carriers, shall be the same as now provided by law: Provided further, That nothing herein shall affect existing law as to free circulation and existing rates on second-class mail matter within the county of publication."

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to explain this amendment. I ask for two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, the difference between this and the committee amendment is that this is not a zone plan, but is based on the amount of mail circulation which each paper has, and the result is very nearly the same, because the paper with a circulation of 1,000,000 copies must have subscribers in every county in the United States, and if published on the Atlantic coast the average distance carried amounts to fifteen hundred miles, and that is the same class of paper that would be in the largest zone as proposed in the zone plan. Besides, the charge for advertising is in proportion to the amount of the circulation. The paper with 1,000,000 circulation charges three or four thousand dollars a page. That circulation is through the mail. Under this plan those who can afford to pay this rate per pound will be required to pay it, but the small paper, the one that circulates 5,000 copies, will pay 1 cent a pound; and when you simmer it down you will find that it affects the papers that are carried the farthest, because the circulation by mail indicates the distance to which they are carried every time. I have submitted this to the First Assistant Postmaster General, and he tells me that he thinks it will bring in $36,000,000 and make the circulation self-sustaining. This will bring in more money than the committee bill, and it will place the burden where it belongs—on the most prosperous papers and periodicals like those mentioned in Philadelphia. The average rate under this bill will be 3 cents per pound, but as there are 1,200,000,000 pounds of second-class mail, it will mean $36,000,000 instead of $1,000,000, as we get now.

It is the most just and fair proposition that has been submitted so far.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MONDELL. I desire to offer an amendment to strike out section 1201, a substitute for the committee amendment. Can that be offered at this time? I desire to offer it before the committee substitute is voted upon.

The CHAIRMAN. There is an amendment already pending, and the Chair understands that the gentleman from Minnesota also offers an amendment of that kind.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman offers a substitute, and I move to strike out all increases of second-class postal rates.

Mr. KITCHIN. I suggest that the first vote should come on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, can not we have the amendment reported again. There was so much confusion we could not hear it.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

Mr. COX. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT]. I understand that if any Member has any amendment to offer he must offer it in his own time.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, what amendment is now pending?

Mr. GILLETT. The amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am yielding to gentlemen to speak to the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina unless they have amendments of their own.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that in order to offer an amendment before debate is exhausted gentlemen should get time from the gentleman from North Carolina or the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. LONGWORTH. After the debate is exhausted under the agreement anyone may offer an amendment which will be voted on without debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks so.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, the principle underlying this question has been so exhaustively discussed that I will not take the time to further debate it. I will merely give an illustration of the injurious results of this legislation. I am disposed to agree that the newspaper business, like the rest of the business of the United States, ought to pay its way approximately, but I do not think that a vital and expensive change should be suddenly thrust upon them without time for preparation, when for years they have built up their business under a different system. The newspaper business, more than almost any other business, depends upon the good will which it has built up painfully and slowly, and it is not fair to suddenly destroy it.

There is published in my home city a group of farm papers which exactly illustrates the danger of this legislation. They are distributed to the farmers throughout the country. There is a Northeast edition, a Southern edition, and a Western edition of publications, all differing according to the needs of the differing sections. That group of newspapers carries information out to a class of our people who can not afford an increase in the rates. That group of papers in the last year made only $51,000 profit. In the coming year the difference in the cost of paper alone will cost them $141,000 more, so this year they face a deficit of $90,000 as it is. The additional tax under this bill will cost them $18,000, and there is $108,000 of deficit that they have in some way to meet. What does this bill do? This bill comes to an industry like that, which has been built up under the regulations and laws of the countr., and which finds itself facing a tremendous deficit, and the legislation says to them in the next year you have got to lose $221,000 more. Of course, that is wrong, but yet that is the result of this law—that is the effect of it—and it seems to me that it is unfair in the extreme. If you are going to put these newspapers on such a footing, you should do it gradually—slowly—so that they can adapt themselves to it, instead of by one sudden sweep, threatening them with absolute ruin. This zone system favors the paper which is so poor and insignificant that no one wants it outside of its locality, and it penalizes the paper which is so excellent and popular that it has a wide circulation. It encourages provincialism and sectionalism and prevents nationalism.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to strike out section 1201.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, my amendment strikes out of the bill section 1201.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has not yet offered his amendment.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out section 1201 of the original bill. My motion, if adopted, will strike out all those provisions relating to an increase in the rates upon second-class mail matter. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] a moment ago appealed successfully, I regret to say, to the spirit of sectionalism, to the spirit of provincialism, to the spirit of Buncombe County. [Applause.] I appeal from that narrow and sectional spirit to the spirit of a broad and intelligent nationalism. [Applause.] I appeal in the name of the hope we entertain that there shall not be again developed in our land that narrow sectionalism and provincialism; that prejudice and misunderstanding; that intolerant local sentiment that brought upon us the most awful civil war of all history. If there is any one thing which we as a people must fight against, and fight against with all our might, and with all our power, it is against the growth of sectionalism, of provincialism. On the contrary, we must at all times and under all circumstances aid and promote the growth and spread of the spirit of unity and nationalism.

We have here established a rule common to all English-speaking people the world over, common to democracies the world over, of treating the dissemination of news, of ideas, of literature differently from the manner in which we treat the transportation of cotton and bacon and ham. This zone system that you gentlemen would fasten upon the country would do more than anything that can be thought or dreamed of to set up and establish, constantly intensifying, miserable little local circles of news, information, and ideas. We would have the North Carolina idea emphasized and intensified by the North Carolina newspaper and magazine and the California idea emphasized and strengthened by the California newspaper and magazine, and we would have the Nebraska idea emphasized by the Nebraska newspaper and magazine. None of them could become national in circulation, in idea, in influence on account of the prohibitive rates you provide under your zone system. If there is any one thing that we need to fight against in America, it is that sort of thing, and I appeal to you to stand by that policy which we have followed for half a century, under which, through the widest, the most untrammeled, and freest possible opportunity for the dissemination of news and ideas throughout the Nation, we have remained a homogeneous people; and by being a homogeneous people we shall remain a free people. [Applause.]

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, I listened to the speech of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] with strict attention and with great interest. He denounced that policy which permits this Government to carry the publications of one Philadelphia publishing house all over this country at a loss each year of $4,730,000; and the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] says that is buncombe, that is provincialism, that is the North Carolina idea; but the Wyoming idea, as the gentleman expressed it here, is to permit this graft to continue indefinitely in the future and to permit these newspapers and these magazines to continue their policy of robbing the people of the United States to the extent of over $80,000,000 every year, because that is what they are doing. [Applause.] If that is the Wyoming idea, then I stand, and every honest man must stand, for the North Carolina idea. Thank God for the North Carolina theory, as applied to this situation. The gentleman continues by saying that he is standing for that policy of carrying magazines and newspapers which has prevailed from the very beginning until now, and the gentleman demonstrates that he does not know what he is talking about, because we have had the zone system in carrying newspapers and magazines from the very beginning until 1852, and then a graduated rate equivalent to the zone system from 1852 to 1885, and then this outrageous system to this date. Why, away back in 1791 the question was discussed in this House of Representatives.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. I can not. Mr. Bourne, a Member of Congress from the State of Massachusetts, advocated the idea that newspapers and magazines should be carried all over the country at a uniform rate, exactly the same argument advanced this evening by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN]. His argument was that there should be a distribution of intelligence and information all over the country at the same rate.

The answer to it was made by Mr. Boudinot, of the State of New Jersey, the president of the congress, when the treaty of peace was signed with England. He answered that proposition; and with a vision wonderful to contemplate as we look back at it, he said the adoption of that uniform system would mean that it would give to magazines and newspapers and publishing houses in the seat of government and in the North an undue advantage over the South. In those days there was no West. And that argument prevailed, and we had the zone system—first, with a common rate applying to the territory within 100 miles from the point of publication, and a still larger rate for greater distances; and then a larger zone, and a still larger rate for greater distances. There have been 15 changes in this zone system from 1791 to the present time, and 6 changes from 1845 to 1872, having reference to the free-in-the-county privilege, every one of them recognizing the zone system proposition, until the newspapers got so strong that in 1885 they demanded a 1-cent a pound rate.

I know that the gentleman from Wyoming does not know, and the other gentlemen, who take the other side of this question, evidently do not know, that the argument advanced in this House by Mr. TOWNSEND of Illinois in behalf of the Appropriations Committee, in favor of the 1-cent-a-pound rate, was that a reduction of the zone rate in force at that time to 1 cent per pound would mean larger revenues for this Government. For the reason that Mr. TOWNSEND convinced the Congress that this rate would yield larger revenues for this Government we went to the 1-cent-a-pound rate. He called attention to the fact that the reduction in first-class postage rates a short time prior to 1885 had yielded more revenue. The Post Office bill of that year carried a total of $56,000,000. After the reduction was made it did yield more revenue for one year. The next year these cheap magazines commenced to make their appearance. Then commenced the days of magazine literature in this country, which has driven out the book-publishing business, which has driven out the bookstores until their number has been reduced from 4,000 to 1,500. It has reduced this country to the level only occupied by Spain, with its bull fights, in the matter of book production. Referring again to these magazines of the Curtis Publishing Co., which are carried at such tremendous loss across this continent, the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal gets $100,000 a year and the editor of the Saturday Evening Post $100,000 a year. There is no one else in the literature or art of the country who gets the salaries these men get. Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford get salaries about as large, and they are doing about as much to drive out the art of the stage as the great modern magazines are doing in suppressing the book production of the country.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINEY. No; not now.

Then we commenced to increase our magazine and newspaper publications. We increased them in volume and amount, and the amount carried in our mails increased from 60,000,000 pounds in 1885 to 204,000,000 pounds five years later, to 873,000,000 in 1910, to 1,202,000,000 and over in 1916. We carried them in 1885 without any loss; we carried them in 1916 at a loss of over $80,000,000. Ten years from now we will be carrying, if they increase in anything like their present ratio of increase, over 2,000,000,000 pounds every year, at a loss of $160,000,000; and 18 years from now the loss in carrying the second-class mail matter will amount to as much as the entire cost of conducting the Post Office Department itself to-day.

Now, why can not we come to some sort of an honest basis? Are you brave enough to declare war against Germany? Are you courageous enough to vote for conscription? And have you not the courage to vote against the demands of the magazine lobby here in this city; against those newspapers which misrepresent every statement made here in this House on this subject; which misrepresent the situation itself; none of them telling the truth about the graft they enjoy? [Applause.] Have you the courage to do these warlike things and not the courage to protect the Treasury of the United States? [Applause.] If we have not that much courage, for God's sake whom do we represent here and what business have we in this body? [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. CHANDLER of New York. Mr. Chairman, I can not support this bill. It is almost wholly bad. It has few, if any, redeeming traits. Its authors and framers have declared it to be bad and still ask us to accept it. I will not. My love of country, my pride of statesmanship, and my intellectual self-respect will not permit me to support it.

This House should vote down the measure and inform the members of the Ways and Means Committee that they must bring in another measure that will be worthy of the support of the Members of this House and of the confidence and respect of the country at large.

I am well aware that destructive statesmanship is not the thing desired in this time of great national peril, and that the House demands constructive suggestions by him who seeks to repudiate and reject. I therefore suggest another war-revenue bill, with five or six chief sources of revenue that will be universal, or approximately universal, in their application to the taxpayers of the land.

As one of the great purposes of the war is to "make democracy safe upon the earth" and to vindicate the rights of freedom and humanity throughout the world, posterity will have as much interest in and will be benefited as greatly by the achievements of this age along the lines suggested as the people who now live upon the earth, and it is nothing but just and right that posterity should bear a part of the burden. I would recommend, therefore, including in the new bill a provision for bond issues to cover one-half the expense and would leave the remainder to be borne by the present generation.

As additional sources of revenue, I would recommend the assessment of higher incomes taxes all along the line from $1,000 up, and would levy a hundred per cent income tax during the pendency of the war upon all incomes above $1,000,000. I would include the blanket 10 per cent tariff tax upon all imported articles, as provided by the present bill. I would retain the present provision of raising first-class postage rates from 2 to 3 cents. I would impose a tax upon bank checks. I would incorporate into the new bill other forms and sources of revenue that could be applied generally to all the property holders and money makers of the country.

I am violently opposed to that section of the present bill which imposes additional tax rates upon periodicals and magazines. I hold no brief from any American paper, periodical, or magazine. No one has besought my special help in this regard in any other way than is usual for particular interests by circular matter to present their claims to the Congress for consideration and relief. I am not in favor of excusing the papers, periodicals, and magazines of the country from their legitimate burden of helping defend the country. I want the income tax, the excess profits tax, and the postal tax to apply to them just to the extent that they are capable of bearing them as good and patriotic citizens of the Republic. But I will not consent that they be taxed to death and forced out of business. I am well aware that thousands of them could stand the strain of this bill and still live, and many of them would still make money handsomely and in large amounts. I am furthermore convinced that thousands of wholesome and valuable American periodicals and magazines would be destroyed by this measure, and it is for these that I plead. It is rather for the American people that I plead. [Applause.]

We should not forget that in dealing with the literature of a nation, we are not dealing with editors and publishers. We are dealing with the intellectual food of a great people, and it is, in the last analysis, for the people that I plead when I ask that no part of their wholesome intellectual food be destroyed.

Napoleon once said that a reading people would become a thinking people, and that a thinking people would become a great people. Nothing ever said by the Corsican contained more truth or more sound political philosophy.

Literature is the breath of life of a free people, and is the main support of free institutions among men. To the individual it is a matter of intellectual delight, and of mental illumination and adornment, finding its highest classical expression in the latin adage, "Vita sine litteris mors est." To the people at large it is an indespensable requisite to intellectual progress and to the safeguarding of fundamental legal and political rights and privileges. The student of history knows this to be true. The poems of Homer were the foundation of all the glory and the grandeur of Grecian life. The French Revolution, with all its horror and all its blessings and benefits, was directly traceable to the writings of Voltaire, Rousseau, and Montesquieu. The greatest social reform of England was effected through the writings of Addison, Steele, and Swift. The Crisis of Thomas Paine, published at Valley Forge, sustained the drooping spirits of Washington's Continentals and helped to give freedom's flag to freedom's skies. It is needless to multiply examples. History is luminous with illustrations, and the House is familiar with them.

Suffice it to say that when we seriously propose a measure of taxation whose inevitable result will be to destroy many thousands of wholesome and very valuable American periodicals and magazines, we propose a foolish and unpatriotic thing.

During the course of this debate it has been frequently asked, Why discriminate in favor of periodicals and magazines more than in favor of pork and flour? as if literature was not as much higher than pork as the head is higher than the stomach and as gray matter is higher than pancreatic juice. It is hard to deal with men who are so little imaginative that they insist that the two must be confounded and used indiscriminately.

If any form of subsidy is justifiable and earnestly desired by all the people it is that form of postal subsidy which carries good, wholesome, pure, and elevating periodicals and magazines into the homes and to the firesides of the plain people of America. I will support no measure that runs the risk or has a tendency to destroy reasonable opportunities to secure good reading matter by the poorest and humblest citizens of our Republic. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. CHANDLER of New York. I ask for three minutes more.

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield it to you. [Laughter.]

Mr. CHANDLER of New York. The gentleman from Tennessee yields it to me. [Laughter.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I regret I can not yield time to the gentleman.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman agreed to yield me three minutes. I give it to the gentleman from New York. [Applause.]

Mr. CHANDLER of New York. I thank the gentleman, but I will ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GALLIVAN].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Chairman, after what occurred to the last Democratic speaker who had the temerity to stand upon this hallowed spot and oppose the same section of this bill, I suppose that with fear and trembling I should walk to the Speaker's stand and announce to my leader, for whom I have the most profound respect and whom I have defended during the past session against attacks of men on that side of the aisle, that notwithstanding the partition of North Carolina, as it happened here a little while ago when one Democrat assailed another from that State, and notwithstanding the lecture from the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY], I am opposed to this section and shall vote to wipe it all out. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] wanted to know, "Where do you come from, and whom do you represent?" asking his question of those opposing this section. I have the honor to represent in part the cultured city of Boston, the Hub of the Universe, if you please. [Laughter and applause.] And I represent the strongest Democratic district in this country. [Cries of "No, you don't!"] Oh, yes, I do; a district where all classes of people who have the voting age and qualifications are allowed to vote. [Applause on the Republican side.] I was reelected to this Congress without the expenditure of a 5-cent piece by a majority of almost 11,000. I did not spend two days in my district, not a minute for myself, but I was in the Western and Eastern States trying to help my party candidate, and I think did my bit as well as any other man on this side of the aisle.

A MEMBER. Hooray!

Mr. GALLIVAN. My friend has been out, I am afraid. [Laughter.]

Now, I do not represent any publisher, but there is another side of this question—and I hope I have the attention of the chairman of the committee—and it is that side of the House that I am going to address myself to. I suppose because I once worked on a magazine and have worked on newspapers that a fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind, and I am here to speak for the workers on the magazines, for the men in the editorial departments and in the mechanical departments. If I had the time I could read here to you of publications in my own city where the owners and the wageworkers have written to me saying, "If this section of this bill goes through unquestionably we will be put out of business, and these men will be thrown on the street. What are we going to do with them?"

You and I voted to conscript them, and I suppose that is what will happen to the men within the conscripting age, but I say to the gentleman that his committee has made some mistakes, although with some parts of your bill I am in hearty accord.

But, serious as is the publishers' side of the question, there is this other factor to be considered. I am thinking of the thousands of specially trained and well-paid employees whose livelihood depends upon the newspaper and magazine publishing business. I refer not alone to those employed directly by the publisher themselves but to the numberless printers, pressmen, stereotypers, electrotypers, engravers, mailers, and miscellaneous clerical help employed by the allied printing trades.

Cessation or curtailment of business on the part of publishers will throw thousands of these men out of employment and bring their families face to face with the hardships of poverty.

Such is the practical and material aspect of the case. Now let me call your attention for a moment to a less tangible but no less important view of the question.

The mass of the people must depend upon newspapers and magazines, not only for information as to current events, but for their educational reading as well.

Never was there a time in the history of this country when it was more important to have our citizens and their families thoroughly informed as to what is going on in the world. Never was there a time when it was so necessary to educate the mass of the people along lines of economy and conservation of resources.

In this work the periodical press of the country is the Government's most valuable ally. Witness the recent appeal of the Agricultural Department to the publishers of women's magazines, and their instant and whole-hearted response to that appeal, which placed at the department's disposal space in no less than 50 publications; thus providing a channel through which Government experts are assured direct and continual connection with millions of American homes.

Newspaper and magazine publishers are already burdened with an increased paper cost amounting to not less than 70 per cent of what they were paying but a few short months ago. And this is only one item of increased expenses in the publishing business, from which there seems to be no escape.

Gentlemen, newspaper and magazine publishers are not seeking to evade taxation. Rather are they earnestly desirous of an opportunity to earn profits that will enable them to pay their full and proper share, as well as to provide employment for thousands of individuals to whom we look for a part of the war revenue that must be raised.

I am convinced that this proposed second-class postage increase as a war measure is ill advised. I am convinced that there is some other and better way to tax the publishing interests. I am convinced that we need to-day as never before the whole-hearted support and good will of all branches of the American press.

But what doth it profit us if in order—to use the language of the streets—to get a crack at the Saturday Evening Post and the Curtis Publishing Co. and Munsey and the rest of them, with which I am in hearty accord, we put thousands of American men and women out of employment at one fell swoop, when, if your committee had given this section a little more consideration, I believe you could have perfected it? [Applause.]

I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman yields back one minute.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. How much time is remaining altogether?

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. FERRIS). The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 28 minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And how much is remaining on the other side?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina has 33 minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman from North Carolina use some of his time?

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I merely desire to have the Clerk read in my time a telegram I have received from the publishers of the Evening Telegram of my city of Superior, Wis., one of the leading newspapers of my State.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUPERIOR, WIS., May 17, 1917.

HON. IRVINE L. LENROOT,
Washington, D. C.:

Thanks for your letter. Not surprised that large metropolitan publishers there would agree to flat 2-cent rate. This puts one over on about 90 per cent all newspapers in country and favors city newspapers and magazines at expense of United States Government. Same old story. Very large majority of publishers would prefer proposed bill to this compromise. More reasonable and fair. Compromise would be old rate inside first and second zones or increase of quarter or half cent, then 2 cents outside second zone, and for greater distances 4 cents. Perhaps only reason any such flat rate would be acceptable is that medium and small papers, which are larger in majority, both in circulation and influence—"if there is any such thing as influence"—have not been heard from. As before, we are simply giving information. Am not attempting to influence your personal action.

J. T. MURPHY.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, in this connection I desire to insert in the RECORD a letter to this newspaper from the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis asking this newspaper to donate certain advertising for the liberty loan. I wish to insert all the correspondence with reference to that, showing the patriotic attitude of this newspaper in that connection.

The letters are as follows:

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF MINNEAPOLIS,
May 11, 1917.

The EVENING TELEGRAM, Superior, Wis.

GENTLEMEN: The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States has placed the entire responsibility for the sale of the liberty loan in the States of Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Dakotas, and Montana in the hands of the chairman and Federal reserve agent of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. A large committee of citizens here and throughout these States have donated all of their time to the Government that these bonds may be sold in the shortest possible period. Many of the metropolitan newspapers, farm papers, and foreign-language papers have offered to donate to the Government whatever size is deemed a sufficient amount of advertising space.

All donations of space will be reduced to definite dollars and cents basis. Those who care to give the amount of space required are to send receipted bills to the Federal Reserve Bank. These bills are to be at the regular card rates. Records will be kept of all such donations and the formal thanks of the Government extended to the donors. The committee will report the exact amount of space, in money, used in the campaign and through this method give the United States Government a demonstration of the selling power of advertising, so that in the future the Government may determine whether or not it cares to ask for donations or whether it prefers to pay for such publicity at regular card rates.

All of this advertising will be sent out as plate matter, and all advertisements in the daily newspapers will be four columns wide, measuring full length of column. The committee feels that eight such advertisements in your paper, the Telegram, will be the maximum needed. Plates for the first four advertisements will be sent out at the same time and the remaining space not used unless the committee feels it is needed.

If you care to make such a donation to your Government at this time and under these conditions, will you please fill out the accompanying card and mail it at once?

Yours, very truly,

MAC MARTIN, Chairman.

Advertising committee: Mac Martin, Mac Martin Advertising Agency; B. S. Bull, Washburn-Crosby Co.; Walter J. Driscoll, Cushing & Driscoll.

THE SUPERIOR TELEGRAM,
Superior, Wis., May 15, 1917.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK,
Minneapolis, Minn.

GENTLEMEN: Your favor of the 11th instant asking the Superior Telegram for a donation of approximately 10,000 lines of advertising space to be used for the purpose of urging the purchase of Government bonds is received. In reply will say that we accept your suggestion and will cheerfully donate these 10,000 lines to the Government. Whether you send plates or otherwise is immaterial, but would prefer matrices.

We would go further, however, and while recognizing and congratulating you on your nerve, desire to make a few respectful but pertinent suggestions. The daily expense of publishing the Evening Telegram is about $350 to $400, and of course this expense has grown materially since the war started, without extra income as an offset. Still, the paper is prosperous and growing constantly in circulation, and, we trust, in influence, so there is no reason in war times why we should not donate part of our only assets to the Government.

But may we not hope that, through some agency like your own, the Secretary of the Treasury or otherwise will ask the munitions makers to donate a large part of their product free to the country; will you not use your influence to see that the Government urge shoe manufacturers, lumber merchants, and rubber, coal and oil dealers that they each separate themselves from a part of their capital or receipts in the common cause; perhaps you may be able to persuade farmers, commission men, and others to donate wheat, corn, potatoes, and other products free of cost or expense; and, more important than all, you should have sufficient influence with the banks doing business in the Northwest in connection with the Federal Reserve Bank to convince them that they ought to use a part of their surplus and part of their profits toward the purchase of United States bonds and then, as soon as the transaction be completed, return these bonds to the Government marked paid and canceled.

If the present taxation bill becomes a law not only will newspapers, small and large, pay the same proportion of income tax on their profits that every other corporation or partnership will pay, but besides they will pay a large increase in postal charges. This increase itself as now suggested will mean to the Evening Telegram office a sum not less than $5,000 per year net in excess of former cost. Advertising space is the only thing the newspapers have to sell for money with which to provide white paper, pay telegraph bills, and support a large number of men and families connected with them—75 to 100 people in our own case. You will readily see that if newspapers contribute this, their only salable product, free, then there is no reason why other business organizations should not be equally generous.

Pursuing the subject just a little further, we want to say to you that anything we have we will gladly give the Government at this time and welcome, if the Government needs it—we will give our office and our machinery, our money, our right arm, or even our lives to Uncle Sam, but please see to it, so far as you have influence, that every other business and every other industry shall do likewise, and especially see that the banks with which you are associated shall buy the Government bonds and then return them canceled.

In closing, would say that we have been donating, and shall continue to donate without any suggestion from anyone, all the free space in the way of news and editorial that could possibly help in advertising the bond sale. We have gone so far as to agree to give 10,000 lines gratis to our local council of defense to advertise potato raising, corn raising, wheat raising, and other subjects to the farmers, for the reason that the local council of defense has no money. But we say to you frankly that it was not our original intention to give the free display advertising space to the Government. We have spent our time as you have, and will do that much further; we have given free local and editorial and every other kind of space except the display; we have subscribed for bonds ourselves, as everyone should do; and now, as you say so, will give also the free display space for the bond sale.

But, again, let us congratulate you on your nerve and permit us to convey to you and your advertising committee the assurance of our most distinguished consideration.

Yours, very truly,

J. T. MURPHY, President.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF MINNEAPOLIS,
May 16, 1917.

Mr. J. T. MURPHY,
President Superior Telegram, Superior, Wis.

DEAR SIR: I have read your good letter of the 15th and have turned it over to the governors of this bank that they may clearly understand the position of the newspaper publishers at this time of crisis.

I thoroughly agree with your view in everything that you have said. The National Advertising Advisory Board, of which I am a member, submitted a plan for paid advertising to the Secretary of the Treasury, and while the advisory board was to furnish its services without compensation, the Government was to pay for all advertising space used, just as it pays for munitions, foods, and other materials. The proposition was receiving favorable consideration when Senator HITCHCOCK, owner of the World-Herald, of Omaha, introduced a discussion in Congress which resulted in a bill giving all departments of the Government the privilege to accept donations of advertising space. I, personally, had something over 20 telegrams sent to Congressmen in an effort to kill the bill. At the same time so many of the publishers offered to donate space that a campaign of paid publicity would have been nothing more than embarrassing under the circumstances.

Something over a week ago this bank asked me to take charge of the advertising committee, gave me no appropriation, but placed upon me the responsibility of an advertising campaign sufficient to sell $80,000,000 worth of bonds in this district. I told the governors I would accept the appointment and work day and night without compensation provided (1) that no space was formally asked for; (2) that no publisher was allowed to give more than any other publisher; (3) that all donations of space be reduced to a monetary basis, so that this bank and this committee would submit an actual report to the Government of the amount of money actually donated by the publishers. In this way we will have a record which we can submit to the Government, and I trust this will influence the Government in the floating of the $3,000,000,000 loan which it is understood will follow.

This I trust will express the position in which the committee finds itself. I am glad you have written as you have. Your voice will have weight.

I will not do you the injustice not to furnish you with the mats for this campaign, but I trust you will use your own judgment, in the face of these conditions, as to the action you take.

With very best personal wishes, I am, yours, very truly,

MAC MARTIN,
Chairman Advertising Committee.

THE SUPERIOR TELEGRAM,
Superior, Wis., May 17, 1917.

Mr. MAC MARTIN,
Federal Reserve Bank, Minneapolis, Minn.

MY DEAR MR. MARTIN: Your very nice letter of May 16 is received. I shall not be at all surprised if it develops that newspaper men themselves may be responsible for the trivial value which the public at Washington and elsewhere has placed on newspaper advertising space.

I assure you that your statement of the situation is quite illuminating, and I thank you for your correct interpretation of my letter.

When your copy is ready please send it along and I will try to have your original suggestion complied with so far as possible.

With assurance of highest respect and regard,

Very truly, yours,

J. T. MURPHY.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The rates proposed in that telegram are very close to the rates of the committee substitute.

Mr. LENROOT. Very close to the rates proposed in the committee substitute.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman yields back two minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL].

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Chairman, I ventured a moment ago to suggest that the recommendation of the committee was, in my opinion, unjust to newspapers and periodicals in that the rate was too high and in that it recommended the zone system. My colleague from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN], with whom I entertain most pleasant relations, differed very sharply with me in several respects, and in these three minutes I wish to draw the line of differentiation between us. He said that I and those who agreed with me were ignorant, did not know that for which we were voting, and that if we voted for the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] we would vote to eliminate free delivery of newspapers within their own counties. Afterwards the amendment was read by the chairman, and as read it was shown to be simply a substitute for section 1201 of the committee substitute, and the gentleman was wrong. [Applause.] Gentlemen ought not to charge their colleagues with ignorance except upon evidence which is conclusive. I disagree with the gentleman as to rates, because newspapers in my State, among which I may mention the Progressive Farmer, one of the most enterprising agricultural publications in the whole South, said that if the rates as originally recommended by the committee prevailed it would amount to three times their average profit for the last few years as to the newspaper mentioned.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman yield for one moment?

Mr. SMALL. Will my colleague yield to me a few minutes more?

Mr. KITCHIN. I will yield to the gentleman two minutes more.

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMALL. Yes.

Mr. RAINEY. The gentleman has stated that certain papers will be crushed if this goes into effect. I want to call his attention to the fact that the Farm Journal, which sells for 20 cents a year and has a distribution of 1,000,000 for every issue, if that Farm Journal increases its subscription 4½ cents—makes it less than 25 cents a year—it could meet the extra charge of this bill, in the old bill, which is higher than this. Everybody's Magazine could meet the extra charge in this bill by increasing its subscription price 6 cents. The Delineator could meet this extra charge by increasing its subscription price 5 cents. The American Magazine could meet this extra charge by increasing its subscription price 7 cents, and so on all the way down, by making these trifling raises in subscription price and making a small increase on the advertisements. Does the gentleman think that they are going to be ruined by this proposed rate?

Mr. SMALL. Will the Chairman state how much time I have left? [Laughter.]

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield to the gentleman two minutes more.

Mr. SMALL. I am obliged to my colleague. It shows we are on good terms.

Mr. KITCHIN. Oh, yes. I did not accuse the gentleman of anything wrong, except ignorance. [Laughter.]

Mr. SMALL. The gentleman has been convicted of being guilty in that respect himself.

Mr. KITCHIN. I want to ask the gentleman a question, and I yield him one minute more. Does he know that he voted in favor of an amendment by which the New York World would pay 2 cents for sending its paper 50 miles, and at the same time the Saturday Evening Post, with eighteen times more advertising matter in dollars and cents, could be sent 3,000 miles for a charge of 2 cents? Does the gentleman know that he voted for that kind of a proposition? [Laughter.]

Mr. SMALL. I will answer it.

Mr. KITCHIN. Did the gentleman know what he was doing; and if he did not know it, does he think he voted right?

Mr. SMALL. Now, may I have three minutes from now? I will come to that question in a moment.

Mr. BURNETT. Do it now.

Mr. SMALL. Then I will do it now. I will say that the question here involves the better acquaintance of different States and sections, and therefore a better understanding with each other. The wide distribution of newspapers and periodicals makes for a homogeneous people, a great country, and I am opposed to the zone system. [Applause.] I believe that we ought to send the newspapers from New York to San Francisco just as cheaply as we do from New York to Philadelphia. [Applause.] I am willing to stand upon that proposition before the intelligence of the country.

Now, coming back to where I was a moment ago. I said that in my State representations have been made to me that the profits of the newspapers would be destroyed and their capital would be impaired if the rates as originally recommended by the committee were put into effect. These rates have been reduced only in a slight degree by the later substitute offered by the committee, and if these rates are put into effect it will deprive the newspapers in my State and in every other State of their profits and drive them into insolvency.

I said I was willing to admit that the present rates were too low, but I contend that they should be raised in a proper and reasonable degree, and that the time for putting such increases into effect should be projected into the future.

Now, upon these questions I am willing to submit to the House and to my constituency whether I was ignorant as to what I was voting upon in voting for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE]. I am willing to submit the integrity and the virtue of the two propositions I have attempted to lay down to my constituency, that these rates are too high for the average newspaper, and that the zone system is vicious and makes against the welfare of the country. [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, it is the greatest bunk in the world to talk about any publisher robbing the people. The Saturday Evening Post sells for 5 cents, and there is 10 cents' worth of white paper in it. Who is getting robbed when the paper is given away to the people? Of course we know how it is done; it is advertising. The advertising is based on the circulation, and the circulation is based on the postal rates to a considerable extent.

Talk about the zone system as having been in existence once before. It was way back in 1792. You could have carried a paper from New York to San Francisco, if there had been any San Francisco, for a cent and a half. That is less than you propose to have it done in this bill. That continued until 1845 at a cent and a half for any distance. One zone was 100 miles for a cent, and the other zone was any distance for a cent and a half. I hold in my hand the report of the Hughes Commission, and I was surprised myself to find how far back it went. This is supposed to be a revenue bill, and it is no place to work off old grudges. It is said that it is fair to raise the rates on newspapers 50 per cent, or even to 2 cents, but the Interstate Commerce Commission is haggling over allowing the railroads to raise their rates 15 per cent, and here you are putting on 100 to 200 per cent on the newspapers. I think there should be some increase, but it should be for the purpose of revenue and not to work off old grudges. We can easily see the motives back of a good deal of this.

Mr. RAINEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PLATT. Yes.

Mr. RAINEY. These rates proposed by the bill, graduated as they are, go into effect at three different times at periods remote from now, and will only recoup the Government $22,000,000 out of $80,000,000 lost by carrying this mail. Under these circumstances does the gentleman think it is any attempt to get revenue out of them?

Mr. PLATT. You claim that the Government has lost a lot of money, and that you are going to try and get some of that which is lost in the past back. It is not based strictly on the revenue; you have not made a study of what it will yield.

Mr. RAINEY. We will never get it all back.

Mr. PLATT. No; you can not get it back in this way.

Mr. RAINEY. We can get some of it back.

Mr. PLATT. You may get some of it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS].

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the attention of the chairman of the committee. In section 1203 of the substitute certain publications are exempted, and I find that there are a good many newspapers or publications that are conducted in the interest of associations which are not run directly by the denomination as a denomination, but rather by a voluntary association in the interest of the denomination. I do not think that your exemption covers all of them. For instance, the Baptist Church and the Presbyterian Church, both North and South, and some other churches, conduct their religious organs through agencies, and I have wondered whether the gentleman would accept an amendment to insert after the word "organizations," in line 13, page 3, of the substitute, the words "or associations."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman that I believe the language of the bill would exempt the class of papers to which he refers; but in order to make it certain and specific, I would be willing, and I think the committee would also, to accept such an amendment.

Mr. FESS. Then, Mr. Chairman, I offer to amend, on page 3, line 13 of the substitute, by inserting after the word "organizations" the words "or associations."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FESS: Page 3 of the committee substitute, after the word "organizations," in line 13, insert the words "or associations."

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, we accept that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman also whether he is going to insert the word "scientific"?

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. LONGWORTH, has an amendment that I think will satisfy the gentleman on that proposition.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SWEET].

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SWEET offers an amendment to the committee substitute to section 1201: Strike out all on page 1 after the word "and," in line 6 thereof, and all on page 2 down to the word "after," in line 15 thereof.

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Chairman, the proposed amendment will give the daily and weekly newspapers, farm journals, and periodicals an opportunity to adjust themselves to the changed conditions, provided this bill becomes a law.

The enormous expenses which the war will entail upon the people of this country must not be paid out of capital, but out of profits. The business of the country should not be taxed, but the profits of business. When you tax business the consumer will ultimately pay the tax. The cost of living instead of being lowered will constantly mount higher.

Those who are being enriched daily by this war should be made to bear a large part of the financial load, instead of imposing it upon the ordinary man—those who really bear upon their weary shoulders the burdens of the world in war and peace.

For one, I would be in favor of going through this bill and eliminating all items where the taxes will materially interfere with the business or the business interests of the country.

This particular section of the bill at present claims the undivided attention of the newspaper world. This part of the bill is fearfully and wonderfully made. It is truly a war measure. It is filled with war at home and war abroad.

I am opposed to the postal rates imposed upon the daily and weekly newspapers, farm journals, and labor periodicals by this section, and in a few brief sentences I shall endeavor to tell you why I have taken that position.

In the first place it is a direct tax upon the business of the newspapers of this country and not on the profits of their business.

Because it will go into operation on June 1, right in the middle of a business year, and the newspapers must pay the postal rates each month.

Because the bill does not allow the daily newspapers, farm journals, and labor periodicals to adjust themselves to the heavy burdens it will impose; in other words, during the first six months or year of its operation daily newspapers and farm journals and periodicals will be penalized, because the most of their contracts and obligations with their patrons, subscribers, advertisers, and readers were made at the beginning of the year and must be carried out regardless of the tax.

Because if this burden is imposed immediately it will drive some of them out of business or into bankruptcy.

How do we know this will be the result? Because every Member of Congress has letters, telegrams, or communications from newspaper men of integrity and ability who state that such will be the case in many instances.

Because we should not "kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

Because legislation of this character will have a tendency to interfere with the freedom of the press.

Because the newspapers of this country have already absorbed a large increase in the price of white paper.

Because there will be a large falling off in the circulation of the newspapers and farm journals.

Because during this critical period in our country's history the editors of our papers should be giving their thought and attention to the welfare of this Government and the promulgation of patriotism, and their time should not be spent nor their energies wasted in an endeavor to weather the financial storm that would be raging about them.

Because an effort should not be made at this critical period in our country's history to readjust our whole Postal System.

Because the zone system is wrong and tends to provincialism and not nationalism.

In a republic we must be a homogeneous people. One part of the country must be brought in close contact with every other part. We, as a people, must be one in thought, action, sentiments, aspirations, purposes, and ideals. Anything which tends to segregate or separate us is harmful to our civilization. Everything which brings us closer together and in more friendly relations is beneficial.

Some one has said that if the railroads had run north and south instead of east and west before 1860 the Civil War would not have occurred. There would have been a dissemination of literature, of periodicals, from the North to the South and from the South to the North. There would have been a community of interest between these two great sections of the country. Instead of hatreds and misunderstandings there would have been harmony and peace.

And I will hazard the opinion, if it were not for the railroads, the telegraph, the telephone, the express companies, and the development and influence of the press we would not exist to-day as a great Republic extending across a continent for 3,000 miles and more, with 110,000,000 people speaking one language, moving forward in unity and harmony, and standing for the highest ideals of mankind everywhere.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MONDELL. The amendment that I offered is still pending?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN].

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, when this matter came before the Committee on Ways and Means I opposed its consideration for the reason given by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM]. The jurisdiction for fixing the postal rates lies primarily with the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads and not with the Committee on Ways and Means. The Committee on Ways and Means had before it the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. That committee had a meeting and an opportunity was given it to exercise its jurisdiction in regulating these rates. That was waived. There is not a man on the Post Office Committee who will stand by the second-class rates as they are now upon the statute books. In fact, several of the members of that committee are favoring this proposition. So that as a matter of jurisdiction settled we take it now as a matter of duty to amend the law, with the purpose of making it as fair and equitable as possible. I have perhaps spent more time, with perhaps not as good effect, as any other member of our committee on this proposition. I believe the rates that we have here are fairly equitable and just as between the Government and publishers who desire to pay for service rendered. The rates have been materially modified, as you will notice from reading the original bill and comparing it with the amendment under consideration. In the original bill it was 2 cents for the first parcel-post zone of 50 miles and also for the next zone of 100 miles beyond. The rates are now 1½ cents for the first zone. The third zone, which runs to 300 miles from the point of publication, is combined with the second zone on a 2-cent basis. That makes it fairly equitable. The only people who are making serious complaint are the magazines and great metropolitan papers, which are carried halfway and sometimes clear across the continent. They are the ones invoked here as entitled to special treatment. It is a fact that the average daily newspaper is carried 255 miles, or well within the second zone of this bill, or third parcel-post zone.

And therefore the average daily newspaper throughout the United States will be carried and located within the 2-cent zone. The others, which had a right to complain of the arrangement first presented in the bill, were the farm newspapers not of national circulation. They are placed now in not a greater than the 3-cent zone. Their average distance of carriage is 450 miles.

I want to call your attention to this. The Post Office Department has said that the parcel post is a paying proposition. In the first, second, and third zones the rates that are given to the newspapers and the farm papers and the smaller trade journals are greater than the parcel-post rates, while if you go out into the magazine zone the parcel-post rates are much greater. So if there is any injustice done in this bill it is not to the magazines, which are carried across the continent on an average of 920 miles, but the injustice is, if any there be, to the ordinary daily newspaper and the farm papers. And the daily newspapers which have average circulations are not complaining of these new zones and this new arrangement.

I am surprised that men will stand here and denounce the zone system. The zone system is based upon the relation that should exist between the Government and every one of its patrons—value received for service rendered. [Applause.] And, as a matter of fair value for service rendered, your proposed 2-cent flat rate for the continent can not be defended. Your present 1-cent rate can not be defended. It apparently has no friend on this floor. The leader of the minority eloquently said——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield five more minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. SLOAN. He said that this is an educational epoch, and one of the greatest means of education is through the newspapers and magazines of the country. Well, education is important, but education can become altogether too expensive. According to the figures presented by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], if the Curtis Publishing Co. paid what it owes this Government for postage from year to year we would receive at least $2,500,000 more a year than we now receive. And, as a matter of economy and education, I think the services of Prof. Curtis, of Philadelphia, now paid for at about $2,500,000 per year, could be dispensed with and the country survive. [Applause.]

Gentleman arraign this bill on the basis that it is provincial. It is not provincial. It is anything but provincial. The system that we have now tends toward provincialism. It is proved in the fact that with one or two exceptions, of the great daily newspapers in Chicago and one or two magazines in the middle part of this country, every far-conveyed magazine and every great metropolitan newspaper is in the northeast sixteenth part of the United States. [Applause.]

How does that work? I say it with no disrespect to the provincialism or the provincial, but if there is a provincial district in the United States it is not in the South, in the great Middle West, or out on the Pacific, but in the Northeast of the United States. [Applause.]

A bill was presented in this House some time ago to establish what was called a society of immortals, an academy of arts and letters. There was but 1 Member of all the 50 who lived west of the State of Pennsylvania. That man was on his deathbed over in Indiana. There is not a representative in fifteen-sixteenths of the United States in that academy of arts and letters at this time. Yet men say they are opposed to provincialism. This system that allows the magazines and the great metropolitan dailies to have for their place of operation the extreme northeastern part of the United States and are to be carried 2,500 to 3,000 miles practically free, serves to stimulate provincialism in its worst form. More than that, it has established it. [Applause.]

This bill, if fairness be lacking, is more unfair to the newspapers and the farm papers than it is to the magazines. Yet I have heard of no daily newspaper without transcontinental ambitions or farm paper complaining about the provisions of this bill as at present proposed, because it comes very near being one demanding a just price for a fair service.

Let me tell you what the figures reveal. In all these zones it is undisputed that it costs just 1 cent to carry a pound 200 miles. In the first zone of 50 miles the carriage, which is the fixed factor, will be paid, and 1¾ cents will be allowed for overhead charges. In the second and third zones, or what might be called the 2-cent zone of this bill, the carriage will be paid and 1¼ cents a pound will be applied on the overhead expenses. In the next two zones, as you go out farther, the carriage would not be fully paid and there would be one-fourth of a cent loss, nothing to apply on the overhead charges. When you go out farther in the magazine and great metropolitan paper zones, the first zone out there, or the sixth parcel-post zone, shows a 2-cent loss on every pound, not on the expense of carrying and distributing but upon carriage alone. When you get out to the last two zones it is a 3 to 6 cent loss. I submit, gentlemen, the bill as now prepared is fair to the great newspapers and magazines of this country. [Applause.] [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS].

Mr. AUSTIN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. How much time is there left of this endless debate?

The CHAIRMAN. Seventeen minutes.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, if this was a trial of the Saturday Evening Post, the Curtis Publishing Co., and a few more of the money-making advertising magazines of the country, the Ways and Means Committee have won their case. But inasmuch as this reaches a great deal more than that and strikes at farm papers, read by 6,500,000 farmers, strikes at labor papers, read by 20,000,000 toilers of the country, it amounts to a little more.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman is mistaken. He is misrepresenting the bill.

Mr. FERRIS. I am not misrepresenting the bill. And the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who has unlimited time, ought not to interrupt me in my three minutes. The exact rate that prevails to-day has prevailed for 32 years. There has been no change in it in that time. This bill proposes to increase it 100 per cent on some papers and goes on up to even more than that.

Last year 800 papers died on account of the increase in the price of wood-pulp paper. I am not in favor of killing 800 more by a tax that they can not stand. [Applause.]

Education never pays a daily balance in dollars and cents, neither in colleges nor elsewhere. It does not pay here in dollars and cents, and the Committee on Ways and Means does not make out their case when they show it does not pay. But in the broad prairies of the West, in the undeveloped land of the South, where education is needed, where development is needed, this amendment goes much further than to scorn and cast words of derision over the Curtis Publishing Co. and a few other publishing companies of that sort. [Applause.]

I do not need to defend myself and say that I do not represent the publishing companies. We do not have any such animal out there. I speak a word for the people who read. I speak for the West, which desires to develop. I speak a word for the South that needs development. [Applause.] And it is much more than to assault a few big newspapers that are making money and can afford to pay more. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as follows: Page 3 of the committee amendment, after the word "educational" insert the words "scientific" and a comma.

Mr. KITCHIN. I think the committee would be willing to accept that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. OSBORNE].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Chairman, the subject of the zone system has been so fully covered that I will just ask permission to print in the RECORD what I have prepared in that regard.

Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of an increase in second-class mail rates, but I believe it should be a flat increase applicable to the entire country. Our Postal System was built up upon the theory—and it is a correct theory—that information and intelligence should be widespread throughout the Nation; that all portions of the Nation should be upon an equal footing as to its mail facilities and the cost thereof. A contrary system could not fail to encourage and produce provincialism and a tendency to denationalization.

The difference between the parcel post and letter and newspaper mail rates is the difference between carrying freight and carrying thought and intelligence. A zone system applied to freight is proper and reasonable; a zone system applied to national thought and intelligence is inappropriate and stupid.

A flat rate, whereby all sections of a country are bound together by a common mail rate, has been recognized by statesmen as an important element of national strength and unity. Great Britain has profited by a liberal flat mail rate for a period greater than that of our national life; it has been applied to British colonies all over the world; and it is not inconceivable that if a zone system had been applied by that country as a national system, the affection of the colonies might have been weakened by nonintercourse and restricted exchange of national thought; that at the present time the magnificent armies of Australia, New Zealand, Canada, and the other colonies of Great Britain might not be fighting on the battle fields of Europe for the mother country. It is quite possible that the fate of Great Britain may have been vitally affected by the intelligent policy of more than a hundred years of a flat and impartial mail rate.

The enormous additional expense that is put on publishers is absolutely unjust, and in the case of hundreds of publications will be destructive.

Mr. Chairman, there is one overwhelming difficulty with this entire bill, and that is that in our anxiety to pay for the war as we go we are throwing upon the country a greater burden of taxation than we are justified in attempting. We are loading the manufacturing and the commercial interests of the country, as well as the common people, with too great a burden. At the same time we are not making provision for the entire amount asked for by the Secretary of the Treasury within about $446,000,000. I believe with the distinguished and well-informed gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] that the House of Representatives should provide in this bill for the full amount asked by the Secretary of the Treasury, namely, $2,246,000,000, instead of $1,800,000,000. I believe we should make one job of it, and not come back with a second bill to raise the additional amount mentioned by the Secretary of the Treasury in his estimate of May 15, 1917.

I also believe with the distingushed gentleman from Michigan, the ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means [Mr. FORDNEY], that we are attempting to raise too much in this bill by taxation. I am so firmly convinced of the truth of this position that I will, at the proper time, offer the following motion, unless it or some similar motion shall be offered by some other Member of the House:

Mr. Chairman, later on I shall move that the bill (H. R. 4280) be recommitted to the Committee on Ways and Means with instructions to amend the bill by providing the full amount embraced in the latest estimate of the Secretary of the Treasury, dated May 15, 1917, as being necessary for the requirements of the Government for the fiscal year 1918, namely, $2,246,000,000, and providing that one-half of said amount ($1,123,000,000) be provided by a loan, either by the issue of bonds, time certificates, or otherwise, and that the bill be rewritten so that the amount of the remaining one-half, namely, $1,123,000,000, shall be raised by a war-revenue tax fairly and equitably distributed.

If this motion shall be adopted the twofold purpose will be served: First, of supplying the Treasury with the full amount estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury and necessary for the finances of the coming year, and, second, the reduction of the war-revenue tax from $1,800,000,000 to $1,123,000,000. This would ease the situation so that some of these unjust and destructive taxes could be avoided.

I am finding no fault with the Committee on Ways and Means. They have a fearful duty to perform, and I am by no means sure that it could have been better performed by any portion of the membership of this House. I doubt if it could; but the solution which I have suggested is feasible, and I believe it ought to be adopted. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield one minute to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for one minute.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, I send to the Clerk's desk an amendment, which I offer.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GOOD offers the following amendment: Page 1, lines 10, 11, and 12 of the substitute, strike out the word "zone," in line 10, all of line 11, and the word "the" in line 12, and insert a comma. Page 2, lines 7, 8, and 9, strike out the words "and one-third cents," in line 7, and insert the word "cent." Strike out all in line 8 after the word "first" and the words "when for delivery within the," in line 9, and insert a comma after the word "first," in line 8. Page 2, lines 17, 19, and 20, strike out the words "and half cents," in line 17, and insert the word "cent." Strike out all of line 19 and the words "within the" in line 20, and insert a comma after the word "first" in line 19.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment would be to consolidate the three zones in one zone and provide a rate of 1 cent on all second-class matter within a radius of 300 miles. I believe this would pay the cost of carrying these publications for that distance.

Mr. Chairman, if appeals to the Democratic side of this House for fairness to the publication is of no avail, may I not appeal to you for fairness to the country on this question? We are to-day raising an army of a million men.

Mr. HELVERING. Will the gentleman yield? The gentleman makes a mistake——

Mr. GOOD. No; I can not yield. We must have publicity to raise that army. We are floating a bonded indebtedness of $5,000,000,000. We must have publicity to sell those bonds. We are trying to conserve and increase the food supply of the Nation. We must have publicity to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, already this evening we have agreed to an amendment changing the bill so that papers from abroad would be admitted free of duty. They would be under our postal treaty. The result of the proposition now pending before the House will be that Canadian papers and Canadian magazines will be admitted to the mails of the United States for probably about one-fourth the amount that will be paid by American publishers. You can send a Canadian magazine from anywhere in eastern Canada clear out to the Pacific without any increase in the rate, but if you want to send it from New York you must pay a very great increase in the rate. Since when have we commenced to legislate purely in the interest of Canada? We are spending large sums of money in the interest of the allies. We are issuing bonds to loan money to the allies. Now we propose to put the finishing touch on the thing by endeavoring to drive our newspapers and our magazines into Canada, or require our people to read Canadian publications. [Applause.]

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. OLNEY].

Mr. OLNEY. Mr. Chairman, I am in accord with nearly all the provisions in this bill, but I am not in sympathy with the section providing for the zone rate as to newspapers, periodicals, and magazines, because I think it will be confiscatory, and I would welcome an opportunity to vote for an amendment which would tax advertising receipts 1, 2, 3, or 4 per cent, which would not be burdensome, and which would be a sensible, businesslike proposition. Only two or three days ago the editor and publisher of the Youth's Companion, with a circulation of 457,000 all over the United States, and with a larger circulation in California, Oregon, and Washington in proportion to the population than in Massachusetts, told me that he preferred to turn over all the profit of his concern to the Government rather than to operate under this section, which is confiscatory.

This bill will raise more than $1,800,000,000, as is proposed, for from personal observation I know of skilled mechanics earnings as high as $90 a week in Massachusetts, and there are thousands of men in Massachusetts to-day employed in industry earning from $6 to $12 a day, all of whom will be liable to taxation under this bill.

To show the House the patriotism of and the sense of duty of one of Massachusetts' finest citizens, and one of its ablest business men, I read the following telegram:

FRAMINGHAM, MASS., April 8, 1917.

RICHARD OLNEY, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.:

As an income-tax payer and an investor in corporations paying income taxes I hope that the privilege of paying the expenses of the war will be allotted largely to those persons and companies paying income taxes. The great burdens of the war in this country will fall largely on the rank and file of Americans, but the financial burden should be carried principally by those that can afford to pay. For those having substantial or larger incomes a tax of 50 per cent would be no great hardship. It is estimated that a tax running from 10 to 30 per cent of incomes will bring more than a billion dollars additional annual revenue and make a foundation for the greatest war fund and credit ever established. I hope that Congress will tax incomes not less than 10 to 30 per cent during the war, and more if needed.

Respectfully,

RICHARD H. LONG.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, in reply to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], I desire to say that our substitute does not change existing law nor alter any treaties we have with Great Britain with reference to Canadian mails. I do not know what particular kind of Canadian magazines or daily newspapers my colleague expects will come over here and flood this country to the detriment of the newspapers and magazines in this country, but they have no greater rights under this substitute than they now have under the law and under the international agreements between this country and Great Britain. We do not change that in the least.

Mr. MANN. Will my colleague yield for a question?

Mr. RAINEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. My colleague does not claim that this committee substitute would increase the postal rate on Canadian magazines or papers?

Mr. RAINEY. It does not change it in the least.

Mr. MANN. While we increase it on our newspapers we do not increase it on Canadian newspapers.

Mr. RAINEY. Whatever rates they have now they will still have under the international agreement.

Mr. MANN. That was my contention.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. My understanding is that Canadian postage into the United States is the same as from the United States into Canada. If that is so, the gentleman from Illinois is entirely incorrect as to his statement. We heard only a part of it.

Mr. HARDY. Will the gentleman yield? Is it not a fact that if this law will produce inequality, diplomatic negotiations will regulate it in the end?

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, the convention between this country and Great Britain fixes it that magazines and newspapers going from the United States to Canada shall have the same rights over there that Canadian magazines have here.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. BLAND: Page 5, line 4, strike out the words "but in no case shall such" and insert in lieu thereof the word "unless."

Line 6, strike out the period at the end of line 6 and insert a comma, and also insert the following:

"In which case such compensation shall be computed upon the basis of the rates of postage provided for in this act, but in no case shall the compensation so computed be greater than that received during such fiscal year."

Mr. KITCHIN. Do I understand that that amendment proposes to strike out in line 4 the words "but in no case shall such," and to insert in its place the word "unless"?

Mr. BLAND. Yes.

Mr. KITCHIN. I see no objection to that. I think that amendment is fair.

Mr. BLAND. This is merely for the purpose of saying by these three lines that we will not make it so that a post office that is on the decline, that has really no earning capacity, shall still give the postmaster quite a large salary. It is intended to correct the last three lines of that section.

Mr. KITCHIN. For instance, where that had been a big lumber camp, the postmaster in 1917 might receive a thousand dollars, and the camp might be removed and the receipts not be over $25.

Mr. BLAND. Exactly. The earning capacity of the post office might not be $25, and yet the Government might have to pay a thousand dollars salary.

Mr. KITCHIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BLAND].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. RANDALL].

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 25, of committee substitute, after the word "zone," insert "Provided, That the Postmaster General shall grant entry of a publication as matter of the second class at one or more post offices, except that such publication shall maintain a known public office for transaction of its business in each town or city where such entry is granted."

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment that I understand the chairman is willing to accept. I so understood him the other day. It gives the papers an opportunity to establish a branch to which they can ship their publications and then send them through the mail under the regular postal rates.

Mr. KITCHIN. That can be done without this amendment.

Mr. RANDALL. No; it can not be admitted to second-class mail matter, except at one post office. I know, for I have been in the publishing business for 15 years or more.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman from North Carolina yield me two minutes?

Mr. KITCHIN. I yield the gentleman two minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MEEKER].

Mr. MEEKER. Mr. Chairman, a few days ago this Congress voted for a free press and has sent word back to the White House and to the administration that we intended to have a free press during this war.

Mr. GORDON. But we do not want to subsidize it.

Mr. MEEKER. We are having a question to-night whether we shall have a national press. A vote for localization of the papers through any zone system means to defeat the very thing that we insisted upon when we voted that there should be no restrictions on the freedom of the press of this Nation.

The last gentleman on that side who spoke for the committee fumbled the ball as to the Canadian papers competing with the American papers. It shows that perhaps the Committee on Ways and Means does not know everything as to postal affairs.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Does anybody know or can they tell what the rate is on Canadian newspapers?

Mr. MEEKER. That makes no difference. It seems that when some gentleman interferes with the Committee on Ways and Means he is called an ignoramus.

This section should be knocked out for two chief reasons: First, a section like this has no business in a revenue bill, and should have come from the Post Office Committee; second, we should not enter on a policy of localization of our magazines and newspapers at the time when above all other times we should have the widest possible circulation.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I yield all the time remaining on this side to the eloquent gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, this is a matter worthy of the consideration of this Congress. There has not been an amendment that has come before this Congress in the last six years that is of as much importance as this amendment. We are turning back 150 years in trying to advance this country. [Applause.] We have been working for the purpose of making one in the West, like that in the East and the North and the South, that our literature might go from the Southern States from the brainy and brilliant men which might be read in the West as well as the literature of the East.

They go to the cities of Chicago, New York, and the other large cities where there are great publications, because those cities bring together the brains of the country; and 75 per cent of the publishers of magazines, the editors, and the writers are country boys gathered from all over the country. They come there that they may get their ideas published; and I believe, notwithstanding the leader on this side of the House, that the committee has sternly stood for the zone system, and there could not be word uttered in behalf of Americanism, and that is what we are voting on to-day. [Applause.] It is not a question of money, it is a question of intelligence and it is a question of Americanism. [Applause.] Now, we are entitled to a respectful consideration, and I want to say to you gentlemen to-night who are so willing to agree to the zone system that you do not know anything about that. You remember when you are meeting your constituents at home that they are in favor of the literature of this country being scattered broadcast from one end of the country to the other. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wyoming to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, is not the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina which seeks to perfect the text entitled to be first voted upon?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks not.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MONDELL) there were—ayes 116, noes 162.

Mr. MANN. I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. MONDELL and Mr. RAINEY.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 136, noes 174.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 198, noes 71.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the fact that one or two matters were left unfinished, with the idea of returning to them.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise. To-morrow I intend to ask unanimous consent to go back to several little matters.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. FOSTER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 4280, and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted to Mr. HULL of Iowa for 10 days on account of the death of his wife.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate joint resolution of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below.

S. J. Res. 66. Joint resolution making immediately available moneys appropriated for the investigation of the pneumatic mail-tube service in the act approved March 3, 1917; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 1 minute a. m., Wednesday, May 23, 1917) the House adjourned until 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting tentative draft of a bill to promote the efficiency of the United States Navy (H. Doc. No. 146); to the Committee on Naval Affairs and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication of the Postmaster General submitting additional estimates of appropriations for the Postal Service, payable from the postal revenues for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917 (H. Doc. No. 147); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on reexamination of Calcasieu River and Pass, La. (H. Doc. No. 148); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: A bill (H. R. 4626) authorizing a preliminary examination and survey of the Columbia River between Carrolls, Wash., and Stella, Wash., and the Cowlitz River below Ostrander, Wash; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. PADGETT: A bill (H. R. 4627) to promote the efficiency of the United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BARKLEY: A bill (H. R. 4628) to conserve the man power and resources of the Nation, to increase the efficiency and safety of the Army, the Navy, and the people of the United States, to conserve the agricultural food products, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROGERS: A bill (H. R. 4629) defining section two of the act approved March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. L., p. 1228); to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LEVER: A bill (H. R. 4630) to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging agriculture and regulating the marketing and distribution of foods and other necessaries of life; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. EMERSON: Resolution (H. Res. 86) to make the song The Star-Spangled Banner the national anthem; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SULZER: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 93) to create a joint committee from the Senate and House of Representatives to investigate Alaskan legislative requirements and report thereon; to the Committee on Rules.

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, favoring woman suffrage for the Territory of Hawaii; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, requesting Congress of the United States to provide ways and means for the dredging of Kalihi Channel of Honolulu, between Honolulu and Kapalama Basin; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, favoring the election of governor and secretary of the Territory of Hawaii by a vote of the people; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. SULZER: Memorial of the Alaska Legislature, praying for the development by the United States Government of Alaska's vast deposits of chrome iron ore; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. HULBERT: Memorial of the General Assembly of the State of New York, requesting the State Department to enter upon negotiations with the allies of the United States to make clear the status of foreign-born citizens who have declared their intention to become citizens of this country in order to serve in its Army and Navy; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. RAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, requesting Congress to provide as expeditiously as possible a fairer and more adequate compensation for those engaged in active service in the Army and Navy of the United States; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, requesting the Federal Government to provide for the sale of white pine in national forests in California, the proceeds to be used in constructing dams and reservoirs, and for collecting, impounding, and conserving the waters of the State, and for protecting the land from flood waters; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CLAYPOOL: A bill (H. R. 4631) granting an increase of pension to William H. Harris; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOREMUS: A bill (H. R. 4632) authorizing the President to recommission in the Regular Army as an additional number Brice P. Disque; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GRAY of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 4633) granting an increase of pension to Ellen Kivlon; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: A bill (H. R. 4634) granting an increase of pension to Lawrence W. Shultz; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LITTLEPAGE: A bill (H. R. 4635) granting an increase of pension to Wilson Abbott; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MADDEN: A bill (H. R. 4636) for the relief of the United Breweries Co., of Chicago, Ill.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. REED: A bill (H. R. 4637) granting an increase of pension to William B. B. Knight; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROSE: A bill (H. R. 4638) granting an increase of pension to William R. Smith; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCOTT of Iowa: A bill (H. R. 4639) granting an increase of pension to William R. Waddell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ZIHLMAN: A bill (H. R. 4640) for the relief of John T. Walsh; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4641) granting an increase of pension to Anne M. Luman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BACHARACH: Petition of sundry members of Trinity Methodist Church, of Bridgeton, N. J., favoring prohibition as a food and health conservation measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of Absecon, N. J., favoring prohibition as a food and health conservation measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BROWNING: Petitions of citizens of Camden, Wenonah, and Camden County, N. J., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of Independent Progress Lodge of Camden, N. J., pledging support to the United States of America; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CARY: Petition of Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America, Local No. 10, of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against the zone system of postal rates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., Milwaukee, Wis., favoring a 1 per cent tax on gross sales of all manufactures except food products; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CURRY of California: Petition of the Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of California, pledging the loyal support of the membership of said order to the President of the United States in his efforts for the successful prosecution of the war with Germany; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DALE of New York: Petition of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association, tendering resources and services to the country; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Edwin P. Gleason's Son, of New York, against advance in letter postage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DALLINGER: Petition of Barry Class of members of the First Baptist Church, of Melrose, Mass., favoring national prohibition and the creation of 5-mile zones around the military camps; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of citizens of Melrose, Mass., asking relief from high prices of necessities; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. ESCH: Memorial of Market Committee of American National Live Stock Association, relative to problems of production and marketing; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. FREAR: Resolution of St. Croix County (Wis.) Council of Defense, organized to assist and cooperate with the Government of the United States and the State of Wisconsin; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FULLER of Illinois: Petition of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, protesting against increase of second-class postage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Harvey (Ill.) Motor Truck Works, protesting against a tax on commercial motor vehicles; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: Memorial of Westchester County (N. Y.) Commission of General Safety, relative to problem of production; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. HAMILTON of New York: Petition of sundry citizens of Brocton, N. Y., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HASTINGS: Petition of the Methodist Forum, Duncan, Okla., requesting prohibition of use of grain and other foodstuff for the manufacture of liquors during the war; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of the Methodist Forum, Duncan, Okla., requesting prohibition of manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors during war with Germany; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of citizens of Richardville, Okla., requesting food legislation; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. HOLLINGSWORTH: Memorial of Rev. Joseph R. Jacobs and 73 other citizens of Wellsville, Ohio, favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HULBERT: Petition of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, opposing tax on moving-picture film; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Vaughn Class, Calvary Baptist Sunday-school, Washington, D. C., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens and publishing companies opposing any increase in postage on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of L. Schepp Co., of New York, against 10 per cent duty on goods on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of New York Association for Protection of Game, relative to treaty for protection of migratory birds; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania: Petition of citizens of the thirtieth district of Pennsylvania, for war-time prohibition; to the Committee of the Judiciary.

By Mr. LESHER: Petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Pennsylvania favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LINTHICUM: Petitions of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., protesting against increase in postage on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Interstate Cottonseed Crushers' Association, tendering their resources and services to the country; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorials of the Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church and sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petitions of Mardel Mobile Co. and Packard Motor Car Co., of Baltimore, Md., against 5 per cent tax on all automobiles at the factory; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., favoring passage of the daylight-saving bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. McFADDEN: Petition of residents of Gouldsboro, Pa., favoring the enactment of prohibition of the manufacture of alcoholic liquors as a measure of food conservation and for the immediate prohibition of the sale of liquors for beverage purposes, in order to conserve the health, wealth, labor, transport facilities, and military efficiency of the people; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MAGEE (by request): Petition of citizens of Syracuse, N. Y., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also (by request), petition of citizens of Cortland, N. Y., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MORIN: Petition of Three Brothers' Lodge, No. 235, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen of Pittsburgh, Pa., J. H. Duxbury, representative, urging the conscription of all incomes in excess of $5,000, and all incomes of corporations above 6 per cent profit, in order to properly finance the war; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'SHAUNESSY: Petition of Newport Medical Society, signed by M. E. Baldwin, M. D., secretary, favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Ernest L. Winston, assistant treasurer, Charles E. Hancock Co., manufacturers of jewelry, favoring a daylight-saving plan; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Rhode Island Anti-Saloon League, favoring national prohibition during the war; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of Newport, R. I., favoring prohibition as a food and health conservation measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Providence Epworth League Union, favoring prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Robert L. Brunet, public-service engineer of Providence, R. I., favoring daylight-saving legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. PAIGE: Memorials of pastor and 20 members of First Methodist Episcopal Church, Fitchburg; Worcester Central Association of Congregational Churches; First Congregational Church, Oxford; Mayor Frank H. Foss, Fitchburg; First Congregational Church, Clinton; Men's Club, Calvinistic Congregational Church, Fitchburg; and Beth Eden Baptist Church, Fitchburg, all in the State of Massachusetts, in favor of national prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PRATT: Petition of Oak Leaf Grange No. 1402, Patrons of Husbandry, by U. M. Bennett, master, and G. F. Beloud, secretary, of Smithboro, N. Y.; opposing the use of grains for distilling purposes and favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of George S. Snyder, Francis Hager, R. M. Smith, W. S. Hager, and Floyd Barrett, representing the Sunday school and congregation of the Burdett (N. Y.) Presbyterian Church, favoring the Gronna-Randall bill "to conserve the foodstuffs used in making intoxicating beverages and limit liquors on hand to nonbeverage uses"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RAKER: Petition of L. H. Linderman, of Norfolk, Nebr., asking that every automobile owner have a certificate of ownership; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Edwin R. Graham, New York City, relative to increase in postal rates on second-class matter; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Blanche Winans, of Piedmont, Cal., favoring tax on profits of publishers, disapproving of tax on postal rates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of California Redwood Association, San Francisco, Cal., against 15 per cent rate advance on lumber; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Eldorado Chamber of Commerce, of Placerville, Cal., against removing of Morgan line of steamships from their present service; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of John P. White, president executive board, United Mine Workers of America, Indianapolis, Ind., protesting against the increase upon second-class postage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of S. Hazard Halstead, Pasadena, Cal., relative to bill pending providing for revision of postal rates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Charles G. Johnson, of Sacramento, Cal., relative to bill providing for the approving of types and serialization by the National Bureau of Standards; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, petition of C. A. Bromch, of Cornelian Bay, Lake Tahoe, Cal., against any attempt to amend the Chinese exclusion law; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Paul Rieger & Co., of San Francisco, Cal., relative to increased tax on perfumes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, Cal., protesting against proposed retroactive tax to be imposed on incomes and profits; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Cigar Makers Union and San Francisco Labor Council, against increase in the revenue tax on cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of C. F. Hamsher, cashier of First National Bank of Los Gatos, Cal., favoring prohibition of liquor traffic for the present; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of California Christian Endeavor Association, of San Francisco, Cal., favoring Nation-wide prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Board of Trade of San Francisco, Cal., opposing amendment to the Federal reserve act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of Jewelers' Vigilance Co., of New York, N. Y., favoring the amendment to the section taxing jewelry; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REED: Memorial of Wesleyan Bible Class of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Charleston, W. Va., favoring national prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROWE: Petition of Helen R. Jones, Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring Calder-Borland daylight-saving bills; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Patent Cereals Co., Geneva, N. Y., protesting against national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Austin Nichols & Co., New York, N. Y., favoring amendment of House bill 4125 and House joint resolution 75, in regard to the standard of purity and quality of food products; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of S. L. Parsons & Co., New York, N. Y.; the Kalkhoff Co., New York, N. Y.; and Brett Lithographing Co., Long Island City, N. Y., all protesting against increased rate on second-class postage rate; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Pineoleum Co., New York, N. Y.; Bristol-Myers Co., New York, N. Y.; and Wallace & Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., all protesting against increased first-class postal rate; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Frank Meany Co., of New York, N. Y., protesting against the increased rate on second-class postage rate; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Joseph Wild & Co., of New York, N. Y., protesting against the increased duty on raw material yarn and fiber; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Merchants' Association of New York, N. Y., protesting against the zone system of postal rates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SNOOK: Memorials of Methodist Episcopal Sunday School of McClure, and George B. Wiltsie and 112 other citizens of Leipsic, both in the State of Ohio, favoring national prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Defiance County, Ohio, favoring establishment of a 5-mile zone around all training camps, Army posts, etc., to be free from alcoholic liquors and camp followers; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SNYDER: Petition of retail druggists of Rome, N. Y., against tax on proprietary and other articles; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of D. L. Bronk and others, of Rome, N. Y., for purity in camp life of soldiers and for national prohibition during the war; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TAGUE: Petition of New England Label Conference, against prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TILSON: Petition of the members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Meriden, Conn., urging that the sale of liquor be prohibited during the continuance of the war; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WALDOW: Petition of the Central Labor Council of Buffalo and vicinity, demanding investigation of labor troubles, etc.; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of the Hamburg Business Men's Club, of Hamburg, N. Y., relative to the establishment of an aviation station at Hamburg, N. Y.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, indorsing the establishment of a naval training station for Buffalo, N. Y.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WALSH: Petition of John E. Stanton and 97 other citizens of New Bedford, Mass., urging the prohibition of the manufacture of alcoholic liquors as a measure of food conservation and for immediate prohibition of sale of liquors for beverage purposes, to conserve the health, wealth, labor, transport facilities, and military efficiency of the people; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WARD: Memorial of Breakabeen (N. Y.) Grange, No. 767, favoring prohibition of manufacture of intoxicants; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WASON: Petition of congregation of Main Street Methodist Episcopal Church and other citizens of Nashua, N. H., for the immediate enactment of prohibition of the manufacture of alcoholic liquors as a measure of food conservation and for the immediate prohibition of the sale of liquors for beverage purposes, in order to conserve the health, wealth, labor, transport facilities, and military efficiency of the people; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of New Hampshire Federation of Women's Clubs, an organization of over 9,000 women, to establish a 5-mile zone free from alcoholic liquors and camp followers around every training camp, Army post, and naval training station; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Herbert J. Davis and 19 other citizens of Meredith, N. H., favoring immediate national prohibition as a war measure in the interest of national preparedness, efficiency, and public morals; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ZIHLMAN: Memorial of mass meeting in Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, Md., urging prohibition as a war measure; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, May 23, 1917.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, the revelation of Thy will to us has set our standards of honor very high, demanding the expenditure of all our powers of manhood and the development of all the manly virtues. We pray that under the inspiration of Thy Holy Spirit we may measure up to the standards of honor that Thou hast revealed to us, that all we do shall be for the glory of Thy name and the advancement in this country of all that Thou hast committed to our hands. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. SMOOT and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. THOMPSON. I present resolutions adopted by Shawnee County Pomona Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, of Kansas, which I ask to have printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SHAWNEE COUNTY POMONA GRANGE, PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY,
Topeka, Kans., May 17, 1917.

Hon. W. H. THOMPSON,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: The following resolutions were unanimously indorsed at a meeting of the Shawnee County Pomona Grange at a meeting held at Oak Grange Hall May 16, 1917, and the secretary was instructed to forward copies to the President and our Representatives:

I.

"Whereas the present shortage of food has enabled certain parties to control the supply and cause prices which are prohibitive to the average wage earner: Therefore be it

"Resolved by the Patrons of Husbandry of Shawnee County, That we urge the administration to establish a maximum price at which the standard food products shall me sold, thereby protecting the people from the inhuman and oppressive acts of the food speculators.

II.

"Whereas the American farmer is expected to raise the maximum amount of food which the land is capable of producing; and
"Whereas the cost of the products of the farm never have been so high as it is at the present time: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the representative farmers, ask that we be assured remunerative prices for all of our staple crops and have a minimum price at which we may sell and a maximum price established at which food products may be sold.

III.

"Whereas there is a world shortage of food and food products and the farmers of our country have been appealed to to use their greatest efforts to produce the maximum amount of food products; and
"Whereas the grain used for the manufacture of alcoholic beverages is worse than wasted: Therefore be it

"Resolved by the Shawnee County Pomona Grange in regular session, That we urge our Representatives in Washington to use their influence and votes to restrict the manufacture of alcoholic products to the actual need of medicine, science, and manufacturing industries."

Respectfully,

MABEL BUCKMAN, Secretary.

Mr. THOMPSON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Anthony, Kans., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the consumption of food products in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. McKELLAR. I present several letters and telegrams from citizens of my State, which I ask to have inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the communications were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE CHATTANOOGA TIMES,
May 16, 1917.

Hon. KENNETH D. MCKELLAR,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Referring again to my letter of the 9th instant, in relation to the tax proposed to be put upon newspapers by the new revenue bill, of course it goes without saying that it would be unjust and unfair to tax publications of any kind with 5 per cent of their advertising receipts, and this feature of the bill should be stricken out by all means. It would likewise be a most unjust tax on the newspapers to put a tariff of 10 per cent on paper imports. I may tell you that the increased price of paper paid by the Chattanooga Times for 1917 over 1916 will entail an additional charge this year of between $35,000 and $40,000 more than was paid for the blank paper last year. Add 10 per cent to this and it would involve an additional $8,000 for 1917, and so that tariff should not be placed upon print paper, for it would break our backs if it were.

Now, with reference to the postal rate. Papers which act straight with the Government should have the present rate, namely, 1 cent a pound. Papers which do not should have their rates increased. What I consider as being papers acting straight with the Government are those which charge the same price or more for the papers which go by mail as is charged by the publication in the cities where the paper is published. A number of papers have the very bad habit, in order to increase their circulations, of charging very much less for papers going by mail than they charge the citizens of their own community. If the second-class mail is carried at a loss by the Government, this is an injustice to the Government, and the papers guilty of this practice should be made to pay for it by a discrimination in the mail rate. For instance, I have before me the price of three papers, whose subscription charges are as follows:

	Per year.
No. 1:
City subscribers	$4.00
By mail	2.40
No. 2:
City subscribers	5.00
By mail	3.00
No. 3:
City subscribers	7.50
By mail	4.20

You will observe by this how manifestly unfair it is to the Government to permit newspapers of this kind to enjoy the benefit of the 1-cent-a-pound rate as against newspapers which charge as much or more for their outside circulation than they do for their city circulation, and this added to the further fact that it costs very much more to get the outside circulation than it does the city circulation, shows that unless a fair price is charged all of the outside circulation by such newspapers it is carried at a loss. The only reason for this cut is to increase the circulation and make the advertiser make up the loss by the added price of advertising space.

When this matter gets before the Senate Finance Committee you might, if you want, use this as a pointer to amend the bill, and make the granting of the 1-cent-a-pound rate only to publishers whose charge for mail circulation is equal to the charge for city circulation.

I have written to Senator SHIELDS along the same line as this one to you, and it might be worth your while to confer together on this subject.

With assurances of my kindest regards and best wishes, I remain,

Very sincerely, yours,

H. C. ADLER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 17, 1917.

Hon. K. D. MCKELLAR,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The following telegram was sent to-day to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States:

"At a public meeting of our industrial division to which all Memphis shippers were invited the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"'Whereas the volume of business of the United States has now reached such vast proportions that the equipment and instrumentalities of the railroads are inadequate to care for the same. Every class of business is suffering by reason of the inefficient delivery service by the railroads. The failure to furnish cars and undue delays in transit through lack of motive power not only costs shippers and receivers of freight thousands of dollars in loss of profits, but creates a higher level of prices than the commodity situation would warrant under normal delivery conditions.

"'Whereas the Government is now placed in a preferential position for buying materials—lumber, steel, and other raw materials—entering into the construction of this equipment, it can build cars at a lower price than private interests, which for this reason is looked upon as an entirely feasible suggestion by this body: Therefore be it

"'Resolved, That a united petition be made to the proper department of the United States Government to consider at once the feasibility of building or purchasing freight cars and locomotives in the volume shown necessary by reports on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was approximated on April 1 as being 143,000 cars short on orders placed with the carriers by shippers for loading. The funds to be taken from the appropriation made for public defense, and the cars to be allotted to the various lines where needed, rental to be charged upon the per diem basis, or other unit to be determined upon as fair and equitable to both the carriers and the Government and high enough to bring the Government ample interest on the investment and to pay the necessary expenses of administration in their use.'

"We ask that this resolution be made the policy of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and that the proper legislative action to put it into effect be urged upon Congress as the only effective means of securing relief."

W. C. JOHNSON,
President Memphis Chamber of Commerce.

THE JOURNAL AND TRIBUNE,
Knoxville, Tenn., May 14, 1917.

Senator KENNETH D. MCKELLAR,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Our present increased expense for 1917, due to increased cost of paper, labor, and other materials necessary to produce a newspaper, will run approximately $35,000 per year. The additional tax as proposed of 5 per cent on advertising receipts would amount to another $7,500 per year. Proposed doubling of postage rates for first zone and tripling in second zone would cost us $8,000 per year. The proposed flat 10 per cent tariff, which would apply to paper which we are buying in Canada and which we will have to buy in Canada the remainder of this year on account of our contract, and probably next year also, will cost us another $7,000 per year.

If these taxes go through, newspapers will be put out of business. We fail to understand why the newspapers should be picked out for slaughter. We are willing to pay the same income tax on profits and excess profits, if we are permitted to make any at all, that other lines of business pay, and trust you will see the justice in opposing any class legislation of this kind.

The bulk of receipts of newspapers is received from advertising. Advertising is not a necessity, and merchants can drop it and are dropping it. It ceases to pay a merchant after he pays a certain amount per thousand readers which are reached, and it is impossible for us to increase rates to take care of this extra burden as is the case of merchants who are dealing in necessities. We can not increase subscription prices enough to take care of this expense either, as this will mean reduction in circulation and less reading of newspapers by the general public, which would be an injury to the country and force lower advertising rates instead of higher ones.

The enormous increased cost of paper has hurt the newspaper more than any other line, and if there is any line in the country which should be freed from further burdens it is certainly the newspaper publishers. We can not pass this tax along to our customers for reasons above explained. Mail subscriptions are already paid for in advance by the subscribers, most of them for a year on the basis of the old postage rates.

The present increased expense and proposed increased expense by these various forms of taxation total up an amount far in excess of our total possible profit. We think the only fair way is to let the newspaper pay the same percentage income tax or excess profit which they might make just as any other line of business does.

In addition to the above, it is proposed to tax freight shipments of paper, papers sent by express, telephone and telegraph bills, all of which will affect newspapers very heavily in comparison with other lines of business.

We hope the above will appear to you to be a fair statement of the situation, which looks terribly alarming to us at the present time.

Very truly, yours,

THE JOURNAL AND TRIBUNE,
A. F. SANFORD, President.

THE INTERSTATE COTTONSEED CRUSHERS' ASSOCIATION,
Dallas, Tex., May 16, 1917.

Hon. KENNETH D. MCKELLAR,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas our country is now allied with those people who are fighting the causes of humanity and democracy; and

Whereas our President has appealed to the people of these United States to conserve their supplies, eliminate wastes and increase efficiency, so that the great resources of this country may be marshaled and thrown on the side of right and justice against autocracy and militarism; and

Whereas the cottonseed crushers are guardians of one of the world's greatest sources of foods and feeds and basis for munitions, all of which are of vital importance at this time; and

Whereas there annually is yielded from the cotton seed an edible oil, equal in quantity and excellence to the total production of butter; and

Whereas while cottonseed meal is recognized as a valuable feed for animals its value as a human food and uses for bread, by the Federal Department of Agriculture, is not generally known or appreciated; and

Whereas the meal alone, if utilized for human food, would supply the equal of 2,000,000 tons of wheat flour, exceeding in value one-eighth of the total production of wheat flour in the United States, and which by reason of its highly concentrated form could be transported to the armies of our allies with less effort than an equal value of wheat flour; and

Whereas such cottonseed flour is so rich in protein that it could well be substituted for a portion of the meat and fats and could be used with efficiency and with beneficial results under the direction of the commissary departments of the different armies.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 15, 1917.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

On behalf of the building and loan associations of Memphis, one of which I represent, I want to protest against the imposition or requirement of any documentary stamp tax upon certificates of stock issued by them. The act of October 22, 1914, section 15, specifically exempted building and loan association stock. Building and loan associations should not be taxed on the certificates representing capital stock. They are unlike all other corporations in this respect. The certificates can not be sold in the open market and are paid for in installments. When shares of running stock are taken out and the member commences to make his payments there has been no money paid in on the same, and the stock is accumulative in small weekly or monthly payments, while the capital stock of an ordinary corporation when issued is fully paid for or the subscriber is obligated to make full payment therefor. I take the liberty of again urging upon you that the building and loan associations should be exempt from the stamp tax. These associations have been an untold blessing to the poor man and the means of building more homes in Memphis than any other medium, and the burden of a stamp tax will fall upon that class which is least able to bear it.

ELI GATES.

Mr. HUSTING presented a petition of Local Branch, American Society of Equity of Colby, Wis., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit gambling and speculating in food products, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Weyauwega, Wis., praying for the prohibition of the use of foodstuffs in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors during the war, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I present a telegram from a large number of wholesale grocers, residents of Tampa, Fla., which I ask to have inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TAMPA, FLA., May 18, 1917.

Hon. PARK TRAMMELL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

We, being wholesale grocers, resident of Tampa, doing business throughout south Florida, having suffered disastrous effects of so-called car shortage, due rather to ineffectual control of equipment of owning roads, having acquainted ourselves with terms of the Esch bill, H. R. 328, amending commerce act in respect of car service, since passed the House and now lodged with the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, believing it provides quickest and surest relief now and for the future, do hereby respectfully petition the exercise of your good offices in having the committee promptly report said Esch bill favorably and thereafter to urge its speedy enactment into law.

Perkins & Sharpe, Baker & Holmes Co., Bonacker Bros., Consolidated Grocery Co., Cumberland & Liberty Mills Co., Ennis & Hudgings, E. E. Freeman, Harman & Hulse, Henerson Bushnell Co., W. W. Jones, Lucas Bros. Co., Markey Harmon Co., Miller Jackson Grain Co., Chas. H. Moorehouse, Oberry & Hall Co., Peninsular Grocery Co., Pittman Grocery Co., Snow & Bryan, Spencer Bros., Tampa Broker Co., Williams & Co., C. B. Witt Co.

Mr. TRAMMELL presented a petition of sundry citizens of Mount Dora, Fla., praying for national prohibition as a war measure, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I simply wish to state that I am in receipt of a great number of telegrams and letters from automobile concerns in my State protesting against the proposed tax on automobiles. I do not feel like asking to have them all printed in the RECORD, nor do I feel like selecting a certain number. I therefore make the statement that these people feel that a tax of 5 per cent upon their industry will be excessive.

I am also in receipt of a great number of letters from newspaper publishers protesting against the proposed change in the rate of postage on second-class mail matter.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have a number of petitions from citizens of Michigan bearing upon the question of prohibition in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors as a measure of food conservation. I send the petitions to the Secretary's desk and ask that they be properly referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The petitions will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FLETCHER presented a petition of sundry citizens of Mount Dora, Fla., praying for national prohibition as a war measure, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland presented petitions of sundry citizens of Roanoke City and Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, praying for national prohibition as a war measure, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GORE. I am directed by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (S. 2344) to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products, to report it with amendments, and I submit a report (No. 44) thereon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (S. 2123) to regulate the practice of podiatry in the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 45) thereon.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. UNDERWOOD:

A bill (S. 2350) to amend section 2237 of the Revised Statutes, fixing the salaries of registers and receivers of United States land offices; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. RANSDELL:

A bill (S. 2351) in reference to a national military park on the Plains of Chalmette, below the city of New Orleans; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STERLING:

A bill (S. 2352) to provide for the abandonment of parts of Thirty-eighth Street and Bellevue Terrace NW. and the public alley between said streets, in block 1812, in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KENYON:

A bill (S. 2353) to reinstate Fred H. Gallup to the rank of captain of Field Artillery in the United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE:

A bill (S. 2355) for the relief of the Milwaukee Bridge Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SWANSON:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 69) authorizing the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution to permit the Secretary of War to erect temporary buildings in the Smithsonian Grounds; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

PRICE OF RAILWAY SUPPLIES.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, those who have had the pleasure of hearing the statement of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] with regard to the proposed increase in railway rates will understand what the consequences of the proposed increases are. It is understood that if they are allowed it will aggregate something like $300,000,000 per year. This demand is based upon the statement—and I think it is true to a degree—that railway supplies of all kind have very greatly increased in price.

I am about to introduce a bill to fix the price of railway supplies in the hope that we may in that way avert the burden which would be placed upon the American people if the rates were increased as proposed.

I ask that the bill be read the first and second time and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The bill (S. 2354) to amend the act to regulate commerce, as amended, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Mr. UNDERWOOD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1786) to amend certain sections of the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 1, 1916, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

WAR REVENUE.

Mr. HARDWICK submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 4280) to provide revenue to defray war expenses, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

CADETS AT MILITARY ACADEMY.

Mr. JONES of Washington submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 67), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be directed to furnish to the Senate as soon as possible the following information:

First. The total number of cadets in the Military Academy at West Point, and number from each State.

Second. The total number of cadets that were to have been appointed under the examination held March 19, 1917, and the States from which they were to be appointed.

Third. The number of cadets to be appointed as the result of the examination of March 19, 1917, and the number of vacancies remaining by reason of the failures in said examination and the States in which such vacancies occur.

Fourth. The time within which such vacancies must be filled.

Fifth. If such vacancies are not to be filled until next year, why not?

Sixth. Have examinations at the time of annual entrance into the Academy been discontinued? If so, why and when were they discontinued.

Seventh. Why are not entrance examinations provided this year for filling the vacancies caused by failures in the March 19 examinations?

Eighth. What is the full capacity of the Military Academy?

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there further morning business of any kind?

Mr. POMERENE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate take up for consideration the bill (S. 634) to promote export trade, and for other purposes.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill, but I was going to suggest that perhaps it would be just as well at this time to ask unanimous consent to take up the calendar under Rule VIII. The bill the Senator now asks to be considered is the first one on the calendar. It would not take long to go through the calendar under Rule VIII and consider bills to which there is no objection.

Mr. POMERENE. I do not quite understand the force of the Senator's suggestion that it is the first bill on the calendar. Why may it not be taken up now?

Mr. SMOOT. The only point is, if we are going on with the calendar we ought to take up the bills in regular order.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I hope we will not go on with the calendar this morning. The chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has just reported a bill which I believe ought to be considered.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, having just been reported from the committee, it will have to go over for a day, unless it is considered by unanimous consent.

Mr. GRONNA. I was in hopes that we could, by unanimous consent, take that bill up to-day and dispose of it.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. POMERENE. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I wish to state that I had risen to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2344) to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products. The bill ought to be given immediate consideration. It vests the Secretary of Agriculture with certain powers that ought to be brought into play if any influence is to be had on the crops for the current year. It is not the measure that was before the Senate the other day, but is entirely different.

Mr. POMERENE. May I ask the Senator to state the substance or subject matter of the bill?

Mr. GORE. It provides for a survey of the food supply. That section is similar to one in the bill which was before us a few days ago. The other provisions relate to seeds and the extermination of hog cholera and other diseases among animals. I think the bill will encounter very little opposition; I hope not, at any rate. I ask the Senator from Ohio if he will not yield to me for that purpose, because this measure has to be passed soon if it is to be of any service this year, as the season is passing.

Mr. POMERENE. I realize that anything which relates to the food products of the country is of primary importance, and if I can have at least a tacit understanding that I may get the export bill up in the very near future I shall not insist upon my motion now. I am more than anxious to help along any legislation that may aid in conserving our food products.

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Senator from Ohio yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the Senator from Ohio has the floor, although it appears to be pretty well occupied at the present time.

Mr. SMOOT. May I ask a question of the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. SMOOT. The bill which the Senator asks unanimous consent to consider has just been reported to the Senate.

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir; but it is printed and on Senators' desks, or will be soon, with a written report.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to ask the Senator whether it is a unanimous report from the committee?

Mr. GORE. It is.

Mr. SMOOT. Then I do not see any objection to taking it up for consideration.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Has the morning business been concluded?

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; there were some so anxious to move to take up bills that the Chair was not able to close it.

Mr. LEWIS. I am anxious that I be not foreclosed before morning business is concluded.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio has withdrawn his request?

Mr. POMERENE. If there is a general desire among Senators to take up the food bill, I certainly withdraw my request now and will attempt to call up the bill later.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I do not want——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator to make an observation for a moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair would like to close the morning business.

Mr. REED. I wish to be indulged for a moment to make a statement. I do not want to object to the consideration of a bill that is urged in this way, but I can not give my consent to take up an important bill that has not been read until I have had an opportunity at least to read it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois has the floor.

WAR WITH GERMANY.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I have been requested by certain of my constituents to present to the Senate a communication, and in connection with the communication I should like to make some observations, possibly for a minute. I will release the Senate from any attention beyond the length of time required by the statement.

I wish to ask if in presenting a petition or memorial at this time I may address myself to it, or must I wait until after the presentation of petitions, letters, or whatever morning business shall have been concluded?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Unless there is some objection, the Senator from Illinois may proceed now, without waiting for the conclusion of morning business.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, there is a matter here, a petition, which awakens my very serious interest.

I call attention that I have been requested to tender to the Senate a communication sent me from a gathering of people from Illinois referring to the visit of Secretary McAdoo in my State, wherein the eminent Secretary seeks to invite the patriotic cooperation of people of the West to the support of the war bonds. This communication says, after omitting unessentials:

> Why should we give our money and our boys, when the President says "We have no grievance"? Why fight for Britain and die and be bankrupt? Why give Britain our money, our men, and then our Navy to satisfy their grievances?
>
> The circular sent us shows that the President's speech in full stated to the women of the Red Cross that we have no cause for fight or war or to pay our money out for bonds for fight or war, that America is not involved.

Mr. President, this, to my thinking, is a reflection of a sentiment that prevails now in the West too generally. I regret, sir, that there has been a complete misapprehension; surely there must be wholly a misapprehension as to what the President of the United States said. If the West, for which in part I speak, really believes that we have no grievance and believes that the President said we have no grievance, there will be a great difficulty on the part of the Secretary of the Treasury or of any official of this Government to either obtain the funds from out of the West or the sons of the West to fight the war.

Mr. President, it seems to me—and I trust this observation that I am making will not be indelicate—that the President of the United States is rather unfortunate in each event when he speaks without his manuscript. He is in each occasion seized by the "critic" for misrepresentation or misinterpretation. He seems to have been misrepresented or wholly misunderstood as to his extempore speech at Indianapolis. His speech concerning the cooperation of the Senate in what he referred to as "teamwork" was held up before the country as an assertion by the President of a direct dictatorship of Congress—an assertion that Congress should have obeyed the direction of a director without regard to the merits of the question or the virtues of the measure. This misunderstanding of the President's address, which was delivered at Indianapolis, called forth many explanations from many sources. It was a long time before a correct interpretation of it was accepted by the country, so persistent were his unjust critics.

Second, when the President spoke at Philadelphia to an assemblage of new citizens he used the expression, "a Nation too proud to fight." We, his friends, were for a long time confronted with the accusation that the President had told the world that America was too proud to resent a grievance or to redress a wrong. Surely, no such thing was ever intended. I made brave and bold upon this floor to set forth that the expression was an adaptation of a very ancient classic that had been used by Chatham in the English Parliament and by Charles Sumner on this floor in his defense of Lincoln, touching the Geneva award, and that this misapprehension and misinterpretation of President Wilson's speech had caused the President to be misrepresented and the country to be misunderstood.

Mr. President, in the West, if these circulars referred to by this communication have been generally distributed, setting forth the President's speech as a declaration from the Commander in Chief of the American Army and Navy proclaiming that we have no grievance, then the interrogation will blaze before the eyes of the people, Why sacrifice the children? Why give the money? Why bankrupt the future? Why have this food control and alleged dictatorship upon the events and conduct of mankind in America? All forms of interrogatory will spring forth with great confusion.

Mr. President, addressing myself to those who circulate this petition, as well as to this distinguished body, let me say that there has been a misapprehension. The President has never said that America had no grievance. What the President said in the speech to which I invite the attention of the distinguished Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL]—whose eminent ability has often been characterized by very drastic utterances here in condemnation of that which he felt to be wrong—the Senator from New Mexico made some adversion a few days past to this quotation supposedly coming from the President. I replied to the accusation at that time. Mr. President, what I wish to make clear is that the President of the United States in his address said America or we have no special grievance—not that America did not have a grievance. To the contrary, all know that America had a grievance that could not be recounted in words, as has been frequently disclosed here in the President's addresses, as well as in the events that have transpired all about us. The expression of the President was that America—we—had no special grievance, meaning that the grievance which America had was not special from that which was had by the other countries which were fighting for the same causes as America was now at war—that is, that the grievance of France, the grievance of Britain, the grievance of democracies was the general grievance which America had; that America's grievance was not special from the grievance of mankind; and that the conflict conducted by America now was not only for America in her general grievance but for mankind, because of the general grievance. Therefore, the President, in view of this peculiar conviction which seems to have settled upon the most respectable portion of the community which my distinguished colleague [Mr. SHERMAN] and myself represent, and which seems to have been distributed in the form of circulars, and echoed with a direct purpose, I desire at this time, sir, to make clear what the assertion of the President really was and what its meaning must clearly be, and, as I conclude, to repeat the observation of Disraeli upon a famous occasion when he said, "Let us trust that hereafter criticism may be made with discrimination and condemnation with justice."

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, on yesterday, when the amendment of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH], with reference to increase of freight rates, came up, I was necessarily absent in connection with departmental work. I simply wish to say that if I had been present I would have voted for that amendment. My views are so strong with reference to the question that I thought I ought to put this statement in the RECORD.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed.

Mr. GORE. I now desire to renew my request for unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2344.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wish that the Senator would make that request a little later in the day so as to let us have an opportunity to read the report.

Mr. GORE. I will say, in response to that suggestion, that if the Senator will permit the bill to be made the unfinished business in this way, I will consent to laying it aside in order that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] may proceed with the bill in which he is interested, until the Senator from Missouri has an opportunity to examine Senate bill 2344.

Mr. REED. That is perfectly agreeable to me.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Oklahoma if he will insist upon a vote upon this bill to-day?

Mr. GORE. I do not imagine it will reach a vote to-day, probably.

Mr. KING. If the Senator intends to press this bill to a vote to-day, I shall object to its present consideration.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I am sure that none of us will insist upon a vote to-day over the objection of any Senator. I believe it is desirable that the Senate should comprehend what is in this bill and get a first impression with reference to it. So far as I am concerned, if any Senator insists upon its being laid aside temporarily, I will join in supporting him in that course. That is my inclination, and I understand the chairman of the committee feels in the same way about it.

Mr. KING. With the understanding as stated by the Senator from Georgia, I shall not object; otherwise I should object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There must not be any misapprehension as to the parliamentary situation. Taking up this bill now by unanimous consent in the morning hour does not make it the unfinished business. The Chair will inquire if there is objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2344) to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products.

Mr. GORE. I ask that the pending bill be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Well, we have just taken it up, and it now goes back to the calendar.

PROMOTION OF EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. POMERENE. I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 634.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I was unable to hear the request of the Senator from Oklahoma. Did he withdraw the request for unanimous consent for the consideration of Senate bill 2344?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He asked that it be temporarily laid aside; and in the morning hour that sends it back to the calendar. The Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 634. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 634) to promote export trade, and for other purposes.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the words "export trade" wherever used in this act mean solely trade or commerce in goods, wares, or merchandise exported, or in the course of being exported from the United States or any Territory thereof to any foreign nation; but the words "export trade" shall not be deemed to include the production, manufacture, or selling for consumption within the United States or any Territory thereof of such goods, wares, or merchandise, or any act in the course of such production or manufacture.

That the words "trade within the United States" wherever used in this act mean trade or commerce among the several States or in any Territory of the United States, or of the District of Columbia, or between any such Territory and another, or between any such Territory or Territories and any State or States or the District of Columbia, or between the District of Columbia and any State or States.

That the word "association" wherever used in this act means any corporation or combination, by contract or otherwise, of two or more persons, partnerships, or corporations.

SEC. 2. That nothing contained in the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, shall be construed as declaring to be illegal an association entered into for the sole purpose of engaging in export trade and actually engaged solely in such export trade, or an agreement made or act done in the course of export trade by such association, provided such association, agreement, or act is not in restraint of trade within the United States, and is not in restraint of the export trade of any domestic competitor of such association: Provided, That such association does not, either in the United States or elsewhere, enter into any agreement, understanding, or conspiracy, or do any act which artificially or intentionally and unduly enhances prices within the United States of commodities of the class exported by such association.

SEC. 3. That nothing contained in section 7 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, shall be construed to forbid the acquisition or ownership by any corporation of the whole or any part of the stock or other capital of any corporation organized solely for the purposes of engaging in export trade, and actually engaged solely in such export trade, unless the effect of such acquisition or ownership may be to restrain trade or substantially lessen competition within the United States.

SEC. 4. That the prohibition against "unfair methods of competition" and the remedies provided for enforcing said prohibition contained in the act entitled "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914, shall be construed as extending to unfair methods of competition used in export trade against competitors engaged in export trade, even though the acts constituting such unfair methods are done without the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.

SEC. 5. That every association now engaged solely in export trade, within 60 days after the passage of this act, and every association entered into hereafter which engages solely in export trade, within 30 days after its creation, shall file with the Federal Trade Commission a verified written statement setting forth the location of its offices or places of business and the names and addresses of all its officers and of all its stockholders or members, and if a corporation, a copy of its certificate or articles of incorporation and by-laws, and if unincorporated, a copy of its articles of contract or association, and on the 1st day of January of each year thereafter it shall make a like statement of the location of its offices or places of business and the names and addresses of all its officers and of all its stockholders or members and of all amendments to and changes in its articles or certificates of incorporation or in its articles or contracts of association. It shall also furnish to the commission such information as the commission may require as to the organization, business, conduct, practices, management, and relation of other associations, corporations, partnerships, and individuals. Any association which shall fail so to do shall not have the benefit of the provisions of section 2 and section 3 of this act, and it shall also forfeit to the United States the sum of $100 for each and every day of the continuance of such failure, which forfeiture shall be payable into the Treasury of the United States, and shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States brought in the district where the association has its principal office or in any district in which it shall do business. It shall be the duty of the various district attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, to prosecute for the recovery of the forfeiture. The costs and expenses of such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the courts of the United States.

Whenever the Federal Trade Commission shall have reason to believe that an association or any agreement made or act done by such association is in restraint of trade within the United States or in restraint of the export trade of any domestic competitor of such association, or that an association either in the United States or elsewhere has entered into any agreement, understanding, or conspiracy, or done any act which artificially or intentionally and unduly enhances prices within the United States of commodities of the class exported by such association, it shall summon such association, its officers, and agents to appear before it, and thereafter conduct an investigation into the alleged violations of law. Upon investigation, if it shall conclude that the law has been violated, it may make to such association recommendations for the readjustment of its business, in order that it may thereafter maintain its organization and management and conduct its business in accordance with law. If such association fail to comply with the recommendations of the Federal Trade Commission, said commission shall refer its findings and recommendations to the Attorney General of the United States for such action thereon as he may deem proper.

For the purpose of enforcing these provisions the Federal Trade Commission shall have all the powers, so far as applicable, given it in "An act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, for the purpose of perfecting the language I have three minor amendments which I wish to offer.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Ohio, were there any hearings on this bill before the committee?

Mr. POMERENE. Oh, yes; there were very full hearings both in the House and in the Senate.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Did they disclose that there were firms and corporations doing an exclusively export business in the United States?

Mr. POMERENE. Does the Senator mean American firms doing exclusively an export business?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. POMERENE. I do not recall as to that.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The bill seems to relate to such firms and corporations as are engaged exclusively in the export trade. That sounds very strange to me. I do not know of any such firms.

Mr. POMERENE. This bill is for the purpose of authorizing the organization of associations to engage in the export business alone.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The language of the bill is "now engaged." I read from section 5:

That every association now engaged solely in export trade—

I do not know of any such concerns. If there are any, of course they ought to be supervised.

Mr. POMERENE. Will the Senator refer me, please, to the language he has before him?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Section 5, at the top of page 4—

Every association now engaged solely in export trade, within 30 days after the passage of this act——

Mr. POMERENE. I suspect that a slight amendment would meet the objection which the Senator has in mind.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I understand that it operates for the benefit of every association hereafter organized, but I wondered what the meaning of that language at the top of page 4 was.

Mr. POMERENE. I suggest that that could be changed so as to make it "now or hereafter." That would meet the objection which the Senator has in mind.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If it is to apply hereafter to corporations and firms organized for the purpose of engaging in the export trade, and that is the purpose of the act—to supervise and regulate and authorize corporations or firms to engage in export trade—that changes the aspect of the bill very materially from my point of view.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The language, I think, if my colleague will read it carefully, does provide for exactly that thing. As I recall, there were in existence some small concerns that were doing practically entirely an export business, but not very extensively; and the law was so framed as to cover not only any that might be in existence now but any that might be hereafter organized.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have another point in my mind, if the Senator from Ohio will permit this observation: Is this an attempt to relieve any corporation or association now engaged in export trade from the restrictions and liabilities of the Sherman antitrust law?

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, there has been a serious dispute, and I think the Senator so understands, as to whether or not the Sherman antitrust law applied to contracts with relation to foreign business. One class of lawyers contend that it does not so apply, another that it does; and in any event there has been some doubt about it. One of the purposes of this act was to permit the formation of associations to deal exclusively in the foreign trade, and to relieve them, so far as the foreign trade was concerned, from the penalties of the Sherman law.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The Senator makes that very plain. If that is the purpose, of course you are attempting to provide an easier and an unrestrained opportunity to extend our export trade.

Mr. POMERENE. That is the purpose of it.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am unable to see why men engaged in the export trade should have any advantage over people engaged in our domestic commerce, which is vastly more important and extensive and vital to our country than the overseas trade which is to be favored by this act.

Mr. POMERENE. Do I understand from the Senator's statement that he is opposed to the principle of the Sherman law?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am opposed to offering American corporations, associations, or companies extra inducements to extend our foreign trade which do not apply to American associations and companies engaged in our domestic commerce; and I am very strongly of the opinion that it would be most unwise, in the present situation of our affairs, to discriminate against the business man who employs American labor and conducts his commerce here, and favor one who merely seeks to utilize this as a base and some foreign country as the source of his trade.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, in part explanation of the views entertained by those who favor this legislation, I may say that I am unqualifiedly in favor of the principles of the Sherman law. I am opposed to these unlawful combinations and monopolies. But this situation presented itself to the American trader abroad: In nearly all of the countries of the Old World combinations and associations have been authorized and encouraged for the purpose of cultivating their foreign trade. For instance, in Germany, as it appeared before the committee, there were at the time of these hearings about 600 cartels or associations formed for the purpose, among other things perhaps, of securing trade among the other nations of the world. Necessarily with combinations of that character they could reduce their expenses of advertising and of cultivating this trade. In this country we refuse, certainly domestically, to permit these associations or combinations—and I think it will appear to Senators that if we were to try to prevent any and all association among our manufacturers and merchants, so far as it related to our foreign trade—they would not be able to meet the foreign cartels or associations upon an equal footing.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan rose.

Mr. POMERENE. Let me add another thought. It also developed that the plan of association had extended so far among some of the European nations that even the governments themselves were entering the field of foreign trade for the purpose of buying and selling to their subjects or citizens; so that our manufacturers and merchants were obliged to go out into the market and meet not only the cartels or combinations among the various business concerns of the Old World but also the all-powerful governments of the Old World.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. POMERENE. I do.

Mr. REED. If it will not interrupt the Senator's line of thought, let me suggest that he is now making a general statement. I should like to know to what extent governments have engaged in business, what governments have so engaged, and in what lines of business.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I do not think I can give the Senator very exact information with regard to that, but since the war began the British Government has been buying food and other military supplies, the French Government has been doing the same thing, and the Italian Government, as I understand, the same thing.

Mr. REED. But, Mr. President, surely that is not the kind of interference with business, or entering into business, that the Senator was discussing a moment ago. That is simply a case of the government buying things that the government needs, which it has always done; but, of course, the amounts that are being purchased now are enormously increased. That, however, is very far from an interference by the government with legitimate business enterprises by entering the field of competition as a business partner with individuals.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, in speaking of the action of the governments I was simply referring to the extent to which these combinations and associations had advanced. Of course, these governments have been buying largely, not only for their own military forces but for their civilians as well. The Government of Germany, it is said, is largely interested in the dyestuffs industry, and we are all aware of the very large combinations that have existed in that industry. Now, one of the difficulties that has confronted the committee was to have this bill so framed as that it would apply only to the foreign trade, and at the same time not affect the domestic trade, or at least affect it in the least degree that it was possible to affect it and at the same time give relief to our business men engaged in foreign trade.

Mr. REED. If the Senator will pardon a further observation, the Senator states that it is said that the German Government is interested in the dye trade. I have read that statement made in about that same way, and then I have read similar statements with reference to other industries and the interference or participation of the government therein, but I have not yet been able to put my finger on any concrete statement. The fact that the German Government might be interested is interesting, but it does not mean anything unless we know the extent of that interest; and I was curious to know whether the committee having charge of the bill had had any hearings and had developed these facts in detail.

Mr. POMERENE. Oh, yes; there were hearings. Several years ago the question with regard to the lumber trade was discussed, and it appeared that those lumber manufacturers and mill owners along the western coast were constantly having difficulty in meeting the competition abroad. I think it was probably four or five years ago when the matter first came before our committee, and they sought to have an amendment made to one of the pending bills which would permit their combining together for the purpose of cultivating this foreign trade. The same condition prevailed in the copper industry. Our producers of copper were not permitted to combine either for the domestic trade—and rightly so—nor, as they thought, for the foreign trade; and the result of it was that those consumers of copper abroad were combining together for the purpose of getting the best possible price for copper, and our copper producers were in a situation where they, as individuals, had to meet the combined consumers of the Old World. That is simply one concrete case.

Mr. REED. I was simply curious to know whether there had been any real hearings on the subject. I judge, from what the Senator states, that there have not been.

Mr. POMERENE. I have before me a statement which is of interest. I read from a report on this bill by Congressman WEBB, in which he says:

> We were cited to a large electrical contract in Chile about two years ago. The German firm or combination during a period of three or four years spent, it is estimated, $60,000 in drawing plans and specifications which were submitted to the Chilean people, while three of our concerns submitted three different plans. The exact amount which each of our concerns spent is not given, but it is three times the amount they should have spent in such close competition.

Now, I realize the importance of this legislation, and the necessity of having it properly hemmed in on all sides so as to interfere as little as possible with the operation of the Sherman antitrust law here in the United States——

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

Mr. POMERENE. And I think that by the amendments which were accepted by the majority of the committee at the last session of Congress we have prevented any evil that might arise in that respect.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. POMERENE. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Perhaps the amendments to which the Senator refers may obviate the difficulty to which I was about to refer; and I will pretermit the question I was about to ask until those amendments are submitted.

Mr. POMERENE. The Senator has misunderstood me, or else I have not made myself clear. We reported at the last session of Congress a bill which had passed the House favorably, with these amendments to which I have just referred; and at the beginning of the present session I introduced in the Senate the House bill with those amendments incorporated in it, so that it appears here as an original bill.

Mr. KING. Then, if the Senator will permit me, I will state that I have received a number of communications in which an apprehension was expressed in regard to this bill. The intimation is made in these communications that a number of domestic manufacturers desiring export trade might form a corporation, and by means of that corporation affect, if not directly, certainly indirectly, the domestic trade, the domestic prices, and domestic commerce, and to that extent might create a monopoly and enhance the prices of the domestic article to the local consumer. I shall be very glad if the Senator will make it clear that this bill will not in any way permit the corporation that may be formed for export trade to effectuate the object to which I have referred.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, that was just one of the difficulties with which the Senate committee had to deal, and we feel that we have met it; and if Senators will give me just a few minutes, I think I can explain how we have met it.

In the first section of the bill we define "export trade" in this language:

> That the words "export trade" wherever used in this act mean solely trade or commerce in goods, wares, or merchandise exported, or in the course of being exported from the United States or any Territory thereof to any foreign nation.

Then, we seek by words of exclusion to further define and limit it. In the bill which passed the House at the last session, this language is used:

> But the words "export trade" shall not be deemed to include the production, manufacture, trading in, or marketing within the United States.

The Senate committee struck out the words "trading in, or marketing" and substituted for them the phrase "or selling for consumption within the United States," so that these export trade associations can buy in the United States for the purpose of selling abroad. But we wanted to prevent them from in any way absorbing the domestic trade, so we changed the language so as to prevent them from "selling for consumption within the United States."

Now, if with that explanation I may go on to the second section, I have before me now a copy of the bill which was reported at the last session of the Senate with the amendments the committee proposed. Section 2 then read as it passed the House:

> That nothing contained in the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, shall be construed as declaring to be illegal an association entered into for the sole purpose of engaging in export trade and actually engaged solely in such export trade, or an agreement made or act done in the course of export trade by such association, provided such association, agreement, or act is not in restraint of trade within the United States and does not restrain the export trade of the United States.

In other words, the language of the House bill first authorized these associations to organize for the purpose of restraining in some sense the export trade, but at the same time adopted an amendment on the floor of the House which read:

> And does not restrain the export trade of the United States.

The committee recommended the striking out of that last clause and substituting the following:

> And is not in restraint of the export trade of any domestic competitor of such association: Provided, That such association does not, either in the United States or elsewhere, enter into any agreement, understanding, or conspiracy, or do any act which artificially or intentionally and unduly enhances prices within the United States of commodities of the class exported by such association.

Of course, we all recognize that under the law of supply and demand the sale of any products abroad will to some extent affect the supply and therefore the prices of goods domestically; but we sought——

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

Mr. POMERENE. Pardon me just a minute. But we sought to avoid, or at least minimize, this result by forbidding these associations from doing anything which would artificially enhance these prices or which would intentionally and unduly enhance them, and we used that phrase because we had in mind the fact that under the natural laws of trade there would be some effect upon prices. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish to ask the Senator several questions in regard to the bill. First, will not the effect of the passage of the bill be that what would be illegal, even a crime, if committed with regard to domestic commerce and against our own people at home, would not be illegal if the same thing were done in foreign commerce against foreigners?

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I think that point has been covered by our Supreme Court. I do not have before me now the case, but it was in a case involving a contract with respect to bananas, as I remember it, in which it was held that the criminal provisions of the Sherman law did not apply to a contract made with respect to the sale of bananas in foreign countries.

In further explanation of what the Senator evidently has in mind I refer him to section 4 and the latter part of section 5. I call his attention especially to the last two paragraphs of section 5, which confer upon the Federal Trade Commission full power over any agreements, transactions, or acts of any of these associations in the foreign trade; and if the commission should find that their agreements, acts, or transactions are violative of the provisions of this bill or, for that matter, of any of our antitrust laws, it can make recommendations for the readjustment of their business, and if they fail to comply with them to make report of their findings and recommendations to the Department of Justice for their action thereon.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand the Federal Trade Commission has a general supervision over these contracts, but at the same time the Federal Trade Commission would not have authority, as I understand it, thus to take any action contrary to the law itself. Does not the law permit the doing of things in the foreign trade which if done in the domestic trade would be contrary to law, and is not that one of the objects of the legislation?

Mr. POMERENE. I think perhaps I explained that a moment ago.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator did, as far as criminal acts are concerned.

Mr. POMERENE. The purpose is simply to legalize associations in developing the foreign trade, about which there was considerable doubt in the minds of many able lawyers without this legislation.

Mr. NORRIS. But would those same associations be illegal under our law if they engaged in our domestic trade?

Mr. POMERENE. They would be if they were engaged in domestic trade. The Senator is right.

Mr. NORRIS. That is the point I want to get at. I want to ask the Senator another question. I am seeking to get light on the object of the legislation. He spoke of the handicap that American manufacturers and exporters had in competition in foreign countries with foreign companies and associations. I understand the object of this combination in the foreign trade is to enable those who combine to sell in foreign trade cheaper than they would be able to sell if they were not allowed to combine; otherwise there could not be any object I can see in permitting the combination.

Mr. POMERENE. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. Now, the very same combination we permit by this law to reduce the price of the product to the consumer we prohibit in our domestic commerce for the reason that we go on the theory at least that it increased the cost of the product to the consumer. Is not that true?

Mr. POMERENE. No; I think the Senator is not correct in that statement. When it comes to our domestic trade, of course, by combination they can reduce expense and at the same time they can and do increase the price to the consumer.

Mr. NORRIS. That is the danger of combination.

Mr. POMERENE. I beg pardon.

Mr. NORRIS. I think that is one of the dangers of combination, and it is one of the objects of our law in making it illegal.

Mr. POMERENE. I realize that very well, but it was because of that fact we passed the Sherman antitrust law of 1890. It was intended to meet a very grievous evil in our domestic commerce. But now, when it comes to our dealing with our competitors abroad, we are not concerned about giving to the foreign consumer a minimum price.

Mr. NORRIS. No; but——

Mr. POMERENE. Pardon me just a minute. But we are interested in putting our domestic business men upon a footing as nearly equal to the foreign competitor as we can.

Mr. NORRIS. I agree to that. But the Senator, I think, must see this point—he argued it himself—that our exporters were handicapped from the fact that they could not compete in foreign countries with the foreign associations, and I take it that that means that the foreigner underbid us—that is, he sold cheaper to the consumer than we were able to do. So the object of the combination abroad is to sell cheaper to the consumer.

Mr. POMERENE. In the foreign trade.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes. If that is true, while there may be sufficient reason for it—I am not saying there is—it seems to me we are square up against this proposition, that we are going to permit combination in foreign trade to reduce the price of articles to the consumer, but we are going to prohibit it in domestic trade, because it increases the price to the consumer.

Mr. POMERENE. If the Senator will note the first definition of the phrase "export trade" in section 1, and then note the limitation in section 2——

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I have done that.

Mr. POMERENE. Section 2 gives them the right to make these agreements and do all these acts, but these acts, in the first place, shall not be in restraint of trade within the United States, and they shall not be in restraint of the export trade of any domestic competitior. That means one of our own citizens in the foreign trade.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I understand that.

Mr. POMERENE. Then the last proviso is—

That such association does not, either in the United States or elsewhere, enter into any agreement, understanding, or conspiracy, or do any act which artificially or intentionally and unduly enhances prices within the United States of commodities of the class exported by such association.

Mr. NORRIS. I think it is perfectly plain that the object is there that they shall not enter into any conspiracy in regard to the articles here in the United States; but is it not the very opposite that they are permitted to do in the foreign trade?

Mr. POMERENE. So far as the foreign trade is concerned, we are giving them the right to enter into these associations for the purpose of seizing the foreign trade, if possible, whether in the land of our competitors or in the land of some third nation. We believe that as long as these practices exist in the foreign country among their citizens and business men we ought not to deny those privileges to our own business people in seeking the foreign trade. To refuse our people the right to form these associations is to handicap them in selling abroad.

Mr. NORRIS. There is a question in my mind whether we ought to require one rule of conduct in dealing with our own people and permit a different and more liberal one when dealing with some one else. After all, the object of it is to reduce the overhead expenses by the combination, and in theory every combination can do that. We know, as the Senator said, in practice that is not the result, as a rule, and that is the reason why we prohibit it; but it does not seem to me quite right that we should permit a combination to deal in foreign trade that we prohibit in dealing in domestic trade.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, from the standpoint of world ethics there is great force in what the Senator from Nebraska says, but we have not reached that high plane of business morals which will permit us to extend the same privileges to the peoples of the earth outside of the United States that we extend to those within the United States.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SHAFROTH in the chair). Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. POMERENE. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I can understand very well how this language on the top of page 3 applies to exporters, associations or companies, formed to export their own products; but it seems to me the language as it is puts producers who are not exporters in some cases at the mercy of exporters' associations. For example, all exporters of cotton are buyers of cotton and not producers of it. Their main business is to buy the cotton just as cheaply as they possibly can. The bill absolutely permits them to form an association for the purpose of controlling as far as they can the exportation of cotton, and with their interest and their wish, which is to buy as cheaply as possible, they are left to bear down the price of cotton. The same thing applies to tobacco.

Now, then, you have this language: You forbid a conspiracy to "do any act which artificially or intentionally and unduly enhances prices within the United States." That ought to be left, but you ought also to put something more in there so that it would forbid a conspiracy to do any act which artificially or intentionally and unduly enhances or decreases prices in the United States, so that one of these exporters' associations may not rob the tobacco farmer of Kentucky and North Carolina and the cotton farmer of Mississippi and Alabama by using this immense power for the purpose of bearing down the price within the United States, because if there is that immense power given them they can decrease the price in the export market of cotton, for example, where two-thirds of the product is exported, and if so, they necessarily decrease its price in the home market at the same time. So I suggest to the Senator to consider at any rate the suggestion of putting the words "or decreases" after the word "enhances," in line 2, page 3.

Mr. POMERENE. The suggestion is a valuable one. I am not prepared to say whether I would be quite willing to accept it at the present time. But would not this be the natural thing for these exporters to do? Are they not interested in getting just as high a price for their cotton abroad as they can get?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No.

Mr. POMERENE. Why?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Because they are interested in buying the cotton as cheaply as possible, so that they can sell it abroad as cheaply as possible against the cotton of India and Egypt, while they secure the same profit or a higher profit. There is no use of talking about that. All cotton exporters who are cotton buyers buy the cotton as cheaply as they can, while the man who produces the cotton sells it as high as he knows how, and we put in competition with one another the Liverpool man who buys cotton and the American man who buys it for the manufacturers in each country.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. POMERENE. I yield.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I had intended to suggest the very point that has just been suggested by the Senator from Mississippi. It seems to me that it should be carried a little further. The Senator from Mississippi suggests what might happen to cotton and tobacco. The same thing might also happen with regard to wheat and corn or any other agricultural product.

While, of course, I am not prepared to suggest the remedy, might not the scope of this bill be limited to manufactured products, so that the foreign buyer may not have to look to one exporting concern as fixing the price of any given agricultural commodity?

Mr. POMERENE. I do not think that would be likely to happen. We, of course, raise a large surplus of wheat and of cotton in this country, and I think that, while it is possible that some of these organizations might enter into some agreement for the purpose of reducing the prices which they were to get from their vendees, yet at the same time I can not understand what would be the motive back of it.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio further yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. POMERENE. I yield.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I do not pretend to be an expert in regard to the tobacco market, but I have often heard the observation that there are certain classes of tobacco in the United States which are used principally by one foreign nation, and the purchasers of that tobacco have combined so as to absolutely control the price of that commodity in this country. If the organization permitted by this bill is to combine in such a way that it might control the supply of the commodity in this country—that is, the supply which would go into the export trade—it would really furnish but one vendor of the commodity and would enable that vendor to so arrange the foreign market as to practically provide only one purchaser, and at a price fixed by the exporter, and in that way absolutely control the price of the commodity in the United States and depress that price.

Mr. POMERENE. If there were an attempt to enter into any association for the purpose of reducing prices abroad, and as a consequence thereby to reduce the prices to our producers here at home, it would not be what was intended. I should seriously doubt, however, whether there was any real probability of such a thing occurring. However, I wish to suggest to Senators this amendment.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. POMERENE. I shall do so in just a moment. The substitution of the word "affect" for the word "enhance" would, it seems to me, meet the situation which the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] and the Senator from Mississippi have in mind. I now yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. WEEKS. I am in favor of the principle which underlies this bill; I think legislation of this kind should be enacted; but I am a good deal disturbed by the language which is being now discussed. I do not see how any man is going to determine what will artificially enhance prices, however honest he may be, and I do not see how any body of men can say what "unduly enhances prices." What is the standard which is going to govern them in determining an undue enhancement of a price or an artificial enhancement of a price? Of course, if the language of the bill were limited to "enter into any conspiracy which intentionally enhances prices," that would be perfectly plain and frank, and there would be no objection to it, but the other qualifying words, it seems to me, are going to build up trouble for the very men who are going to engage in this business, and are going to retard the effect which otherwise it might have.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I desire to say, in answer to the Senator from Massachusetts——

Mr. KELLOGG rose.

Mr. POMERENE. One moment, please, and then I will yield to the Senator from Minnesota—that I think if the Senator from Massachusetts had given some thought to the formulation of a rule which would permit the advocates of this measure to do what it is sought to do, and at the same time make it perfectly clear so as to meet all contingencies, he would realize the task which confronted the committee. It must be borne in mind that all these agreements, all these acts, all these associations, are under the supervision of the Federal Trade Commission, and that they will be acting as an advisory board in the same capacity they now act in our domestic commerce with reference to the evil of unfair competition.

I dare say that we can cite concrete cases which the Senator and I would at once agree were unfair competition; but it would be utterly impossible for us, and it has been impossible for any lawyer or any court, to give a comprehensive definition of "unfair competition" which is going to meet every contingency that may arise. Our thought was that, if we could frame this bill in such a way as to show the real purpose, the general purpose, with respect to foreign trade, the Federal Trade Commission could be trusted to apply it to cases arising in practice.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, assuming that we are willing to do that and that the conclusion of the commission might be altogether wise, what assurance has the commission that the Department of Justice may not take a different view and proceed against these combinations under the provisions of the Sherman Antitrust Act?

Mr. POMERENE. It might do that.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

Mr. POMERENE. But, if the Senator from Minnesota will permit me, if it related to the foreign trade—and that is the purpose of this bill—I think it is pretty clear, at least it is clear to my own mind, that the criminal penalties under the Sherman antitrust law would not apply to these foreign contracts or associations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. POMERENE. I now yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. KELLOGG. I should like to make a suggestion to the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS] of a case to which this proviso might apply. Suppose a large number of manufacturers, for the very purpose of increasing their exports—not for profit in the exports, but for enhancing prices in this country—or, on the other hand, suppose for the purpose of depressing prices in this country they should increase those exports temporarily, if that is done with that intention, this proviso would reach them; but the possible or slight increase of prices which would go by stimulation of trade would not be affected by this proviso.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, there are several minor amendments which I wish now to submit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio has already sent to the desk one amendment, which the Secretary will now state.

The SECRETARY. In section 1, page 2, line 4, after the word "or" where it first occurs, it is proposed to strike out the word "of" and to insert the word "in," so as to read:

Or in the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. POMERENE. I now send to the desk a second amendment, to come in on page 4.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 5, page 4, line 11, before the word "contract," it is proposed to strike out the word "of" and insert "or"; in the same line, before the word "association" to strike out the word "or" and to insert the word "of"; in line 18, before the word "organization," to strike out the word "the" and to insert the word "its"; and in line 20, to strike out the word "of," the first word in the line, and insert "to," so as to read:

SEC. 5. That every association now engaged solely in export trade, within 60 days after the passage of this act, and every association entered into hereafter which engages solely in export trade, within 30 days after its creation, shall file with the Federal Trade Commission a verified written statement setting forth the location of its offices or places of business and the names and addresses of all its officers and of all its stockholders or members, and if a corporation, a copy of its certificate or articles of incorporation and by-laws, and if unincorporated, a copy of its articles or contract of association, and on the 1st day of January of each year thereafter it shall make a like statement of the location of its offices or places of business and the names and addresses of all its officers and of all its stockholders or members and of all amendments to and changes in its articles or certificates of incorporation or in its articles or contracts of association. It shall also furnish to the commission such information as the commission may require as to its organization, business, conduct, practices, management and relation to other associations, corporations, partnerships, and individuals.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, before voting on this bill I think we might have some terse and direct information from the Senator in charge as to exactly what it will do and what it will not do. If I understand the purpose and intent of this bill, it is to allow an act to be legitimate if done in connection with the export trade which would be illegitimate if done in relation to our general internal trade. I understand that that is agreed to by the Senator having the bill in charge.

Mr. POMERENE. When it comes to the matter of the organization of associations or entering into contracts for the performance of any act in the foreign trade.

Mr. McCUMBER. On the face of it——

Mr. POMERENE. Let me qualify that further by saying, in the foreign trade, as defined in section 1 of this bill.

Mr. McCUMBER. Upon the face of the bill to one who has not made a special study of it, as have the Senator and the members of his committee, it would appear that the purpose is to make that which is illegitimate relating to the people of the United States perfectly legitimate when relating to foreign peoples. I desire to ask the Senator if, under this bill, as he would amend it, it would be perfectly legitimate for manufacturers in this country to combine to fix the prices of their products exported to a foreign country?

Mr. POMERENE. They could combine for the purpose of offering bids, for the purpose of entering into contracts, and for the purpose of fixing the price which they would offer to a foreign consumer.

Mr. McCUMBER. Then, while we are at war, with half the world on our side and the other half against us, exporters in this country could buy up food products and combine to fix the prices of those products in selling them to our allies. So, too, the manufacturers and exporters of munitions of war, under the provisions of this bill as it will be when amended, can legitimately enter into contracts with each other to "hold up" our allies in the matter of munitions of war, and they can do many things along the same line in reference to clothing and in reference to anything else that is necessary in order to conduct the war.

Mr. POMERENE. They could not do it so as to affect the price to our own people.

Mr. McCUMBER. But that is not the question. Could they do it to affect the prices to those with whom we are engaged in prosecuting war?

Mr. POMERENE. I think perhaps that could be done, if they were to go to that extreme.

Mr. McCUMBER. Well, Mr. President, I know of no moral code that is not as applicable to a foreign citizen as to our own citizen. I can not conceive that it is any less immoral for me to cheat or impose upon a foreign citizen than it is for me to cheat or impose upon an American citizen; and, especially at a time when we are engaged in this titanic struggle, I would think it almost criminal to allow people in this country, against whom we have placed a prohibition to guard our own citizens, to be perfectly free to commit the same acts against other people with whom we are associated in the conduct of a great war. I can not but believe, Mr. President, that we ought not to allow them to make any combinations to fix prices even for the export trade.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I was going to say to the Senator that, if I read this bill correctly, we are not only to have a code of law which will apply to the European doing business here as an exporter, which does not apply to the American doing business in this country, we are to say to any foreigner or American trader who seeks to monopolize any product in the American market for the export trade, that he may come here and associate himself with others for that purpose, solely without the restrictions or the restraints which the American business man is obliged to meet.

I assert, without any hesitation whatever, that a company organized to control the wheat product of the United States, if such a thing were possible in the present crisis, would have warrant for so doing under the law of the United States if his purpose was to sell it for export. I say that there is not a refiner of sugar in America who could not create an organization, with headquarters anywhere in the United States, for the purpose of buying and refining sugar for export, and thus buy every ounce of sugar that comes to this country from Cuba without the restraints and the restrictions of the law which are imposed upon the American dealer; such an organization could deplete the American supply of this or any other product, and under the protection of the law do incalculable harm to the domestic consumer.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. KELLOGG. I should like to ask the Senator from North Dakota if foreign countries in relation to their manufacturers and shippers make any restrictions at all?

Mr. McCUMBER. I do not know that they do.

Mr. KELLOGG. England and France, who are engaged in this war, permit their manufacturers to combine in selling to foreign countries, and also——

Mr. McCUMBER. And also to their own, do they not?

Mr. KELLOGG. Yes; and also to their own.

Mr. McCUMBER. They have not made any different law applicable to their own people and the rest of the world, so far as I know, unless by their tariff laws, with bounty provisions, and so forth, but we seek here to make an act a crime that is committed against an American citizen which is to be perfectly legitimate if committed against the citizen of any other country.

I understand that the Senator from Ohio admits that that is true. In other words, he admits that our exporters of foodstuffs may combine to fix the prices of food products, and in that way they may cripple the very countries with which we have joined in prosecuting a great war. I do not believe it is good policy, whether we are in war or out of war, to declare that a certain act is a crime if committed against an American citizen, but that it is perfectly permissible if committed against a citizen of any other country.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield the floor.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Then I will make my observations in my own time.

The producers of print paper in the United States who are now under investigation for an attempted violation of the Sherman antitrust law could, under this act, do exactly what they are prosecuted for doing if they confined their operations to the export trade either with European countries, Canada, Central or South America.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I should like to ask the Senator if he does not think his point could be met by making changes in the language on the second line of page 3 and line 18 of page 5 by changing the word "enhances" to the word "affects"?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No, Mr. President, but I think the suggestion of the Senator from New Mexico would safeguard one aspect; but you can not meet my entire objection by that kind of an amendment.

Let me say again that the producers of print paper in the United States—and it is only one of a hundred illustrations that I can give—are now being prosecuted by the Government of the United States because of a supposed violation of the Sherman law. While they are so arraigned in the courts, it is possible for those same companies and individuals to associate together to send every ounce of print paper abroad, at any price that they might impose, and escape the Sherman antitrust law entirely.

Mr. President, there is not a granary in America that could not escape the responsibility of a combination in restraint of trade by getting together with other granaries and forming an association under the privileges of this law to export every bushel of wheat abroad, and are we to encourage this by a modification of our wholesome laws? If we propose to encourage our domestic commerce and stimulate wholesome competition, we ought at least not to make it easier for combinations of capital to direct our necessaries of life into foreign channels rather than to trade among ourselves. I am a firm believer in the importance of the domestic market place. It is of so much more importance to the country than our foreign trade that I marvel that people think so much and speak so often of the small excess which we send abroad. Why, our foreign trade is nothing compared with our domestic commerce; and yet men engaged in our domestic commerce are to be limited and restricted and restrained in the exercise of their enterprise and initiative, while the widest possible latitude is afforded to other associations in foreign commerce.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. McCUMBER. I just want to suggest to the Senator that as I understand this amendment, it would so leave our antitrust laws that all the exporters of grain, say, could select a single agent who would have control of the selling of all of their exports and leave in the hands of one man the right to fix their prices.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from North Dakota what would be the result of that kind of an arrangement as to prices? Prices would go up, would they not?

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes; but it might not affect the prices much in the United States.

Mr. KENYON. No.

Mr. McCUMBER. But it would make them go up excessively to a foreign country.

Mr. KENYON. Yes; to the people abroad who are now borrowing money from us in order to live.

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes; we would loan them the money, and the money would be in the shape of a credit on this side, and then they could buy back our wheat and war munitions at four times their cost.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. POINDEXTER. As I understand the objection being made by the Senator from Michigan, it is rather the opposite end of the transaction from that just referred to by the Senator from Iowa. It is very true that the establishment of a common selling agency abroad would be for the purpose of holding up the price and getting as much as possible, under the old law maxim that the seller sells for as much as he can.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. POINDEXTER. But under the authority to combine, the same identical motive would permit combinations maintained in the United States to put down the prices in the United States. The agent that was engaged in buying wheat, for instance, in the United States, to sell in Germany or France, would want to buy it at as low a price as he possibly could in the United States, and this would enable him to do it; and the tendency would be to put the price down in the United States.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan yield to me for a minute?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes, Mr. President; but I wanted to answer the Senator from Washington.

Mr. MYERS. Certainly. I will not interrupt the Senator at this time.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If the Senator desires to say something to the Senator from Washington, I shall be very glad to yield.

Mr. MYERS. No; if the Senator wants to reply to the question I will not interrupt him now.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Take the case of sugar, which I cited just a moment ago. It is a well-known fact that we do not produce the sugar we need; that we are seriously bothered at times in getting enough to supply our domestic consumption. We rely upon foreign sugar. When we were at peace and the world was at peace, the European Governments made it absolutely impossible for any bountyized sugar to find its way into any of those countries; but now, when the production has fallen off, and their domestic product does not meet their requirements, they are in the world's market. Our relations with Cuba are such that we give them a preferential at our customhouses, and the sugar of Cuba comes here; but this raw sugar is different from the beet sugar, in that the beet sugar is refined at the factory, while the raw sugar goes through the sugar-refining company's plant. I assert without any hesitation whatever that it is possible for the refiner of sugar, under this proposed law, to relieve himself from the penalties of the Sherman law and of the Clayton Act, and carry on an export business in Cuban sugar to be refined in this country without any limitations whatever upon his right to operate in restraint of trade and with dual associations, now prevented by the Clayton law, with no reference whatever to price or as to the sources from which he might gather his capital.

Now, if we are ready to make such an innovation upon well-established laws with reference to trade and commerce to which the people of the country have accustomed themselves, all right; but I do not like to see it done in this way. This is a repeal of the Sherman antitrust law, and it is a repeal of the Clayton Act, in that it permits one corporation to own stock in another corporation, contrary to that wholesome law. If corporations or associations may do this, they may direct their activities to any article of American necessity; and if they address themselves to an article of American necessity and corner it for purposes of export, they have done incalculable damage to the American people, and they have done it with our consent.

For instance, take the coast, represented so ably by my friends from Washington, who are both doing me the honor to listen to what I have to say. If Capt. Dollar and the Weyerhausers and the Booth-Kellys can step out from under our domestic law and organize a gigantic company to engage in the export of lumber, they may make more money in that field than in this; but are we doing the appropriate thing to encourage them to sell an article of necessity abroad under the stimulus of a gigantic organization, lessening the home supply, and fixing prices at an arbitrary standard? And suppose they have left one or two operators in the same field outside of their organization; what is to be the effect then?

I think great harm could work out of this statute. I think it is most inopportune. At a time when the temptation exists to get large profits even on the part of those who are restrained by our corporate laws, Mr. President, it seems to me that we are showing very great lack of consideration for our countrymen when we deliberately open the way to the organization of a gigantic monopoly in foodstuffs, in munitions, and in other products, which will be absolutely unrestrained in their broad quest for gain.

As a protectionist I have always believed that we should offer inducements for Europeans to come here and establish their factories and employ our labor and manufacture their products here; but as a protectionist I am far from convinced that we can wisely create favorite zones for the conduct of our export trade and give them advantages over the people engaged in our domestic commerce.

I have always favored a policy that would stimulate competition in this market place in order that our people might get the necessities of life at the lowest possible cost. I have rejoiced when I have seen people abandon their foreign homes and come over here and engage in our commerce, and by so doing they have lessened the cost of production manyfold. But here is a case where, for the sole purpose of getting into a larger export trade, we pass out favors that would not be tolerated in our domestic industry. I see great danger in it, I am frank to say. I know that the Senator from Ohio and his associates are animated by a high purpose. No one questions their motives, but they are overzealous and the plan immature and, in my opinion, ill advised.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I have a great regard for the Senator's opinion upon this or any other question, and it is for the purpose of ascertaining his opinion that I am interrupting him.

I readily agree with the Senator in opposition to anything in this bill, if there is anything in it—and I am not sure but that there is—which would tend toward weakening the antitrust laws as they apply to our domestic trade; but I should like to make this inquiry of the Senator: Assuming that we can exclude from the operation of the bill effects upon domestic trade, and effects upon domestic supply and demand, and exclude the effect which the Senator fears of the prices of necessities of life being enhanced to our own people by some combination in restraint of trade, does the Senator object to an arrangement by which those of our people who are engaged in selling goods in foreign countries can be put upon an equal footing with the people in competition with whom they are doing business in those foreign countries?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think that is a fair question.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Would the Senator object to permitting them to make such business arrangements as would enable them to get a better price in a foreign country for the products of this country?

Of course, the Senator can not listen to me and listen to the Senator from Wisconsin at the same time——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am listening to the Senator.

Mr. POINDEXTER (continuing). Unless he is mentally ambidextrous, like some of these Japanese performers whom you see writing four different ways at once.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do not plead guilty to being "ambidextrous." I shall be glad to hear the Senator.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Would the Senator object to their being able to sell their goods for a better price abroad?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Now, I will answer the Senator.

In the first place, the only thing they can sell abroad is the thing that the people abroad want. You can not give them anything they do not want. They would not pay the freight on it. Now, if they want what we want at the same time, then the Senator can readily understand that any authority of law which enables a combintion to monopolize the domestic supply for the purpose of export will have a tendency to raise the price of what is needed for our domestic consumption. What do we gain by that?

Take the case of sugar, to which I referred a moment ago, where our domestic supply is inadequate to meet our demands. For the purpose of enabling these favored associations to engage in the export of sugar, are we to give them extraordinary favors and take them out from under the wholesome restraints of our laws?

I think that would be strange; are we conspiring against ourselves? We need this sugar at home. If they can combine without the restraints of the Sherman law and fix the price at 20 cents a pound for sugar, on the theory of this bill, they would be justified in doing so, regardless of the necessities of our own people.

Mr. POINDEXTER. They are not able to do that when sugar is low. How could they do it if sugar is high? If they can not sell sugar at the present prices, how could they sell it at increased prices?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. They can not sell it abroad at certain periods because the sugar-producing countries of the Old World will not allow them to sell it abroad. For years not a ton of Cuban sugar has been sold in a European market place because we were extending them special favors and by reason of such favors they were not permitted to vend their sugar in Europe.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I do not think that this question would have any effect on the sugar market at all.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Only by creating a scarcity of the product at home, which this bill enables combinations to do, without legal responsibility to the American people.

Mr. POINDEXTER. We would be exporters of sugar. The remark of the Senator that foreign countries did not permit sugar to be imported under such prohibitive tariff regulations as to build up the domestic sugar industry furnishes also an answer to some extent to the objection advanced by the Senator from North Dakota, which has a great deal of merit to it. It answers this, that when we come to dealing in foreign countries with great independent sovereignties we can leave it to them to protect themselves. They control the trade in their domain. We need not be uneasy about our foreign exporters working any injustice upon the people in Great Britain or France, because they have great intelligent governments that know how to enact laws for the protection of themselves from any trade injustice.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Necessity knows no bounds. These combinations would take advantage of the world's necessities, and we would be included in such a raid.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do. I was about to yield the floor.

Mr. KELLOGG. I do not wish to make any extended statement at this time, but I should like to suggest to the Senator from Michigan whether or not, when the war closes, this country is not going to engage in very keen competition with foreign countries for foreign trade. I am not talking of the conditions that exist during the war; I doubt if this bill would have any effect during the war; but after the war is over, is it not a fact that we are going to be engaged in a very keen competition for foreign commerce, which will be of the most vital importance to all classes of manufacturers and producers in this country, and whether we should put our manufacturers and producers on the same basis in foreign commerce as those manufacturers in foreign countries is a question that I think we should very seriously consider in this bill. I do not think anyone will accuse me of wanting to do away with the Sherman Act——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, no, Mr. President.

Mr. KELLOGG. After all the years I struggled to enforce it. I am not going to make any speech on this bill at the present time, but I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Michigan to the fact

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The Senator's inquiry is, of course, like all his inquiries—worthy of very careful thought. I have no doubt the world situation will be such at the close of the war that we may be called upon to meet a trying situation calling for our best thought; but now when products are so necessary to human life as well here as abroad, now when our people are apprehensive and other peoples are anxious to secure some hold upon our output, it seems to me to be a most inappropriate time to suggest to aliens and others that they can come here and organize combinations under our laws which, without restriction or restraint, can gather the output of our factories or of our farms, hold and sell it abroad only at any price they are willing to exact, and thus deprive our people of their normal supply of the necessities of life.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I should like to ask the Senator from Michigan, the hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, if it would be convenient for him to yield to me to move to take up Senate bill 2344 and make it the unfinished business?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am very glad to yield for that purpose.

Mr. McCUMBER. Before the pending bill goes over I should like to say one word with reference to the suggestion of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. KELLOGG], that after the close of this war there will be a great world struggle for supremacy in commerce. Let us stop a moment and analyze that. In our contest with the rest of the world in the commercial field we can only hope to sell to foreign people as against our competitors when we sell for less than they do. If we can not sell as cheaply or sell for less they will get the trade.

Now, how are we going to meet that with a bill of this kind? I will tell you how. It will allow the great manufacturers in the United States to combine and fix a price that will compete with the foreign manufacturer in the foreign trade, and much lower than he fixes the price to the American people. Therefore he will have one price for the foreigner, if he is allowed to make such a combination, and he will have another price for the American, for under our present law he can not combine for the one purpose, but he can combine to lower it.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. McCUMBER. In just a moment. He can combine to lower it to the foreigner. I have a conviction that if anybody is entitled to the lower price it is the American people first, and we should not attempt to assist those people to sell more cheaply abroad than they do at home.

Mr. WALSH. May I say a word?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] has the floor. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. Before the Senator from North Dakota takes his seat I wish to advert to the fact that the domestic merchant will not be able to combine with his fellows to fix the price to the domestic consumer, and that is the theory of the bill. Of course, if producers were permitted to combine and fix the price in the foreign market, and were likewise permitted to combine and fix the price in the domestic market, the criticism of the Senator from North Dakota would be quite sound. But the bill presupposes that he will be subject to the penalties of the Sherman law if he undertakes to combine and fix the price in the domestic market.

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly; that is what I said.

Mr. WALSH. But it is the assumption of the Senator that the price abroad will be higher than the price at home, because a high price will be fixed abroad and a low price fixed at home. The price at home will be fixed by open competition at home.

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. Therefore presumably the price at home——

Mr. McCUMBER. The price will be fixed by the demand, we will say, at home or the ability of the people, we will say, to pay the charges made by the manufacturers and the merchants; but they can combine to fix a lower price than the American price. By doing that they practically leave the domestic price unchanged; but if they can combine to fix the price of the export they can combine to fix it lower, thereby depleting the American market of a product to such an extent that they will hold that which they sell at home on a much higher plane.

Mr. WALSH. I rose simply to call attention to the fact that the Senator supposed they had combined to fix the foreign price.

Mr. McCUMBER. Oh, no; I did not intend that.

Mr. WALSH. And then they would combine to fix the domestic price.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor.

Mr. GORE. I ask unanimous consent to proceed with the consideration of Senate bill 2344.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma move to proceed to the consideration of the bill or does he make a request for unanimous consent?

Mr. GORE. I will put it first in the form of a request for unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to proceeding to the consideration of Senate bill 2344?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I wish to ask the Senator to withhold that request for a moment. I do not want to object to his request and I do not want to discuss the other bill except to suggest what I think is a minor amendment to the Senator in charge of the bill.

Mr. GORE. I will withhold the request for that purpose.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Before the bill is laid aside I will state that in line 22, on page 2, this language is used:

> And is not in restraint of the export trade of any domestic competitor of such association.

I think the word "domestic" is proper there, but in line 23, on page 3, it occurs to me that the word "domestic" should be inserted before the word "competitors," so as to read:

> Used in export trade against domestic competitors engaged in export trade.

Mr. POMERENE. I think that suggestion is a good one.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I present that amendment, then.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 23, page 3, after the word "against" insert the word "domestic."

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I should like to have the amendment acted on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be agreed to without objection.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I think that amendment is very important.

Mr. McCUMBER. It is very important, and if we are going to take up the bill for amendment——

Mr. THOMAS. I want to consider that amendment before it is accepted. I think it is a very serious amendment. It may change very materially the entire purpose of the section.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I ask that the amendment may be considered as pending. I will not ask for the action of the Senate upon it at this time.

Mr. POMERENE. I ask that the bill be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent that the bill be temporarily laid aside. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. It seems to me that a little amendment could be made which would relieve the minds of some of us, and that is to change the word "enhances," on line 2, page 3, and on line 18, page 5, to the word "affects." I offer that amendment. I understand the chairman of the committee is willing to accept it, and I think there will be no objection to it.

Mr. WALSH. I think that ought to be deferred also. There is much to be said on the subject.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I will offer the amendment and let it lie on the table.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2344) to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I hope this bill will not be forced on us this afternoon.

Mr. GORE. There is a tacit understanding, at least, that it will not be forced to a vote to-day.

Mr. REED. Why must it come on at this particular moment? Why can it not go over and take its ordinary course and be called up after it is laid over? I am not going to be stubborn about the matter. There seems to be a spirit just now very active that the House and Senate are not doing anything unless they are doing it on the double quick. I want to read the bill with some care. I confess that I have a good deal of fear of every bill that is brought in of this character. I find that it is boldly proposed to turn over the control of the prices of food of 100,000,000 people to one man.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. That is not this bill.

Mr. REED. Oh, no; but when I find a bill comes here from the same source, O. K'd with other bills that propose to control the prices of everything in the land, I assume that the bill originated with the Agricultural Department.

Mr. HARDWICK. If the Senator will permit me, while I am not on the committee, I think if the Senator will examine the bill he will not think it originated with the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. REED. Perhaps not, but I have not had a chance to examine it, and all I am asking is a chance to read it over once.

Mr. HARDWICK. If the Senator will pardon me again, if he will read it over once he will see that it is not a very dangerous bill.

Mr. REED. I say that I have not had a chance to read it over once.

Mr. THOMAS. I have had a chance to read it over once, and I find it contains the usual appropriations of millions.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. REED. I am just asking the Senator from Oklahoma if he will not let the bill go over. I am not going to object to taking it up, but I say to him——

Mr. GORE. As I suggested a moment ago, it is virtually the understanding with the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] that the bill will not be brought to a vote to-day. I think there are some amendments to which the Senator from Missouri will have no objection, even if he should object to the bill as a whole. So we would probably save time. It is in the interest of economy of time that I ask the Senate to proceed at least to consider the amendments. The bill will not reach a final vote to-day.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator from Oklahoma yield for a question?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. Is it the purpose of the Senator from Oklahoma to make a statement analyzing the provisions of the bill?

Mr. GORE. I will say that has been done in a very brief way in a report which accompanies the bill and is probably on the Senator's desk. It has not been my intention to do it for reasons the Senator will understand, but such analysis will undoubtedly develop in the course of the discussion.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. GORE. I yield.

Mr. McCUMBER. I wish to ask the Senator a question and see if I am correct. If I am, I do not think it will take long to consider the bill. If I understand it correctly, there are three objects of the bill. It first provides that the Secretary of Agriculture shall do exactly what he is already doing, and to do that it provides for some assistance. Second, it allows the Secretary of Agriculture to buy seeds and to sell them again; and third and last, in addition to these two authorizations, there is a provision in the bill making an appropriation of $4,500,000 for exterminating cattle ticks and hog cholera. I understand that is practically all there is in the bill. Is not that correct?

Mr. GORE. I think the Senator has made a pretty luminous digest of the bill.

Mr. REED. I challenge the understanding of both my distinguished friends. There is something in the bill that is a complete revolution of the law as it stood ever since we have had a Government, and which I think affects the fundamental right of the people. Let me read it.

That the Secretary of Agriculture—

A nonjudicial officer—

That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to investigate and ascertain the demand for, the supply, consumption, costs, and prices of, and the basic facts relating to the ownership, production, transportation, manufacture, storage, and distribution of foods, food materials, feeds, seeds, fertilizers, agricultural implements and machinery, and any article required in connection with the production, distribution, or utilization of food—

That is pretty broad, is it not?

It shall be the duty of any person, when requested by the Secretary of Agriculture, or any agent acting under his instructions to answer correctly, to the best of his knowledge, all question necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this section. Any person who shall refuse or willfully neglect to answer any such question, or who shall willfully give answers that are false, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

Now, Mr. President, that is the creation of a power in an individual who is not a judicial officer to enforce the attendance of witnesses and to compel disclosures, not indeed when there is a case in controversy but when he desires to know something. It is the delegation to him of an authority which it is doubtful that it exists in the Senate of the United States or in the House of Representatives upon an investigation duly begun. It proposes to give to a deputy, some subordinate appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture, the right to walk into any man's place of business and make any inquiry he desires with reference to that business, and to send that man to prison for one year if he does not instantly answer this inquiry—this impudent and unlawful inquiry. Does the Senator say there is nothing in this bill to look at?

Mr. GORE. I will say, if the Senator will pardon me——

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. GORE. The question as to whether or not this is wise or unwise legislation is, of course, an open question. The question as to whether it is a safe or unsafe power to vest in the Secretary of Agriculture is, of course, an open question. But that it is revolutionary is entirely a mistake. The language which the Senator read and upon which he is commenting is a readaptation of sections 23 and 24 of the Thirteenth Census act. It is the fruit of 120 years' experience. I am advised by the Census Office that it has worked with perfect satisfaction and has occasioned no friction and no annoyance on the part of the public. It has answered every purpose.

This is a food census, and we are pursuing the ordinary course and adopting the ordinary means and observing the ordinary precedents. It is, in fact, a reenactment of the census law with reference to food statistics. It certainly is not revolutionary, but it has become a settled practice or policy on the part of the Government.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Has the Senate voted to take this bill up for consideration?

Mr. GORE. No, sir; it has not. I asked unanimous consent to take it up.

Mr. SMOOT. Evidently there is a desire on the part of some Senators that the bill shall go over until to-morrow.

Mr. GORE. It was taken up once and was laid aside. No objection was interposed at that time. Of course, anybody can object who sees fit. I am not certain as to the status of the bill on the calendar. I have preferred a request for unanimous consent to proceed to its consideration.

Mr. SMOOT. That request is pending now?

Mr. GORE. Yes, sir.

Mr. SMOOT. I understood as I came into the Chamber, having been called out for a few moments, that the Senator had moved to take up the bill.

Mr. GORE. I think the Chair possibly put it in the form of a motion, although the request was for unanimous consent.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not want to interfere now with the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. I simply want to say that when Senators stated the bill did not contain anything but two or three little trifling matters; they were in error. It is no trifling matter to give any man, I do not care who he is, the right to appoint a flock of deputies to go out and call on every man in the United States for information, and if he does not give it to send that man to the penitentiary. That is not a trifling matter. Whatever power may have been vested in a census board, and it may have been pretty broad and may never have been tested, I am not in favor of extending these arbitrary powers where it is not absolutely necessary to extend them.

I do not intend to discuss the merits of this matter now. I say to my friend the Senator from Oklahoma that I think it would be very much better to let the bill go over until to-morrow morning and let us have an opportunity to read it and become acquainted with its phraseology. There is no occasion for unseemly haste about this matter. There is a lot of language in it that I think needs some scrutinizing.

Mr. GORE. I hope the Senator will not object to the request which I preferred. He has the assurance that the bill will go over until to-morrow and he will have ample opportunity to read it before it passes. We have no assurance that it will pass to-morrow.

Mr. REED. I am not going to make an objection if the Senator insists, but——

Mr. GORE. I would be glad to proceed with the bill to-day.

Mr. REED. I do not think any Senator ought to be put in the position of being compelled to object to the immediate consideration of these measures.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2344. Is there objection?

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection at all to taking up the bill—it is after 2 o'clock now—if the Senator will simply have the bill read and have it laid aside. Then the bill becomes the unfinished business and it will come up automatically to-morrow.

Mr. GORE. I do not understand the Senator's request.

Mr. SMOOT. I suggest to the Senator to allow the bill to be taken up by unanimous consent and presented to the Senate, and if the Senator desires to have the bill read let it be read, and then lay it aside. The bill becomes the unfinished business, and to-morrow it will come up automatically at 2 o'clock.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Would that be true if the bill which the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] is pressing should be taken up and be before the Senate at the time of adjournment?

Mr. GORE. This bill would lose its status as the unfinished business unless it is pending when we adjourn.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will ask that it be temporarily laid aside and not be displaced by a motion to take up another bill, it will not be displaced.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order.

Mr. GORE. One bill has already been laid aside, and unless this bill is pending when we adjourn it will lose its status.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Chair is submitting a request for unanimous consent, and I ask for the regular order, Mr. President. I am getting a little bit weary of this debate.

Mr. SMOOT. Then I shall object.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is all right. The Senator is at liberty to do that.

Mr. GORE. I believe under the new status I can move to take up the bill, and I therefore move that Senate bill 2344 be taken up. It was taken up once by unanimous consent and laid aside. That sent it to the calendar, and I think it now has the same privilege as any other bill. I therefore move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2344.

Mr. SMOOT. I call the attention of the Chair to Rule 26, paragraph 2.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, if the Senator from Utah will yield to me, I merely want to appeal to him to withdraw his objection. The Senator from Oklahoma has said that he desires to take the bill up for the consideration of committee amendments. They are all amendments to strike out parts of the bill; and I do not believe the Senator from Utah will have any objection to that procedure.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I do not have any objection to that, and if I had been allowed to state——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask for the regular order, if there is any regular order that can be had.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. This bill is known as Senate bill 2344. So far as its status is concerned, it is exactly the bill that we had under discussion a day of two ago. The bill that the Senator from Oklahoma now desires considered is the bill, as I understand, offered by that Senator which was recommitted to the committee.

Mr. SMOOT. No.

Mr. KENYON. This is not that bill.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator is in error about that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I do.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator is in error. It is an entirely different bill. I should like to suggest——

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I know the text of the bill is different; but so far——

Mr. NORRIS. The number is different.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Is the whole bill different?

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, yes.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If the whole bill is different, then, of course, I am wrong.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to make a suggestion to the Senator from Oklahoma. There will not be any trouble about getting the bill up to-morrow under the rule. If the bill is going to be taken up with the view of making it the unfinished business and then laying it aside, to be taken up to-morrow, the bill will not be advanced, because under the rules any Senator has the right to object to it to-day, it seems to me; and we will make no headway if we simply undertake to make it the unfinished business. The bill can be taken up to-morrow whether it is the unfinished business or not.

